The graduate program in religious studies at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill deals with religion both as a distinctive human experience and as a mode of culture and history. Both orientations define religion as a broad area of human existence, and students are encouraged to explore the tension between those two general approaches. The interests of the department’s faculty express the variety of methodological orientations in such study. Faculty members in other departments of the University offer strong interdisciplinary support.

The Graduate School of the University offers two degrees in religious studies: the master of arts and the doctor of philosophy. The Department of Religious Studies also sponsors the joint Duke–UNC Graduate Certificate in Middle East Studies. The M.A. program introduces students to the general problems and methods in the study of religion. Specific requirements include:

- Thirty hours of course credit, including RELI 700 and one "gateway" graduate seminar.
- A written comprehensive examination in the student’s specific field of study.
- A thesis of three to six credits and an oral defense of the thesis, and
- Demonstrated competence in a modern foreign research language.

The Ph.D. program is primarily intended to prepare students for a career in university and college teaching and research in religious studies. It currently offers specialization in ancient Mediterranean religions, Islamic studies, medieval and early modern studies, religion in the Americas, religion and culture, and religions of Asia.

Ph.D. students should expect to take at least 18 hours of course work beyond the M.A. level. Other requirements in the doctoral program include:

- Completion of requirements specific to one of the specialty fields of study noted above.
- A set of written and oral doctoral examinations specific to the student’s field of study.
- Demonstrated reading competence in a second modern foreign research language, and
- A doctoral dissertation and an oral defense of the dissertation.

Additional information about the graduate program in religious studies is available at the department’s Web site (http://religion.unc.edu).

Details on the joint Duke–UNC Graduate Certificate in Middle East Studies are available at this Web site (http://ncmideast.org/courses/graduate-certificate).
