Carol Magee, Chair

For those considering professional careers as art historians (teaching and research), critics, or museum and gallery professionals, the Department of Art and Art History offers graduate work leading to the degrees of master of arts and doctor of philosophy. Those who aim to become professional artists should take the degree of master of fine arts in studio art.

The department houses many resources that are vital to our programs. The Hanes Art Center provides exhibition galleries, an art library, a visual resources library, offices, study areas, classrooms, digital, photography, and printmaking laboratories, a MakerSpace, and artist studios. Additional studios and the metal, ceramic, and wood shops are located in the Art Laboratory building on Airport Drive, one mile from campus.

The Joseph C. Sloane Art Library has a collection of over 100,000 print volumes and is supplemented by the University Libraries, with holdings of more than 6,000,000 volumes. The Sloane Art Library provides quiet study spaces and access to specialized art resources; it also houses the reserve holdings for art department courses. Graduate students have access to the Visual Resources Library and can use different types of scanning equipment (flatbed scanners, slide and film scanners) to digitize images for research. The VRL has current holdings of 250,000 slides, 60,000 digital images, and 20,000 photographs.

Admission
Deadline for applications are in December for art history and in January for studio art. The Graduate School application is submitted via the online application for admission. See both the department’s Web site and the Graduate School’s Web site (http://gradschool.unc.edu/admissions/instructions.html) for detailed information and deadlines. This user-friendly online application is faster and easier than completing a paper application and provides for the prompt receipt and distribution of application information. Individuals who are unable to utilize the online application may request a paper application from gradinfo@unc.edu or by phoning (919) 966-2612. Individuals applying to the studio art program will want to load their images in Slide Room as instructed.

Admission Requirements for M.F.A.
We seek applications from individuals committed to their development as professional artists. While the majority of applicants hold a bachelor’s degree in art, we also welcome applications from students who hold undergraduate degrees in other fields and can present a strong art portfolio. Students who do not have a bachelor’s degree in art should have at least one basic-level and one intermediate-level course in art history in preparation for the graduate-level coursework in art history required of M.F.A. students. Applicants to the M.F.A. program are not required to take the Graduate Record Exam (GRE).

Applicants are admitted for the fall semester only.

All applications must be submitted by posted deadlines and must include the following:

- Graduate School Application
- Undergraduate Transcript
- Three Letters of Recommendation
- Application Fee

Supplemental materials specific to the M.F.A. admission application include the following:

- Statement of Purpose
- Visual Materials for Creative Review
- List of Images Submitted for Creative Review

See the Department of Art and Art History’s Web site (http://art.unc.edu/studio-art/graduate-programs/how-to-apply/deadlines/) for specific instructions.

For more information, contact the director of graduate studies for studio art (https://art.unc.edu/about/contact/).

Master of Arts (M.A.) and the Doctorate (Ph.D.) in Art History

In addition to completing an application to The Graduate School (which must include up-to-date GRE scores), the candidate for admission to the graduate programs in art history must submit an example of his/her written work. The writing sample should be no more than 15 pages. Applicants with a B.A. in art history (or related field) may apply to the M.A. program, the dual M.A./M.S.L.S., or directly to the Ph.D. program. Those who already have an M.A. in art history may apply to the Ph.D. program. An undergraduate major in art history is not required for admission to the graduate program; however, entering candidates must have taken a minimum of 24 credit hours in art history, archaeology, cultural anthropology, or aesthetics.

There are no spring semester admissions in art history. See the Department of Art and Art History’s Web site (https://art.unc.edu/art-history/graduate-programs-in-art-history/) for more detailed instructions.

Financial Aid for Studio Art Students
All applicants for admission to the M.F.A. program are automatically considered for nomination for merit awards offered by The Graduate School. Additional support in the form of assistantships and/or specially designated awards is administered directly by the department. Students may apply for teaching fellowships after they have completed the teaching practicum course. Students desiring financial aid should consult as early as possible the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid (http://studentaid.unc.edu) for information about work-study jobs and loans.

Students with demonstrable teaching experience at the college level are exempt from this course.

Financial Aid for Art History Students
All applicants for admission who have completed their applications by December 1 are automatically considered by the department for nomination for Graduate School awards. Applicants and students in residence are also eligible for teaching and research assistantships, which are awarded by the department. Students desiring financial aid should consult as early as possible the Office of Scholarships and Arts Professionals Program brings visiting critics, gallerists, curators, a large and diverse number of professional artists. Additionally, the Visiting Series is a vital conduit for graduate students to see the work of, and interact with, artists. During which time they give a public lecture and provide private critiques for students. The program supports students by bringing artists and critics to UNC–Chapel Hill for a two-day visit, during which they give a public lecture and provide private critiques for students who wish to prepare for an academic career. While this class is optional, it is required for students who wish to apply for teaching fellowships in the M.F.A. program. Because the majority of our funding is offered through teaching fellowships we strongly urge students to take advantage of this opportunity.

Credits for studio practice constitute the majority of credits. These are earned through independent study and critique. All M.F.A. students have individual studio space to support their creative research. With the department's interdisciplinary approach, students need not choose a particular medium for specialization. They may use different media to express a variety of aesthetic and conceptual goals. This, however, does not preclude a media focus but does mean that media choices are integral to students’ intellectual and aesthetic explorations.

The structure for feedback in the program is through weekly critiques, when students interact with the studio faculty over the course of the semester. A formal review brings the entire faculty together to evaluate each student's progress at the end of the first semester, and the student's committee members evaluate that progress at the end of the second and fourth semester. The academic component of the M.F.A. program is designed to complement the art making process. The program strongly believes that the decision to pursue the making of fine art in an academic context carries an attendant responsibility to develop the verbal and written articulation of the visual. To help achieve this goal, students participate in two graduate seminars (three credit hours each). Other academic credits are satisfied by a requisite six hours of additional coursework in art history. Usually students are urged to take one of these courses in the area of contemporary art history. Students also take six hours in electives in which the students are able to take advantage of upper division and graduate level courses in fields related to their studio practice or studio courses that help them advance or expand their technical and material skills. Students select these courses depending on the focus of their studio explorations, thus stretching the capacity of their creative work.

The remaining academic credits are earned through the master's thesis. This includes mounting a group exhibition of the thesis work, curated by and at the Ackland Art Museums, as well as a solo show in the Department of Art's Allcott Gallery; writing a thesis statement to accompany the thesis work; and presenting a visual lecture as the M.F.A. thesis defense that is then submitted to the Carolina Digital Repository.

In addition to the core curriculum, the UNC–Chapel Hill master of fine arts program supports students by bringing artists and critics to UNC–Chapel Hill throughout the year. For the Hanes Visiting Artist Lecture Series, artists are typically invited to campus for a two-day visit, during which time they give a public lecture and provide private critiques for the department’s graduate students. This program has proved to be a vital conduit for graduate students to see the work of, and interact with, a large and diverse number of professional artists. Additionally, the Visiting Arts Professionals Program brings visiting critics, gallerists, curators, or other art professionals to campus 4–5 times per year to further introduce students to the professional art world, furthering knowledge and fostering mutually beneficial practical and professional connections and relationships. These guests participate in a moderated, informal conversation with students and also conduct studio visits.

Master of Fine Arts Degree

The master of fine arts degree at UNC–Chapel Hill is a two-year, 60-hour program. Credits are earned through studio practice, formal critique, professional development, and academic electives. Additionally, a teaching foundation and professional development course that supports the practical aspects of an art career (grant writing, professional presentation, studio visits, with galleries and museums, etc.) is available for students who wish to prepare for an academic career. While this class is optional, it is required for students who wish to apply for teaching fellowships in the M.F.A. program. Because the majority of our funding is offered through teaching fellowships we strongly urge students to take advantage of this opportunity.

such as the formation of the dissertation committee and scheduling of committee meetings can be found on the departmental Sakai website.

Course Work
Ph.D. students take a total of nine courses, at least four of which are research seminars (900-level), plus a final course, ARTH 994 (Doctoral Dissertation). Two of the nine courses may be taken in other departments as electives for supplementary and complimentary studies.

Electing to Pursue an External Minor
Ph.D. students may choose to complete a formal external minor, which consists of at least five additional courses in a field related to his or her area of specialized study (such as communication studies, women's studies, history, or medieval studies). The student must secure prior approval of the department offering the minor, and a copy of the proposed courses to be taken must be signed by both departments and entered in the student's permanent record in the Department of Art and Art History and the UNC–Chapel Hill Graduate School.

Language Requirement
Ph.D. students are required to demonstrate proficiency in two languages other than English. The first language will be the language that fulfilled the M.A. language requirement. The second language should be appropriate to the area of study and will be determined in consultation with the student's advisor and the director of graduate studies for art history. Some fields require additional languages and students should study these languages as necessary. Competency in the second language will be determined following the same guidelines as those for the M.A. language requirement.

Preliminary Doctoral Exams
Ph.D. students take both the written and the oral preliminary exams during the semester after the Ph.D. coursework is completed. Most Ph.D. students will take the preliminary exams during the spring semester of their second year in the Ph.D. program. Those students pursuing an external minor will take the preliminary exams during the fall semester of their third year.

- Written Exams. Students take the written exams over the course of a one-week period. Students who fail the written exams may repeat them only once. These exams are taken in three parts: first major field of study (six hours), second major field of study (six hours), methodological/thematic area of study (six hours).
- Preliminary Oral Exam. An oral exam will take place within two weeks of the written exam. The oral will be on the content of the written exams and may also include a defense of the dissertation prospectus. The examining committee will consist of at least three members who must be full-time active graduate faculty members or adjunct teaching faculty members in art history.
- Dissertation Prospectus. Ph.D. students defend their dissertation prospectus orally. If the dissertation prospectus is not defended at the oral exam, this defense should take place within four months of the written exams. At least two weeks before the prospectus defense, the student submits a dissertation prospectus to his or her dissertation committee, which should consist of five faculty members, three of whom must be permanent members of the UNC–Chapel Hill art history faculty.

Dissertation and Final Oral Exam
After passing the preliminary doctoral exams, the student begins work on the dissertation. Once the dissertation is completed and approved by the advisor and dissertation committee, the student defends the finished dissertation.

For further information the applicant should write to the director of graduate studies for art history (https://art.unc.edu/about/contact/people/).
