Introduction

The principal goal of the study of philosophy is to enable students to think more clearly, deeply, and appreciatively about themselves and their world. Study of philosophy enhances analytical, critical, and interpretive capacities that are applicable to any subject matter in almost any context. It provides many opportunities for expressing oneself, for reflecting on questions that human beings have pondered for millennia, for exchanging reasoned beliefs and engaging in focused debate, and for learning how to come to terms with problems for which there are no easy answers. A good philosophical education also helps to prepare students for responsible and intelligent participation in political and community affairs.

The most important outcome of philosophical study is the ability to engage in thinking that is at once disciplined and imaginatively creative. While such thinking lies at the heart of the philosophical enterprise, it is also needed for success in any complex intellectual or practical endeavor. Philosophy's attention to critical thought, rigorous argument, and articulate expression makes the philosophical curriculum absolutely central to a liberal education and valuable as a basis for further training in a variety of pursuits.

Examples of philosophical questions are:

- How should we understand truth, existence, validity, fact, value, and free will?
- What are the principles or presuppositions of science, language, political systems, and religious and moral views?
- What is the nature of a person, of space and time, of a work of art?
- What is the wisdom of the past on these enduring questions? How can we learn from people such as Plato, Aristotle, Descartes, and Kant?

Students are encouraged to view philosophy not as a specialized, esoteric discipline, but instead as an activity integral to a liberal arts education, helping students to think more cogently and appreciatively about themselves and their world.

PHIL 101, PHIL 110, or PHIL 112 is recommended as a first course for those interested in philosophical issues and their cultural significance and for those who wish to examine a broad range of philosophical topics, problems, or historical figures. Other good starting points are PHIL 155, which deals with logic and the analysis of argument; PHIL 160, which deals with moral thought and experience; and PHIL 150, which deals with the concepts, methods, and foundations of the biological and physical sciences.

PHIL 155 is recommended for all students who major or minor in philosophy.

Advising

All majors and minors have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. The department's director of undergraduate studies works with current and prospective majors by appointment (see contact information above). Departmental academic advising is particularly important for those majors who are considering going on to graduate school. Further information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be obtained from the department's Web site (<https://philosophy.unc.edu/>).

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

A major in philosophy offers excellent preparation for many careers in which clear thinking and analytical ability are valued. Some majors choose to pursue graduate work in philosophy in preparation for college or university teaching (Ph.D. normally required), but the philosophy major also provides the form of rigorous and systematic intellectual training that is of crucial importance in law, medicine, business, and other fields.

PHIL–Philosophy

Courses numbered below 199 have no prerequisites. These serve as suitable first courses in philosophy for many students, as do some courses below 299, in particular PHIL 230, PHIL 266, and PHIL 280. Courses numbered 101 to 120 are general survey courses. (Non-majors, please note that PHIL 155 satisfies the QR General Education requirement, and not the PH requirement.) Courses numbered 130 to 290 are oriented toward particular problems or topics. For instance, courses numbered 210 to 229 concern the history of philosophy. Courses numbered 300 to 399 are designed for advanced undergraduates and majors and carry a prerequisite of one course in philosophy. (Some may carry additional prerequisites.) Courses numbered between 400 and 699 are for advanced undergraduates as well as graduate students. Detailed information on upcoming courses is available on the department's Web site (<https://philosophy.unc.edu/undergraduate/undergraduate-courses/>).

Please note that not all courses are offered on a regular basis. For information on which courses are most likely to be offered in a given year or semester, please contact the department's director of undergraduate studies.

Undergraduate-level Courses

The principal goal of the study of philosophy is to enable students to think more clearly, deeply, and appreciatively about themselves and their world. Study of philosophy enhances analytical, critical, and interpretive capacities that are applicable to any subject matter in almost any context. It provides many opportunities for expressing oneself, for reflecting on questions that human beings have pondered for millennia, for exchanging reasoned beliefs and engaging in focused debate, and for learning how to come to terms with problems for which there are no easy answers. A good philosophical education also helps to prepare students for responsible and intelligent participation in political and community affairs.

Department Programs

Major

- Philosophy Major, B.A. (p. 835)

Minors

- Philosophy Minor (p. 836)
- Philosophy, Politics, and Economics (PPE) Minor (p. 837)

Graduate Programs

- M.A. in Philosophy (<http://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/philosophy/>)
- Ph.D. in Philosophy (<http://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/philosophy/>)

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the philosophy program, students should be able to:

- Deploy philosophical concepts and terminology correctly, in either a historical or contemporary setting
- Represent clearly and accurately the views or argument of a particular philosopher, in either a historical or contemporary setting
- Identify the premises and conclusion(s) of a philosophical argument and assess both its validity and soundness
- Apply a philosophical theory or argument to a new topic, and to draw and defend reasonable conclusions about that topic
- Develop an argument for a particular solution to a philosophical problem in either a historical or contemporary setting

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

Code	Title	Hours
Core requirements
A major in philosophy requires nine philosophy courses. No more than three of the nine may be numbered 199 and below. The nine courses must include at least one course in three of the following four distribution areas:		27
History of philosophy
Courses above 100 with a second digit of one or two (e.g., PHIL 110, PHIL 210, PHIL 220)
Metaphysics, epistemology, philosophy of mind, and philosophy of language
Courses above 100 with a second digit of three or four (e.g., PHIL 134, PHIL 230, PHIL 340)
Logic and philosophy of science

Courses above 100 with a second digit of five (e.g., PHIL 150, PHIL 155, PHIL 355)
Value theory
Courses above 100 with a second digit of six, seven, or eight (e.g., PHIL 160, PHIL 275, PHIL 381)
Total Hours	27

Philosophy (PHIL) course descriptions (p. 825).

PHIL 155 (<http://catalog.unc.edu/search/?search=PHIL+155>) is recommended for all students who major or minor in philosophy.

Please note that First Year Seminars (<http://fys.unc.edu/>) (all numbered below 100) and courses with a second digit of nine (PHIL 390 (<http://catalog.unc.edu/search/?search=PHIL+390>), PHIL 691H (<http://catalog.unc.edu/search/?search=PHIL+691H>), PHIL 692H (<http://catalog.unc.edu/search/?search=PHIL+692H>), etc.) automatically count toward the major core as electives. However, with approval of the department’s director of undergraduate studies, PHIL 390 (<http://catalog.unc.edu/search/?search=PHIL+390>) may count toward one of the four distribution areas.

Within the framework of the major, students may elect to take philosophy courses geared toward prelaw. Inquiries about prelaw advising may be sent to the department’s director of undergraduate studies. Although we are not in a position to offer law career (including career prep) or LSAT advice, the director of undergraduate studies is available to provide academic advising and discuss prelaw course information. Further details may be found on the Department of Philosophy’s Web site (<https://philosophy.unc.edu/undergraduate/advising/pre-law/>).

Special opportunities in philosophy include, but are not limited to, the Philosophy Outreach Program (<https://philosophy.unc.edu/outreach/>), Phi Sigma Tau (<https://philosophy.unc.edu/undergraduate/phi-sigma-tau/>), the Leshner Opportunity Fund (<https://philosophy.unc.edu/undergraduate/lesher-opportunity-fund/>), Take a Philosopher to Lunch (<https://philosophy.unc.edu/undergraduate/take-a-philosopher-to-lunch/>), Intercollegiate Ethics Bowl (<https://parcenter.unc.edu/ieb/>), and an active speakers series (<https://philosophy.unc.edu/events/category/departments-talk/>). See the Department of Philosophy’s Web site (<https://philosophy.unc.edu/>) for details.

- take at least nine hours of their minor 'core' requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 12 hours of C or better in the minor (some minors require more)

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

Code	Title	Hours
Core Requirements
A minor in philosophy requires five philosophy courses. No more than three of the five may be numbered 199 and below. The five courses must include at least one course in three of the following four distribution areas:		15
History of philosophy
Courses above 100 with a second digit of one or two (e.g., PHIL 110, PHIL 210, PHIL 220)
Metaphysics, epistemology, philosophy of mind, and philosophy of language
Courses above 100 with a second digit of 3 or 4 (e.g., PHIL 134, PHIL 230, PHIL 340)
Logic and philosophy of science
Courses above 100 with a second digit of five (e.g., PHIL 150, PHIL 155, PHIL 355)
Value theory
Total Hours		15

Philosophy (PHIL) course descriptions (p. 825).

PHIL 155 is recommended for all students who major or minor in philosophy.

Please note that First Year Seminars (<http://fys.unc.edu/>) (all numbered below 100) and courses with a second digit of nine (PHIL 390, for example) automatically count toward the minor core as electives. However, with approval of the department's director of undergraduate studies, PHIL 390 may count toward one of the four distribution areas.

Within the framework of the minor, students may elect to take philosophy courses geared toward prelaw. Inquiries about prelaw advising may be sent to the department's director of undergraduate studies. Although we are not in a position to offer law career (including career prep) or LSAT advice, the director of undergraduate studies is available to provide academic advising and discuss prelaw course information. Further details may be found on the Department of Philosophy's Web site.

See the program page here (p. 836) for special opportunities.

Our world is shaped by a variety of formal and informal institutions that have a profound impact on our lives. Understanding how they work, appreciating their interactions, seeing their impact, and being able to assess their value are crucial. With this in mind, the philosophy, politics, and economics (PPE) minor trains students to look beyond the borders of academic disciplines by offering them an integrated study of philosophy, politics, and economics.

Introduction

The goal of physics and astronomy is a unified description of the properties of matter and energy. The study of matter and energy encompasses a range of phenomena, from the subnuclear to the cosmological. Physics seeks to understand the way the universe “works,” from the very small scale (quarks and neutrinos) to the human scale

(materials encountered in daily life) to the very large (the structure of the cosmos). Different approaches and technologies are used in these different regimes.

The areas of active research at UNC–Chapel Hill can be divided into nuclear physics and nuclear astrophysics, condensed matter and materials physics, field and particle physics, astronomy and astrophysics, and biophysics. Often the separation between subfields is not as distinct as it appears. For example, nuclear and particle physics are used to address questions in astrophysics. As scientists have learned more about the universe, they have realized that even the boundaries between the sciences have blurred. Today, physics shares interests with biology, chemistry, and computer science. Physicists are also responsible for the invention of much of our modern technology, including computers, lasers, medical imaging devices such as MRI and ultrasound, nuclear reactors, and the World Wide Web.

Physics has played a significant role in shaping modern society and culture, and some knowledge of physics is essential to fully appreciate the world. As the frontiers of physics and astronomy have advanced, old questions have been answered or refined, new questions have been asked, and major surprises have been encountered. The joy of doing physics is “to see a world in a grain of sand and a heaven in a wild flower, hold infinity in the palm of your hand and eternity in an hour” (William Blake).

Advising

All majors and minors have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building. Students are encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. The department's director of undergraduate studies and faculty advisors work with current and prospective majors by appointment (see contact information above). Faculty advisors are assigned to all physics majors and minors, and they assist students in a variety of physics related areas, including physics course planning, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, internships, career opportunities, and graduate school and fellowship applications. Physics majors are required to meet with their departmental advisor by appointment prior to registering for any semester beyond the fourth term in residence. Further information may be obtained from the department's Web site under the Undergraduate Program (<http://physics.unc.edu/undergraduate-program/>).

Employers know that physicists understand how to think and reason effectively about the world, which equips them to solve unconventional challenging problems. Over 90 percent of physics majors do something other than teach and conduct research at a university. Physics will prepare you to pursue anything from medicine to energy to business. The American Institute of Physics' Career Resources (<http://aip.org/career-resources/>) site provides useful information about the careers of physics bachelor's degree recipients, including who is hiring them in North Carolina.

Those who are considering going on to graduate school in physics, astronomy, and other physical science and engineering fields, should contact one of the physics advisors. Those who are considering marine sciences as a graduate specialty should consult the material under the Department of Marine Sciences. Those who plan careers in health sciences, including dentistry, medicine, and veterinary medicine, should consult advisors in the Health Professions Advising Office in Hanes Hall. Those interested in science teaching can take the educational coursework required for a high school science teaching license through the UNC Baccalaureate Education in Science and Teaching (UNC–BEST (<https://soe.unc.edu/academics/uncbest/>)) program.

ASTR–Astronomy Undergraduate-level Courses

ASTR 61. First-Year Seminar: The Copernican Revolution. 3 Credits.

This seminar explores the 2,000-year effort to understand the motion of the sun, moon, stars, and five visible planets. Earth-centered cosmos gives way to the conclusion that earth is just another body in space. Cultural changes accompany this revolution in thinking.

Gen Ed: PL, NA, WB.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: PHYS 61.

ASTR 63. First-Year Seminar: Catastrophe and Chaos: Unpredictable Physics. 3 Credits.

Physics is often seen as the most precise and deterministic of sciences. Determinism can break down, however. This seminar explores the rich and diverse areas of modern physics in which 'unpredictability' is the norm. Honors version available

Gen Ed: PL, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: PHYS 63.

ASTR 63H. First-Year Seminar: Catastrophe and Chaos: Unpredictable Physics. 3 Credits.

Gen Ed: PL, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: PHYS 63H.

ASTR 89. First-Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Special topics course content will vary each semester.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 101. Introduction to Astronomy: The Solar System. 3 Credits.

Celestial motions of the earth, sun, moon, and planets; nature of light; ground and space-based telescopes; comparative planetology; the earth and the moon; terrestrial and gas planets and their moons; dwarf planets, asteroids, and comets; planetary system formation; extrasolar planets; the search for extraterrestrial intelligence (SETI). Honors version available

Gen Ed: PX.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 101L. Introduction to Astronomy Laboratory: Our Place in Space. 1 Credit.

Observing with robotic telescopes in Chile, Australia, and around the world: planets, dwarf planets, moons, asteroids, binary and variable stars, supernovae, star-forming regions, star clusters, and galaxies; the seasons, the Galilean revolution; the cosmic distance ladder; the Great Debate; dark matter; Hubble's Law; dark energy.

Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, ASTR 101.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 101H. Introduction to Astronomy: The Solar System. 3 Credits.

Celestial motions of the earth, sun, moon, and planets; nature of light; ground and space-based telescopes; comparative planetology; the earth, the moon; terrestrial and gas planets and their moons; dwarf planets; asteroids; comets; planetary system formation; extrasolar planets; the search for extraterrestrial intelligence (SETI).

Gen Ed: PX.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 102. Introduction to Astronomy: Stars, Galaxies & Cosmology. 3 Credits.

The sun, stellar observables, star birth, evolution, and death, novae and supernovae, white dwarfs, neutron stars, black holes, the Milky Way galaxy, normal galaxies, active galaxies and quasars, dark matter, dark energy, cosmology, early universe. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, ASTR 101, or pre- or co-requisite, PHYS 117 or 119; Permission of the instructor for students lacking the pre- or co-requisites.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 102H. Introduction to Astronomy: Stars, Galaxies & Cosmology. 3 Credits.

The sun, stellar observables, star birth, evolution, and death, novae and supernovae, white dwarfs, neutron stars, black holes, the Milky Way galaxy, normal galaxies, active galaxies and quasars, dark matter, dark energy, cosmology, early universe.

Requisites: Prerequisite, ASTR 101, or pre- or co-requisite, PHYS 117 or 119; Permission of the instructor for students lacking the pre- or co-requisites.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 105H. Time, Tides, and the Measurement of the Cosmos. 3 Credits.

This course is focused on medieval foundations of modern cosmology and is designed to take advantage of the opportunities available for enriched learning in England. The course is problem-based, e.g. How did people reckon calendars, time, and tides, both for navigation and daily life, before clocks and the printed word?

Gen Ed: PL, WB.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 111L. Educational Research in Radio Astronomy. 1 Credit.

Permission of the instructor. One-week field experience at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory in Green Bank, WV, for experiential education (EE) credit. Observing with radio telescopes and antennae: supernova remnants, star-forming regions, normal and active galaxies, quasars, solar system objects (sun, moon, Jupiter), radio spectroscopy.

Gen Ed: EE- Field Work.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 202. Introduction to Astrophysics. 3 Credits.

This introductory astrophysics course will focus on the use of classical mechanics, gravitational physics, and the physics of radiation to interpret and explain astronomical observations. Course covers stellar structure, stellar formation and evolution, galaxies, and cosmology with an emphasis on quantitative problem solving.

Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, PHYS 119.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 205. The Medieval Foundations of Modern Cosmology. 3 Credits.

This course will examine science as it emerged and developed in the West starting in the 13th century. We will use example problems from cosmology that are relevant today.

Gen Ed: PL, WB.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 301. Stars, Galaxies, and Cosmology. 1 Credit.

Stellar observables; galaxies; novae; cosmology; the early universe. This one-credit course can be taken with ASTR 102 for students who wish to major or minor in astrophysics.

Requisites: Pre- or corequisites, ASTR 102, and PHYS 117 or 119;

Permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 390. Research and Special Topics for Juniors and Seniors. 1-12 Credits.

Permission of the instructor. To be taken by honors candidates and other qualified juniors and seniors.

Gen Ed: QI.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level CoursesASTR 501. Astrophysics I (Stellar Astrophysics). 3 Credits.

An introduction to the study of stellar structure and evolution. Topics covered include observational techniques, stellar structure and energy transport, nuclear energy sources, evolution off the main-sequence, and supernovae.

Requisites: Prerequisites, ASTR 202 or ASTR 301, MATH 383, and PHYS 331; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 502. Astrophysics II (Modern Research in Astrophysics). 3 Credits.

An introduction to modern research in astrophysics based on scientific journal articles addressing a current topic of interest in galactic or extragalactic astrophysics, including training in computer modeling and statistical analysis, culminating in the completion of a research project.

Requisites: Prerequisites, ASTR 202 or ASTR 301, and MATH 383; pre- or corequisite, PHYS 331.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 503. Structure and Evolution of Galaxies. 3 Credits.

Overview of the structure and evolution of galaxies, with emphasis on learning and applying modern research methods such as scientific literature review and computational astrostatistics. Includes galaxy morphology and dynamics, star formation, active galactic nuclei, galaxy interactions, large-scale clustering, environment-dependent physical processes, and the evolution of the galaxy population over cosmic time.

Requisites: Prerequisites, ASTR 202 or ASTR 301, MATH 383, and PHYS 331.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 504. Cosmology. 3 Credits.

An introduction to modern cosmology: the study of the contents and evolution of the universe. Covers expanding spacetime, the thermal history of the early universe, including nucleosynthesis and the cosmic microwave background, the inflationary model for the origins of cosmic structure, and the growth of that structure through time.

Requisites: Prerequisites, ASTR 202 or ASTR 301, and PHYS 401; pre- or corequisite, PHYS 421.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 505. Physics of Interstellar Gas. 3 Credits.

Surveys the physical processes governing the interstellar medium (ISM), which takes up the 'refuse' of old stars while providing fuel for young stars forming. Covers the processes regulating the galactic gas budget and the corresponding observational diagnostics. Topics: radiative transfer, line formation mechanisms, continuum radiation, gas dynamics, star formation.

Requisites: Prerequisites, ASTR 202 or ASTR 301, MATH 383, and PHYS 331.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 511. Atomic and Radiative Processes in Astrophysics. 3 Credits.

This course covers key topics in electromagnetism, radiative transport, and thermal and statistical mechanics in the context of astrophysics, such as stellar and planetary interiors and atmospheres, stellar evolution (including star formation and death), stellar populations, and the early universe.

Requisites: Prerequisite, ASTR 202; Pre- or corequisite, PHYS 412.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 512. Astrophysical Dynamics. 3 Credits.

This course provides a broad overview of astrophysical principles underlying stellar and planetary dynamics; N-body dynamics of star clusters, galaxies, and dark matter; fluid dynamics of astrophysical plasmas; and dynamics of the Universe and spacetime.

Requisites: Prerequisites, ASTR 202 and PHYS 401.

Grading status: Letter grade.

ASTR 519. Observational Astronomy. 4 Credits.

An introduction to modern techniques in observational astronomy with an emphasis on optical and near-infrared wavelengths. Topics covered include celestial coordinates, practical python for astronomy, telescopes and CCDs, spectroscopy, astrostatistics, and mining large astronomical surveys. Three lecture and three laboratory hours a week.

Requisites: Prerequisite, ASTR 102 or 202; Pre- or corequisite, PHYS 331; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS–Physics

Undergraduate-level Courses

PHYS 50. First-Year Seminar: Time and the Medieval Cosmos. 3 Credits.

This course introduces first-year students to the basic motions of the solar system as viewed from the Earth along with the mechanical and mathematical models used to reproduce them, while exploring the history of medieval and early modern education, theology, and natural philosophy.

Gen Ed: HS.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: HIST 50.

PHYS 51. First-Year Seminar: The Interplay of Music and Physics. 3 Credits.

Acoustics and music from a practical standpoint.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: MUSC 51.

PHYS 52. First-Year Seminar: Making the Right Connections. 3 Credits.

This seminar investigates the multiple roles that computers and microprocessors perform in scientific investigations and the impact of technological advances on society. Students perform experiments, take field trips to research laboratories, and gain hands-on experience with computer-based instrumentation.

Gen Ed: PX.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 53. First-Year Seminar: Handcrafting in the Nanoworld: Building Models and Manipulating Molecules. 3 Credits.

This seminar provides a general introduction to nanoscience and nanotechnology, focusing on recent advances in molecular electronics, nanomaterials, and biomedical research. Course activities include group model-building projects, presentations, and discussions of reading material.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 54. First-Year Seminar: Physics of Movies. 3 Credits.

Students watch and analyze short movie clips that demonstrate interesting, unusual, or impossible physics. Group analysis emphasized.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 55. First-Year Seminar: Introduction to Mechatronics. 4 Credits.

Introduction to important skills and knowledge required in the STEM fields of today and tomorrow, from academic, employment, and social perspectives. All students, regardless of their educational goals, will achieve critical introductory skills in numerical reasoning and analysis, engineering design and prototyping, computer programming and electronics, and will demonstrate proficiency and knowledge about topics that increasingly impact society, including Artificial Intelligence, Machine Learning, and Quantum Computing.

PHYS 106. Inquiry into the Physical World. 4 Credits.

A hands-on/minds-on approach to learning the basic concepts of physical science. Emphasis will be placed on examining the nature of science, your own learning, and the way scientists learn science.

Gen Ed: PX.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 108. Climate and Energy Transitions: Understanding the Forecasts. 4 Credits.

This course examines uncertainties in projecting future fossil fuel consumption and impact on global climate by quantifying how effectively alternative power-generation and energy-storage technologies can scale to meet needs in developing and developed nations, and by understanding past and present climates.

Gen Ed: PX, GL.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: MASC 108, GEOL 108.

PHYS 114. General Physics I: For Students of the Life Sciences. 4 Credits.

Basic principles of physics, including forces, energy, oscillations, sound, diffusion, and heat transfer, and applications to biological systems.

Intended to meet the needs of, but not restricted to, students majoring in the life sciences. Students may not receive credit for PHYS 114 in addition to PHYS 104, 116, or 118.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 130.

Gen Ed: PX, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 115. General Physics II: For Students of the Life Sciences. 4 Credits.

Basic principles of physics, including fluids, electricity, magnetism, optics, quantum physics, and nuclear physics, and applications to biological systems. Electricity and magnetism; laws of Coulomb, Ampere, and Faraday. Electromagnetic oscillations and waves. Light; diffraction and interference. Lecture, recitation, and laboratory. Students may not receive credit for both PHYS 117 and PHYS 105, 115, or 119. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 232 and PHYS 116; pre- or corequisite, MATH 233; permission of the instructor for students lacking the requisites.

Gen Ed: PX, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 117H. Electromagnetism and Optics. 4 Credits.

Electricity and magnetism; laws of Coulomb, Ampere, and Faraday. Electromagnetic oscillations and waves. Light; diffraction and interference. Lecture, recitation, and laboratory. Students may not receive credit for both PHYS 117 and PHYS 105, 115, and 119.

Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 232 and PHYS 116; pre- or corequisite, MATH 233; permission of the instructor for students lacking the requisites.

Gen Ed: PX, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 118. Introductory Calculus-based Mechanics and Relativity. 4 Credits.

Mechanics of particles and rigid bodies. Newton's laws; mechanical and potential energy; mechanical conservation laws; frame-dependence of physical laws; Einstein's Theory of Relativity. Lecture and studio. Students may not receive credit for PHYS 118 in addition to PHYS 104, 114, or 116.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 231; pre- or corequisite, MATH 232; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.

Gen Ed: PX, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 119. Introductory Calculus-based Electromagnetism and Quanta. 4 Credits.

Unification of the laws of electricity and magnetism; electromagnetic waves; the particle-wave duality; fundamental principles and applications of quantum mechanics. Lecture and studio. Students may not receive credit for PHYS 119 in addition to PHYS 105, 115, or 117.

Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 232 and PHYS 118; pre- or corequisite, MATH 233; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.

Gen Ed: PX, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 128. Modern Physics. 3 Credits.

Special relativity theory, black body radiation, photons and electrons; wave particle duality. Elements of atomic theory, nuclei and fundamental particles. Three lecture hours a week.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 117 (or PHYS 105 by permission of the instructor); co-requisite, PHYS 128L.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 128L. Modern Physics Laboratory. 1 Credit.

Selected modern physics experiments. Written research reports and oral presentations. Three laboratory hours a week.

Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, PHYS 128.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 131. Energy: Physical Principles and the Quest for Alternatives to Dwindling Oil and Gas. 3 Credits.

A quantitative exploration of the physical principles behind energy development and use within modern civilization, the stark impact of depleted fossil fuel reserves, and alternative sources.

Requisites: Corequisite, PHYS 131L.

Gen Ed: PX, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 131L. Energy: Physical Principles and the Quest for Alternatives to Dwindling Oil and Gas. 1 Credit.

Explore renewable and nonrenewable energy sources. Three laboratory hours per week.

Requisites: Corequisite, PHYS 131.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 132. Science and Society. 3 Credits.

A description of the scientific community and how scientists relate to such sociotechnical issues as the space program, the arms race, the energy problem, computer technology, medical technology, and pseudosciences.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 133. How Bio Works. 3 Credits.

Physics of biology and biotechnology. Life as an assembly of molecular machines that manipulate DNA, replicate cells, propel bacteria, and contract muscles. Nanotechnology for DNA biotechnology and microscale fluid chips.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 201. Basic Mechanics. 3 Credits.

A one-semester course in statics, kinematics, simple harmonic motion, central forces, and applications from modern physics.

Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 233 and one of PHYS 105, 115, 117, 119; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 211. Intermediate Electromagnetism. 3 Credits.

Electric fields and potentials, dielectrics, steady currents, magnetic flux and magnetic materials, electromagnetic induction. Emphasis on Maxwell's equations and their application to electromagnetic waves in bounded and unbounded media.

Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 233 and one of PHYS 105, 115, 117, 119.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 231. Physical Computing. 3 Credits.

Combines sensors and actuators to sense, interact with, and control the nearby physical environment. Students are introduced to analog and digital electronics, lab equipment, Python and C-like programming, the Arduino microcontroller, 3-D design tools, and Makerspace prototyping. Students collaborate, then propose and complete individual final projects.

Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, PHYS 114 or 118; permission of the instructor for students lacking the pre- or coequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 281L. Experimental Techniques in Physics. 2 Credits.

Exploration of modern physics experiments, techniques, and data analysis to prepare students for research and advanced laboratory work. Written and oral reports with peer review. Meets four hours per week.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 119; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Gen Ed: CI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 295. Research with Faculty Mentor I. 1-12 Credits.

Students undertake independent research with a faculty mentor. Approved learning contract required.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 311. Electromagnetism I. 3 Credits.

Brief treatment of DC and AC circuit theory. Electrostatics: dielectrics, the magnetic field, and magnetic materials.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 331; permission of the instructor for students lacking the requisite.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 313. Space and Time in Physics and Philosophy. 3 Credits.

Contingent and necessary properties of space and time. The direction and flow of time. Fatalism. Effects preceding their causes.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 331. Numerical Techniques for the Sciences I. 4 Credits.

Applications of calculus, vector analysis, differential equations, complex numbers, and computer programming to realistic physical systems. Three lecture and two computational laboratory hours per week.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 104, 114, 116, or 118; pre- or corequisite, MATH 383.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 332. Numerical Techniques for the Sciences II. 4 Credits.

Modeling of celestial dynamics, nuclear physics problems, electrostatics; Monte Carlo integration in particle and theoretical physics; data modeling for physics and astronomy; gravitation, electromagnetism, fluid dynamics and quantum mechanics. Three lecture and two computational laboratory hours per week. Previously offered as PHYS 358.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 281L and 331.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 351. Electronics I. 4 Credits.

DC and AC circuit analysis. Diodes, transistor amplifiers, analog devices and signal conditioning. Boolean logic and digital logic circuits. Extensive practice designing and debugging circuits.

Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 233, PHYS 281L, and one of PHYS 105, 115, 117, or 119; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 352. Electronics II. 4 Credits.

Introduction to digital circuits: gates, flip-flops, and counters. Computers and device interconnections, converters and data acquisition. Signal analysis and digital filters. Graphical (LabVIEW) programming and computer interfacing. Individual projects and practical applications.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 351; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 354. Quantum Mechanics, Weirdness, and Reality. 3 Credits.

An interdisciplinary course on the weirdness of quantum mechanics and the problem of interpreting it. Nonlocality, the measurement problem, superpositions, Bohm's theory, collapse theories, and the many-worlds interpretation.

Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 231 and any PHYS course numbered 100 or greater; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.

Gen Ed: PH.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: PHIL 354.

PHYS 391. Senior Seminar. 1-15 Credits.

To be taken by seniors with permission of the department.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 395. Research with Faculty Mentor II. 1-12 Credits.

Students undertake independent research with a faculty mentor. Approved learning contract required. A research proposal and/or summary research report is required. Although not mandatory, a submission of a research proposal to an internal or external competition for funding is encouraged. Students must also present their research at an appropriate symposium, conference, or seminar.

Gen Ed: CI, EE- Mentored Research.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level CoursesPHYS 401. Mechanics I. 3 Credits.

Particle kinematics, central forces, planetary motions. Systems of particles, conservation laws, nonlinearity. Statics, motion of rigid bodies. Lagrange's and Hamilton's equations. Euler's equations. Vibrations and waves.

Requisites: Pre- or corequisites, MATH 383 and PHYS 331; permission of the instructor for students lacking the requisites.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 405. Biological Physics. 3 Credits.

How diffusion, entropy, electrostatics, and hydrophobicity generate order and force in biology. Topics include DNA manipulation, intracellular transport, cell division, molecular motors, single molecule biophysics techniques, nerve impulses, neuroscience.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 116 and 117, or PHYS 118 and 119.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: BIOL 431, BMME 435.

PHYS 410. Teaching and Learning Physics. 4 Credits.

Learning how to teach physics using current research-based methods. Includes extensive fieldwork in high school and college environments. Meets part of the licensure requirements for North Carolina public school teaching.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 116 and 117, or PHYS 118 and 119; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.

Gen Ed: EE- Field Work.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 412. Electromagnetism II. 3 Credits.

Electrodynamics: Maxwell's equations and their application to electromagnetic waves, radiation, and relativity.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 311 and 332; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 421. Introduction to Quantum Mechanics. 3 Credits.

Origins of quantum theory. Uncertainty principle. Schrodinger equation for simple systems, including hydrogen atom. Perturbation theory. Spin. Identical particles. Previously offered as PHYS 321.

Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 383; MATH 547 or PHYS 331; pre- or corequisite, PHYS 401; permission of the instructor for students lacking the requisites.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 422. Physics of the Earth's Interior. 3 Credits.

Origin of the solar system: the nebular hypothesis. Evolution of the earth and its accretionary history. Earthquakes: plate tectonics and the interior of the earth. The earth's magnetic field. Mantle convection.

Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 383, and either PHYS 201 and 211 or 311 and 401.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: GEOL 422.

PHYS 424. General Physics I. 4 Credits.

This course is specifically for certification of high school teachers. Students may not receive credit for both PHYS 424 and PHYS 104 or 114.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 425. General Physics II. 4 Credits.

This course is specifically for certification of high school teachers. Students may not receive credit for both PHYS 425 and PHYS 105 or 115.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 441. Thermal Physics. 3 Credits.

Equilibrium statistical mechanics; the laws of thermodynamics, internal energy, enthalpy, entropy, thermodynamic potentials, Maxwell's equations.

Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 233, and PHYS 117 or 119; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: BMME 441.

PHYS 447. Quantum Computing. 3 Credits.

Recommended preparation, some knowledge of basic linear algebra. An introduction to quantum computing. Basic math and quantum mechanics necessary to understand the operation of quantum bits. Quantum gates, circuits, and algorithms, including Shor's algorithm for factoring and Grover's search algorithm. Entanglement and error correction. Quantum encryption, annealing, and simulation. Brief discussion of technologies.

Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 232, and PHYS 116 or 118.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: COMP 447.

PHYS 461. Introduction to Medical Physics. 3 Credits.

This class will introduce how physics principles and techniques have been applied to medical imaging and radiation therapy. Topics will include ionizing radiation and radiation safety, x-ray and computed tomography, ultrasound, magnetic resonance imaging, positron emission tomography, and radiation therapy. Topics such as the career path to become a medical physicist will also be discussed. The class will have lectures given by the instructor and guest lectures by experts and practitioners in this field.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 117 or 119.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 471. Physics of Solid State Electronic Devices. 3 Credits.

Properties of crystal lattices, electrons in energy bands, behavior of majority and minority charge carriers, PN junctions related to the structure and function of semiconductor diodes, transistors, display devices.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 117 or 119; pre- or corequisite, PHYS 211 or 311.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 472. Chemistry and Physics of Electronic Materials Processing. 3 Credits.

Permission of the instructor. A survey of materials processing and characterization used in fabricating microelectronic devices. Crystal growth, thin film deposition and etching, and microlithography.

Requisites: Prerequisite, CHEM 482 or PHYS 117 or 119.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: APPL 472, CHEM 472.

PHYS 481L. Advanced Laboratory I. 2 Credits.

Selected experiments illustrating modern techniques such as the use of laser technology to study the interaction of electromagnetic fields and matter. Six laboratory hours a week.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 281L, and PHYS 351 or 352; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 491L. Materials Laboratory I. 2 Credits.

Structure determination and measurement of the optical, electrical, and magnetic properties of solids.

Requisites: Prerequisites, APPL 470 and PHYS 351.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: APPL 491L.

PHYS 492L. Materials Laboratory II. 2 Credits.

Continuation of PHYS 491L with emphasis on low- and high-temperature behavior, the physical and chemical behavior of lattice imperfections and amorphous materials, and the nature of radiation damage.

Requisites: Prerequisite, APPL 491L or PHYS 491L.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: APPL 492L.

PHYS 510. Seminar for Physics and Astronomy Teaching Assistants. 1 Credit.

How students learn and understand physics and astronomy. How to teach using current research-based methods.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 515. Optics. 3 Credits.

Broad coverage including ray, wave, Gaussian, and Fourier optics. Interference, diffraction, polarization, and coherence. Optical properties of materials, absorption, scattering. Fiber optics, lasers, semiconductors, imaging, and special topics. Previously offered as PHYS 415.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 311 and 412; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 521. Applications of Quantum Mechanics. 3 Credits.

Emphasizes atomic physics but includes topics from nuclear, solid state, and particle physics, such as energy levels, the periodic system, selection rules, and fundamentals of spectroscopy.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 421.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 529. Introduction to Magnetic Resonance. 3 Credits.

This course will provide a broad coverage of important physics principles behind nuclear magnetic resonance (NMR) spectroscopy, especially the applications of quantum mechanics. Theoretical approaches and tools for grasping the design principles of various important NMR spectroscopic techniques will be discussed. It will show, for instance, how to use NMR spectroscopy to determine molecular structures and dynamics, and how to obtain images and functional information using magnetic resonance imaging (MRI).

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 421 or CHEM 486; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 543. Nuclear Physics. 3 Credits.

Structure of nucleons and nuclei, nuclear models, forces and interactions, nuclear reactions.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 421; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 545. Introductory Elementary Particle Physics. 3 Credits.

Relativistic kinematics, symmetries and conservation laws, elementary particles and bound states, gauge theories, quantum electrodynamics, chromodynamics, electroweak unification, standard model and beyond.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 412 and 421.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 573. Introductory Solid State Physics. 3 Credits.

Crystal symmetry, types of crystalline solids; electron and mechanical waves in crystals, electrical and magnetic properties of solids, semiconductors; low temperature phenomena; imperfections in nearly perfect crystals.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 421; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: APPL 573.

PHYS 581. Renewable Electric Power Systems. 3 Credits.

Broad and quantitative study of renewable electric power systems: wind systems, photovoltaic cells, distributed generation (concentrating solar power, microhydro, biomass), and the economics of these technologies.

Requisites: Prerequisites, BIOL 101L, and 202 or 271; and PHYS 131, and 131L or 281L, and 201 or 401, and 211 or 311, and 351; pre- or corequisites, CHEM 261 and 481.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 582. Decarbonizing Fuels. 3 Credits.

Assess quantitatively the feasibility of powering humanity without increasing release of climate-altering carbon dioxide and other organic greenhouse gases into the atmosphere. Can these gases be removed? Which bio-chemical-physical novelties may scale to meet growing demand and at what cost?

Requisites: Prerequisites, BIOL 101L, and 202 or 271; and PHYS 131, and 131L or 281L, and 201 or 401, and 211 or 311, and 351; pre- or corequisites, CHEM 261 and 481.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 585. Imaging Science: From Cells to Stars. 3 Credits.

Fundamentals of imaging as applied to biological, medical and astronomy imaging systems. Physics of radiation and particle sources, image formation and detection physics. Principles of optics, coherence, Fourier methods, statistics, especially as they cross disciplinary boundaries for new opportunities in imaging.

Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 233 and PHYS 118.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 594. Nonlinear Dynamics. 3 Credits.

Interdisciplinary introduction to nonlinear dynamics and chaos. Fixed points, bifurcations, strange attractors, with applications to physics, biology, chemistry, finance.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 383; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: MATH 594.

PHYS 631. Mathematical Methods of Theoretical Physics. 3 Credits.

Linear vector spaces and matrices, curvilinear coordinates, functions of complex variables, ordinary and partial differential equations, Fourier series, integral transforms, special functions, differential forms.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 281L and 332.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 632. Advanced Research Analytics. 3 Credits.

Required preparation, ability to program in a high-level computer language. Permission of the instructor for students lacking the required preparation. Methods required for the analysis, interpretation, and evaluation of physics measurements and theory. Error analysis, statistical tests, model fitting, parameter estimation, Monte Carlo methods, Bayesian inference, noise mitigation, experimental design, big data, selected numerical techniques including differential equations and Fourier techniques.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 633. Scientific Programming. 3 Credits.

Required preparation, elementary Fortran, C, or Pascal programming. Structured programming in Fortran or Pascal; use of secondary storage and program packages; numerical methods for advanced problems, error propagation and computational efficiency; symbolic mathematics by computer.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 528 or 529, or PHYS 631 or 632.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 660. Fluid Dynamics. 3 Credits.

The physical properties of fluids, kinematics, governing equations, viscous incompressible flow, vorticity dynamics, boundary layers, irrotational incompressible flow.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 401; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: MASC 560, ENVR 452, GEOL 560.

PHYS 671L. Independent Laboratory I. 3 Credits.

Six laboratory hours a week.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 401 and 412; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 672L. Independent Laboratory II. 3 Credits.

Six laboratory hours a week.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 401 and 412; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 691H. Senior Honor Thesis Research I. 3 Credits.

Permission of the instructor. Readings in physics and directed research for a senior honor thesis project. Required of all candidates for graduation with honors in physics.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PHYS 692H. Senior Honor Thesis Research II. 3 Credits.

Readings in physics and directed research for a senior honor thesis project. Required of all candidates for graduation with honors in physics.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 691H.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

The goal of physics and astronomy is a unified description of the properties of matter and energy. The study of matter and energy encompasses a range of phenomena, from the subnuclear to the cosmological. Physics seeks to understand the way the universe “works,” from the very small scale (quarks and neutrinos) to the human scale (materials encountered in daily life) to the very large (the structure of the cosmos). Different approaches and technologies are used in these different regimes.

Department Programs

Majors

- Physics Major, B.A. (p. 847)
- Physics Major, B.S. (p. 853)

Minors

- Astronomy Minor (p. 858)
- Physics Minor (p. 859)

Graduate Programs

- M.S. in Physics (<http://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/physics-astronomy/>)

- Ph.D. in Physics (<http://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/physics-astronomy/>)

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the physics program, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate knowledge of major concepts, theoretical reasoning, and empirical findings in physics and/or astronomy – Knowledge Base in Physics
- Apply knowledge of physics and mathematics to solve problems – Critical Thinking and Problem Solving
- Effectively conduct research under guidance of faculty member – Research and the Advancement of Physics and Astronomy
- Gain entry to top graduate programs, employment as physicists in industry, teaching positions in high school physics and astronomy, or apply their skills in other rewarding careers – Preparation for Future Career

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Special Opportunities in Physics and Astronomy

Honors in Physics and Astronomy

The honors program offers exceptionally well-qualified students an opportunity to perform original research with a faculty member and graduate with honors or highest honors. It requires an overall grade point average of at least 3.3 and a grade point average of at least 3.4 for physics courses at the end of the junior year.

Students who wish to enter the honors program should consult with the departmental coordinator (<http://physics.unc.edu/undergraduate-program/undergraduate-research/>) for the program no later than the preregistration period in the spring semester of their junior year.

Departmental Involvement

The Society of Physics Students, open to anyone interested in physics, builds connections between undergraduates, graduate students, faculty, and alumni. The society invites visitors to give talks and sponsors a number of events for students each year. Women in Physics at UNC–Chapel Hill, an organization that aims to provide resources, advice, and an encouraging social atmosphere for women in the field of physics, welcomes physics majors and all women interested in physics.

UNC–BEST

The UNC Baccalaureate Education in Science and Teaching (UNC–BEST) Program is a collaboration between the School of Education and the College of Arts and Sciences and is designed to allow undergraduate science majors interested in teaching high school science the opportunity to earn their science degree and obtain licensure as a North Carolina high school science teacher in four years. UNC–BEST students meet all the degree requirements for their degree using PHYS 410 as one of their upper-level physics courses.

EDUC 601	Education Workshops	1

For more details on admission requirements, application deadlines, and submitting an online application, visit the School of Education Web site (<http://www.unc.edu/uncbest/options.html>).

Undergraduate Awards

The department gives awards each year to the senior (Shearin Award) and junior (Johnson Award) who demonstrate the greatest achievement. In addition, the department awards the major with the most research achievement the Robert Sheldon Award for Undergraduate Research.

Undergraduate Research

All majors conduct at least one semester of research under the supervision of a faculty member. Many enjoy the experience so much that they continue for several semesters. An approved learning contract is required prior to registering for PHYS 295 and PHYS 395, and students must be registered within the first week of classes.

The goal of physics and astronomy is a unified description of the properties of matter and energy. The study of matter and energy encompasses a range of phenomena, from the subnuclear to the cosmological. Physics seeks to understand the way the universe “works,” from the very small scale (quarks and neutrinos) to the human scale (materials encountered in daily life) to the very large (the structure of the cosmos). Different approaches and technologies are used in these different regimes.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the physics program, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate knowledge of major concepts, theoretical reasoning, and empirical findings in physics and/or astronomy – Knowledge Base in Physics
- Apply knowledge of physics and mathematics to solve problems – Critical Thinking and Problem Solving
- Effectively conduct research under guidance of faculty member – Research and the Advancement of Physics and Astronomy
- Gain entry to top graduate programs, employment as physicists in industry, teaching positions in high school physics and astronomy, or apply their skills in other rewarding careers – Preparation for Future Career

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

As part of these course requirements, candidates for the B.S. degree must earn grades of C (not C-) or better in at least 18 credit hours of courses that are listed under Core Requirements.

It is strongly recommended that students planning to major in physics fulfill the Foundations requirement in English composition and rhetoric by enrolling in ENGL 105I.

Most students will find it advantageous to defer some of the General Education requirements to the junior and/or senior year(s).

Special Opportunities in Physics and Astronomy

Honors in Physics and Astronomy

The honors program offers exceptionally well-qualified students an opportunity to perform original research with a faculty member and graduate with honors or highest honors. It requires an overall grade point average of at least 3.3 and a grade point average of at least 3.4 for physics courses at the end of the junior year.

Students who wish to enter the honors program should consult with the departmental coordinator (<http://physics.unc.edu/undergraduate-program/undergraduate-research/>) for the program no later than the preregistration period in the spring semester of their junior year.

Departmental Involvement

The Society of Physics Students, open to anyone interested in physics, builds connections between undergraduates, graduate students, faculty, and alumni. The society invites visitors to give talks and sponsors a number of events for students each year. Women in Physics at UNC–Chapel Hill, an organization that aims to provide resources, advice, and an encouraging social atmosphere for women in the field of physics, welcomes physics majors and all women interested in physics.

UNC–BEST

The UNC Baccalaureate Education in Science and Teaching (UNC–BEST) Program is a collaboration between the School of Education and the College of Arts and Sciences and is designed to allow undergraduate science majors interested in teaching high school science the opportunity to earn their science degree and obtain licensure as a North Carolina high school science teacher in four years. UNC–BEST students meet all the degree requirements for their degree using PHYS 410 as one of their upper-level physics courses.

EDUC 601	Education Workshops	1

For more details on admission requirements, application deadlines, and submitting an online application, visit the School of Education Web site (<http://www.unc.edu/uncbest/options.html>).

Undergraduate Awards

The department gives awards each year to the senior (Shearin Award) and junior (Johnson Award) who demonstrate the greatest achievement. In addition, the department awards the major with the most research achievement the Robert Sheldon Award for Undergraduate Research.

Undergraduate Research

All majors conduct at least one semester of research under the supervision of a faculty member. Many enjoy the experience so much that they continue for several semesters. An approved learning contract is required prior to registering for PHYS 295 and PHYS 395, and students must be registered within the first week of classes.

The goal of physics and astronomy is a unified description of the properties of matter and energy. The study of matter and energy encompasses a range of phenomena, from the subnuclear to the cosmological. Physics seeks to understand the way the universe “works,” from the very small scale (quarks and neutrinos) to the human scale (materials encountered in daily life) to the very large (the structure of the cosmos). Different approaches and technologies are used in these different regimes.

Introduction

Political science is concerned with the description and explanation of political ideas, institutions, processes, policies, and behavior, both in the United States and in other countries. The undergraduate program provides students with a basic knowledge of the political and economic relationships that exist among nations, international agencies, and governmental and nongovernmental organizations. It also introduces students to the role that traditions of thought and political ideologies have played in shaping our understanding of politics in the past and today.

Advising

All majors have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. Students seeking advice about the political science major are encouraged to meet with the department's undergraduate advisor or the director of undergraduate studies during their office hours (see contact information above). Further information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be obtained from the department's Web site (<http://politicalscience.unc.edu>).

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

Students with a major in political science may choose to continue their studies in a number of professional areas, including law, business administration, public administration, public policy analysis, international relations, and area studies. Students seeking to become professional political scientists should pursue graduate study in a Ph.D. program in political science.

The following is a brief listing of careers for which a major in political science is valuable preparation:

- positions with government agencies, such as the Foreign Service
- positions with international organizations, such the United Nations
- positions with nongovernmental and nonprofit organizations
- law-related professions
- business professions, including data analysis and survey research
- media and journalism
- governmental research in universities, libraries, and think tanks
- secondary- and university-level teaching and administration
- federal and state government employment
- municipal management and public administration

POLI–Political Science

Undergraduate-level Courses

POLI 50. First-Year Seminar: Movies and Politics. 3 Credits.

Movies often reflect important social and political issues. In this course students will see a set of movies, discuss them, and put them into social and political contexts.

Gen Ed: SS, CI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 52. First-Year Seminar: Friendship in Political Thought. 3 Credits.

This seminar will explore what relationships have been designated 'friendship' in the past, and why they are of such concern to political and ethical philosophers like Plato, Aristotle, Cicero, Montaigne, and Emerson. Honors version available

Gen Ed: PH, CI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 52H. First-Year Seminar: Friendship in Political Thought. 3 Credits.

This seminar will explore what relationships have been designated 'friendship' in the past, and why they are of such concern to political and ethical philosophers like Plato, Aristotle, Cicero, Montaigne, and Emerson.

Gen Ed: PH, CI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 54. FYS: The American Worker: Sociology, Politics, and History of Labor in the United States. 3 Credits.

This course will survey a wide range of topics on the American Laborer and the American Worker unions.

Gen Ed: NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 57. First-Year Seminar: Democratic Governance in Contemporary Latin America. 3 Credits.

This seminar explores challenges in democratic governance in contemporary Latin America. With important regional variations, the exercise of state power reflects historical continuities of corruption, patronage politics, and other abuses of state resources. There are also demands for accountability and transparency across the region and more independent judiciaries.

Gen Ed: SS, BN.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 58. FYS: Global Production and Workers' Rights: North Carolina, Latin America, and East Asia. 3 Credits.

This course explores the politics of economic globalization, with a focus on the relationships among trade, multinational corporations, and workers' rights.

Gen Ed: SS, GL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 62. First-Year Seminar: How Leaders Lead Others. 3 Credits.

This course prepares the student for an understanding of influence and the practice of political leadership and persuasion.

Gen Ed: SS, CI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 63. First-Year Seminar: Social Movements and Political Protest and Violence. 3 Credits.

Unconventional collective political behavior: mass movements, riots, demonstrations, revolts, and revolution.

Gen Ed: SS, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 66. First-Year Seminar: The United States and the European Union: Partners or Rivals?. 3 Credits.

The alliance between America and the European Union is one of the most important political relationships today.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 67. First-Year Seminar: Designing Democracy. 3 Credits.

Introducing the study of using political institutions as levers of conflict management in ethnically plural, postconflict national states.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 70. First-Year Seminar: Political Conflict in the European Union and the United States. 3 Credits.

This course examines the politics of the European Union in comparison with the United States.

Gen Ed: SS, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 72. First-Year Seminar: Entrepreneurship in Community and Economic Development. 3 Credits.

This is a survey course of entrepreneurial strategies as they are used in community and economic development. It involves an individual research or service project by each student.

Gen Ed: SS, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 75. First-Year Seminar: Thinking about Law. 3 Credits.

This seminar explores the notion of a rule of law, statutory and case law, legal analysis, and the realities of the adversarial system and legal practice. Students will be engaged in analytical thinking and expression through classroom discussion, analytical papers, and examinations.

Gen Ed: PH.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 76. First-Year Seminar: The Obama Presidency. 3 Credits.

This course examines the presidency of Barack Obama, the first African American to serve in the nation's highest office.

Gen Ed: SS, US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 89. First-Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Course content will vary each semester.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 100. American Democracy in Changing Times. 3 Credits.

Why do Americans love democracy, but hate politics? Why are there only two political parties? Why do voters hate, yet respond to negative campaigning? This course will introduce students to politics in the United States, addressing these and many more questions about how American democracy works. Honors version available

Gen Ed: SS, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 100H. American Democracy in Changing Times. 3 Credits.

Why do Americans love democracy, but hate politics? Why are there only two political parties? Why do voters hate, yet respond to negative campaigning? This course will introduce students to politics in the United States, addressing these and many more questions about how American democracy works.

Gen Ed: SS, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 130. Introduction to Comparative Politics. 3 Credits.

This course examines the diversity of political arrangements in societies across the globe. Honors version available

Gen Ed: SS, BN, GL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 130H. Introduction to Comparative Politics. 3 Credits.

This course examines the diversity of political arrangements in societies across the globe.

Gen Ed: SS, BN, GL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 150. International Relations and Global Politics. 3 Credits.

An introduction to the study of political and economic relations in the international system. Topics covered include international conflict, trade, global finance, international institutions, civil war, and human rights. Honors version available

Gen Ed: SS, GL.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: PWAD 150.

POLI 150H. International Relations and Global Politics. 3 Credits.

An introduction to the study of political and economic relations in the international system. Topics covered include international conflict, trade, global finance, international institutions, civil war, and human rights.

Gen Ed: SS, GL.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: PWAD 150H.

POLI 150L. International Relations and Global Politics Research Laboratory. 1 Credit.

This laboratory section introduces students in POLI 150 to contemporary research methods in the study of international relations and world politics. Students will design and conduct independent research related to international politics. Permission of the instructor.

Requisites: Corequisite, POLI 150.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 190. Undergraduate Seminar. 3 Credits.

A detailed examination of selected topics in the field of political science.

Gen Ed: SS.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 193. Internship in Political Science. 3 Credits.

An opportunity to obtain credit for an internship in a government or public service organization. Pass/Fail only. Does not count toward the political science major. Requires permission of the department. Open to political science majors only.

Requisites: Prerequisite, at least two POLI courses.

Gen Ed: EE- Academic Internship.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

POLI 200. The President, Congress, and Public Policy. 3 Credits.

An analysis of the roles and influence of the president, the Congress, and other participants in the making of national policy.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 201. Politics of Bureaucracy. 3 Credits.

Problems of the public service; internal dynamics of public organizations; acquisition and allocation of public funds; the roles of bureaucracy in relation to public policy, clients, the citizenry, and society.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 202. The United States Supreme Court. 3 Credits.

Examination of the process of policy making on the Supreme Court. Focuses upon the selection of justices, factors affecting the court's decision making, and the impact of its policies.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 203. Race, Innocence, and the Decline of the Death Penalty. 4 Credits.

A large majority of Americans supports the death penalty in the abstract, but the number of death sentences and executions has been declining since the mid-1990s. This course explores the decline of the death penalty by looking at race, questions of innocence, and the new politics of capital punishment.

Gen Ed: SS, US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 204. Introduction to Southern Politics. 3 Credits.

This course examines the politics of the American South. Each state is studied separately and we examine the region from a broad/general perspective. Both academic books and journal articles are read. By the end of the course, students should be familiar with historical and contemporary politics in the South.

Gen Ed: SS, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 205. Politics in the U.S. States. 3 Credits.

State and local governments in the United States exercise considerable power over public policies such as education, social welfare, and taxation. This course examines similarities and differences across the U.S. states to better understand the causes and consequences of politics in these settings. Previously offered as POLI 101. Honors version available

Gen Ed: SS, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 205H. Politics in the U.S. States. 3 Credits.

State and local governments in the United States exercise considerable power over public policies such as education, social welfare, and taxation. This course examines similarities and differences across the U.S. states to better understand the causes and consequences of politics in these settings. Previously offered as POLI 101.

Gen Ed: SS, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 206. Race and the Right to Vote in the United States. 3 Credits.

This course surveys scholarly literature on electoral institutions, racial politics, and access to the ballot in the United States. In 30 hours of community service with partner organizations, students produce a publicly available research project using oral histories, mapping, scholarly research, and podcasts.

Gen Ed: SS, EE- Service Learning, US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 207. The Politics of Organized Interests. 3 Credits.

This course examines how interests organize themselves, enter into and then interact within interest communities, and seek to influence government policy through electoral activity and lobbying legislators, executives, and courts.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 208. Political Parties and Elections. 3 Credits.

An analysis of the dynamics of party alignment and realignment and of nomination and election to public office in American national government. Honors version available

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 208H. Political Parties and Elections. 3 Credits.

An analysis of the dynamics of party alignment and realignment and of nomination and election to public office in American national government.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 209. Analyzing Public Opinion. 3 Credits.

A study of forces affecting public opinion and its expression in various political activities. Emphasis on gathering and analyzing opinion data. Course may be taught in the computer classroom. Honors version available

Gen Ed: SS, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 209H. Analyzing Public Opinion. 3 Credits.

A study of forces affecting public opinion and its expression in various political activities. Emphasis on gathering and analyzing opinion data. Course may be taught in the computer classroom.

Gen Ed: SS, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 210. Global Issues and Globalization. 3 Credits.

Survey of international social, political, and cultural patterns in selected societies of Africa, Asia, America, and Europe, stressing comparative analysis of conflicts and change in different historical contexts. LAC recitation sections offered in French, German, and Spanish.

Gen Ed: GL.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: GLBL 210, ANTH 210, GEOG 210, HIST 210.

POLI 211. Religion and Politics. 3 Credits.

Religion and politics are deeply intertwined in contemporary America, as evidenced by heated and often highly partisan debates over a wide variety of political issues such as abortion and immigration. This course addresses the variety of ways in which religion and politics intersect for voters and political elites with a focus on understanding how scholars operationalize religious concepts and use data to make empirical claims about the relationship between religion and politics.

Gen Ed: SS, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 215. Political Psychology: An Introduction. 3 Credits.

Findings of the behavioral sciences are examined as they relate to politics. Includes such issues as human nature, community, political socialization, alienation, mass movements, belief systems, and personality.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 217. Women and Politics. 3 Credits.

A comparison of men and women as political actors at the mass and elite level in America. Topics considered include the 'gender gap,' the women's movement, abortion, and the Equal Rights Amendment.

Gen Ed: SS, US.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: WGST 217.

POLI 220. Race, Ethnicity, and Electoral Representation in the United States. 3 Credits.

This course examines the electoral representation of racial and ethnic groups.

Gen Ed: US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 231. Latin America and the United States in World Politics. 3 Credits.

A survey of the events, institutions, and issues that have dominated relations between Latin America and the United States.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 232. Politics of the United Kingdom. 3 Credits.

An introduction to contemporary UK politics emphasizing the political battle between socialist and conservative ideologies. Honors version available

Gen Ed: SS, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 232H. Politics of the United Kingdom. 3 Credits.

An introduction to contemporary UK politics emphasizing the political battle between socialist and conservative ideologies.

Gen Ed: SS, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 233. Comparative Politics of the Middle East. 3 Credits.

This course is designed as an introduction to contemporary Middle Eastern politics for advanced undergraduates. To explore this topic, the course combines systematic analytical approaches to big questions with concrete knowledge of events and developments in specific countries. In so doing, it aims to give students a critical understanding of politics while simultaneously building empirical knowledge about the Middle East/North Africa region.

Gen Ed: SS, BN.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 234. Comparative Politics of the Global South. 3 Credits.

An overview of politics and government in the Global South, emphasizing theories and challenges of development, modernization, and democratization. Regional emphasis may vary by instructor.

Gen Ed: SS, BN.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 235. The Politics of Russia and Eurasia. 3 Credits.

Factors and forces that explain the rise and demise of the Soviet political system and consideration of emerging new political configurations in the area. Honors version available

Gen Ed: SS, BN.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 235H. The Politics of Russia and Eurasia. 3 Credits.

Factors and forces that explain the rise and demise of the Soviet political system and consideration of emerging new political configurations in the area.

Gen Ed: SS, BN.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 236. Politics of East-Central Europe. 3 Credits.

Examines contemporary politics in east-central Europe by looking at the communist period, the 1989 revolutions, and the political, economic, and social transformations underway in the area. Honors version available

Gen Ed: SS, BN.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 236H. Politics of East-Central Europe. 3 Credits.

Examines contemporary politics in east-central Europe by looking at the communist period, the 1989 revolutions, and the political, economic, and social transformations underway in the area.

Gen Ed: SS, BN.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 237. The Politics of China. 3 Credits.

An introduction to the politics of People's Republic of China with a focus on the Reform Era. Provides a working knowledge for understanding political events in contemporary China in three parts: historical background, evolution of political institutions, and changing relations between ordinary people and the Chinese state.

Gen Ed: SS, BN.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 238. Politics of the Global South: Latin America. 3 Credits.

An introduction to politics and political economy of Latin America, emphasizing Latin America's position in the Global South and including consideration of leading theoretical explanations of development and political change. Country emphasis varies with instructor. Honors version available

Gen Ed: SS, BN.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 472. Problems of Modern Democratic Theory. 3 Credits.

Major problem areas in democratic theory including definitions, presuppositions, and justifications of democracy, liberty, equality, minority rights, public interest, participation, dissent, and civil disobedience. Honors version available

Gen Ed: PH, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 472H. Problems of Modern Democratic Theory. 3 Credits.

Major problem areas in democratic theory including definitions, presuppositions, and justifications of democracy, liberty, equality, minority rights, public interest, participation, dissent, and civil disobedience.

Gen Ed: PH, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 473. Politics and Literature. 3 Credits.

Identifies and interprets political ideas using historical and contemporary literary sources. Examines literature as political practice.

Gen Ed: PH, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 476. The Political Theory of the American Founding. 3 Credits.

A role-immersive simulation of the Constitutional Convention of 1787. Students employ their knowledge of the political theory and science of the founding period to become the Convention of 1787 and write a constitution.

Gen Ed: PH, CI, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 477. Advanced Feminist Political Theory. 3 Credits.

Examines in greater depth and complexity current issues in feminist political theory. Topics: theories of subjectivity and solidarity, feminist poststructuralist and post-Marxist thinking, gender in the public sphere.

Gen Ed: PH, CI, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: WGST 477.

POLI 488. Game Theory. 3 Credits.

Increasingly, political and social scientists are using game theory to analyze strategic interactions across different settings. This course aims to give students a deep technical understanding of the most relevant concepts of game theory and how these concepts have been applied to the study of political and economic phenomena.

Requisites: Prerequisite, POLI 287 or 288.

Gen Ed: SS, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 490. Advanced Special Topics in Political Science. 3 Credits.

A detailed examination of advanced special topics in political science. Honors version available

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 490H. Advanced Special Topics in Political Science. 3 Credits.

A detailed examination of advanced special topics in political science.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 630. Political Contestation in Europe. 3 Credits.

Examines recent developments in the European integration process by exploring the potential for political contestation concerning European Union matters in national politics. Familiarizes students with the main theoretical approaches and the extensive empirical work dealing with the effects of European integration.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 631. European Security: The Enlarging European Union and the Trans-Atlantic Relationship. 3 Credits.

Permission of the instructor for undergraduates. Since the collapse of communism from 1989 to 1991, the European Union has faced a fundamentally different geopolitical neighborhood and an evolving relationship with the United States. We will explore how Europe has addressed new challenges to its security in its neighborhood and beyond.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 632. The European Union as a Global Actor. 3 Credits.

Permission of the instructor for undergraduates. This seminar introduces students to basic theoretical approaches to both international relations and the European Union by focusing on the European Union's external relations and foreign policies.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 691H. Honors Seminar in Research Design. 3 Credits.

Required of all students in the honors program in political science.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 692H. Honors Thesis Research. 3 Credits.

Required of all students in the honors program in political science.

Gen Ed: CI, EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 693H. Honors Thesis Research. 3 Credits.

Required of all students in the honors program in political science.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

POLI 698. Philosophy, Politics, and Economics: Capstone Course. 3 Credits.

Permission of the department. This capstone course advances PHIL 384, focusing on such theoretical and philosophical issues as the analysis of rights or distributive justice and the institutional implications of moral forms.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHIL 384.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: PHIL 698, ECON 698.

Political science is concerned with the description and explanation of political ideas, institutions, processes, policies, and behavior, both in the United States and in other countries. The undergraduate program provides students with a basic knowledge of the political and economic relationships that exist among nations, international agencies, and governmental and nongovernmental organizations. It also introduces students to the role that traditions of thought and political ideologies have played in shaping our understanding of politics in the past and today.

The undergraduate major is designed to provide

1. a broad understanding of political ideas, institutions, and issues as a central element of a general education;
2. a basic knowledge of the governmental process as preparation for those considering a career in public service as well as for active and informed citizenship;
3. preprofessional training for students planning to enter law school; and
4. a foundation in political science for those contemplating specialization at the graduate level.

- Ph.D. in Political Science (<http://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/political-science/>)

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the political science program, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate a command of at least one of the following areas of substantive knowledge:
 - Themes and concepts that have shaped the Western political tradition, as well as core contemporary political theoretical issues
 - Principles and processes of American political institutions, political behavior, and civic culture
 - Principles and processes of political institutions, political behavior, and civic culture in societies other than the United States
 - Fundamental structures and forces that shape relations between states
- Demonstrate competence in the identification, use, and development of theoretical explanations appropriate for the study of their respective areas of substantive focus. These skills may include:
 - Evaluating competing theories of political explanation
 - Reconstructing the logic of political theories
 - Constructing theoretical models intended to address specific questions in political analysis
- Demonstrate a working understanding of the methods appropriate for developing rigorous description and explanation of political phenomena. These may include one or more of the following, depending on the student's area of substantive interest:
 - Principles of textual interpretation and critical evaluation
 - Identification, collection, and organization of empirical data

- Use of qualitative, quantitative, and other analytical techniques for analyzing data

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

- ^H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.
- ¹ Whenever possible, students are encouraged to take a research methods course in political science. However, students with a second major in a related discipline may find it beneficial to fulfill this requirement with one of the alternative courses.
- ² First-year seminars, POLI 193, and POLI 291 may not count as electives for the political science major.
- ³ Whenever possible, students should take an introductory course in a subfield (American politics, comparative politics, international relations, political theory) before taking more advanced courses in the subfield.

Data in Politics

The Data in Politics track provides political science majors an opportunity to develop valuable data analysis skills and engage in cutting-edge political science research. As part of this track, students can take a two-course core sequence and additional applied data analysis courses. The Data in Politics core sequence teaches students how to work with and analyze social science data. Applied data analysis courses build on this foundation by providing students opportunities to actively use data skills as part of a research paper or other class project.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

¹ Students with a second major in economics (p. 505) or public policy (p. 910) and students who plan to apply for admission to the business school (p. 1049) may want to take ECON 101 in their first year. For more information, please consult Sample Plans for those programs.

² At least one political science course must be at the 400 level.

Special Opportunities in Political Science

Political Science Major, NUS Joint Degree

Political science majors may wish to consider applying for the Joint Degree Program, an innovative joint undergraduate degree program joining the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the National University of Singapore. UNC–Chapel Hill undergraduates spend anywhere from two to four semesters at the National University of Singapore and receive a joint bachelor of arts degree from both institutions. For further information, contact the Study Abroad Office.

Honors in Political Science

The honors program provides political science majors the opportunity to pursue an independent research project over a two-semester period. Students begin the program by taking POLI 691H in the spring semester of their junior year. During this course they complete a thesis proposal.

If the proposal is acceptable, students continue their thesis research in the senior year under the supervision of the honors director and a faculty advisor in POLI 692H and POLI 693H. A maximum of two honors thesis courses can count as elective credit in the major. Upon successful completion of the program, which includes an oral defense of the thesis, students are awarded a degree with honors or with highest honors in political science.

To be admitted to the honors program, students must have at least a 3.3 overall grade point average and a 3.5 in political science courses. They should have completed at least four courses in the major. Students interested in participating in the honors program should apply by October 15 of their junior year. For further information on the honors program, please consult the department's Web site (<http://politicalscience.unc.edu/undergraduate/honors-program/>).

Experiential Education

Internship courses provide students with the opportunity to earn academic credit while obtaining practical work experience in agencies and organizations clearly related to the study of political science. Political science majors who would like to obtain credit for internship work in government or public service must enroll in POLI 193. While this course satisfies the experiential education General Education requirement, POLI 193 is offered on a Pass/Fail basis only and does not count towards the nine courses required for the major. For specific information about the procedures and requirements for POLI 193, please consult the department's Web site (<http://politicalscience.unc.edu/undergraduate/internships/>).

Study Abroad

Because we live in an increasingly globalized society, students are encouraged to study abroad as they are able. Students interested in the fields of comparative politics and international relations are strongly urged to participate in a study abroad program; indeed, all students may find the experience to be transformational and helpful in choosing a career path. Students are advised to work with the Study Abroad Office and to contact the undergraduate advisor when planning their study abroad experience. For information about applying study abroad credit toward the political science major, please consult the department's Web site (<http://politicalscience.unc.edu/undergraduate-programs/current-students/study-abroad/>).

Undergraduate Research

Courses in political science often include a research component, and students may engage in directed research under the supervision of a faculty advisor. The honors program provides political science majors the opportunity to pursue an independent research project over a two-semester period, culminating in a senior thesis. See the section above for more information on the honors program.

POLI 395 Mentored Research in Political Science provides an opportunity for students to pursue a special research interest under the direction of a faculty member of the Department of Political Science. The research and writing entailed in a mentored research course must be equivalent to the workload of a regular course. For specific information about the procedures and requirements for POLI 395, please consult the department's Web site (<http://politicalscience.unc.edu/undergraduate/independent-study/>).

Undergraduate Awards

Pi Sigma Alpha is the national political science honorary society. Membership is restricted to those political science majors who have completed 15 hours of political science with an overall grade average of 3.3 or better and a political science grade average of 3.5 or better.

The Thad L. Beyle Research Award is given to undergraduate political science majors, with priority given to students writing a senior honors thesis.

The William Scott Bryant Award funds research and travel for undergraduate majors in the Department of Political Science, with priority given to seniors.

The D'Amico Endowment Fund for Honors Students funds academic research and activities for honors students in the Department of Political Science.

The Shepard Jones Undergraduate Award in International Relations is given to an undergraduate student for the best essay in international relations (any field and broadly defined).

The L. Richardson Preyer Award for Excellence in Political Science is given to a senior judged by a committee of the faculty to have the most distinguished record of scholarship in political science and service to the community.

The Terry Sanford Award for Excellence is given to the undergraduate student judged to have written the best political science honors thesis.

Introduction

In the undergraduate study of psychology, the emphasis is on a broad acquaintance with the behavioral sciences, not specialization. The subject matter is preparatory to a career in psychology either in basic research and teaching, or in any number of professional applications to various human problems. A psychology major may prove valuable to those planning other professional careers such as medicine, law, education, or business, as well as to those who seek a broad cultural background in the behavioral sciences.

The undergraduate study of neuroscience embodies the liberal arts experience as it draws on techniques and findings from several academic disciplines including biology, chemistry, computer science, mathematics, physics, and psychology. The neuroscience major provides students with the fundamental knowledge and exposure needed to pursue careers and post-graduate studies in fields related to psychology, human development and aging, health and disease, rehabilitation, biomedical research, human-machine interactions, and other emerging disciplines.

Follow us on Twitter (@uncCHpsych) and Facebook (<http://facebook.com/uncCHpsychology/>).

Advising

All psychology majors have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. Several faculty members (for complete list, click here (<https://psychology.unc.edu/academic-advising/>)) are available to meet with current and prospective majors by appointment. Please note that there are different departmental advisors for the psychology and neuroscience majors. Students who are considering graduate studies in psychology or neuroscience are particularly encouraged to contact departmental academic advisors. Additional information about courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, and the Psychology Club may be obtained from the department's Web site (<https://psychology.unc.edu/>).

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

The B.A. and B.S. degree programs prepare students for entry into graduate programs in psychology, neuroscience, and a large number of related areas. All degrees, augmented by courses dictated by various graduate and professional schools, also provide training that has proved beneficial for those applying to business, law, and medical schools.

Undergraduate psychology and neuroscience majors seek and find employment in a wide range of occupations, and many continue their education and training in graduate school. Students should understand that many of the occupations traditionally associated with psychology (e.g., clinical psychologist) are licensed specialties that require graduate training.

Sara B. Algae, Charlotte A. Boettiger, Carol L. Cheatham, Shauna Cooper, Jean Louis Gariépy, Kathleen M. Gates, Kurt J. Gray, Kristen Lindquist, Kathryn J. Reissner, Eva Telzer.

Assistant Professors

Jessica Cohen, Sylvia Fitting, Oscar Gonzalez, Keely Muscatell, Margaret A. Sheridan.

Clinical Professors

Erica Wise, Jennifer K. Youngstrom.

Research Associate Professor

Montserrat N. Thiele.

Research Assistant Professors

Amanda Elton, Adam Miller, Changqing Xu.

Teaching Professors

Jeannie Loeb, F. Charles Wiss.

Teaching Associate Professors

Steven Buzinski, Desiree Griffin, Viji Sathy.

Teaching Assistant Professors

Vicki Chanon, Monica Gaudier-Díaz, Patrick Harrison, Rosa Li, Rachel Penton, Sabrina Robertson.

Subjects in this department include: Neuroscience (NSCI) (p. 877) and Psychology (PSYC). (p. 880)

NSCI-Neuroscience

Undergraduate-level Courses

NSCI 61. First-Year Seminar: Drug Addiction: Fact and Fiction. 3 Credits.

The course will tackle questions through classroom discussions, lectures, movies, writing assignments, and a visit to a research laboratory and a treatment facility. Students will be introduced to fundamental concepts in addiction research. Honors version available

Gen Ed: PL, CI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 61H. First-Year Seminar: Drug Addiction: Fact and Fiction. 3 Credits.

The course will tackle questions through classroom discussions, lectures, movies, writing assignments, and a visit to a research laboratory and a treatment facility. Students will be introduced to fundamental concepts in addiction research.

Gen Ed: PL, CI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 71. First Year Seminar: Plasticity and the Brain. 3 Credits.

This course will introduce students to the recent research and debate regarding neural plasticity and the ability of the healthy adult brain to change. Exciting new research suggests that the ability of the adult brain to change goes well beyond simply acquiring new knowledge and memories. Previously offered as PSYC 71.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 89. First Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Content varies by semester. Honors version available

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 89H. First Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Content varies by semester.

NSCI 175. Introduction to Neuroscience. 3 Credits.

Provides an introduction to the structure and function of the nervous system. Fundamental principles will be introduced including nervous system anatomy; molecular and cellular properties of the nervous system; sensory and motor systems; current methods used in neuroscience; and how the nervous system produces behavior and cognition. This course provides greater breadth and depth of neuroscience topics, as compared to Biopsychology (PSYC 220). Previously offered as PSYC 175 and 315.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 190. Special Topics in Neuroscience. 3 Credits.

An undergraduate seminar course that is designed to be a participatory intellectual adventure on an advanced, emergent, and stimulating topic within a selected discipline of neuroscience. This course does not count as credit toward the neuroscience major or minor.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 222. Learning. 3 Credits.

Topics in Pavlovian and operant (instrumental) conditioning, learning theory, higher order cognitive learning, and application of those principles to mental-health related situations. Previously offered as PSYC 222.

Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 222H. Learning. 3 Credits.

Topics in Pavlovian and operant (instrumental) conditioning, learning theory, higher order cognitive learning, and application of those principles to mental-health related situations. Previously offered as PSYC 222.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 225. Sensation and Perception. 3 Credits.

Topics in vision, audition, and the lower senses. Receptor mechanisms, psychophysical methods, and selected perceptual phenomena will be discussed. Previously offered as PSYC 225. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 225H. Sensation and Perception. 3 Credits.

Topics in vision, audition, and the lower senses. Receptor mechanisms, psychophysical methods, and selected perceptual phenomena will be discussed. Previously offered as PSYC 225.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 276. Cellular Electrophysiology Laboratory. 3 Credits.

This 'hands-on' laboratory-based course is designed to teach students electrophysiology techniques used in the interdisciplinary field of neuroscience. Neuroscience majors only.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175 and one of PSYC 210, 215, or STOR 155.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 278. Molecular Imaging of the Brain. 3 Credits.

Prerequisites, NSCI 175 and one of the following: PSYC 210 or STOR 155.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 290. Current Topics in Neuroscience. 3 Credits.

Various special areas of neuroscientific study, offered as needed. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 290H. Current Topics in Neuroscience. 3 Credits.

Various special areas of neuroscientific study, offered as needed.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 294. Service Learning in Neuroscience: APPLES. 1-3 Credits.

Permission of the instructor. Service learning component for students enrolled in Neuroscience APPLES courses. May not count toward the major or minor.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175.

Gen Ed: EE- Service Learning.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 320. Neuropsychopharmacology. 3 Credits.

This course provides an introduction to the scientific study of psychopharmacology, with emphasis on drugs of abuse and psychotherapeutic drugs. Previously offered as PSYC 320.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and PSYC 220.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 325. Neuroscience of Psychiatric Disorders. 3 Credits.

This course will examine the molecular, cellular, and neurocircuitry substrates of psychiatric disorders. Topics covered will include neurobiological theories of the major classes of psychiatric disorders, genetic susceptibility, neurotransmitter systems involved, neuroplasticity, and others.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or both PSYC 101 and PSYC 220.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 390. Current Topics In Neuroscience. 3 Credits.

Various special areas of neuroscience study, offered as needed.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 395. Independent Research. 3 Credits.

Supervised research resulting in a written report. May be repeated for credit up to eight hours. Up to three hours may count as a neuroscience methods elective. Permission of the instructor.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175 and two additional NSCI courses, at least one of which must be numbered 200 or greater; a minimum of a 3.0 cumulative grade point average.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 8 total credits. 1 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level CoursesNSCI 401. Animal Behavior. 3 Credits.

Ethological, genetic, and physiological variables will be studied in relation to their behavioral effects. Previously offered as PSYC 401.

Requisites: Prerequisites, BIOL 101 and NSCI 175, or combination of BIOL 101, PSYC 101 and NSCI 222; PSYC 270 recommended.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: NBIO 401.

NSCI 403. Advanced Biopsychology Laboratory. 3 Credits.

'Hands on' laboratory course designed to introduce students to experimental protocols emphasizing 'brain-behavior' relationships. Topics include gross neuroanatomy, stereotaxic surgery, and the effects of drugs on behavior. Previously offered as PSYC 403. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 101 and 220.

Gen Ed: PX, EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 403H. Advanced Biopsychology Laboratory. 3 Credits.

'Hands on' laboratory course designed to introduce students to experimental protocols emphasizing 'brain-behavior' relationships. Topics include gross neuroanatomy, stereotaxic surgery, and the effects of drugs on behavior. Previously offered as PSYC 403.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 101 and 220.

Gen Ed: PX, EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 405. Advanced Molecular Neuropharmacology. 3 Credits.

This course will examine the molecular basis of drug action in the brain. Primary literature will be used to investigate pharmacological principles, receptor structure-function relationships, and receptor-ligand interactions, including ligand gated-ion channel and G-protein coupled receptor signaling.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175 or both PSYC 101 and PSYC 220, and NSCI 320/PSYC 320.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 415. History of Neuroscience. 3 Credits.

In this class, we will consider how neuroscience emerged as a multidisciplinary field. The class will cover key research findings that propelled the field forward. We will also delve into the autobiographies of some of the pioneering researchers who made these important discoveries. Previously offered as PSYC 415.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and 220.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 420. Functional Neuroanatomy. 3 Credits.

For advanced undergraduate and graduate students. An introduction to human neuroanatomy, covering function of the neuroanatomy of each major system and relation to neurobehavioral disorders associated with damage to the neuroanatomy of the system. Previously offered as PSYC 420.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175, or PSYC 101 and 220; recommended preparation, EXSS 175.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 421. Principles of Brain Circuits. 3 Credits.

This course is designed for upper-level undergraduates who are interested in how brain circuits control behavior. A major focus will be the new technique of optogenetics that is revolutionizing our approach to systems neuroscience. Circuits that control movement, sensation, sleep, memory, and fear will be explored in detail. Points of emphasis will be circuits mediating pain as related to actions of opiates and circuits mediating feeding behavior as related to obesity.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and PSYC 220; BIOL 101 recommended.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 422. Genetics of Brain Diseases. 3 Credits.

This course will explore the manifestations and causes of important neurological and psychiatric diseases. A particular focus will be the impact of advances in genetics on our understanding of these disorders. Disorders that affect large numbers of patients including Alzheimer's disease, autism, and schizophrenia will be studied in detail.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and PSYC 220.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 423. Neurotechnology in Modern Neuroscience Research. 3 Credits.

This course addresses fundamental challenges inherent in studying the brain and explores the theory, applications, and limitations of new and traditional neurotechnology. The unique ethical issues and significance of interdisciplinary approaches in neuroscience will also be highlighted. Students will analyze research literature and focus on cellular, molecular, and genetic techniques that are essential staples in the neuroscientist's toolkit. Students will also design experiments, utilize publicly available resources, and analyze big data generated by high-throughput approaches.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 424. Neural Connections: Hands on Neuroscience. 3 Credits.

This class will explore links between the brain and behavior through neuroscience outreach activities. Students will also reflect on the meaning of community engagement. By the end of the semester, each student must complete a minimum of 30 hours of service within the community. Previously offered as PSYC 424.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and 220.

Gen Ed: PL, EE- Service Learning.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 427. Neurobiology of Aging. 3 Credits.

This course will survey clinical and experimental literature regarding the neurobiology of aging, considering different theories of aging, how aging is studied in the laboratory, and recent findings. Biochemical, molecular, physiological, and behavioral changes associated with both 'normal' and pathological aging will be considered. Previously offered as PSYC 427.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and 220.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 428. Neuroscience, Society, and the Media. 3 Credits.

Neuroscience is a 'hot' topic in popular media. We will consider media coverage of neuroscientific research by reading the popular press versions of studies alongside the findings from primary sources and what kinds of topics are most often covered by the media and why. Previously offered as PSYC 428.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and 220.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 434. Cognitive Neuroscience. 3 Credits.

Introduction to cognitive neuroscience. Higher mental processes including attention, memory, language, and consciousness will be covered, with an emphasis on the neural mechanisms that form the substrates of human cognition. Previously offered as PSYC 434.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175 and PSYC 230, or a combination of PSYC 101, 220 and 230.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 437. Neurobiology of Learning and Memory. 3 Credits.

This course surveys current knowledge about and research into the neurobiological basis of learning and memory. Using a combination of lectures and student-led discussions, we will critically evaluate the molecular, cellular, systems, and behavioral research that strives to explain how the brain learns and remembers. Previously offered as PSYC 437.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and 220; BIOL 101 recommended.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 490. Current Topics in Neuroscience. 3 Credits.

Various special areas of neuroscience study, offered as needed. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 490H. Current Topics in Neuroscience. 3 Credits.

Various special areas of neuroscience study, offered as needed.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 493. Internship in Neuroscience. 3 Credits.

Required preparation, minimum of two other neuroscience courses and junior/senior standing. Designed for highly motivated neuroscience majors interested in exploring professional opportunities in neuroscience-related areas. Juniors and seniors only.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175 and two additional NSCI courses.

Gen Ed: EE- Academic Internship.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 507. Autism. 3 Credits.

Intensive service-learning seminar on autism includes a supervised community placement. Topics include historical diagnostic issues, etiological theories, assessing patterns of functioning, developmental/life span issues, family concerns, and intervention approaches. Previously offered as PSYC 507.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175 or PSYC 101, and both PSYC 245 and 250.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 568. Emotion. 3 Credits.

This course will provide a comprehensive overview of the scientific study of emotion. Topics will include theoretical models of emotion process and structure. A range of perspectives, including social, cultural, developmental, clinical, and cognitive psychology, as well as behavioral neuroscience, will be considered. Previously offered as PSYC 568.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 571. Social Neuroscience. 3 Credits.

Recommended preparation, PSYC 220 or 315. Social neuroscience is the study of how social processes and experiences are represented in and influence the structure and function of the brain. This course will focus primarily on functional magnetic resonance imaging (fMRI) studies of humans, though we will also discuss other brain imaging techniques and patient studies. Previously offered as PSYC 571.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175 and PSYC 260, or combination of PSYC 101, 220, and 260.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 573. Neuropsychobiology of Stress. 3 Credits.

Stress is a common experience in modern life that impacts psychological and physical health. In this course, we will delve into the scientific literature in psychology and neuroscience that explores how the brain and the body respond to stress, and how we can intervene to prevent stress from negatively impacting physical and mental health.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 210 and 270, and NSCI 175 or both PSYC 101 and PSYC 220.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 693H. Honors in Neuroscience I. 3 Credits.

To be taken in the fall of the last year of studies as the first course in the two-semester honors sequence. Students conduct research under the direction of a faculty advisor and receive classroom instruction in research-related topics. Required preparation, cumulative GPA of 3.3, one semester of NSCI 395 (or equivalent faculty-lead research experience), and acceptance through application to the honors committee.

Gen Ed: CI, EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NSCI 694H. Honors in Neuroscience II. 3 Credits.

To be taken as the second course in the two-semester honors sequence. Students conduct research under the direction of a faculty advisor and receive classroom instruction in research-related topics. Admission to the neuroscience honors program required.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 693H.

Gen Ed: CI, EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC–Psychology

The courses available to undergraduate students are listed below.

No courses numbered 700 or above may be taken by undergraduate students. Consult the current directory of classes for each semester's offerings. PSYC 101 is prerequisite to ALL courses offered in the department except for first-year seminars, which are numbered below 100. Students and their advisors should take careful note of the specified prerequisites for advanced offerings in this listing.

Undergraduate-level Courses

PSYC 52. First-Year Seminar: Evolutionary Psychology. 3 Credits.

Students will gain an in-depth understanding of evolutionary psychology, a current amalgam of evolutionary biology, psychology, and anthropology that aims to view complex social and personality features of human behavior.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 53. First-Year Seminar: Talking about Numbers: Communicating Research Results to Others. 3 Credits.

How do you persuade others with numbers? What are the common biases and fallacies that we have in understanding numbers and statistics? This course is designed to allow students to work together with their instructor and classmates to attain a shared intellectual adventure. This course is also a MakerSpace course. Students in this course will focus on the design and making of physical objects as a way to learn about course concepts.

Gen Ed: PL, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 54. First-Year Seminar: Families and Children. 3 Credits.

This course will consider family from a life-course perspective and family influences on child development. Research and theory concerning divorced and step families, single parents, gay and lesbian parents, and family processes that shape children's development will be examined.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 55. First-Year Seminar: Children's Eyewitness Testimony. 3 Credits.

The course will address relevant literature on children's memory and cognition involving allegations of child sexual abuse.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 58. First-Year Seminar: The Psychology of Mental States and Language Use. 3 Credits.

Examines how language use is affected by one's reasoning about the mental activities of others. We will examine the development of language, adult language use, and the language of autistic individuals, who are known to have difficulty reasoning about others' minds. This seminar will follow a discussion format. Honors version available

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 58H. First-Year Seminar: The Psychology of Mental States and Language Use. 3 Credits.

Examines how language use is affected by one's reasoning about the mental activities of others. We will examine the development of language, adult language use, and the language of autistic individuals, who are known to have difficulty reasoning about others' minds. This seminar will follow a discussion format.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 62. First-Year Seminar: Positive Psychology: The Science of Optimal Human Functioning. 3 Credits.

This course invites students to explore the opportunities presented by the vibrant and emerging field of positive psychology.

Gen Ed: SS, CI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 63. First-Year Seminar: Use, Misuse, and Addiction to Drugs in the 21st Century. 3 Credits.

This is a first-year seminar on the use of drugs in the U.S. Its purpose is to understand the effects of drug use on pain management, overdose prevention, substance use disorder, overdoses, diversion, legal consequences, public health policy, harm reduction, and treatment. Activities include lectures from technical experts, post-lecture discussions, readings and student-lead discussions, written summaries of class material, formal debates, and a final class project on an effective evidence-based overdose prevention program.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 66. First-Year Seminar: Eating Disorders and Body Image. 3 Credits.

Students will learn about anorexia and bulimia nervosa, as well as prevention and treatment efforts. The course explores factors related to these disorders and body image from a psychosocial perspective. Learning will occur through discussions, readings, videos, guest speakers, experimental assignments, writing assignments, and research projects.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 67. First-Year Seminar: The Senses of Animals. 3 Credits.

This course deals with the sensory systems of animals. A description of the human senses is included, but senses that differ from our own are emphasized. Some treatment of research methods is also included. Classes will be a mixture of lecture, discussion, and student reports.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 68. First-Year Seminar: Psychology of Emotion. 3 Credits.

This first-year seminar is designed for students interested in exploring the psychological study of emotion. Topics include theoretical models of emotion process and structure, as well as a review of research questions about emotional expressions, autonomic physiology, affective neuroscience, emotion and reasoning, and emotion and health.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 69. First-Year Seminar: Racism, Racial Identity, and African American Mental Health. 3 Credits.

This seminar examines the connections among racism experiences, racial identity, and mental health with a focus on African American children, adolescents, and young adults.

Gen Ed: SS, US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 72. First-Year Seminar: Visualizing Women's Lives and Experiences. 3 Credits.

This seminar explores the experiences of women by integrating content and methodologies from psychology with perspectives on the depiction of women in the arts, namely digital media. Students will study gender socialization, body image, work/achievement, sex and romance, motherhood, aging, and mental health with attention given to diversity.

Gen Ed: SS, US.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: ARTS 72.

PSYC 89. First Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Content varies by semester. Honors version available

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 89H. First Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Content varies by semester.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 101. General Psychology. 3 Credits.

A survey of major principles of psychology and an introduction to scientific modes of thought about behavior. Students participate in ongoing psychological research in the department. PSYC 101 is a prerequisite for all psychology courses.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 115. Reasoning with Data: Navigating a Quantitative World. 3 Credits.

Students will use mathematical and statistical methods to address societal problems, make personal decisions, and reason critically about the world. Authentic contexts may include voting, health and risk, digital humanities, finance, and human behavior. This course does not count as credit towards the psychology or neuroscience majors.

Gen Ed: QR.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: MATH 115, BIOL 115, STOR 115.

PSYC 180. Social Media, Technology, and the Adolescent Brain. 3 Credits.

In this course, we will learn about current evidence, theory, and controversies with regards to how technology use may affect adolescent development. Questions such as how technology is changing adolescents' social relationships, impacting their mental health, and interacting with the developing brain to influence social, emotional, and cognitive development will be explored.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 190. Special Topics in Psychology. 3 Credits.

An undergraduate seminar course that is designed to be a participatory intellectual adventure on an advanced, emergent, and stimulating topic within a selected discipline in psychology. This course does not count as credit towards the psychology major.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 210. Statistical Principles of Psychological Research. 4 Credits.

Consideration of the methodological principles underlying psychological research, descriptive and inferential techniques, and the manner by which they may be employed to design psychological experiments and analyze behavioral data. Three lecture hours and one laboratory hour a week.

Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 210H. Statistical Principles of Psychological Research. 4 Credits.

Consideration of the methodological principles underlying psychological research, descriptive and inferential techniques, and the manner by which they may be employed to design psychological experiments and analyze behavioral data. Three lecture hours and one laboratory hour a week.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 215. Applied Data Science in Psychology and Neuroscience. 4 Credits.

This course is an alternative to PSYC 210, and therefore, satisfies the statistics requirement of the psychology and neuroscience majors. This is a Course-based Undergraduate Research Experience (CURE), focusing on descriptive and inferential statistical techniques and the manner by which they are employed to design and analyze behavioral data. Students may not receive credit in both PSYC 210 and 215.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 220. Biopsychology. 3 Credits.

Introductory course which surveys the biological bases of behavior.

Topics may include nerve cells and nerve impulses, sensory systems, wakefulness and sleep, reproductive behaviors, and cognitive functions. This course would be an appropriate foundational course for Advanced Biopsychology (PSYC 402). Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 220H. Biopsychology. 3 Credits.

Introductory course which surveys the biological bases of behavior.

Topics may include nerve cells and nerve impulses, sensory systems, wakefulness and sleep, reproductive behaviors, and cognitive functions. This course would be an appropriate foundational course for Advanced Biopsychology (PSYC 402).

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 230. Cognitive Psychology. 3 Credits.

Topics in attention; memory; visual, auditory, and other forms of information processing; decision making; and thinking. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 230H. Cognitive Psychology. 3 Credits.

Topics in attention; memory; visual, auditory, and other forms of information processing; decision making; and thinking.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 242. Introduction to Clinical Psychology. 3 Credits.

Overview of clinical psychology: history, scientific basis, and major activities and concerns, including assessment, psychotherapy and other psychological interventions, community psychology, ethics, and professional practice. Students may not receive credit for both PSYC 242 and 505. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 242H. Introduction to Clinical Psychology. 3 Credits.

Overview of clinical psychology: history, scientific basis, and major activities and concerns, including assessment, psychotherapy and other psychological interventions, community psychology, ethics, and professional practice. Students may not receive credit for both PSYC 242 and 505.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 245. Psychopathology. 3 Credits.

Major forms of behavior disorders in children and adults, with an emphasis on description, causation, and treatment. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 245H. Psychopathology. 3 Credits.

Major forms of behavior disorders in children and adults, with an emphasis on description, causation, and treatment.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 250. Child Development. 3 Credits.

Study of the development of social and intellectual behavior in normal children and the processes that underlie this development. Emphasis is typically on theory and research. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 250H. Child Development. 3 Credits.

Study of the development of social and intellectual behavior in normal children and the processes that underlie this development. Emphasis is typically on theory and research.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 260. Social Psychology. 3 Credits.

Introductory survey of experimental social psychology covering attitudes, interpersonal processes, and small groups. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 260H. Social Psychology. 3 Credits.

Introductory survey of experimental social psychology covering attitudes, interpersonal processes, and small groups.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 270. Research Methods in Psychology. 3 Credits.

Students in this course will be exposed to a survey of methodology used across various disciplines in psychology (i.e., social, clinical, development, cognitive, and neuroscience). In addition, students will work as a class to conduct research projects on a common theme. Students will spend class time planning, conducting, and writing up the results of this project. Class time will also be used to discuss methodological considerations in psychological research more broadly.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 290. Current Topics in Psychology. 1-3 Credits.

Various special areas of psychological study, offered as needed. Course may be repeated for credit. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

PSYC 290H. Current Topics in Psychology. 1-3 Credits.

Various special areas of psychological study, offered as needed. Course may be repeated for credit.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

PSYC 294. Service Learning in Psychology: APPLES. 1-3 Credits.

Permission of the instructor. Service learning component for students enrolled in psychology APPLES courses. May not count toward the major.

Gen Ed: EE- Service Learning.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 310. Applied Statistical Methods in the Psychological Sciences. 3 Credits.

This course extends statistical and data analytic concepts covered in PSYC 210 with direct applications to empirical data commonly encountered in psychological research. Topics include measurement, group comparisons, linear associations, and prediction. An equal balance is placed on statistical concepts, computer-based data analysis, and interpretation of findings.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 210, PSYC 215, SOCI 252, or STOR 155.

Gen Ed: SS, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 330. Introduction to Cognitive Science. 3 Credits.

Recommended preparation, PSYC 210 or another quantitative reasoning course. An introduction to the interdisciplinary study of the mind, intelligent behavior, information processing, and communication in living organisms and computers.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 348. Intersectionality: Race, Gender, Sexuality, and Social Justice. 3 Credits.

The first goal of this super course is to give students real tools for how to address multiple modes of difference and identity formations like race, gender, class, and sexuality.

Gen Ed: CI, US.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: AMST 248, ENGL 248, POLI 248, WGST 249.

PSYC 390. Current Topics in Psychology. 1-3 Credits.

Various special areas of psychological study, offered as needed. Course may be repeated for credit.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 395. Independent Research. 1-3 Credits.

A minimum of a 3.0 cumulative grade point average. Permission of the instructor. Supervised research resulting in a written report. May be repeated for credit up to eight hours. Up to three hours may count as a psychology elective.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and two additional psychology courses, at least one of which must be numbered 200 or greater.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 8 total credits. 6 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level CoursesPSYC 404. Clinical Psychopharmacology. 3 Credits.

This course will investigate the pharmacological effects and the clinical efficacy of drugs used to treat behavior disorders.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 430. Human Memory. 3 Credits.

This course explores classic and current issues in the study of human memory. Topics include working memory, encoding and retrieval processes, implicit memory, reconstructive processes in memory, eyewitness memory, developmental changes in memory, neuropsychology and neuroscience of memory and memory disorders, memory improvement, and the repressed/recovered memory controversy.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, and 222 or 230.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 432. Psychology of Language. 3 Credits.

Recommended preparation, PSYC 230 or LING 101 or LING 400. This course examines the mental representations and cognitive processes that underlie the human ability to use language. Covers what people know about language, how they process it, and how people make inferences about the speaker's meaning based on context. Recent work in experimental psycholinguistics is discussed.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 433. Behavioral Decision Theory. 3 Credits.

Simple mathematical and psychological models of judgment and choice, and related experiments, are treated, as are applications to real world problems in medical, environmental, policy, business, and related domains.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 438. Research Topics in the Psychology of Language. 3 Credits.

Examines the cognitive mechanisms behind language comprehension, focusing on how we make predictions about the speaker's meaning, based on context, background, gestures, and other cues. In this course-based undergraduate research experience (CURE), groups of students generate novel research questions, perform their own research experiments, and present the results in spoken and written format.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 270; recommended preparation, at least one course in linguistics (PSYC 432, any LING course, or any course with a substantial linguistics component).

Gen Ed: SS, CI, EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 461. Cognitive Development. 3 Credits.

An examination of the development of attention, perception, learning, memory, and thinking in normal children.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 250.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 463. Development of Social Behavior and Personality. 3 Credits.

Developmental processes during early childhood as these relate to social behavior and personality.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and either PSYC 210 or 215.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 465. Poverty and Development. 3 Credits.

Poverty is one of the most consistent and influential risk factors for problematic development. This course focuses on the scientific study of how poverty affects development across the human life span.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 250.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 467. The Development of Black Children. 3 Credits.

PSYC 210 or 215 recommended. A survey of the literature on the development of black children. Topics include peer and social relations, self-esteem, identity development, cognitive development, school achievement, parenting, family management, and neighborhood influences.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 250.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 468. Family as a Context for Development. 3 Credits.

Explores how the family influences children's development. Topics include family theories, genetics, family structure (e.g., single parents, working mothers, divorce), discipline, parent behavior and values and beliefs, fathers and ethnic diversity.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 250, and either PSYC 210 or 215.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 469. Evolution and Development of Biobehavioral Systems. 3 Credits.

Examines the evolution and development of behavior patterns and their physiological substrates.

Requisites: Prerequisites, BIOL 101 and PSYC 101, 210, or 215.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 471. The Study of Adolescent Issues and Development. 3 Credits.

The developmental period of adolescence is studied from a multidisciplinary perspective. The course will distinguish among early, middle, and late adolescence and will cover several theoretical perspectives.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 250, and either PSYC 210 or 215.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 472. Racial Discrimination and Minority Youth. 3 Credits.

This course examines the effects of racial discrimination among African American, Latino, Asian American, and Native American adolescents using a psychological perspective to critically examine empirical research. The course examines racial discrimination, power, and equity and is recommended for students interested in serious, thought-provoking discussions.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 250, 260, and either PSYC 210 or 215.

Gen Ed: SS, US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 490. Current Topics in Psychology. 3 Credits.

Various special areas of psychological study, offered as needed. Course may be repeated for credit. Honors version available

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 12 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 490H. Current Topics in Psychology. 3 Credits.

Various special areas of psychological study, offered as needed. Course may be repeated for credit.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 12 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 493. Internship in Psychology. 3 Credits.

Required preparation, minimum of two other psychology courses and junior/senior standing. Designed for highly motivated psychology majors interested in exploring professional opportunities in psychology-related areas. Students complete hands-on internships at community sites for approximately 120 hours across the semester. Students also attend a weekly one-hour class with other interns.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: EE- Academic Internship.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 500. Developmental Psychopathology. 3 Credits.

A survey of theories bearing on atypical development and disordered behavior, and an examination of major child and adolescent behavior problems and clinical syndromes.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 245, and 250.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 501. Theoretical, Empirical Perspectives on Personality. 3 Credits.

An in-depth coverage of the traditional clinically based personality theories of the early 20th century contrasted with more recent empirically based perspectives.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 502. Psychology of Adulthood and Aging. 3 Credits.

A developmental approach to the study of adulthood, from young adulthood through death. Topics include adult issues in personality, family dynamics, work, leisure and retirement, biological and intellectual aspects of aging, dying, and bereavement.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 250.

Gen Ed: SS, EE- Service Learning.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 503. African American Psychology. 3 Credits.

This course examines race and culture in the psychological processes and behavior of African Americans.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: SS, US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 504. Health Psychology. 3 Credits.

An in-depth coverage of psychological, biological, and social factors that may be involved with health.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 245.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 512. Popularity, Friendship, and Peer Relations. 3 Credits.

This course will review literature regarding peer relations among children and adolescents, including peer acceptance/rejection, popularity, bases of friendship selection, peer crowds, romantic relationships, and theories of peer influence.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 514. Mania and Depression. 3 Credits.

The social, developmental, and biological contributions to mania and depression are examined, as well as the impact of these moods on the brain, creativity, relationships, quality of life, and health.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 245.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 517. Addiction. 3 Credits.

PSYC 245 and 270 recommended but not required. This course will provide students with a comprehensive overview of the etiology and treatment of addiction, along with exposure to real-life stories of addiction.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Gen Ed: PL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 525. Psychological Archival Data Science. 3 Credits.

This course addresses techniques in answering new questions with existing data. Students will learn about data from multiple perspectives: different data source and types, intended audiences, and visualization, analysis, and presentation formats. This will make students more savvy consumers as well as producers of data.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 270 and 245 or 500.

Gen Ed: CI, EE- Mentored Research, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 528. Clinical Research: Design, Analyze, Disseminate. 3 Credits.

In this project-based course, students work with a community partner to identify a clinical research question related to our understanding and treatment of psychological health and human behavior. Using an iterative method reflective of working in a psychology research lab, students collaborate with one another and community partners to develop hypotheses, to prepare and analyze data, to propose interpretations of data, and to present their results to the public.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 270 and either PSYC 210 or 215.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 530. Design and Interpretation of Psychological Research. 3 Credits.

Emphasis on the methodological principles underlying experimental and correlational research. Interaction of theory and practice in the design and interpretation of psychological studies. This is a course-based undergraduate research experience (CURE).

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 270.

Gen Ed: PL, CI, EE- Mentored Research, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 531. Tests and Measurement. 3 Credits.

Basic psychometric theory underlying test construction and utilization. Detailed study of issues and instruments used in assessing intellectual functioning, educational progress, personality, and personnel selection.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, and either PSYC 210 or 215.

Gen Ed: SS, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 532. Quantitative Psychology. 3 Credits.

This course examines the science of quantitative psychology. Topics include the analysis of data, the design of questionnaires, and the assessment of psychological attributes, among others. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 210, 215, SOCI 252, or STOR 155.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 532H. Quantitative Psychology. 3 Credits.

This course examines the science of quantitative psychology. Topics include the analysis of data, the design of questionnaires, and the assessment of psychological attributes, among others.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 210, 215, SOCI 252, or STOR 155.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 533. The General Linear Model in Psychology. 3 Credits.

Consideration of multiple regression and the general linear model in psychological research, including hypothesis testing, model formulation, and the analysis of observational and experimental data. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisite, ECON 400, PSYC 210, PSYC 215, SOCI 252 or STOR 155.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 533H. The General Linear Model in Psychology. 3 Credits.

Consideration of multiple regression and the general linear model in psychological research, including hypothesis testing, model formulation, and the analysis of observational and experimental data.

Requisites: Prerequisite, ECON 400, PSYC 210, PSYC 215, SOCI 252 or STOR 155.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 534. Introduction to Computational Statistics. 3 Credits.

Introduction to programming and the implementation of statistical techniques. Topics include data manipulation, graphical procedures, writing loops and functions, data simulation, use of regular expressions, and scraping data from the web.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 210, 215, SOCI 252, or STOR 155.

Gen Ed: PL, QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 559. Applied Machine Learning in Psychology. 3 Credits.

As opposed to hypothesis-driven data analysis, machine learning takes an exploratory and predictive approach to data analysis. This course introduces machine learning approaches in psychology to identify important variables for prediction and uncover complex patterns in datasets, such as nonlinearity, interactions, or clusters. Classes include theoretical lectures and hands-on examples.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, and either PSYC 210 or 215.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 561. Social Cognition. 3 Credits.

Theory and research in social psychology, which explores the cognitive processes underlying social phenomena. Specific topics covered include attributions, emotions, automaticity, heuristics, self, goals, stereotyping, expectancies, social motives, and others. Honors version available

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 260, and either PSYC 210 or 215.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 561H. Social Cognition. 3 Credits.

Theory and research in social psychology, which explores the cognitive processes underlying social phenomena. Specific topics covered include attributions, emotions, automaticity, heuristics, self, goals, stereotyping, expectancies, social motives, and others.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 260, and either PSYC 210 or 215.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 564. Interpersonal Relationships. 3 Credits.

PSYC 270 Recommended. This advanced course will comprehensively cover the social psychological literature on normally-developing interpersonal relationships, with implications for relationships with family, friends, co-workers, and romantic partners. This is a research-intensive course with a major aspect involving an independent research project to facilitate learning by doing.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 260, and either PSYC 210 or 215.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 565. Stereotyping, Prejudice, and Discrimination. 3 Credits.

PSYC 270 recommended. Examines the determinants, functions, processes, and consequences of stereotyping, prejudice, and discrimination. Prospects for change are considered. Class presentations and participation required.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 260, and either PSYC 210 or 215.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 566. Attitude Change. 3 Credits.

A detailed consideration of the theoretical issues in attitude and belief change.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 260, and either 210 or 215.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 567. Research in Positive Psychology. 3 Credits.

This advanced course in positive psychology is research intensive and intended as a capstone for majors in psychology. Majors only.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 270, and either 210 or 215.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 569. Practical Wisdom from Advanced Social Psychology. 3 Credits.

Surveys cutting-edge research across the field of social psychology and how it matters for everyday life. Topics include morality, mind perception, judgment and decision making, happiness, affective forecasting, emotion, relationships, negotiation, personality, free will, stress/health, and religion. Clear communication of research also emphasized through figures, presentations, and papers.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 260, and 270.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 570. The Social Psychology of Self-Regulation. 3 Credits.

PSYC 270 recommended. An intensive review of self-regulation theory and research, focusing on the cognitive, motivational, and affective processes involved in goal commitment, monitoring, and overriding behavioral responses.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 260, and either PSYC 210 or 215.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 572. Theoretical and Empirical Perspectives on Sex and Gender Differences. 3 Credits.

An in-depth examination of psychological research and theory pertaining to the influence of gender on the lives of men and women. In general, emphasis will be placed on understanding gender as a social psychological construct.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 260.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 573. Psychology of Women and Gender. 3 Credits.

This course will discuss theories, methods, and empirical research findings on the physical, cognitive, emotional, and social aspects of the psychology of women, as well as topics such as feminist psychology, intersectionality, bias in psychological research, sexual orientation, sexuality, lifespan development, work, and health. Men and masculinity, the psychology of transgender persons, and a critique of the gender binary are also discussed.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101 or WGST 101.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: WGST 573.

PSYC 601. Psychology and Law. 3 Credits.

Examines the legal system from the perspective of psychology methods and research, with a focus on criminal law. Discusses dilemmas within the law and between the legal system and psychology.

Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, and either PSYC 210 or PSYC 215.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 602. Evolutionary Psychology. 3 Credits.

Major topics of general psychology are examined from an evolutionary perspective with an emphasis on empirical studies asking why much current human behavior and experience would have been adaptive for our early ancestors.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 693H. Honors in Psychology I. 3 Credits.

Required preparation, cumulative GPA of 3.3, in-process or completion of PSYC 395 (or equivalent experience in a faculty research lab), and acceptance through application to the honors committee. To be taken in the fall of the last year of studies as the first course in the two-semester honors sequence. Students conduct research under the direction of a faculty advisor and receive classroom instruction in research-related topics.

Gen Ed: SS, CI, EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PSYC 694H. Honors in Psychology II. 3 Credits.

Admission to the psychology honors program required. To be taken as the second course in the two-semester honors sequence. Students conduct research under the direction of a faculty advisor and receive classroom instruction in research-related topics.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 693H.

Gen Ed: SS, CI, EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

Neuroscience embodies the liberal arts experience as it draws on techniques and findings from several academic disciplines including biology, chemistry, computer science, mathematics, physics, and psychology. This program provides students with the fundamental knowledge and exposure needed to pursue careers and post-graduate studies in fields related to psychology, human development and aging, health and disease, rehabilitation, biomedical research, human-machine interactions, and other emerging disciplines.

The neuroscience major is open to all undergraduate students.

Majors

- Neuroscience Major, B.S. (p. 887)
- Psychology Major, B.A. (p. 892)
- Psychology Major, B.S. (p. 895)

Minors

- Cognitive Science Minor (p. 899)
- Neuroscience Minor (p. 901)

Graduate Programs

- M.A. in Psychology (<http://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/psychology-neuroscience/>)
- Ph.D. in Psychology (<http://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/psychology-neuroscience/>)

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the neuroscience program, students should be able to:

- Knowledge Base: Demonstrate familiarity with the major concepts, theoretical perspectives, empirical findings, and trends in neuroscience including its links to other science disciplines
- Research Methods: Apply basic research methods in psychology, including research design, data analysis, and interpretation
- Critical Thinking Skills: Demonstrate critical and creative thinking, skeptical inquiry, and when possible, the scientific approach to solve problems related to behavior and mental processes
- Application: Apply psychological principles to personal, social, and organizational issues
- Values: Demonstrate use of empirical evidence, tolerate ambiguity, act ethically, and reflect other values that are the underpinning of neuroscience as a science

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Special Opportunities in Psychology and Neuroscience

Honors in Psychology and Neuroscience

Any major in the program with an overall grade point average of 3.3 or higher and prior research experience in a faculty lab (e.g., PSYC 395 or NSCI 395) is eligible for enrollment in the departmental senior honors program. Each candidate for honors participates in a two-semester course sequence (PSYC 693H and PSYC 694H or NSCI 693H and NSCI 694H) and carries out independent research in an area of the student's choice under the guidance of a psychology and neuroscience faculty member. Please see the department Web site for the application form (<https://psychology.unc.edu/honors-program/>) and additional information.

Departmental Involvement

Membership in the Psychology Club (<https://heellife.unc.edu/organization/psychology-club/>) is open to any interested psychology major. There is no minimum grade point average requirement. The club meets frequently to discuss psychology-related topics and learn about careers in psychology.

The Carolina Neuroscience Club (<http://carolinaneuroscience.web.unc.edu>) brings together students who have an interest in the brain and nervous system. Club members meet regularly to discuss courses, research articles, and post-college neuroscience opportunities. Membership is open to anyone interested in neuroscience.

Psi Chi (<https://heellife.unc.edu/organization/psi-chi-psychology-national-honor-society-uncch/>) is the National Honor Society for psychology. UNC's chapter strives to increase awareness of career options as well as the role of psychology in the community, among exemplary psychology students.

The Undergraduate Research Society (<http://urs.web.unc.edu/>) raises undergraduate awareness of research on campus. The society works to bridge interactions between undergraduates, graduate students and faculty members as well as provides opportunities for undergraduate researchers to further their research interests.

Helping Give Away Psychological Science (<https://www.hgaps.org/>) is a student-based nonprofit organization to improve information about psychology on Wikipedia, on other online sites, and in the community.

Experiential Education

Several opportunities for experiential education are available. The Karen M. Gil Internship Program (<http://psychology.unc.edu/undergraduate-studies/gil-internship/>) offers both course credit and a monthly stipend to selected psychology and neuroscience majors who are placed in approved internship sites in the community. Interns are selected through a competitive process (minimum grade point average is 3.4). Other experiential education opportunities include PSYC 395; NSCI 395; PSYC 294; NSCI 294; NSCI 424; APPLES, performed either through the APPLES program or in conjunction with a specific psychology class; and other classes for which service learning is a central focus. See course listings for details.

Undergraduate Awards

The Department of Psychology and Neuroscience administers several undergraduate awards: the Dashiell-Thurstone Prize; the David Bray Peele Undergraduate Award; the Donald T. Lysle Service Award; the Lindquist Undergraduate Research Award; the J. Steven Reznick Award for Diversity Enhancement in Psychological Research; the J. Steven Reznick Diversity and Psychological Research Grant; and the Susan M. McHale Award for Outstanding Psychological Research by a Student Who Enhances Diversity, as well as several fellowships and grants administered through the UNC Office for Undergraduate Research or the UNC Honors Carolina Office. An additional honor is election to Psi Chi, the national honor society for psychology undergraduates. Each year, the Lindquist Undergraduate Research Award is given to several undergraduate students to support their research; the Dashiell-Thurstone Prize is awarded to one student for the best undergraduate research project; the David Bray Peel Undergraduate Award is given for the best honors project; and the Donald T. Lysle Service Award is given to a psychology or neuroscience major who has made exemplary service contributions. The Donald T. Lysle Service Award is presented at the Chancellor's Award Ceremony, the only campus-wide recognition at Carolina. The department also supports awards that support diversity. The J. Steven Reznick Award for Outstanding Research That Enhances Diversity is for a graduating senior who has conducted excellent research that contributes to psychological knowledge about diversity, and the J. Steven Reznick Diversity and Psychological Research Grant as well as the Susan M. McHale Award for Outstanding Research by a Student Who Enhances Diversity are awarded to student researchers who identify as being from an underrepresented population. For each of these awards, diversity is broadly defined, including but not limited to diversity based on race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, gender, disability, religious affiliation, and socioeconomic status. For additional details on these awards, please visit the Psychology and Neuroscience page on undergraduate awards (<https://psychology.unc.edu/departments-awards/#undergraduateawards>).

Undergraduate Research

Qualified students interested in doing independent research under the direction of a faculty member may enroll for independent research credit (PSYC 395 or NSCI 395). Students interested in this option should speak directly with psychology faculty members regarding opportunities in their laboratories. Additional information is available on the department's Web site (<http://psychology.unc.edu/undergraduate-studies/undergraduate-research/>). Many other psychology courses also include heavy research components. See the research methods, research intensive, and research exposure courses at the Office for Undergraduate Research (<https://our.unc.edu/find-research-courses/>).

In the undergraduate study of psychology, the emphasis is on a broad acquaintance with the behavioral sciences, not specialization. The subject matter is preparatory to a career in psychology either in basic research and teaching, or in any number of professional applications to various human problems. A psychology major may prove valuable to those planning other professional careers such as medicine, law, education, or business, as well as to those who seek a broad cultural background in the behavioral sciences.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the psychology (B.A., B.S.) and/or neuroscience (B.S.) programs, students will attain the following:

- Knowledge Base: Demonstrate knowledge of the major concepts, theoretical perspectives, empirical findings, and historical trends in psychology and/or neuroscience, including its links to other social science disciplines
- Research Methods: Apply basic research methods in psychology and/or neuroscience, including research design, data analysis, and interpretation
- Critical Thinking Skills: Demonstrate critical and creative thinking, skeptical inquiry, and when possible, the scientific approach to solve problems related to behavior, mental processes and the biological mechanisms which underlie behavior and mental processes
- Application: Apply psychological and/or neuroscience principles to personal, social, and organizational issues
- Values: Demonstrate use of empirical evidence, tolerate ambiguity, act ethically, be mindful of diversity and reflect other values that are the underpinnings of psychology and/or neuroscience as a science

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill

- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

¹ NSCI 225 can meet either the behavioral neuroscience or cognitive requirement, but not both.

Except for PSYC 101, no psychology courses may be used by psychology majors to satisfy the General Education Approaches requirement.

A student may submit a maximum of 45 hours of credit in psychology courses (including PSYC 101) toward the completion of the B.A. degree.

All majors must complete PSYC 101 and at least six psychology and/or neuroscience courses above PSYC 101 with a grade of C (not C-) or better (from the core requirements listed above).

Students planning to enter graduate programs in psychology are urged to include a research-intensive course such as PSYC 395, NSCI 395, PSYC 530, or PSYC 693H and PSYC 694H in their program and as many courses numbered 400 and above as possible.

Graduate Programs

- M.A. in Psychology (<http://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/psychology-neuroscience/>)
- Ph.D. in Psychology (<http://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/psychology-neuroscience/>)

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the psychology (B.A., B.S.) and/or neuroscience (B.S.) programs, students will attain the following:

- Knowledge Base: Demonstrate knowledge of the major concepts, theoretical perspectives, empirical findings, and historical trends in psychology and/or neuroscience, including its links to other social science disciplines
- Research Methods: Apply basic research methods in psychology and/or neuroscience, including research design, data analysis, and interpretation
- Critical Thinking Skills: Demonstrate critical and creative thinking, skeptical inquiry, and when possible, the scientific approach to solve problems related to behavior, mental processes and the biological mechanisms which underlie behavior and mental processes
- Application: Apply psychological and/or neuroscience principles to personal, social, and organizational issues
- Values: Demonstrate use of empirical evidence, tolerate ambiguity, act ethically, be mindful of diversity and reflect other values that are the underpinnings of psychology and/or neuroscience as a science

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

Core Requirements
PSYC 210	Statistical Principles of Psychological Research ^H	4
or PSYC 215	Applied Data Science in Psychology and Neuroscience
PSYC 270	Research Methods in Psychology	3
One course below 400 from each of the following program areas:		6
Behavioral Integrative Neuroscience:
NSCI 222	Learning ^H
NSCI 225	Sensation and Perception ^{1, H}
PSYC 220	Biopsychology ^H
Cognitive:
NSCI 225	Sensation and Perception ^{1, H}
PSYC 230	Cognitive Psychology ^H
One course below 400 from two of the three following psychology program areas:		6

Clinical:
PSYC 242	Introduction to Clinical Psychology ^H
PSYC 245	Psychopathology ^H
Development:
PSYC 250	Child Development ^H
Social:
PSYC 260	Social Psychology ^H
One course chosen from the 'Upper Level Courses for Special Requirement' (see list below)		3
One additional PSYC and/or NSCI course numbered between 400 and 650. May not include PSYC 493 or NSCI 493.		3
One additional PSYC and/or NSCI course above 101; may include three hours of PSYC 395, PSYC 693H, PSYC 694H or NSCI 395; may not include PSYC 190 or NSCI 190.		3
Additional Requirements
BIOL 101 & 101L	Principles of Biology and Introductory Biology Laboratory ^H	4
One of:		4
CHEM 101 & 101L	General Descriptive Chemistry I and Quantitative Chemistry Laboratory I
PHYS 114	General Physics I: For Students of the Life Sciences
PHYS 118	Introductory Calculus-based Mechanics and Relativity
MATH 231	Calculus of Functions of One Variable I ^H	4

COMP 101	Fluency in Information Technology
COMP 110	Introduction to Programming ^H
COMP 116	Introduction to Scientific Programming
MATH 232	Calculus of Functions of One Variable II ^H
At least four additional three-hour nonpsychology physical and life sciences courses which come from the Allied Science course list (see below), including one with a laboratory		13
One additional nonhistorical social and behavioral sciences Approaches (p. 120) course, which must be from a department other than psychology		3
Remaining General Education (p. 120) requirements and enough free electives to accumulate 122 academic hours		60
Total Hours		122

¹ NSCI 225 can meet either the behavioral neuroscience or cognitive requirement, but not both.

All majors must complete PSYC 101 and at least six psychology and/or neuroscience courses above PSYC 101 with a grade of C (not C-) or better (from the core requirements listed above).

Students planning to enter graduate programs in psychology are urged to include a research-intensive course such as PSYC 395, PSYC 530, or PSYC 693H and PSYC 694H in their program and as many courses numbered 400 and above as possible.

Details of the student's program may be worked out in consultation with college and departmental advisors.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Special Opportunities in Psychology and Neuroscience

Honors in Psychology and Neuroscience

Any major in the program with an overall grade point average of 3.3 or higher and prior research experience in a faculty lab (e.g., PSYC 395 or NSCI 395) is eligible for enrollment in the departmental senior honors program. Each candidate for honors participates in a two-semester course sequence (PSYC 693H and PSYC 694H or NSCI 693H and NSCI 694H) and carries out independent research in an area of the student's choice under the guidance of a psychology and neuroscience faculty member. Please see the department Web site for the application form (<https://psychology.unc.edu/honors-program/>) and additional information.

Departmental Involvement

Membership in the Psychology Club (<https://heellife.unc.edu/organization/psychology-club/>) is open to any interested psychology major. There is no minimum grade point average requirement. The club meets frequently to discuss psychology-related topics and learn about careers in psychology.

The Carolina Neuroscience Club (<http://carolinaneuroscience.web.unc.edu>) brings together students who have an interest in the brain and nervous system. Club members meet regularly to discuss courses, research articles, and post-college neuroscience opportunities. Membership is open to anyone interested in neuroscience.

Psi Chi (<https://heellife.unc.edu/organization/psi-chi-psychology-national-honor-society-uncch/>) is the National Honor Society for psychology. UNC's chapter strives to increase awareness of career options as well as the role of psychology in the community, among exemplary psychology students.

The Undergraduate Research Society (<http://urs.web.unc.edu/>) raises undergraduate awareness of research on campus. The society works to bridge interactions between undergraduates, graduate students and faculty members as well as provides opportunities for undergraduate researchers to further their research interests.

Helping Give Away Psychological Science (<https://www.hgaps.org/>) is a student-based nonprofit organization to improve information about psychology on Wikipedia, on other online sites, and in the community.

Experiential Education

Several opportunities for experiential education are available. The Karen M. Gil Internship Program (<http://psychology.unc.edu/undergraduate-studies/gil-internship/>) offers both course credit and a monthly stipend to selected psychology and neuroscience majors who are placed in approved internship sites in the community. Interns are selected through a competitive process (minimum grade point average is 3.4). Other experiential education opportunities include PSYC 395; NSCI 395; PSYC 294; NSCI 294; NSCI 424; APPLES, performed either through the APPLES program or in conjunction with a specific psychology class; and other classes for which service learning is a central focus. See course listings for details.

Undergraduate Awards

The Department of Psychology and Neuroscience administers several undergraduate awards: the Dashiell-Thurstone Prize; the David Bray Peele Undergraduate Award; the Donald T. Lysle Service Award; the Lindquist Undergraduate Research Award; the J. Steven Reznick Award for Diversity Enhancement in Psychological Research; the J. Steven Reznick Diversity and Psychological Research Grant; and the Susan M. McHale Award for Outstanding Psychological Research by a Student Who Enhances Diversity, as well as several fellowships and grants administered through the UNC Office for Undergraduate Research or the UNC Honors Carolina Office. An additional honor is election to Psi Chi, the national honor society for psychology undergraduates. Each year, the Lindquist Undergraduate Research Award is given to several undergraduate students to support their research; the Dashiell-Thurstone Prize is awarded to one student for the best undergraduate research project; the David Bray Peel Undergraduate Award is given for the best honors project; and the Donald T. Lysle Service Award is given to a psychology or neuroscience major who has made exemplary service contributions. The Donald T. Lysle Service Award is presented at the Chancellor's Award Ceremony, the only campus-wide recognition at Carolina. The department also supports awards that support diversity. The J. Steven Reznick Award for Outstanding Research That Enhances Diversity is for a graduating senior who has conducted excellent research that contributes to psychological knowledge about diversity, and the J. Steven Reznick Diversity and Psychological Research Grant as well as the Susan M. McHale Award for Outstanding Research by a Student Who Enhances Diversity are awarded to student researchers who identify as being from an underrepresented population. For each of these awards, diversity is broadly defined, including but not limited to diversity based on race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, gender, disability, religious affiliation, and socioeconomic status. For additional details on these awards, please visit the Psychology and Neuroscience page on undergraduate awards (<https://psychology.unc.edu/departamental-awards/#undergraduateawards>).

Undergraduate Research

Qualified students interested in doing independent research under the direction of a faculty member may enroll for independent research credit (PSYC 395 or NSCI 395). Students interested in this option should speak directly with psychology faculty members regarding opportunities in their laboratories. Additional information is available on the department's Web site (<http://psychology.unc.edu/undergraduate-studies/undergraduate-research/>). Many other psychology courses also include heavy research components. See the research methods, research intensive, and research exposure courses at the Office for Undergraduate Research (<https://our.unc.edu/find-research-courses/>).

Students must earn a grade of C or better in at least four of the five core courses. Courses used to satisfy psychology core requirements cannot also satisfy requirements in the cognitive science minor. The minor is open to all, including psychology majors, who are still limited to no more than 45 credit hours in the department. Students and their advisors should take careful note of the specified prerequisites for advanced offerings in this listing. The specified courses (or their equivalent from other institutions) provide a necessary background for entry into these advanced courses.

See the program page here (p. 892) for special opportunities.

Introduction

UNC Public Policy is an interdisciplinary social science major designed to provide students with the theoretical perspective, analytical skill, and substantive knowledge needed to respond to domestic and global policy challenges.

Our faculty have expertise in a wide range of global and domestic policy issues including education and labor markets, environment and human welfare, innovation and entrepreneurship, science and technology policy, social policy and inequality, health policy, bioethics, and human rights, international development policy, global conflict and cooperation, and other policy areas.

The undergraduate curriculum emphasizes research and experiential learning and includes exposure to multiple disciplinary fields including policy analysis, economics, history, political science, applied philosophy, research design and statistics.

Advising

All majors and minors have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. UNC

Public Policy's director of undergraduate studies and student services officer work with current and prospective students by appointment (see contact information above). For additional information on courses and undergraduate opportunities, see UNC Public Policy's Web site (<http://publicpolicy.unc.edu/academics/undergraduate-program/>).

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

The undergraduate major in public policy provides students with conceptual and analytical skills that prepare them for the labor market and graduate school. The integration of a liberal arts education, writing and analytical abilities, and knowledge in a domestic or global policy field prepares students for many career paths, including education, law, private sector, public sector, public policy, nonprofit sector, and global affairs. Public policy majors go on to earn graduate degrees in a range of social science and professional disciplines and pursue careers in academic settings, and the public, private and nonprofit sector.

Our mission is to empower students with the knowledge, skills, and experience to improve the lives of others.

Knowledge

Students think and learn across academic disciplines with a diverse faculty with degrees in business, economics, history, law, sociology, philosophy, political science, and public policy.

Skills

Students gain an ability to think critically and independently; to write, reason, and communicate clearly; and to conduct research.

Experience

Students apply knowledge and skills in real world environments beyond the classroom. Students in our clinic, internship, and capstone courses address contemporary policy challenges by providing innovative analysis to clients in the nonprofit and public sector.

PLCY–Public Policy

Undergraduate-level Courses

PLCY 51. First-Year Seminar: The Global Environment in the 21st Century. 3 Credits.

This seminar explores linkages among nations, global environmental institutions, and the environmental problems they cause and seek to rectify. The course will examine how global environmental policy is made, with specific attention to the roles of institutions, nations, commercial and nonprofit entities.

Gen Ed: GL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 54. First-Year Seminar: U.S. Immigration. 3 Credits.

This seminar provides students with an opportunity to discuss current topics in United States immigration. Students will explore theories of migration, acculturation and assimilation, and the ways in which policies influence the well-being of immigrants.

Gen Ed: SS, US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 55. First-Year Seminar: Higher Education, the College Experience, and Public Policy. 3 Credits.

This first-year seminar provides an introduction to contemporary policy issues in higher education. Students will discuss challenges to current models of higher education, including accessibility, academic freedom, safety and security, and athletics.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 60. First-Year Seminar: Understanding Poverty. 3 Credits.

Despite major improvements in living standards across the globe, nearly a fifth of the world's population still lives in extreme poverty. This course will examine the key determinants of human material well-being from an interdisciplinary perspective, discuss interventions and policies that can affect poverty including an assessment of market mechanisms, and interpret quantitative data to understand the causes and consequences of human development failures.

Gen Ed: SS, BN.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 61. First-Year Seminar: Policy Entrepreneurship and Public/Private/Non-Profit Partnerships. 3 Credits.

This seminar will define a policy entrepreneur and examine strategies used by policy entrepreneurs to achieve policy change or innovation in the policy making process. We will also explore models of innovative public-private-non-profit partnerships in the delivery of public goods.

Honors version available

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 61H. First-Year Seminar: Policy Entrepreneurship and Public/Private/Non-Profit Partnerships. 3 Credits.

This seminar will define a policy entrepreneur and examine strategies used by policy entrepreneurs to achieve policy change or innovation in the policy making process. We will also explore models of innovative public-private-non-profit partnerships in the delivery of public goods.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 63. First-Year Seminar: Creating Social Value. 3 Credits.

Where do social entrepreneurs come from? How do they develop their passion for changing the world? Where do they get their motivation? Can anyone become a social entrepreneur? This seminar will look at the history and theory of social change, review the skills, strategies, and ideas of effective change agents and give students the tools to create a blueprint for their ideas for social transformation.

Gen Ed: SS, EE- Service Learning, EE- Field Work.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 66. First-Year Seminar: Energy Poverty. 3 Credits.

Access to affordable and clean energy, a key factor for sustainable development and poverty eradication, is one of the greatest challenges the world faces now and in the future. This interdisciplinary seminar will explore the scope and complexity of the problem, strategies used by governments, non-governmental organizations, and the private sector to mitigate energy poverty, and how to develop and support environmentally sustainable solutions.

Gen Ed: GL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 71. First-Year Seminar: Justice and Inequality. 3 Credits.

This seminar investigates the value of equality, and asks which forms of inequality are unjust and ought to be addressed by governments. Topics include income inequality, political inequality, marriage inequality, racial inequality, and global inequality. Honors version available

Gen Ed: PH.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 71H. Justice and Inequality. 3 Credits.

This seminar investigates the value of equality, and asks which forms of inequality are unjust and ought to be addressed by governments. Topics include income and wealth inequality, political inequality, health inequality, racial inequality, and global inequality.

Gen Ed: PH.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 75. First-Year Seminar: Debates in Public Policy and Racial Inequality. 3 Credits.

Is inequality a policy choice? Students in this course will examine and participate in debates around whether and which policies have the capacity to create, sustain, exacerbate, and/or ameliorate inequalities in the United States.

Gen Ed: SS, CI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 76. First-Year Seminar: Global Health Policy. 3 Credits.

This course provides students with a variety of opportunities to understand the epidemiologic trends in world health, the institutions of global health governance, and the effects of globalization on global and national health policy. Honors version available

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 305. Communicating in Public Policy. 3 Credits.

Students will learn and practice the use of a range of tools and techniques for communicating information about complex public policy issues to diverse audiences. Emphasis on written communication and visualization techniques to explore and explain patterns in large data sets.

Gen Ed: CI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 310. Microeconomic Foundations of Public Policy. 3 Credits.

This course allows students to enhance their working knowledge of microeconomic theory, explore microeconomic theory as a methodology to solve policy problems, understand market failures and the role of collective action in markets, apply economic models to a variety of policy situations, and evaluate and critique economic analyses. Previously offered as PLCY 410.

Requisites: Prerequisite, ECON 101.

Grading status: Letter grade.

PLCY 326. Social Entrepreneurship. 3 Credits.

Examines students' knowledge and understanding of social entrepreneurship as an innovative approach to addressing complex social needs. Affords students the opportunity to engage in a business planning exercise designed to assist them in establishing and launching a social purpose entrepreneurial venture. Honors version available

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: ECON 326, PLAN 326.

PLCY 326H. Social Entrepreneurship. 3 Credits.

Examines students' knowledge and understanding of social entrepreneurship as an innovative approach to addressing complex social needs. Affords students the opportunity to engage in a business planning exercise designed to assist them in establishing and launching a social purpose entrepreneurial venture.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: ECON 326H, PLAN 326H.

PLCY 330. Negotiation and Mediation: The Practice of Conflict Management. 3 Credits.

This course aims to provide students with the tools necessary to most effectively engage in interpersonal conflicts. The course will also redefine the meanings of 'winning' and 'power' and provide students with methods to cope with stress, discomfort, and emotions when in conflict. Students will learn new negotiation and mediation skills, build upon existing ones, and challenge assumptions regarding conflict. While some theory is covered, the main focus is experiential learning through role-plays.

Gen Ed: CI.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: PWAD 330.

PLCY 340. Justice in Public Policy. 3 Credits.

This seminar explores arguments about moral issues in public policy. Students examine both the means used to implement policies and policy ends through discussions of case studies of policy choice. Honors version available

The core curriculum in public policy includes courses on policy innovation and analysis, politics of public policy, applied philosophy, applied economics, research design, and statistics. Our experiential education (EE) courses develop students' teamwork, leadership, and communication skills as they produce actionable, client-centered research. UNC Public Policy offers multiple courses on both global and domestic policy issues including courses on education, immigration, the environment, health and human rights, and history and public policy.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the public policy program, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate knowledge of economic, normative, and political perspectives for defining the public interest and evaluating policy choices
- Demonstrate written, oral, and analytical skills in evaluating public policy alternatives
- Demonstrate knowledge of a particular policy subfield and apply it in an experience in policy analysis in that field
- Demonstrate skills in developing approaches to solving current public policy problems as a result of participation in experiential education opportunities
- Work effectively in teams

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

First-year and sophomore students considering a major in public policy are encouraged to complete PLCY 101 or PLCY 110.

ECON 410	Intermediate Theory: Price and Distribution ^H
PLCY 460	Quantitative Analysis for Public Policy ^{2,3,H}	4
PLCY 581	Research Design for Public Policy ²	3
PLCY 698	Senior Capstone in Public Policy ²	3-4 or PLCY 692H Honors in Public Policy
At least six credit hours of approved public policy electives. ¹		6
Additional Requirements
ECON 101	Introduction to Economics ^{2,H}	4
Policy Field (optional), see list below
Total Hours		32-33

^H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

- ¹ Three credit hours may be for a 100- or 200-level PLCY course. The remaining three credit hours must be for an elective course at the 300 level or above. PLCY 130, PLCY 291, PLCY 293 (formerly 320), PLCY 393 (formerly 325), and PLCY 394 may not count as electives for the public policy major.
- ² ECON 101 is a prerequisite for PLCY 310 and ECON 410. PLCY 460 is a prerequisite for PLCY 698 and PLCY 691H and a pre- or co-requisite for PLCY 581. PLCY 581 is a prerequisite for PLCY 691H and a pre- or co-requisite for PLCY 698.
- ³ Alternatively, students may use a combination of either of the following pairs of courses to fulfill this requirement: (a) ECON 400 and ECON 470 or (b) ECON 400 and ECON 570.

Policy Field (Optional)

Students who complete three approved electives in a specific policy field may elect to graduate with a concentration. Six of these credit hours must be for field courses at the 300 level or above. PLCY 393 and PLCY 394 may not count toward the field concentration. For students completing an honors thesis, PLCY 691H can count toward the policy field concentration. Policy field concentrations include education and labor markets; environment and human welfare; innovation and entrepreneurship/science and technology policy; social policy and inequality; health policy; bioethics and human rights; international development policy; global conflict and cooperation.

Additionally, students may select courses across subfields and design their own field. For information about declaring a policy field concentration see the department's Web site (<https://publicpolicy.unc.edu/academics/undergraduate-program/faq/>). The specific policy field is not listed on students' diplomas or transcripts. UNC–Chapel Hill public policy majors are encouraged to list their policy field on their résumés.

Program Restrictions

A maximum of one three-credit independent study course (PLCY 395, PLCY 396, PLCY 496, PLCY 596, or PLCY 696) may be counted as an elective for the policy major. For credit toward the major, an independent study proposal form must be completed by the student, approved by the independent study instructor, submitted to the student services officer, and approved by the director of undergraduate studies before the independent study begins. A maximum of one three-credit transfer or study abroad course or two Honors Seminar on Public Policy and Global Affairs courses (PLCY 352H; PLCY 353H) may be counted as electives toward the public policy major.

Special Opportunities in Public Policy

Honors in Public Policy

Public policy majors who have at least a 3.3 overall grade point and a 3.5 in the core public policy courses are eligible to apply to the department's honors program in the spring of their junior year. The honors thesis offers an opportunity for motivated students to move beyond traditional coursework and apply critical thinking skills to an academic public policy thesis. This program is organized as an original, independent research project under the direction of a faculty advisor. Students considering writing an honors thesis must complete PLCY 581 before enrolling in PLCY 691H.

Completion of an honors thesis provides a total of six credit hours toward the major, including three credits toward a policy field concentration. Students who complete an honors thesis and maintain all other eligibility criteria may be recommended by their thesis advisor and the Undergraduate Affairs Committee for graduation with honors or highest honors in public policy. The department's Web site (<http://publicpolicy.unc.edu/academics/undergraduate-program/honors/>) provides more information.

Undergraduate Research

Most courses in public policy include a research component. The Office for Undergraduate Research maintains a database of courses that qualify as research intensive, research exposure, and research methods courses. Earning a grade of C or better in any of these courses partially fulfills the requirements for the Carolina Research Scholar designation. In addition, the department offers opportunities for students to work directly with a faculty member on a research project through independent study. The honors thesis process enables students to undertake a major independent policy research project. The Duncan MacRae Jr. Public Policy Fund provides grants on a competitive basis to public policy majors engaged in mentored research with a public policy faculty member, in policy-relevant independent research, and in honors thesis research in public policy.

Experiential Education

UNC Public Policy's experiential education programs offer students structured, active-learning opportunities that invite them to integrate and apply their academic knowledge and skills in a real-world policy environment. Opportunities include internships, the Honors Seminar on Public Policy and Global Affairs in Washington D.C. (PLCY 352H), the public policy clinic (PLCY 393), the intersector (PLCY 394), and the public policy capstone course (PLCY 698). PLCY 130, PLCY 293, PLCY 393, PLCY 691H, PLCY 692H, and PLCY 698 are all approved as experiential education courses.

For more information, see the department's Web site (<http://publicpolicy.unc.edu/academics/experiential-education/>).

Capstone Course

The capstone course (PLCY 698) is the culminating experience of the public policy undergraduate major and is required for all seniors except those who complete an honors thesis. Students should register for the course in the fall or spring of their senior year. The course provides a bridge between policy analysis as it is studied in an academic setting and policy analysis as it is practiced in the workplace. Students work in small teams to produce actionable, client-centered, public policy analysis for a government agency or nonprofit organization.

Internships and Public Service

Students may receive academic credit for an approved internship if it provides an academically relevant experience in policy analysis or research. Students who wish to complete an internship with an external organization can do so through PLCY 293 (available to public policy majors and minors). PLCY 293 is a Pass/Fail course. The Duncan MacRae Jr. Public Policy Internship Grant aims to support internship opportunities for public policy majors and to defer some of the costs associated with engaging in unpaid summer internships. The Hodding Carter III Public Service Fellowship supports opportunities for UNC–Chapel Hill public policy majors to engage in public service opportunities in our communities, the American south, the nation, and around the globe. The Thomas W. Ross North Carolina Leaders Fellows Program supports public policy undergraduates pursuing public service opportunities in the State of North Carolina during the summer. The Richard ("Pete") Andrews Fellowship in Environmental Policy supports a student interested in working on environmental policy during the summer or a policy research-related project during the academic year.

Undergraduate Funding and Awards

Each year UNC Public Policy holds a graduation ceremony to honor students' achievements. The Kathy Taft Education Policy Award recognizes a rising senior majoring in public policy with an interest in and dedication to education policy. The Michael A. Stegman Award for Policy Research and Advocacy is awarded to a graduating public policy major who has demonstrated an ability to use policy research and analysis to advocate for social change and a commitment to play a future role in policy research and advocacy.

Public Policy Majors Union

The Public Policy Majors' Union (PPMU) was founded in 1988 in an effort to help govern the department's curriculum. The PPMU has since expanded its role to include representation of policy majors within the University community and sponsorship of policy-related events. Membership is open to all public policy majors.

Honors Seminar on Public Policy and Global Affairs in Washington, D.C.

The Honors Seminar on Public Policy and Global Affairs offers Carolina undergraduates a unique learning, living, and internship opportunity in our nation's capital. The seminar offers students first-hand engagement with the actors and organizations that influence domestic and global affairs in Washington, D.C. It aims to expose students to a range of public policies that influence U.S. economic prosperity, national security, and its role in the broader global community. Internship placements provide opportunities for students to apply academic learning, to derive new insights and questions for seminar discussion, and to work directly with substantive policy experts.

The core curriculum in public policy includes courses on policy innovation and analysis, politics of public policy, applied philosophy, applied economics, research design and statistics. Our experiential education (EE) courses develop students' teamwork, leadership, and communication skills as they produce actionable, client-centered research. UNC Public Policy offers multiple courses on both global and domestic policy issues including courses on education, immigration, the environment, health and human rights, and history and public policy. The undergraduate minor in public policy consists of five courses.

Introduction

The Department of Religious Studies is dedicated to the study of religions as historical and cultural phenomena. It examines the history, texts, artifacts, beliefs, values, and rituals of a variety of religious traditions, including Buddhism, Christianity, Islam, and Judaism. Inherently interdisciplinary in its approach, religious studies explores religions in light of related fields in the humanities and social sciences such as anthropology, classics, archaeology, sociology, philosophy, and history.

Advising

The director of undergraduate studies advises majors and minors in religious studies. Please contact the Department of Religious Studies for updated contact information.

The director of Jewish studies advises majors and minors in Jewish studies. Please contact the Carolina Center for Jewish Studies for updated contact information.

The director of Christianity and culture advises minors in the study of Christianity and culture. Please contact the Department of Religious Studies for updated contact information.

The director of the Carolina Center for the Study of the Middle East and Muslim Civilizations advises minors in Islamic and Middle Eastern studies. Please consult the Carolina Center for the Study of the Middle East and Muslim Civilizations for updated contact information.

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

Those wishing to proceed to graduate work in religious studies can consult the director of undergraduate studies. We encourage students to pursue the study of two or more languages in which the sacred literatures of the world have been written, as well as the modern languages of scholarship. In addition to the language courses offered by this department, UNC–Chapel Hill offers courses in Greek, Modern Hebrew, Chinese, Japanese, Hindi-Urdu, Latin, Arabic, Sanskrit, Persian, Bengali, and Tamil.

Students majoring in religious studies often choose to pursue an M.A. or Ph.D. in religious studies or other related fields in the humanities and social sciences. Some of the graduates of the program go on to professional schools in law, medicine, divinity, or journalism. Each year the department awards the Bernard Boyd Fellowship to a graduating religious studies major who is planning to pursue graduate study in religion at another institution.

The department offers a variety of courses ranging from large lecture to advanced seminars, as well as independent studies, an honors thesis program, and a capstone course for all majors (RELI 697). Introductory courses, which are numbered below 200, orient students to the field of religious studies or to major approaches, topics, or issues within that broader field. Intermediate courses are numbered between 200 and 399, and they provide more in-depth analysis. Advanced courses, which are numbered 400 and above, often build on knowledge or skills derived from lower-level courses, and they provide opportunities for research-intensive study in particular areas of concentration in the study of religion.

RELI—Religious Studies

Undergraduate-level Courses

RELI 60. First-Year Seminar: Religion and Racism. 3 Credits.

How does religion become a source of ethnic or racial prejudice among religious practitioners? When does prejudice against religious persons constitute a form of racism? This class explores answers to these questions by examining the connections between religion and racism in modern societies like the United States and South Africa.

Gen Ed: SS, CI, US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RELI 61. First-Year Seminar: Religion, Magic, and Science. 3 Credits.

This course explores the ways in which religion, magic, and science are defined in the modern world and the different forms in which supernaturalism circulates within contemporary culture.

Gen Ed: HS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RELI 62. First-Year Seminar: A History of Heresy: Christian Dissent from the Gnostics to the Pentecostals. 3 Credits.

Special Opportunities in Religious Studies

Honors in Religious Studies

Students majoring in religious studies (including double majors) with a grade point average of 3.5 or above in department courses and 3.3 grade point average overall and who will have successfully completed at least one course numbered 400 or above on a topic in religious studies that is related to the proposed thesis may choose to write an honors thesis. Candidates for graduation with honors in religious studies are to be enrolled in RELI 691H in the fall and RELI 692H in the spring semester of their senior year. RELI 691H and RELI 692H count toward the major as courses fulfilling subfield requirements. Students should submit applications for the honors program to the department's director of undergraduate studies by the end of February during their junior year. Consult the department's director of undergraduate studies for details.

Study Abroad

Professor Jodi Magness directs archaeological excavations in Israel during the summer. Students are welcome to participate. Other courses through the Study Abroad Office can count towards the major and minor in religious studies as well.

Undergraduate Awards and Honors

The department presents three awards at the end of each academic year: the Bernard Boyd Fellowship, the Bernard Boyd Memorial Prize, and the Halperin-Schultz Undergraduate Essay Award.

The department also inducts qualified majors into the Religious Studies National Honor Society, Theta Alpha Kappa.

The Department of Religious Studies is dedicated to the study of religions as historical and cultural phenomena. It examines the history, texts, artifacts, beliefs, values, and rituals of a variety of religious traditions, including Buddhism, Christianity, Islam, and Judaism. Inherently interdisciplinary in its approach, religious studies explores religions in light of related fields in the humanities and social sciences such as anthropology, classics, archaeology, sociology, philosophy, and history.

The Department of Religious Studies is dedicated to the study of religions as historical and cultural phenomena. It examines the history, texts, artifacts, beliefs, values, and rituals of a variety of religious traditions, including Buddhism, Christianity, Islam, and Judaism. Inherently interdisciplinary in its approach, religious studies explores religions in light of related fields in the humanities and social sciences such as anthropology, classics, archaeology, sociology, philosophy, and history.

Introduction

The Department of Romance Studies is a diverse, multicultural, and plurilingual academic unit that engages in interdisciplinary research and instruction in French, Italian, Portuguese, Spanish, as well as Indigenous and other languages of Europe and the Americas such as Romanian, Catalan, Basque, Galician, Yucatec Maya, and Guaraní. The principal aims of the department are to preserve, increase, and transmit knowledge and understanding of the Romance languages, literatures, and cultures within the global and regional contexts in which they have developed.

Our course offerings present a diversity of approaches—historical, literary, linguistic, sociopolitical, cultural, and theoretical—to the study of literary and nonliterary texts and cultures of Europe, the Mediterranean, and the Americas. Students acquire competence in the practice and analysis of Romance languages together with a critical knowledge of the written, oral, and visual traditions of their origin and diaspora. Our faculty promotes interdisciplinary connections and incorporates the study of literature, culture, theory, and history across the curriculum. Through coursework that emphasizes rhetoric, composition, and written and oral expression, our majors receive sustained personalized training in critical thinking and close reading.

Advising

The Department of Romance Studies offers a major with five concentrations and six minors. All students can find their primary academic advisor in Dey Hall. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. Each of the department's language advisors will meet with current and prospective majors by appointment. Departmental academic advising is particularly important for those majors who are considering going on to graduate school. Further information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be obtained from the department's Web site (<http://romancestudies.unc.edu>).

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

A major or minor in Romance studies provides excellent preparation for a variety of careers. Recent graduates have gone on to work in international business, law, publishing, education, journalism, and public policy, among other fields. A bachelor of arts in Romance studies qualifies graduates for employment in private-sector firms, foundations, educational institutions, and government agencies. A second major or minor in Romance studies can be an asset for students seeking careers in any field requiring foreign language proficiency and intercultural communication skills, including the health professions and the sciences. The department offers several courses dedicated to the practical application of Romance languages for specific careers (business, law, health professions, translation) alongside courses that contribute to a well-rounded liberal arts education.

Romance studies majors often pursue post-graduate education. The master of arts in teaching (M.A.T.) degree is intended for students who wish to teach at the secondary level. M.A. and Ph.D. programs in Romance languages are almost exclusively oriented toward literary studies, and the undergraduate student should prepare accordingly. Useful allied disciplines are English, comparative literature, history, classics, philosophy, linguistics, and art history. Faculty members can advise students on choices of graduate schools.

The French major provides students with a more thorough command of the language, as well as a comprehensive knowledge of the literatures, cultures, and civilization of the francophone world. French majors are also trained in research methodology in French, Francophone, and European studies.

French majors have gone on to careers in education, international business, law, journalism, publishing, social work, and health, as well as graduate study in French. The diverse offerings of the program include courses such as French civilization, business French, advanced oral and written French, introduction to French and Francophone literatures, the role of France in Europe today, and identities in European cinema.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students will acquire competence in the practice and analysis of Romance languages together with a critical knowledge of the written, oral, and visual traditions of their origin and diaspora. Our faculty promotes interdisciplinary connections and incorporates the study of literature, culture, theory, and history across the curriculum. Through coursework that emphasizes language acquisition, rhetoric, composition, and written and oral expression, our majors receive sustained personalized training in critical thinking and close reading. Upon completion of the program in Romance languages, students should be able to:

- Participate in conversations on concrete, social, academic, and professional topics
- Speak in detail about experiences and events in a variety of time frames and moods
- Represent points of view in discussions, both oral and written
- Deliver well-organized presentations on concrete, academic and professional topics

- Write on a wide variety of general interest, professional, and academic topics
- Follow narrative, informational, and descriptive speech on concrete, academic and professional topics
- Understand and discuss texts representing a variety of topics and genres

French (FREN) course descriptions (p. 959).

We offer a strong emphasis on European and francophone studies as well as the Languages across the Curriculum Program (LAC) (p. 1238), which allows students to participate in one-hour, one-credit discussion sections in French on an array of courses across the College of Arts and Sciences.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Sample Plan One

This plan assumes a placement of FREN 105 on the Foreign Language placement test. Student placement (and plans) may vary. Although it is possible to complete the French and Francophone studies major if a student begins with FREN 101, summer school, study abroad, or doubling-up on courses in the final year may be necessary in order to complete it in a timely manner.

Special Opportunities in Romance Studies

Undergraduate Research

The Department of Romance Studies offers a gateway for research in the humanities, including the various fields that make up Romance studies. Research activities include the honors thesis, summer research fellowships, or engaging in mentoring projects with professors which lead to opportunities to present papers at conferences or for publication in the University's undergraduate research journal.

Annual Research Opportunities:

- Office for Undergraduate Research (<https://our.unc.edu/>)
- Celebration of Undergraduate Research (<https://our.unc.edu/celebration-of-undergraduate-research/>)
- UNC JOURney (<http://uncjourney.unc.edu/>)
- Summer Undergraduate Research Fellowship (<https://our.unc.edu/surf/>)
- Burch Fellowship (<https://honorscarolina.unc.edu/fellowships/burch-fellowship/>)

Honors

The departmental honors program is open to any qualified major with a cumulative grade point average of 3.3 or higher and 3.5 or higher in their major courses. Eligible honors candidates will formulate a topic and select an appropriate faculty member to supervise the writing of an honors thesis. Specific coursework for the major with honors consists of enrollment in the honors thesis courses in the language of the major emphasis.

Code	Title	Hours
FREN 691H & FREN 692H	Honors Thesis in French and Honors Thesis in French	6
ITAL 691H & ITAL 692H	Honors Thesis and Honors Thesis in Italian	6
PORT 691H & PORT 692H	Honors Thesis and Honors Thesis in Portuguese	6
SPAN 691H & SPAN 692H	Honors Thesis and Honors Thesis in Spanish	6

691H is taken in the fall semester of the senior year and 692H is taken in the spring semester. FREN 390, ITAL 398, PORT 398, SPAN 397 and SPAN 398 may be substituted for the 691H research course if the subject of the seminar is central to the research project chosen. In the 692H course, the thesis will be completed and the student examined by the supervisor and two additional readers, to be agreed upon by the student and supervisor. The director of honors, in consultation with the examiners, will recommend that the student who has defended the thesis graduate with honors, highest honors, or with course credit. FREN 390, FREN 691H, ITAL 398, PORT 398, SPAN 397 and SPAN 398 may count toward the eight courses for the major, but FREN 692H, ITAL 692H, PORT 692H, and SPAN 692H may not. Students who intend to graduate in December should adjust the scheduling of these courses in order to allow for completion of the honors project in December. Students meeting the required grade point averages should contact the undergraduate advisor for their language. For detailed information on the B.A. with honors, visit the department's Web site (<http://romancestudies.unc.edu/undergraduate/overview/>).

Out-of-Class Language Experience

The department offers credit-bearing internship opportunities through ROML 293 and service-learning opportunities (<http://ccps.unc.edu/apples/>) through ROML 194. Both courses satisfy the experiential education (EE) General Education requirement. While ROML 293 is a stand-alone course, ROML 194 is always connected to a specific course.

Students may enrich their cultural and language experience by applying to the Spanish House, a section of Craige North residence hall. Equipped with a lounge and a kitchen, the house has space for eight male and 16 female students. Students make an effort to speak only Spanish while in residence.

Students also find opportunities to speak Spanish and meet native Spanish speakers in an informal weekly tertulia (gathering). Additional activities involving Spanish include publishing and editorial involvement in the student journals Mezcla and Aguas del pozo; attending lectures, receptions, and films organized by the department and student organizations such as CHisPA (Carolina Hispanic Association); and serving the community through a variety of volunteer opportunities.

For further opportunities to speak French, students are encouraged to participate in the weekly meeting of the Table Française and become members of the French club, les Francophiles. Departmental lectures and film series are also offered.

Students interested in Italian language and culture may attend film series, guest lectures, and a series of other extracurricular events including games and conversation hours. They may also wish to join the undergraduate Italian Club.

Students who wish to practice Portuguese can meet weekly for the bate-papo (chat). Students of Portuguese also engage in editorial work and publish in the student journal Revistinha.

Study Abroad

The Study Abroad Office sponsors many year-long, semester-long, and summer programs appropriate for students of the Romance languages and has special arrangements with the Department of Romance Studies for the UNC in Montpellier, UNC in Seville, and Florence programs. Students from UNC–Chapel Hill and from other institutions may earn up to 30 semester hours of undergraduate credit in these programs, which are open to qualified undergraduates regardless of academic major. While, in general, students may satisfy up to 50 percent of major or minor coursework abroad, courses that are taught by Romance studies faculty may count differently. For example, students completing the Spanish minor for the professions in health and business may complete all or most of the minor in faculty-led programs abroad.

Students who participate in Study Abroad during the semester have the opportunity to work as course correspondents for a course in Romance studies. Course correspondents report back to the class they serve throughout the semester via online tools and may receive one hour of credit for their informative work.

General inquiries concerning any of these programs should be addressed to the Study Abroad Office, CB# 3130, FedEx Global Education Center, (919) 962-7002.

Students may also contact the Study Abroad Advisors in Romance Studies to learn more about how to integrate those programs into their major or minor programs.

Undergraduate Awards

French

Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Pi Delta Phi, the national French honor society. Those with outstanding records in French are recommended as candidates for the Jacques Hardré Award, which is given to the best graduating senior in French; it includes a cash award.

Italian

Students are nominated for membership in Gamma Kappa Alpha, the Italian honor society, by undergraduate instructors. The society recognizes “outstanding scholastic performance in the fields of Italian language and literature” and encourages students “to acquire a greater interest in, and a deeper understanding of, Italian culture.” The Kimberly Kyser Award for Excellence in Italian is awarded to the most outstanding student in Italian and includes a cash prize.

Portuguese

Each year the department awards the Camões Prize to the outstanding student in Portuguese during that year. The prize carries a monetary award made possible by a donation from the Gulbenkian Foundation.

Spanish

Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Sigma Delta Pi, the national Spanish honor society. Those with outstanding performance in the Hispanic literatures and cultures or the Hispanic linguistics majors are eligible for several prizes including the Chancellor’s Award, given to the top graduating senior, the Stoudemire Awards, and the Larry D. King Fellowship.

UNC–Chapel Hill has a rich tradition of Italian studies, including courses that develop linguistic proficiency and many others dedicated to studies of literature, film, food, environmental humanities, politics, history, philosophy, and theater. Many students study abroad and increasingly seek opportunities for research and internship projects with an Italian focus.

This concentration is a popular choice for those interested in global studies or careers in journalism, diplomacy, international business or education, or for those seeking a well-rounded education in preparation for medical or law school. Many students who graduate from this program will also pursue graduate school in this or a related field.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students will acquire competence in the practice and analysis of Romance languages together with a critical knowledge of the written, oral, and visual traditions of their origin and diaspora. Our faculty promotes interdisciplinary connections and incorporates the study of literature, culture, theory, and history across the curriculum. Through coursework that emphasizes language acquisition, rhetoric, composition, and written and oral expression, our majors receive sustained personalized training in critical thinking and close reading. Upon completion of the program in Romance languages, students should be able to:

- Participate in conversations on concrete, social, academic, and professional topics
- Speak in detail about experiences and events in a variety of time frames and moods
- Represent points of view in discussions, both oral and written
- Deliver well-organized presentations on concrete, academic and professional topics
- Write on a wide variety of general interest, professional, and academic topics
- Follow narrative, informational, and descriptive speech on concrete, academic and professional topics
- Understand and discuss texts representing a variety of topics and genres

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses

- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

A prerequisite for entering the program is knowledge of the Italian language, demonstrated by successfully completing ITAL 204 or ITAL 402 or the equivalent.

Portuguese is the seventh most spoken language in the world, with over 250 million speakers. It is the language of Portugal, Brazil, and parts of Africa and Asia. Brazil, with a population of 185 million, is the largest country in South America and has the ninth largest economy in the world.

The program in Portuguese combines the study of the language, culture, and literatures of Brazil and Portugal. Emphasis is placed on the language as it is currently spoken and its historical development. Students study the literatures of Brazil and Portugal in terms of their historical development and analyze specific texts from different genres and literary periods. Students interested in Portuguese should consult the Portuguese language advisor.

Portuguese as a second language would open multiple job opportunities in various countries with expanding economies and a promising future. It would also provide a vehicle to the rich cultural traditions of Portugal, Brazil, and the Lusophone nations of Africa and Asia, including literature, art, and music.

¹ Taught in English, available for credit for major/minor in Portuguese only if readings and written work are done in Portuguese.

With the approval of the undergraduate advisor for Portuguese, students majoring in Romance languages with an emphasis in Portuguese may count up to nine hours in related areas in such departments, programs, and curricula as history, art, music, cultural studies, and women's and gender studies.

Because few entering students have completed coursework in Portuguese prior to enrolling in the University, it is essential that interested students start the language as early as the first year. Completion of PORT 204 or PORT 402 is considered a prerequisite for the major.

Special Opportunities in Romance Studies Undergraduate Research

The Department of Romance Studies offers a gateway for research in the humanities, including the various fields that make up Romance studies. Research activities include the honors thesis, summer research fellowships, or engaging in mentoring projects with professors which lead to opportunities to present papers at conferences or for publication in the University's undergraduate research journal.

Annual Research Opportunities:

- Office for Undergraduate Research (<https://our.unc.edu/>)
- Celebration of Undergraduate Research (<https://our.unc.edu/celebration-of-undergraduate-research/>)
- UNC JOURney (<http://uncjourney.unc.edu/>)
- Summer Undergraduate Research Fellowship (<https://our.unc.edu/surf/>)
- Burch Fellowship (<https://honorscarolina.unc.edu/fellowships/burch-fellowship/>)

Honors

The departmental honors program is open to any qualified major with a cumulative grade point average of 3.3 or higher and 3.5 or higher in their major courses. Eligible honors candidates will formulate a topic and select an appropriate faculty member to supervise the writing of an honors thesis. Specific coursework for the major with honors consists of enrollment in the honors thesis courses in the language of the major emphasis.

Code	Title	Hours
FREN 691H & FREN 692H	Honors Thesis in French and Honors Thesis in French	6
ITAL 691H & ITAL 692H	Honors Thesis and Honors Thesis in Italian	6
PORT 691H & PORT 692H	Honors Thesis and Honors Thesis in Portuguese	6
SPAN 691H & SPAN 692H	Honors Thesis and Honors Thesis in Spanish	6

691H is taken in the fall semester of the senior year and 692H is taken in the spring semester. FREN 390, ITAL 398, PORT 398, SPAN 397 and SPAN 398 may be substituted for the 691H research course if the subject of the seminar is central to the research project chosen. In the 692H course, the thesis will be completed and the student examined by the supervisor and two additional readers, to be agreed upon by the student and supervisor. The director of honors, in consultation with the examiners, will recommend that the student who has defended the thesis graduate with honors, highest honors, or with course credit. FREN 390, FREN 691H, ITAL 398, PORT 398, SPAN 397 and SPAN 398 may count toward the eight courses for the major, but FREN 692H, ITAL 692H, PORT 692H, and SPAN 692H may not. Students who intend to graduate in December should adjust the scheduling of these courses in order to allow for completion of the honors project in December. Students meeting the required grade point averages should contact the undergraduate advisor for their language. For detailed information on the B.A. with honors, visit the department's Web site (<http://romancestudies.unc.edu/undergraduate/overview/>).

Out-of-Class Language Experience

The department offers credit-bearing internship opportunities through ROML 293 and service-learning opportunities (<http://ccps.unc.edu/apples/>) through ROML 194. Both courses satisfy the experiential education (EE) General Education requirement. While ROML 293 is a stand-alone course, ROML 194 is always connected to a specific course.

Students may enrich their cultural and language experience by applying to the Spanish House, a section of Craige North residence hall. Equipped with a lounge and a kitchen, the house has space for eight male and 16 female students. Students make an effort to speak only Spanish while in residence.

Students also find opportunities to speak Spanish and meet native Spanish speakers in an informal weekly tertulia (gathering). Additional activities involving Spanish include publishing and editorial involvement in the student journals Mezcla and Aguas del pozo; attending lectures, receptions, and films organized by the department and student organizations such as CHisPA (Carolina Hispanic Association); and serving the community through a variety of volunteer opportunities.

For further opportunities to speak French, students are encouraged to participate in the weekly meeting of the Table Française and become members of the French club, les Francophiles. Departmental lectures and film series are also offered.

Students interested in Italian language and culture may attend film series, guest lectures, and a series of other extracurricular events including games and conversation hours. They may also wish to join the undergraduate Italian Club.

Students who wish to practice Portuguese can meet weekly for the bate-papo (chat). Students of Portuguese also engage in editorial work and publish in the student journal Revistinha.

Study Abroad

The Study Abroad Office sponsors many year-long, semester-long, and summer programs appropriate for students of the Romance languages and has special arrangements with the Department of Romance Studies for the UNC in Montpellier, UNC in Seville, and Florence programs. Students from UNC–Chapel Hill and from other institutions may earn up to 30 semester hours of undergraduate credit in these programs, which are open to qualified undergraduates regardless of academic major. While, in general, students may satisfy up to 50 percent of major or minor coursework abroad, courses that are taught by Romance studies faculty may count differently. For example, students completing the Spanish minor for the professions in health and business may complete all or most of the minor in faculty-led programs abroad.

Students who participate in Study Abroad during the semester have the opportunity to work as course correspondents for a course in Romance studies. Course correspondents report back to the class they serve throughout the semester via online tools and may receive one hour of credit for their informative work.

General inquiries concerning any of these programs should be addressed to the Study Abroad Office, CB# 3130, FedEx Global Education Center, (919) 962-7002.

Students may also contact the Study Abroad Advisors in Romance Studies to learn more about how to integrate those programs into their major or minor programs.

Undergraduate Awards

French

Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Pi Delta Phi, the national French honor society. Those with outstanding records in French are recommended as candidates for the Jacques Hardré Award, which is given to the best graduating senior in French; it includes a cash award.

Italian

Students are nominated for membership in Gamma Kappa Alpha, the Italian honor society, by undergraduate instructors. The society recognizes “outstanding scholastic performance in the fields of Italian language and literature” and encourages students “to acquire a greater interest in, and a deeper understanding of, Italian culture.” The Kimberly Kyser Award for Excellence in Italian is awarded to the most outstanding student in Italian and includes a cash prize.

Portuguese

Each year the department awards the Camões Prize to the outstanding student in Portuguese during that year. The prize carries a monetary award made possible by a donation from the Gulbenkian Foundation.

Spanish

Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Sigma Delta Pi, the national Spanish honor society. Those with outstanding performance in the Hispanic literatures and cultures or the Hispanic linguistics majors are eligible for several prizes including the Chancellor's Award, given to the top graduating senior, the Stoudemire Awards, and the Larry D. King Fellowship.

Spanish, the world's third largest language and second in terms of native speakers, is spoken by nearly 500 million people across the globe. The over 50 million Hispanics in the United States have become the fastest-growing social and political segment in North America. Because of its prominence, learning to communicate in Spanish can be essential for those entering the global economic market and numerous professions.

Spanish studies at UNC–Chapel Hill thrives on innovative literary, linguistic, and theoretical approaches to the Spanish-speaking world, and includes the study of indigenous, Afro-descendant, Asian, and other cultures. Students obtain well-grounded and comprehensive critical knowledge of the literatures, languages, and cultures of Spain and the Americas, often through collaborative research with a faculty member. Qualifying students have the opportunity to pursue an honor's thesis with one of our faculty members.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students will acquire competence in the practice and analysis of Romance languages together with a critical knowledge of the written, oral, and visual traditions of their origin and diaspora. Our faculty promotes interdisciplinary connections and incorporates the study of literature, culture, theory, and history across the curriculum. Through coursework that emphasizes language acquisition, rhetoric, composition, and written and oral expression, our majors receive sustained personalized training in critical thinking and close reading. Upon completion of the program in Romance languages, students should be able to:

- Participate in conversations on concrete, social, academic, and professional topics
- Speak in detail about experiences and events in a variety of time frames and moods
- Represent points of view in discussions, both oral and written
- Deliver well-organized presentations on concrete, academic and professional topics
- Write on a wide variety of general interest, professional, and academic topics
- Follow narrative, informational, and descriptive speech on concrete, academic and professional topics
- Understand and discuss texts representing a variety of topics and genres

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

Special Opportunities in Romance Studies Undergraduate Research

The Department of Romance Studies offers a gateway for research in the humanities, including the various fields that make up Romance studies. Research activities include the honors thesis, summer research fellowships, or engaging in mentoring projects with professors which lead to opportunities to present papers at conferences or for publication in the University's undergraduate research journal.

Annual Research Opportunities:

- Office for Undergraduate Research (<https://our.unc.edu/>)
- Celebration of Undergraduate Research (<https://our.unc.edu/celebration-of-undergraduate-research/>)
- UNC JOURney (<http://uncjourney.unc.edu/>)
- Summer Undergraduate Research Fellowship (<https://our.unc.edu/surf/>)
- Burch Fellowship (<https://honorscarolina.unc.edu/fellowships/burch-fellowship/>)

Honors

The departmental honors program is open to any qualified major with a cumulative grade point average of 3.3 or higher and 3.5 or higher in their major courses. Eligible honors candidates will formulate a topic and select an appropriate faculty member to supervise the writing of an honors thesis. Specific coursework for the major with honors consists of enrollment in the honors thesis courses in the language of the major emphasis.

Code	Title	Hours
FREN 691H & FREN 692H	Honors Thesis in French and Honors Thesis in French	6
ITAL 691H & ITAL 692H	Honors Thesis and Honors Thesis in Italian	6
PORT 691H & PORT 692H	Honors Thesis and Honors Thesis in Portuguese	6
SPAN 691H & SPAN 692H	Honors Thesis and Honors Thesis in Spanish	6

691H is taken in the fall semester of the senior year and 692H is taken in the spring semester. FREN 390, ITAL 398, PORT 398, SPAN 397 and SPAN 398 may be substituted for the 691H research course if the subject of the seminar is central to the research project chosen. In the 692H course, the thesis will be completed and the student examined by the supervisor and two additional readers, to be agreed upon by the student and supervisor. The director of honors, in consultation with the examiners, will recommend that the student who has defended the thesis graduate with honors, highest honors, or with course credit. FREN 390, FREN 691H, ITAL 398, PORT 398, SPAN 397 and SPAN 398 may count toward the eight courses for the major, but FREN 692H, ITAL 692H, PORT 692H, and SPAN 692H may not. Students who intend to graduate in December should adjust the scheduling of these courses in order to allow for completion of the honors project in December. Students meeting the required grade point averages should contact the undergraduate advisor for their language. For detailed information on the B.A. with honors, visit the department's Web site (<http://romancestudies.unc.edu/undergraduate/overview/>).

Out-of-Class Language Experience

The department offers credit-bearing internship opportunities through ROML 293 and service-learning opportunities (<http://ccps.unc.edu/apples/>) through ROML 194. Both courses satisfy the experiential education (EE) General Education requirement. While ROML 293 is a stand-alone course, ROML 194 is always connected to a specific course.

Students may enrich their cultural and language experience by applying to the Spanish House, a section of Craige North residence hall. Equipped with a lounge and a kitchen, the house has space for eight male and 16 female students. Students make an effort to speak only Spanish while in residence.

Students also find opportunities to speak Spanish and meet native Spanish speakers in an informal weekly tertulia (gathering). Additional activities involving Spanish include publishing and editorial involvement in the student journals Mezcla and Aguas del pozo; attending lectures, receptions, and films organized by the department and student organizations such as CHisPA (Carolina Hispanic Association); and serving the community through a variety of volunteer opportunities.

For further opportunities to speak French, students are encouraged to participate in the weekly meeting of the Table Française and become members of the French club, les Francophiles. Departmental lectures and film series are also offered.

Students interested in Italian language and culture may attend film series, guest lectures, and a series of other extracurricular events including games and conversation hours. They may also wish to join the undergraduate Italian Club.

Students who wish to practice Portuguese can meet weekly for the bate-papo (chat). Students of Portuguese also engage in editorial work and publish in the student journal Revistinha.

Study Abroad

The Study Abroad Office sponsors many year-long, semester-long, and summer programs appropriate for students of the Romance languages and has special arrangements with the Department of Romance Studies for the UNC in Montpellier, UNC in Seville, and Florence programs. Students from UNC-Chapel Hill and from other institutions may earn up to 30 semester hours of undergraduate credit in these programs, which are open to qualified undergraduates regardless of academic major. While, in general, students may satisfy up to 50 percent of major or minor coursework abroad, courses that are taught by Romance studies faculty may count differently. For example, students completing the Spanish minor for the professions in health and business may complete all or most of the minor in faculty-led programs abroad.

Students who participate in Study Abroad during the semester have the opportunity to work as course correspondents for a course in Romance studies. Course correspondents report back to the class they serve throughout the semester via online tools and may receive one hour of credit for their informative work.

General inquiries concerning any of these programs should be addressed to the Study Abroad Office, CB# 3130, FedEx Global Education Center, (919) 962-7002.

Students may also contact the Study Abroad Advisors in Romance Studies to learn more about how to integrate those programs into their major or minor programs.

Undergraduate Awards

French

Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Pi Delta Phi, the national French honor society. Those with outstanding records in French are recommended as candidates for the Jacques Hardré Award, which is given to the best graduating senior in French; it includes a cash award.

Italian

Students are nominated for membership in Gamma Kappa Alpha, the Italian honor society, by undergraduate instructors. The society recognizes “outstanding scholastic performance in the fields of Italian language and literature” and encourages students “to acquire a greater interest in, and a deeper understanding of, Italian culture.” The Kimberly Kyser Award for Excellence in Italian is awarded to the most outstanding student in Italian and includes a cash prize.

Portuguese

Each year the department awards the Camões Prize to the outstanding student in Portuguese during that year. The prize carries a monetary award made possible by a donation from the Gulbenkian Foundation.

Spanish

Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Sigma Delta Pi, the national Spanish honor society. Those with outstanding performance in the Hispanic literatures and cultures or the Hispanic linguistics majors are eligible for several prizes including the Chancellor’s Award, given to the top graduating senior, the Stoudemire Awards, and the Larry D. King Fellowship.

The minor in Portuguese is designed for those who wish to continue their study of Portuguese and acquire a more in-depth knowledge of Lusophone cultural production, such as film, literature, and the performing arts. Qualifying courses include courses in Portuguese, courses on Lusophone topics taught in English, and certain courses outside the department with a significant amount of content related to the Lusophone world. Many students see it as essential or complementary to their major in fields such as public health, global studies, music, anthropology, or political science.

Developments in globalization, international trade, worldwide communication and technology have dramatically increased the demand for qualified translators and interpreters in all realms, especially in business, technology, communication, marketing, advertisement, government, healthcare, social services, national security, international trade, and law. The current demand for translation and interpreting professionals outweighs the supply available. This program will provide students the background in theory, technical resources, research skills, and literary and cultural competency that are necessary to communicate in more than one language and in written and oral form.

Successful translators and interpreters work for an agency, as independent contractors, or as part of a larger team in national or international organizations, institutions, or associations. Upon completion of the minor, students will be ready to use their inter-cultural and inter-linguistic skills for professional purposes in institutional, academic, or other professional contexts.

Admission

Students who wish to declare this minor should be majoring in either Hispanic Literatures and Cultures or Hispanic Linguistics and should not have declared a different minor in the department. Approval by the department is required. Students can declare the minor after completing SPAN 300 with a grade of C or better by scheduling an appointment to meet with the program coordinator.

Introduction

The Department of Sociology is the primary home for two majors — sociology and management and society — and two minors: social and economic justice and health and society.

The undergraduate major in sociology at UNC–Chapel Hill provides students with theoretical and methodological tools, and substantive insights for understanding human social life and institutions. The department's faculty is particularly strong in the areas of social inequality, marriage and family, health and medical sociology, work and the economy, religion, formal organizations, sex and gender, social movements, population and human ecology, social networks, education, and political sociology. Course themes range widely from the theoretical to the applied and incorporate a broad array of methodological approaches including comparative/historical, participant observation and interviewing, survey data collection and statistical analysis.

Management and society is an interdisciplinary major that focuses on the institutional context and inner workings of organizations. It prepares students for a variety of positions in private or public-sector organizations. Additionally, many students find the curriculum to be excellent preparation for a variety of business-oriented graduate and professional degree programs.

The minor in health and society provides students with an opportunity to examine contemporary health patterns and trends characterizing U.S. society and societies around the world, as well as sociologically based explanations for those patterns and trends. It also provides students with an understanding of the social construction of health and illness in modern societies. The minor brings together courses focused specifically on linkages between health and society, along with courses focused on social organization and social stratification, to provide students with insights into the ways that societies define health and illness and how social organization and stratification influence population health.

Advising

All majors and minors have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. The department's director of undergraduate studies and assistant director meet with current, transfer, and prospective majors by appointment (see contact information on the program page of the catalog). Departmental academic advising is particularly important for those students who are double majors and those who may be considering going on to graduate school. Further information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, writing an honors thesis, careers, and graduate schools is available on the department's Web site.

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

Sociologists are employed by research institutes, public health and welfare organizations, social work agencies, private businesses, law firms, international agencies, medical centers, educational institutions, advertising firms, survey and polling organizations, and the criminal justice system. Others work in politics and government and in community and social justice organizing.

A major in sociology also prepares students for law, medical, or business school and for graduate degree programs in social work, education, public policy, religious ministry, mass communications, public health, nonprofit administration, and international affairs. Of course the sociology major also prepares interested undergraduates for graduate studies in sociology, should they choose to continue in the field to become researchers or teachers in high schools, two- or four-year colleges, or research universities. Students interested in pursuing graduate studies in sociology after college may, with the instructor's permission, enroll in graduate-level courses at UNC–Chapel Hill.

A major in management and society prepares students for virtually any aspect of a business career that does not involve highly specialized training (such as finance and accounting). Employers are interested in students who can think on their feet, communicate effectively, write well, and make sense of the social and economic changes occurring in their industry. Management and society majors are educated in each of these skills.

Graduates with B.A. degrees with majors in management and society are especially suited for entry-level positions in any aspect of human resource management, industry, or public sector organizations. Among recent graduates who responded to a placement office survey, the largest number were employed in sales; management or management training positions with at least some supervisory or personnel-related responsibilities ranked second. Other graduates are working in customer service, purchasing, and marketing research, and several hold positions in the public sector.

SOCI 423. Sociology of Education, Experiential Education. 3 Credits.

An overview of theory and research on education and schooling, with an emphasis on inequalities in educational opportunities, education as a social institution, and the changing context of schools and schooling. Substantial field work for experiential education. Students may not receive credit for both SOCI 423 and SOCI 426.

Gen Ed: SS, EE- Service Learning.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 424. Law and Society. 3 Credits.

A sociological analysis of comparative legal systems, the role of law in social change and in shaping social behavior. Topics may include the legal profession, property distribution, and the role of law in achieving racial and sexual justice.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 425. Family and Society, Junior/Senior Section. 3 Credits.

A special version of SOCI 130 for juniors, seniors, and beginning graduate students. Students may not receive credit for both SOCI 425 and SOCI 130.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 426. Sociology of Education. 3 Credits.

An overview of theory and research on education and schooling, with an emphasis on inequalities in educational opportunities, education as a social institution, and the changing context of schools and schooling. Students may not receive credit for both SOCI 423 and SOCI 426.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 427. The Labor Force. 3 Credits.

Supply and characteristics of labor and of jobs, including industrial and occupation changes, education and mobility of labor, and changing demography of the workforce.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: MNGT 427.

SOCI 429. Religion and Society. 3 Credits.

Sociological analysis of group beliefs and practices, both traditionally religious and secular, through which fundamental life experiences are given coherence and meaning. This course is a special version of SOCI 129 for juniors and seniors that explores the meanings and experiences of religion, as well as religion's role in communities, institutions, and societies through hands-on intensive research experience. Students may not receive credit for both SOCI 129 and SOCI/RELI 429.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: RELI 429.

SOCI 431. Aging. 3 Credits.

The process of aging from birth to death, with a concentration on the later years of life, examined from a broad perspective. Topics include individual change over the life-course, the social context of aging, and the aging of American society.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 433. Immigration in Contemporary America. 3 Credits.

This course introduces students to reasons why people migrate, how citizens respond to that migration, how the federal government regulates migration, and how local communities manage the settlement of newcomers. By the end of the course students should have a solid understanding of major debates in the study of immigration.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 444. Race, Class, and Gender. 3 Credits.

Conceptualizations of gender, race, and class and how, separately and in combination, they are interpreted by the wider society. Emphasis on how black and working-class women make sense of their experiences at work and within the family.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: WGST 444.

SOCI 445. Sociology of Emotions. 3 Credits.

The course examines how emotions are organized within social groupings and institutions. Differences in socialization by gender, ethnicity, social class, and age will be explored.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 450. Theory and Problems of Developing Societies. 3 Credits.

Theories concerning the development process (motivational vs. institutional economics vs. political and social development; similarity of sequential states and outcomes) will be related to policy problems facing the developing nations.

Gen Ed: SS, BN.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 460. Contemporary Social Theory. 3 Credits.

Analysis of current problems in general social theory; action and structure, justice and equity, social change and reproduction. Contrast and evaluation of leading approaches to solutions.

Requisites: Prerequisite, SOCI 250.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 468. United States Poverty and Public Policy. 3 Credits.

This course examines issues of poverty and social policy, single-mother families, the welfare debate, and homelessness.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 469. Health and Society. 3 Credits.

The primary objective of the course is to explain how and why particular social arrangements affect the types and distribution of diseases, as well as the types of health promotion and disease prevention practices that societies promote.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 481. Managing International Conflict. 3 Credits.

This course introduces the principles of international cooperation and conflict resolution; theories of how international agreements develop or break down; and the logic of mediation, arbitration, and negotiation.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 691H. Senior Honors Research and Seminar. 3 Credits.

Permission of the department. SOCI 691H is required of senior honors candidates. Individual student research (under supervision of an advisor). Weekly seminar to discuss work on honors thesis, as well as special topics in sociology.

Gen Ed: CI, EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 692H. Senior Honors Research and Seminar. 3 Credits.

Permission of the department. Individual student research under supervision of an advisor. Weekly seminar to discuss work on honors thesis as well as special topics in sociology.

Requisites: Prerequisite, SOCI 691H.

Gen Ed: CI, EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

SOCI 696. Undergraduate/Graduate Study in Sociology. 3-4 Credits.

Permission of the instructor. Graduate study in sociology for undergraduate students. Undergraduate students taking a 700- or 800-level course in sociology register via this course and complete all requirements for the associated graduate course.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

The undergraduate major in sociology at UNC–Chapel Hill provides students with theoretical and methodological tools, and substantive insights for understanding human social life and institutions. The major is designed to offer its students training in critical thinking, analytical problem solving, reasoned judgment, and effective communication as well as broad knowledge of human relations and social systems, providing useful tools for a variety of careers. The curriculum and requirements are flexible enough to permit students to tailor their program to fit individual needs and interests. The undergraduate sociology program includes opportunities to put sociological ideas into practice through research by means of independent studies, theses, and internships.

Department Programs

Majors

- Sociology Major, B.A. (p. 1009)
- Management and Society Major, B.A. (p. 1012)

Minor

- Health and Society Minor (p. 1015)
- Social and Economic Justice Minor (p. 1016)

Graduate Programs

- M.A. in Sociology (<http://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/sociology/>)
- Ph.D. in Sociology (<http://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/sociology/>)

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the sociology program, students should be able to:

- Make links between human action/consciousness and social forces/ social contexts. This will include identifying how human behavior and consciousness are shaped by the social and, in turn, how the social can be changed by individual behavior and collective action
- Identify and define major sociological concepts and apply these concepts to social reality. Examples of concepts include norms, roles, social institutions, social stratification, power, authority, class, gender, race, social capital, life course, social networks, and social control
- Propose an appropriate research design for studying a social phenomenon, including assessing the data and methods that would be appropriate for any given study of social phenomena
- Describe and compare several major theoretical perspectives used by sociologists (examples include functionalism, conflict theory, institutional theory, feminist theory, and symbolic interactionism), and be able to apply these perspectives to social phenomena (poverty, human capital, inequality, inter-group conflict, etc.)

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Sample Plan One

¹ SOCI 691H or SOCI 692H (but not both) can be counted as three (3) hours and a 400-level elective course.

Special Opportunities in Sociology and Management and Society

Honors in Sociology

The department attempts to identify and invite all qualified students to participate in the senior honors program. Students who are not contacted, especially double majors, transfer students, and students who declare their major in sociology relatively late in their college careers, are encouraged to speak with their major advisor or the department's honors advisor no later than the preregistration period during the second semester of their junior year.

To graduate with honors in sociology, a major must meet the following requirements:

- At least a 3.3 cumulative grade point average in major courses and all courses taken at the University
- Completion of an honors thesis based on independent study, which may involve collection of data by the student, under the supervision of a faculty thesis advisor
- Participation in an honors seminar program during the fall and spring semesters of the senior year.

Students may receive credit for one or both senior honors research and seminar courses (SOCI 691H and SOCI 692H) depending on the extent of their thesis work.

For more information on honors, contact Professor Howard Aldrich (howard_aldrich@unc.edu), CB# 3210, 202 Hamilton Hall, (919) 962-5044.

Honors in Management and Society

A student may, as a result of distinguished work (3.3 grade point average or higher), be awarded a degree with honors or highest honors. This requires completion of a senior honors thesis. Interested students should contact the management and society office for more information. Honors students should enroll in MNGT 691H and MNGT 692H. MNGT 692H will fulfill one of the course requirements from the social context of business group listed above.

Student Clubs

The Sociology Club is a student-run, student-driven organization that may provide relevant presentations, discussions, guidance, and/or service opportunities in sociology. The Society for Human Resources Management (SHRM) is a student-run, student-driven organization that may provide relevant presentations, discussions, guidance, and/or service and intern opportunities in management and society.

Independent Study and Reading

SOCI 396 may be taken for one to three hours of course credit depending on the amount of academic work planned by the student. It is usually taken by juniors and seniors who have completed at least two or three courses in sociology. Students may use independent study to

- Do reading and research in an area in which no course is offered
- Take advanced or more specialized coursework in a specific area of sociology

After an area of study has been selected, the student contacts a faculty member in the department whose interests are in or related to the topic area. If the faculty member agrees to direct the student's independent study, the student needs final approval by the department's director of undergraduate studies. It is the student's and faculty supervisor's responsibility to determine the amount of reading and/or outside work to be done, the frequency with which the student's progress will be assessed, and the papers or examinations that will constitute the course requirements. An approved learning contract is necessary, and some written work involving sociological analysis is required to receive credit for SOCI 396. Students must sign up for SOCI 396 before the end of the first week of classes.

Independent Experiential Internship

Students may combine employment and study in the form of an internship program for which they receive one to three academic credits through SOCI 393. The student must assume responsibility for employment arrangements. Students may not receive credit for paid employment. The student contacts a faculty member in the department whose interests are in or related to the area of the internship. If the faculty member agrees to direct the internship, the student needs final approval by the department's director of undergraduate studies. Credit is not provided for the internship alone; some written work involving sociological analysis is required to receive credit for SOCI 393. Because of the expectation that students doing an internship for academic credit will conduct substantive sociological analysis, it is very important that planning begin early. Students must secure all approvals for the contract before the first day of the internship.

Undergraduate Howard W. Odum Award

The Undergraduate Howard W. Odum Award is presented yearly to a graduating senior who has displayed excellence in undergraduate sociological achievement. This award was established in 1967 in honor of Professor Howard Odum, who founded and first chaired the UNC-

Chapel Hill Department of Sociology. Odum was a pioneer in American sociology and a major influence on the discipline. The department faculty selects the recipient of the annual award on the basis of grade records and other demonstrations of academic talent and accomplishment as an undergraduate.

Undergraduate Research

Students interested in working with faculty on their research projects should contact the Office for Undergraduate Research for more information and also speak with the director of undergraduate studies.

Management and society is an interdisciplinary major that focuses on the institutional context and inner workings of organizations. The major prepares students for a variety of positions in private or public-sector organizations. Additionally, many students find the curriculum to be excellent preparation for a variety of business-oriented graduate and professional degree programs.

Some students have combined management and society with majors in such academic disciplines as economics, sociology, psychology, public policy, history, and political science.

Students may receive credit for one or both senior honors research and seminar courses (SOCI 691H and SOCI 692H) depending on the extent of their thesis work.

For more information on honors, contact Professor Howard Aldrich (howard_aldrich@unc.edu), CB# 3210, 202 Hamilton Hall, (919) 962-5044.

Honors in Management and Society

A student may, as a result of distinguished work (3.3 grade point average or higher), be awarded a degree with honors or highest honors. This requires completion of a senior honors thesis. Interested students should contact the management and society office for more information. Honors students should enroll in MNGT 691H and MNGT 692H. MNGT 692H will fulfill one of the course requirements from the social context of business group listed above.

Student Clubs

The Sociology Club is a student-run, student-driven organization that may provide relevant presentations, discussions, guidance, and/or service opportunities in sociology. The Society for Human Resources Management (SHRM) is a student-run, student-driven organization that may provide relevant presentations, discussions, guidance, and/or service and intern opportunities in management and society.

Independent Study and Reading

SOCI 396 may be taken for one to three hours of course credit depending on the amount of academic work planned by the student. It is usually taken by juniors and seniors who have completed at least two or three courses in sociology. Students may use independent study to

- Do reading and research in an area in which no course is offered

Students must sign up for SOCI 396 before the end of the first week of classes.

Independent Experiential Internship

Students may combine employment and study in the form of an internship program for which they receive one to three academic credits through SOCI 393. The student must assume responsibility for employment arrangements. Students may not receive credit for paid employment. The student contacts a faculty member in the department whose interests are in or related to the area of the internship. If the faculty member agrees to direct the internship, the student needs final approval by the department's director of undergraduate studies. Credit is not provided for the internship alone; some written work involving sociological analysis is required to receive credit for SOCI 393. Because of the expectation that students doing an internship for academic credit will conduct substantive sociological analysis, it is very important that planning begin early. Students must secure all approvals for the contract before the first day of the internship.

Undergraduate Howard W. Odum Award

The Undergraduate Howard W. Odum Award is presented yearly to a graduating senior who has displayed excellence in undergraduate sociological achievement. This award was established in 1967 in honor of Professor Howard Odum, who founded and first chaired the UNC–Chapel Hill Department of Sociology. Odum was a pioneer in American sociology and a major influence on the discipline. The department faculty selects the recipient of the annual award on the basis of grade records and other demonstrations of academic talent and accomplishment as an undergraduate.

Undergraduate Research

Students interested in working with faculty on their research projects should contact the Office for Undergraduate Research for more information and also speak with the director of undergraduate studies.

The minor in health and society provides students with an opportunity to examine contemporary health patterns and trends characterizing U.S. society and societies around the world, as well as sociologically-based explanations for those patterns and trends. It also provides students with an understanding of the social construction of health and illness in modern societies. The minor brings together courses focused specifically on linkages between health and society, along with courses focused on social organization and social stratification, to provide students with insights into the ways that societies define health and illness and how social organization and stratification influence population health.

The minor in social and economic justice is designed for students who want to understand how to think analytically about issues of justice and how perspectives on justice can be joined with the pursuit of it. An overarching objective is fostering attitudes and knowledge about human rights; racial, ethnic, and gender equality; economic justice; democratic participation; sustainable development; diversity; and peace. It is especially appropriate for students who anticipate working in advocacy roles in nonprofit organizations, in local communities, or in governmental organizations. In these inquiries about justice, students engage scholarship in a variety of disciplines and traditions of practice.

¹ Depending on the topic, independent study, special topics, and internship courses may be approved to fulfill the requirements for the minor with the explicit permission of the director.

A student may major in sociology and minor in social and economic justice; however, a student cannot count toward graduation more than 45 hours in SOCI courses. All college requirements about minors apply. In addition, only one course that a student is using to meet a General Education Approaches requirement may also be used to meet a minor requirement.

Service Learning Component

Students are required to complete one service-learning experience, a requirement that can be met in one of three ways.

1. A student may take a course that includes a service-learning (APPLES) component.
2. After seeking and receiving the approval of the director of the minor, a student may take a one- to three-credit independent studies or special topics course (summer or academic term) with a faculty member.
3. A student may participate in the two-credit spring break course, HBEH 610, which meets the service-learning requirement but not a course requirement.

Note that core courses do not necessarily contain a service-learning component; check ConnectCarolina each semester to confirm that courses are listed as APPLES courses.

Thus, the minor is fulfilled with 12 to 13 credits, depending on whether the service-learning requirement is part of a three-credit course or is fulfilled in another way.

Introduction

The major in statistics and analytics (STAN) is an excellent program for students interested in statistical data science, operations research, and actuarial science, as well as in fields such as business, economics, public policy and health, psychology, and biomedicine where the decision and statistical sciences play an increasingly important role.

Particular areas in which graduates can obtain employment or continue with graduate study include

Statistics

Probability and statistics are two of the most frequently applied areas in the mathematical decision sciences. Students in this area study the mathematical theories of probability and statistics and their application to mathematical models that contain an element of uncertainty or randomness. Opportunities for employment are manifold in businesses and government agencies dealing with many branches of the natural and social sciences, including pharmacology, environmental sciences, and many others.

Operations Research

In this area, students study mathematical, statistical, and computational techniques related to decision making. Operations research is crucial in business, government, and other management areas where decisions are made by solving large, complex problems (for example, crew scheduling for airlines). In addition to their major courses, students interested in this field are encouraged to take courses in business and economics.

Actuarial Science

Actuaries are mathematicians who work primarily in businesses that involve financial risk, including the insurance industry. Students interested in this field take advanced courses in statistics, stochastic processes, and the mathematical theory of risk.

Advising

All majors and minors have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. STAN majors and minors are also encouraged to meet with departmental advisors to discuss course planning before registration each semester. The director of undergraduate studies works with prospective majors and minors by appointment. Additional information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be obtained from the department's Web site (<http://www.stat-or.unc.edu/>) or by contacting the director of undergraduate studies.

Courses for Students from Other Departments

The Department of Statistics and Operations Research offers a variety of courses of potential value to students majoring in other disciplines. Introductory courses include STOR 113 and STOR 215, which are foundation courses in decision models, and the basic statistical courses, STOR 151 and STOR 155. At the intermediate level, STOR 305 provides an introduction to business decision models, while STOR 471 is an introductory course in actuarial science. Substantial coverage of applied statistical methods is provided in STOR 455 and STOR 556. At more advanced mathematical levels, an introduction to probability theory is provided by STOR 435, and the basic theory of statistical inference is given by STOR 555. More advanced deterministic and stochastic models of operations research are provided in STOR 415 and STOR 445.

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

Regardless of the electives chosen, the statistics and analytics degree program provides excellent preparation for graduate study. Graduates with concentrations in operations research or statistics often continue work at the graduate level in those fields or related areas such as industrial engineering, biostatistics, and environmental science, or enter business school to pursue the master's in business administration (M.B.A.) degree.

A five-year B.S.–M.S. degree program in operations research is also an option. Interested students should consult the director of graduate studies for the operations research program.

Graduates of the statistics and analytics program will find numerous opportunities for well-paid, challenging jobs.

STOR–Statistics and Operations Research Undergraduate-level Courses

STOR 52. First-Year Seminar: Decisions, Decisions, Decisions. 3 Credits.

In this course, we will investigate the structure of these decision problems, show how they can be solved (at least in principle), and solve some simple problems.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 53. FYS: Networks: Degrees of Separation and Other Phenomena Relating to Connected Systems. 3 Credits.

Networks, mathematical structures that are composed of nodes and a set of lines joining the nodes, are used to model a wide variety of familiar systems.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 54. First-Year Seminar: Adventures in Statistics. 3 Credits.

This seminar aims to show that contrary to common belief, statistics can be exciting and fun. The seminar will consist of three modules: statistics in our lives, randomness, and principles of statistical reasoning.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 55. First-Year Seminar: Risk and Uncertainty in the Real World. 3 Credits.

The aim of this class is to study the role of uncertainty in our daily lives, to explore the cognitive biases that impair us, and to understand how one uses quantitative models to make decisions under uncertainty in a wide array of fields including medicine, law, finance, and the sciences.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 56. First-Year Seminar: The Art and Science of Decision Making in War and Peace. 3 Credits.

This seminar will use recently assembled historical material to tell the exciting story of the origins and development of operations research during and after World War II.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 60. First-Year Seminar: Statistical Decision-Making Concepts. 3 Credits.

We will study some basic statistical decision-making procedures and the errors and losses they lead to. We will analyze the effects of randomness on decision making using computer experimentation and physical experiments with real random mechanisms like dice, cards, and so on.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 61. First-Year Seminar: Statistics for Environmental Change. 3 Credits.

Studies the Environmental Protection Agency's Criteria Document, mandated by the Clean Air Act; this document reviews current scientific evidence concerning airborne particulate matter. Students learn some of the statistical methods used to assess the connections between air pollution and mortality, and prepare reports on studies covered in the Criteria Document.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 62. First-Year Seminar: Probability and Paradoxes. 3 Credits.

The theory of probability, which can be used to model the uncertainty and chance that exist in the real world, often leads to surprising conclusions and seeming paradoxes. We survey and study these, along with other paradoxes and puzzling situations arising in logic, mathematics, and human behavior.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 63. FYS: Statistics, Biostatistics, and Bioinformatics: An Introduction to the Ongoing Evolution. 3 Credits.

This course is designed to emphasize the motivation, philosophy, and cultivation of statistical reasoning in the interdisciplinary areas of statistical science and bioinformatics.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 64. First-Year Seminar: A Random Walk down Wall Street. 3 Credits.

Introduces basic concepts in finance and economics, useful tools for collecting and summarizing financial data, and simple probability models for quantification of market uncertainty.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 66. First-Year Seminar: Visualizing Data. 3 Credits.

This seminar looks at a variety of ways in which modern computational tools allow easy and informative viewing of data. Students will also study the kinds of choices that have to be made in data presentation and viewing.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 72. First-Year Seminar: Unlocking the Genetic Code. 3 Credits.

Introduces students to the world of genetics and DNA and to the use of computers to organize and understand the complex systems associated with the structure and dynamics of DNA and heredity.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 89. First-Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Special Topics Course. Contents will vary each semester.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 112. Decision Models for Business. 3 Credits.

An introduction to the basic quantitative models of business with linear and nonlinear functions of single and multiple variables. Linear and nonlinear optimization models and decision models under uncertainty will be covered.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 110.

Gen Ed: QR.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 113. Decision Models for Business and Economics. 3 Credits.

An introduction to multivariable quantitative models in economics. Mathematical techniques for formulating and solving optimization and equilibrium problems will be developed, including elementary models under uncertainty.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 110.

Gen Ed: QR.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 115. Reasoning with Data: Navigating a Quantitative World. 3 Credits.

Students will use mathematical and statistical methods to address societal problems, make personal decisions, and reason critically about the world. Authentic contexts may include voting, health and risk, digital humanities, finance, and human behavior. This course does not count as credit towards the psychology or neuroscience majors.

Gen Ed: QR.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: MATH 115, BIOL 115, PSYC 115.

STOR 120. Foundations of Statistics and Data Science. 4 Credits.

The course teaches critical concepts and skills in computer programming and statistical inference, in conjunction with hands-on analysis of real-world datasets, including economic data, document collections, geographical data, and social networks. It delves into social issues surrounding data analysis such as privacy and design.

Gen Ed: QR.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 151. Introduction to Data Analysis. 3 Credits.

Elementary introduction to statistical reasoning, including sampling, elementary probability, statistical inference, and data analysis. STOR 151 may not be taken for credit by students who have credit for ECON 400 or PSYC 210.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 110.

Gen Ed: QR.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 155. Introduction to Data Models and Inference. 3 Credits.

Data analysis; correlation and regression; sampling and experimental design; basic probability (random variables, expected values, normal and binomial distributions); hypothesis testing and confidence intervals for means, proportions, and regression parameters; use of spreadsheet software.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 110.

Gen Ed: QR.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 190. Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Examines selected topics from statistics and operations research. Course description is available from the department office.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 215. Foundations of Decision Sciences. 3 Credits.

Introduction to basic concepts and techniques of discrete mathematics with applications to business and social and physical sciences. Topics include logic, sets, functions, combinatorics, discrete probability, graphs, and networks.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 110.

Gen Ed: QR.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 290. Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Examines selected topics from statistics and operations research. Course description is available from the department office.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 305. Introduction to Decision Analytics. 3 Credits.

The use of mathematics to describe and analyze large-scale decision problems. Situations involving the allocation of resources, making decisions in a competitive environment, and dealing with uncertainty are modeled and solved using suitable software packages.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 152 or STOR 155.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 320. Introduction to Data Science. 4 Credits.

Development of basic skill set for data analysis from obtaining data to data carpentry, exploration, modeling, and communication. Topics covered include regression, clustering, classification, algorithmic thinking, and non-standard data objects (networks and text data). Students may not receive credit for both STOR 320 and STOR 520.

Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 120 or 155.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 358. Sample Survey Methodology. 4 Credits.

Fundamental principles and methods of sampling populations, with emphasis on simple, random, stratified, and cluster sampling. Sample weights, nonsampling error, and analysis of data from complex designs are covered. Practical experience through participation in the design, execution, and analysis of a sampling project.

Requisites: Prerequisite, BIOS 550; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Gen Ed: EE- Field Work.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: BIOS 664.

STOR 390. Special Topics in Statistics and Operations Research. 3 Credits.

Examines selected topics from statistics and operations research. Course description is available from the department office.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level CoursesSTOR 415. Introduction to Optimization. 3 Credits.

Linear, integer, nonlinear, and dynamic programming, classical optimization problems, network theory.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 547.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 435. Introduction to Probability. 3 Credits.

Introduction to mathematical theory of probability covering random variables; moments; binomial, Poisson, normal and related distributions; generating functions; sums and sequences of random variables; and statistical applications. Students may not receive credit for both STOR 435 and STOR 535.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 233.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: MATH 535.

STOR 445. Stochastic Modeling. 3 Credits.

Introduction to Markov chains, Poisson process, continuous-time Markov chains, renewal theory. Applications to queueing systems, inventory, and reliability, with emphasis on systems modeling, design, and control.

Requisites: Prerequisite, BIOS 660 or STOR 435.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 455. Methods of Data Analysis. 3 Credits.

Review of basic inference; two-sample comparisons; correlation; introduction to matrices; simple and multiple regression (including significance tests, diagnostics, variable selection); analysis of variance; use of statistical software.

Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 155.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 465. Simulation for Analytics. 3 Credits.

Introduces concepts of random number generation, random variate generation, and discrete event simulation of stochastic systems. Students perform simulation experiments using standard simulation software.

Requisites: Prerequisites, STOR 155 and 435.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 471. Long-Term Actuarial Models. 3 Credits.

Probability models for long-term insurance and pension systems that involve future contingent payments and failure-time random variables. Introduction to survival distributions and measures of interest and annuities-certain.

Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 435.

Gen Ed: QI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 472. Short Term Actuarial Models. 3 Credits.

Short term probability models for potential losses and their applications to both traditional insurance systems and conventional business decisions. Introduction to stochastic process models of solvency requirements.

Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 435.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 475. Healthcare Risk Analytics. 3 Credits.

This course will introduce students to the healthcare industry and provide hands-on experience with key actuarial and analytical concepts that apply across the actuarial field. Using real world situations, the course will focus on how mathematics and the principles of risk management are used to help insurance companies and employers make better decisions regarding employee benefit insurance products and programs.

Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 435 or Math 535.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 490. Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Examines selected topics from statistics and operations research. Course description is available from the department office.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 493. Internship in Statistics and Operations Research. 3 Credits.

Requires permission of the department. Statistics and analytics majors only. An opportunity to obtain credit for an internship related to statistics, operations research, or actuarial science. Pass/Fail only. Does not count toward the statistics and analytics major or minor.

Gen Ed: EE- Academic Internship.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

STOR 496. Undergraduate Reading and Research in Statistics and Operations Research. 1-3 Credits.

Permission of the director of undergraduate studies. This course is intended mainly for students working on honors projects. May be repeated for credit.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 6 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 520. Statistical Computing for Data Science. 4 Credits.

This course provides hands-on experience working with data sets provided in class and downloaded from certain public websites. Lectures cover basic topics such as R programming, visualization, data wrangling and cleaning, exploratory data analysis, web scraping, data merging, predictive modeling, and elements of machine learning. Programming analyses in more advanced areas of data science. Students may not receive credit for both STOR 320 and STOR 520.

Requisites: Prerequisites, STOR 435 or 535, and STOR 455.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 535. Probability for Data Science. 3 Credits.

This course is an advanced undergraduate course in probability with the aim to give students the technical and computational tools for advanced courses in data analysis and machine learning. It covers random variables, moments, binomial, Poisson, normal and related distributions, generating functions, sums and sequences of random variables, statistical applications, Markov chains, multivariate normal and prediction analytics. Students may not receive credit for both STOR 435 and STOR 535.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 233.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 538. Sports Analytics. 3 Credits.

This course will survey the history of sports analytics across multiple areas and challenge students in team-based projects to practice sports analytics. Students will learn how applied statistics and mathematics help decision makers gain competitive advantages for on-field performance and off-field business decisions.

Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 320 or STOR 455.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 555. Mathematical Statistics. 3 Credits.

Functions of random samples and their probability distributions, introductory theory of point and interval estimation and hypothesis testing, elementary decision theory.

Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 435.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 556. Advanced Methods of Data Analysis. 3 Credits.

Topics selected from: design of experiments, sample surveys, nonparametrics, time-series, multivariate analysis, contingency tables, logistic regression, and simulation. Use of statistical software packages.

Requisites: Prerequisites, STOR 435 and 455.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 565. Machine Learning. 3 Credits.

Introduction to theory and methods of machine learning including classification; Bayes risk/rule, linear discriminant analysis, logistic regression, nearest neighbors, and support vector machines; clustering algorithms; overfitting, estimation error, cross validation.

Requisites: Prerequisites, STOR 215 or MATH 381, and STOR 435.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 590. Special Topics in Statistics and Operations Research. 3 Credits.

Examines selected topics from statistics and operations research. Course description is available from the department office.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 612. Models in Operations Research. 3 Credits.

Required preparation, calculus of several variables, linear or matrix algebra. Formulation, solution techniques, and sensitivity analysis for optimization problems which can be modeled as linear, integer, network flow, and dynamic programs. Use of software packages to solve linear, integer, and network problems.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 614. Linear Programming. 3 Credits.

Required preparation, calculus of several variables, linear or matrix algebra. The theory of linear programming, computational methods for solving linear programs, and an introduction to nonlinear and integer programming. Basic optimality conditions, convexity, duality, sensitivity analysis, cutting planes, and Karush-Kuhn-Tucker conditions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 634. Probability I. 3 Credits.

Required preparation, advanced calculus. Lebesgue and abstract measure and integration, convergence theorems, differentiation. Radon-Nikodym theorem, product measures. Fubini theorems. Lp spaces.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 635. Probability II. 3 Credits.

Foundations of probability. Basic classical theorems. Modes of probabilistic convergence. Central limit problem. Generating functions, characteristic functions. Conditional probability and expectation.

Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 634; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: MATH 635.

STOR 641. Stochastic Models in Operations Research I. 3 Credits.

Review of probability, conditional probability, expectations, transforms, generating functions, special distributions, and functions of random variables. Introduction to stochastic processes. Discrete-time Markov chains. Transient and limiting behavior. First passage times.

Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 435.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 642. Stochastic Models in Operations Research II. 3 Credits.

Exponential distribution and Poisson process. Birth-death processes, continuous-time Markov chains. Transient and limiting behavior. Applications to elementary queueing theory. Renewal processes and regenerative processes.

Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 641.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 654. Statistical Theory I. 3 Credits.

Required preparation, two semesters of advanced calculus. Probability spaces. Random variables, distributions, expectation. Conditioning. Generating functions. Limit theorems: LLN, CLT, Slutsky, delta-method, big-O in probability. Inequalities. Distribution theory: normal, chi-squared, beta, gamma, Cauchy, other multivariate distributions. Distribution theory for linear models.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 655. Statistical Theory II. 3 Credits.

Point estimation. Hypothesis testing and confidence sets. Contingency tables, nonparametric goodness-of-fit. Linear model optimality theory: BLUE, MVU, MLE. Multivariate tests. Introduction to decision theory and Bayesian inference.

Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 654.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 664. Applied Statistics I. 3 Credits.

Permission of the instructor. Basics of linear models: matrix formulation, least squares, tests. Computing environments: SAS, MATLAB, S+. Visualization: histograms, scatterplots, smoothing, QQ plots. Transformations: log, Box-Cox, etc. Diagnostics and model selection.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 665. Applied Statistics II. 3 Credits.

ANOVA (including nested and crossed models, multiple comparisons). GLM basics: exponential families, link functions, likelihood, quasi-likelihood, conditional likelihood. Numerical analysis: numerical linear algebra, optimization; GLM diagnostics. Simulation: transformation, rejection, Gibbs sampler.

Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 664; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 672. Simulation Modeling and Analysis. 3 Credits.

Introduces students to modeling, programming, and statistical analysis applicable to computer simulations. Emphasizes statistical analysis of simulation output for decision-making. Focuses on discrete-event simulations and discusses other simulation methodologies such as Monte Carlo and agent-based simulations. Students model, program, and run simulations using specialized software. Familiarity with computer programming recommended.

Requisites: Prerequisites, STOR 555 and 641.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: COMP 672.

STOR 690. Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Examines selected topics from statistics and operations research. Course description is available from the department office.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 691H. Honors in Statistics and Analytics. 3 Credits.

Permission of the department. Majors only. Individual reading, study, or project supervised by a faculty member.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

STOR 692H. Honors in Statistics and Analytics. 3 Credits.

Permission of the department. Majors only. Individual reading, study, or project supervised by a faculty member.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

- Ph.D. in Statistics and Operations Research (<http://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/statistics-operations-research/>)

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the statistics and analytics program, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate knowledge of the basic foundations of calculus, probability, statistics, and discrete mathematics
- Apply the analytical and computational skills needed to formulate and solve basic problems in the decision sciences
- Communicate the major ideas of the decision sciences, orally and in writing
- Find appropriate employment with academic institutions, government agencies, and industry, or continue their education in related graduate programs

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

In the first two years, students are required to complete the standard calculus sequence as well as introductory courses in statistics, operations research, and computer science. At the beginning of their third year, students take advanced courses in statistics, probability, and operations research. They have a great deal of flexibility in tailoring their program to meet their individual interests.

¹ Prospective statistics and analytics majors are encouraged to take STOR 155 or STOR 120, and STOR 215 or MATH 381 as early as possible in their college careers. Each has a prerequisite of MATH 110 or its equivalent and may be taken before, or concurrently with, MATH 231.

² Students wishing to prepare for an actuarial career should include STOR 471, STOR 472, STOR 555 and STOR 556 from Group A in their program and take ECON 410 and ECON 420 and BUSI 408 and BUSI 588 as electives. Students who plan to attend graduate school in statistics, operations research, analytics, or a related field, should include in their program COMP 401, STOR 555, STOR 565, and MATH 521.

It is recommended that all statistics and analytics majors take ECON 101 as a social and behavioral sciences Approaches course. Students interested in the actuarial profession also should take BUSI 102 as a general elective.

Dual Bachelor's – Master's Degree Program

The Department of Statistics and Operations Research offers a dual bachelor's – master's degree program. Interested students should consult the graduate program director.

Special Opportunities in Statistics and Analytics

Honors in Statistics and Analytics

Candidates for honors or highest honors must secure approval from the program director. They must take STOR 691H and STOR 692H, and maintain an overall grade point average of 3.3 and a grade point average in statistics and analytics courses of at least 3.3 at the end of the semester preceding the semester in which they graduate.

Departmental Involvement

The Department of Statistics and Operations Research sponsors Carolina’s Actuarial Student Organization (CASO), for students interested in careers in the actuarial sciences. CASO organizes study groups for the actuarial exams, sponsors talks by professional actuaries, keeps members aware of employment opportunities, and maintains contact with alumni and corporations in the field. The department is also a co-sponsor of Carolina Analytics and Data Science (CADS) student organization, which aims to foster communication among the students who are interested in careers in data science and analytics and contribute to their intellectual growth by hosting speakers from industry as well as academia.

Experiential Education

When arranged in advance with a supervising faculty member, STOR 493 can be used to earn credit for appropriate work experience in the summer or during the academic year. STOR 493 satisfies the experiential education requirement. Students interested in STOR 493 should secure approval from the program director before starting their work. STOR 496 can also be used to satisfy the experiential education requirement.

Undergraduate Awards

Two undergraduate awards for graduating seniors are given each year by the statistics and analytics program. One is the Statistics and Analytics Award, given to the outstanding graduating senior, and the second is the W. Robert Mann Award, given for excellence in actuarial science. Plaques bearing the names of winners are located in the undergraduate study room in Hanes Hall.

Undergraduate Research

Undergraduate research under the direction of faculty members from the Department of Statistics and Operations Research is offered through the independent study and research course, STOR 496, and the senior honors thesis courses, STOR 691H and STOR 692H.

Introduction

The Department of Women's and Gender Studies offers a feminist interdisciplinary course of study that expands the process of knowledge production to include considerations of gender, race, class, and sexuality in the United States and internationally. Students will be exposed to recent scholarship on feminist theory and the intellectual, economic, political, and artistic contributions of women and feminist movements in various historical and cultural contexts.

Numerous departments across campus offer courses that focus on the study of women and/or gender. Most of these courses are cross-listed as women's and gender studies courses; others are taught as special sections of an established course and are identified separately each semester.

Advising

All majors and minors have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building. Students whose first major is women's and gender studies are required to meet with a faculty member in the department before they can register. All other majors and minors are strongly encouraged to meet with a faculty member as well. The department's director of undergraduate studies also works with current and prospective majors and minors by appointment (see "Contact Information" above). Departmental academic advising is particularly important for those majors who are considering going on to graduate school. All students are encouraged to review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. Further information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be obtained from the department's Web site (<http://womensstudies.unc.edu/>).

WGST–Women's and Gender Studies

Undergraduate-level Courses

WGST 51. First-Year Seminar: Race, Sex, and Place in America. 3 Credits.

This first-year seminar will expose students to the complex dynamics of race, ethnicity, and gender and how these have shaped the American city since 1945.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: PLAN 52.

WGST 56. First-Year Seminar: Writing Women in Modern China. 3 Credits.

Compares the rhetoric of equality between the sexes presented by late Qing, May Fourth, and communist thinkers to perspectives on gender and society by 20th-century Chinese women writers. Honors version available

Gen Ed: LA, BN.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: ASIA 56.

WGST 56H. First-Year Seminar: Writing Women in Modern China. 3 Credits.

Compares the rhetoric of equality between the sexes presented by late Qing, May Fourth, and communist thinkers to perspectives on gender and society by 20th-century Chinese women writers.

Gen Ed: LA, BN.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: ASIA 56H.

WGST 64. Plantation Lullabies: Literature by and about African American Women. 3 Credits.

This course introduces students to different ways of understanding plantation culture and how that culture persists today, using close reading strategies and gender analysis. The class will examine film, literature, music, and poetry.

Gen Ed: LA, NA.

Grading status: Letter grade.

WGST 66. First-Year Seminar: Growing Up Girl, Globally. 3 Credits.

Course introduces students to literature by women from around the world, particularly stories of a girl's transition to womanhood. Close reading strategies are used to examine films, novels, and poetry.

Gen Ed: LA, GL.

Grading status: Letter grade.

WGST 68. First-Year Seminar: Assumed Identities: Performance in Photography. 3 Credits.

Uses photography and its aspects of role playing, performance, and documentation to understand the construction of identity. Looks at historical and contemporary photographers who use assumed identities to explore their changing identity roles and challenge society's stereotypes. Individual and group performance/photography projects working with still photography, video, and the Internet.

Gen Ed: VP.

Grading status: Letter grade.

WGST 89. First-Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Special topics course. Content will vary each semester.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

WGST 101. Introduction to Women's Studies. 3 Credits.

An interdisciplinary exploration of the intersections of gender, race, class, and sexuality in American society and internationally. Topics include work; sexuality; gender relations, and images of women in literature, art, and science; and the history of feminist movements. Course readings are drawn from the humanities and the social sciences. Honors version available

Gen Ed: SS, US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

WGST 101H. Introduction to Women's Studies. 3 Credits.

An interdisciplinary exploration of the intersections of gender, race, class, and sexuality in American society and internationally. Topics include work; sexuality; gender relations, and images of women in literature, art, and science; and the history of feminist movements. Course readings are drawn from the humanities and the social sciences.

Gen Ed: SS, US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

WGST 111. Introduction to Sexuality Studies. 3 Credits.

This course introduces students to the broad range of disciplinary perspectives used by the field of sexuality studies to study, teach, and create knowledge about human sexuality in various functions and forms. Honors version available

Gen Ed: SS, NA, US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

WGST 111H. Introduction to Sexuality Studies. 3 Credits.

This course introduces students to the broad range of disciplinary perspectives used by the field of sexuality studies to study, teach, and create knowledge about human sexuality in various functions and forms.

Gen Ed: SS, NA, US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

WGST 124. Sex and Gender in Society. 3 Credits.

Examination of the social differentiation between men and women. Attention to the extent, causes, and consequences of sexual inequality and to changes in sex roles and their impact on interpersonal relations.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: SOCI 124.

WGST 127. Iranian Women Writers. 3 Credits.

This course introduces students to Iranian women's issues through their literary works. Special Opportunities in Women's and Gender Studies

Honors in Women's and Gender Studies

The honors program is designed to encourage independent thought and research among outstanding undergraduate majors in women's and gender studies. Students must take WGST 691H and WGST 692H. Students must plan their project with a faculty advisor and secure permission from both the chair of the department and the faculty advisor. Guidelines and forms for the initial contract are available in the department's office and on our Web site (<https://womensstudies.unc.edu/>). Students interested in the honors thesis must have at least a 3.3 overall grade point average and a 3.5 or greater grade point average in courses taken for the major.

The Department of Women's and Gender Studies offers a feminist interdisciplinary course of study that expands the process of knowledge production to include considerations of gender, race, class, and sexuality in the United States and globally. Students are exposed to recent scholarship on feminist theory and the intellectual, economic, political, and artistic contributions of women and feminist movements in various historical and cultural contexts.

Introduction

The UNC Gillings School of Global Public Health provides exceptional teaching, conducts ground-breaking research, and delivers dedicated service to people across North Carolina, throughout the United States, and around the world. Ranked the top public school of public health by U.S. News and World Report for 2019 and second among all public health schools, the school's mission is to improve public health, promote individual well-being, and eliminate health inequities.

The school, accredited by the Council on Education for Public Health, and located in close proximity to UNC-Chapel Hill's schools of medicine, nursing, dentistry, and pharmacy, offers undergraduate and graduate programs on campus and through state-of-the-art online-education programs. The Michael Hooker Research Center and many renovated laboratories and classrooms provide an environment highly conducive to learning about public health and discovering new ways to improve and promote health worldwide.

Beyond campus, we teach, conduct research, and serve communities across our state and nation and around the world. Our Research, Innovation and Global Solutions Office (<https://sph.unc.edu/solutions/>) research-innovation-and-global-solutions/) organizes the school's global health activities and enables us to anticipate new public health challenges, quickly find solutions, and accelerate the delivery of best practices to improve people's lives. The school's service and outreach arm, the North Carolina Institute for Public Health (<http://sph.unc.edu/nciph/nciph-home/>), brings public health scholarship and practice communities together.

To learn more about the public health field, visit the Association of Schools and Programs of Public Health (<http://aspgh.org/discover/>). The site defines public health, describes its impact on our lives, and introduces a variety of public health careers.

Admission

The undergraduate degree offered is the bachelor of science in public health (B.S.P.H.). Four majors are available to undergraduate students: biostatistics, environmental health sciences, health policy and management, and nutrition. Each of these combines features of a broad-based education with concentrated study in a specific public health discipline. The programs prepare individuals for preprofessional positions in health-related fields and provide a firm base for graduate study. Students are permitted to pursue two majors in the school. Students are subject to the requirements in place when they are admitted to the Gillings School of Global Public Health; consequently, requirements described in this catalog particularly apply to students admitted to the school during the 2020–2021 academic year. In addition to the information presented below please see the Gillings Program Search (GPS) (<http://sph.unc.edu/gps/>) for the most up to date information on the school.

Students who wish to obtain the B.S.P.H. degree typically spend two years in the General College of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (or in an equivalent core program of academic study elsewhere) and two subsequent years under the administration of the Gillings School of Global Public Health. Enrollment in the B.S.P.H. degree programs is limited. Typically a student is selected in the latter half of the sophomore year and admitted on a competitive basis for junior year entry to the major. The minimum recommended grade point average for admission to programs in biostatistics, environmental health sciences, health policy and management, and nutrition is 3.0.

For current UNC-Chapel Hill students, the initial step of B.S.P.H. application is available in ConnectCarolina under the 'Apply Majors' tab.

Transfer students interested in biostatistics and health policy and management majors must apply through the Office of Undergraduate Admissions (<http://admissions.unc.edu/apply/transfer-students/>) using the Transfer Common application. Transfer students interested in environmental health sciences and nutrition majors must be accepted to UNC-Chapel Hill first and then satisfy campus residency requirements during their first and/or second semester at UNC-Chapel Hill, and then apply as a current UNC-Chapel Hill student.

For high school seniors, our four majors participate in the University Assured Enrollment Programs under EXCEL@Carolina. Assured enrollment programs guarantee students a spot in an undergraduate major within one of Carolina's professional schools or a spot in an accelerated undergraduate/graduate program. Programs include unique opportunities such as early access to classes, individualized mentorship, and career connections. For additional information, please visit EXCEL@Carolina (<https://admissions.unc.edu/explore/enrich-your-education/excelcarolina/>).

Departments

Four departments in the UNC Gillings School of Global Public Health offer undergraduate degrees:

- Biostatistics (p. 405)
- Environmental Sciences and Engineering (p. 584)
- Health Policy and Management (p. 697)
- Nutrition (p. 804)

Lists of faculty members in those departments are included in those sections of the catalog. Other courses offered by the school are listed on the 'Courses' tab under the subject codes PUBH and SPHG. If you are not a matriculated public health major, you may need instructor consent to enroll in public health courses.

Introduction

The UNC Kenan–Flagler undergraduate business program offers a program of study that provides students with a thorough grounding in all areas of business and a broad introduction to the liberal arts. The UNC Kenan–Flagler undergraduate experience is distinctive because the school offers:

- An undergraduate business experience that is ranked highly in the nation by U.S. News & World Report, and Poets & Quants
- Career development professionals who help students explore and identify career interests and build plans for pursuing them
- A liberal arts-oriented curriculum
- A global perspective relevant to the needs of business today
- Activities and organizations for an active student life
- Individual attention usually associated with smaller schools
- Multiple opportunities provided by a leading, large research university
- Faculty who are outstanding in and out of the classroom

Students choose business electives to develop a specific area of business interest. Courses selected from other UNC–Chapel Hill schools and programs add to their depth of knowledge. The result is that students are able to see “the big picture.” The school believes that completion of the undergraduate business program provides students with a distinct advantage in a highly selective and competitive job market.

Students may apply to complete a major or minor in business administration, or they may take a limited number of business administration courses as general electives for their chosen degree program.

The business administration program is considered a broad-based, general management degree, and the UNC Kenan–Flagler Business School encourages breadth in both the business curriculum and in the continuation of study in fine arts, humanities, and natural and social sciences. A second major may be possible and requires advance approval by both the undergraduate business program and the second academic unit.

BUSI Courses

BUSI courses are restricted to business majors and minors, unless permission is granted (see the section Taking Business Courses as a Nonmajor/Nonminor or otherwise noted). BUSI courses may run semester-long or may be a MOD (run half a semester). MOD courses may be assigned different deadlines from those provided by the Office of University Registrar. Due to the unique structure of MOD courses, these sections are not eligible for withdrawal or pass/fail.

Taking Business Courses as a Nonmajor/Nonminor

Undergraduate students who do not intend to major or minor in business administration may take a limited number of business courses (limits may change based on course availability) as free electives for their particular major. Non-business students may take one BUSI course per semester and a maximum of five BUSI courses over the course of a student's academic career, regardless of credit hours. First-year students will not be permitted to enroll in 400-level or higher BUSI courses. Registration in business courses for nonmajors and nonminors is made on a space-available basis. Preference is given to students with an overall grade point average of 3.0. Requests for available seats are made online through the undergraduate business program Web site (<https://www.kenan-flagler.unc.edu/programs/undergraduate-business/academics/non-major-business-course-request/>) during the first week of each academic semester, regardless of the course start date. All BUSI courses are restricted to business majors and minors, unless otherwise noted. Final approval to take a business course is at the discretion of the undergraduate business program. Due to the program-specific nature of BUSI 412 (<https://catalog.unc.edu/search/?P=BUSI%20412>), non-business students may not request this course. Additionally, a number of seats are reserved for non-business students in BUSI 500 (<https://catalog.unc.edu/search/?P=BUSI%20500>) and BUSI 520 (<https://catalog.unc.edu/search/?P=BUSI%20520>). Requests for these courses will not be accepted, as non-business students have the ability to enroll or waitlist themselves. Refer to the course description list for additional information concerning prerequisites for specific courses.

Advising

Once admitted to the business major, all academic matters, including academic advising, are handled through the undergraduate business office in McColl Building.

Students admitted to the business minor should continue to work with their major department for academic matters outside of business minor requirements. However, business minors have full access to our career team and global programs.

All students should meet regularly with their advisor and monitor their progress toward completion of both the business major and minor requirements utilizing Tar Heel Tracker. Upon admission, business majors and minors receive information on how to schedule appointments through the undergraduate business program intranet.

Admission to the Kenan–Flagler Business School

Kenan–Flagler’s Undergraduate Business program is a small, select program with approximately 350 majors and 50 minors admitted each year. The program seeks candidates whose analytical and organizational abilities, written and oral communication skills, leadership potential, global mindset, and motivation indicate strong potential for success. Admission is competitive and based on academic achievement, leadership, co-curricular activities and involvement, work experience, diversity of skills and interests, and focus and depth of thought as expressed in a personal statement, essays, and résumé.

Preparation for the Business Administration Major or Minor

A student admitted to the Kenan–Flagler Business School typically begins the Undergraduate Business program in the spring semester of the second year or fall semester of the third year. First- and second-year students in the General College who consider themselves pre-business majors complete certain prerequisite courses as part of their General Education requirements. Prerequisite requirements for the business major and minor are the same, except that ECON 410 is not a prerequisite for the business minor.

A pre-business track includes successful completion (defined as earning a final grade of at least a C, not C-) of the following courses (or their equivalents):

Code	Title	Hours
The calculus mathematics requirement can be fulfilled by taking one of the following:
MATH 152	Calculus for Business and Social Sciences	3-4
MATH 231	Calculus of Functions of One Variable I ^H

MATH 232	Calculus of Functions of One Variable II ^H
STOR 113	Decision Models for Business and Economics
STOR 155	Introduction to Data Models and Inference	3
ECON 101	Introduction to Economics ^H	4
ECON 410	Intermediate Theory: Price and Distribution ^H	4
BUSI 102	Introduction to Financial Accounting	1.5

^H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

Prerequisite courses do not need to be complete at the time of application. However, it is typically beneficial for the admissions committee to see grades in as many prerequisites as possible during the admissions review. Students must complete all business school prerequisites before they are eligible to start in the Undergraduate Business program.

Students are encouraged to take several of the business prerequisite courses in their first year at UNC. It is common for students to leave 1–2 of the business prerequisites to take in their second year. If students wish to be considered for admission in the spring semester of the second year, they need to complete all requirements by the end of the first semester of the second year. To be considered for admission in the fall semester of the third year, all requirements should be completed by the end of the second year.

For the foundational skills in foreign language, the business school neither requires a particular language nor requires coursework beyond level 3. Please note, however, that some overseas study programs are language-based and may necessitate a student’s proficiency beyond level 3.

The business school makes no other specific recommendations about courses for other General Education requirements. The school encourages students to challenge themselves by exploring unfamiliar, new disciplines and by strengthening written and verbal communication and critical thinking. It is possible for a business major to earn a second major and a minor, or two minors. First- and second-year students may wish to build a foundation for such a complementary academic track.

Pre-Business Advising

First- and second-year students in the General College who are considering applying to the business school are encouraged to seek pre-business advising from the social and behavioral sciences division in the Academic Advising Program (Steele Building). The admissions staff from the Kenan–Flagler Business School also conducts regular advising sessions in Steele Building.

Prospective and current applicants should also frequently check the school’s Web site (<http://www.kenan-flagler.unc.edu/admissions/undergraduate-business/deadlines-events/>) for dates of upcoming information sessions, workshops, or important deadlines.

Admission from the General College

Students can apply to the business major as early as the beginning of their second year at UNC. Admitted students are notified (in Mid-October) if they are admitted to start in the subsequent spring or fall. Admission decisions are contingent upon the successful completion of all in-progress or remaining business prerequisites in the regular term (fall/spring) prior to the admitted term of entry. If students are not admitted at the beginning of their second year, they have the option of re-applying at the beginning of their third year.

Admission to the business minor follows the same application schedule and process as the business major. Admission is both selective and competitive with approximately 50 students admitted to the business minor. Students from any discipline excluding business journalism and quantitative physics may apply to the business minor at the beginning of their second or third year. Applications for the minor are not accepted once a student has entered the fourth year.

The business administration major requires completion in a minimum of three semesters, preferably four or five. The business minor requires completion in a minimum of two semesters, preferably three. Students are required to graduate from UNC–Chapel Hill in eight semesters.

Transfer Admission

Transfer students are an integral and vibrant part of the Carolina community. They bring a diversity and experience to the institution that enhances the overall experience for all students, faculty members, and staff. In the Kenan–Flagler Undergraduate Business program, we understand that transferring is a complex process and have outlined below the policies and guidelines to help students make informed decisions and achieve as smooth a transition as possible.

Students applying to the business major as sophomore transfers, or after one year at university, should apply directly to the College of Arts and Sciences (as opposed to the direct admit process). The admissions process is competitive, therefore, we recommend that students review admissions criteria and make the very most of the spring and summer months prior to application.

Students applying to the business major as junior transfers, or after two years of secondary study, should select the Business Administration program as part of their application to UNC (Common Application). Applicants must meet the University's requirements for admission in addition to the business major prerequisite requirements.

Transfer students who transfer more than 30 hours to UNC are eligible to take an additional ninth or 10th semester at the University. This is sometimes useful and necessary in order for transfer students to complete the business prerequisites and/or business degree.

Transfer students should know that admission to the business school is extremely competitive. We admit 50 percent of our applicants each year. Students should review the eligibility requirements and class profile at the undergraduate business admissions section of the Kenan–Flagler Web site.

¹ Recommended to be taken within the first two semesters of the program

² BUSI 411 must be taken prior to BUSI 412; BUSI 412 must be taken in last 2 semesters.

³ An area core course, with an earned grade of at least a C (not C-), is a prerequisite course for any elective course in that area (e.g., BUSI 406 is a prerequisite for BUSI 501). Other restrictions may apply to certain business courses.

Emphasis Areas

Business majors are provided with the opportunity to add an optional area of emphasis to their general management degree. Areas of emphasis generally consist of a minimum of nine credit hours of elective courses. All course information for the areas of interest can be found in the KF intranet. AOE's do not show on your transcript or diploma, they are just notations on your resume.

Transfer of Business Course Credits from Other Institutions

Without regard to a student's prospective academic major or minor at UNC–Chapel Hill, the UNC Kenan–Flagler Business School will consider for transfer credit business administration courses that meet each of the following six criteria. No exceptions are made.

1. For upper-level courses (equivalent to those numbered 400–699 in the Kenan–Flagler undergraduate curriculum), the course was completed at
 - a. an institution accredited by AACSB International, or
 - b. a constituent four-year institution of the University of North Carolina, or
 - c. an international partner institution of Kenan–Flagler's undergraduate business program.
2. The final course grade earned was at least C (not C-) as verified by an official transcript. Courses taken Pass/Fail are ineligible.
3. A comparable course is available in the Kenan–Flagler undergraduate curriculum.
4. The course is not approved for credit in other UNC–Chapel Hill departments (i.e., no double credits).
5. The student completed the course within the past three academic years.
6. The substantive coverage of material constitutes no less than 75 percent of coverage in the comparable Kenan–Flagler course, and there is sufficient indication of individual student evaluation (i.e., no fewer than two major examinations, including a final examination).

For students who wish to transfer to UNC–Chapel Hill, pre-approval of such courses is recommended. Requests for validation of course credits earned at another institution must be made no later than the end of the first semester of enrollment at UNC–Chapel Hill following completion of the course. The business school does not award transfer credits in excess of three upper-level courses.

For business majors who earn admission to UNC Kenan–Flagler Business School, no more than three upper-level courses taken at another institution may be applied to the undergraduate business major curriculum unless earned as part of a preapproved Kenan–Flagler overseas study program.

All business minor courses must be completed at UNC Kenan–Flagler, except for BUSI 102 and if the student is studying abroad through a Kenan–Flagler program.

To request review and validation of eligible courses, students should submit a Transfer Credit Request Form through Connect Carolina. A copy of the course syllabus must be included for all courses being evaluated. The syllabus must include the title and edition of textbook(s) as well as list explicitly the course content. If the syllabus lists only chapters covered, without a description of the chapter content, a copy of the textbook's table of contents must be included.

Special Opportunities in the Kenan–Flagler Business School

Honors in Business

The Kenan–Flagler Business School honors thesis offers motivated undergraduate business students the opportunity to work closely with an individual faculty member on a specialized research topic of the student's choice during the senior year. Undergraduate business majors with a 3.3 cumulative graduate point average and a 3.5 grade point average in business courses are invited to be considered for the opportunity to participate in this two-course program (BUSI 691H and BUSI 692H).

In the first semester (BUSI 691H), students become familiar with the mechanics, methodologies, and recent literature on topics of major interest. Each student formulates an honors thesis proposal and initiates work on the project. During the second semester (BUSI 692H), the thesis work is conducted under the supervision of a faculty advisor with expertise in the general topic's area of research.

Students who successfully complete the second-semester course (BUSI 692H) will submit to an oral examination on the thesis. Upon successful completion of the program, the student receives the bachelor of science degree with honors or highest honors, as determined by the student's committee.

Career Services

The Undergraduate Business program provides career development resources and services tailored to business students, such as specialized training and professional development activities, targeted networking opportunities, function- and industry-specific career clubs and student organizations, and focused career coaching and programming. Undergraduate business students are expected to maintain an up-to-date profile on Handshake through University Career Services, which is the primary resource for all UNC–Chapel Hill students for job/internship postings, résumé referral, on-campus interviewing, and career fairs.

As the job market remains highly competitive, the Undergraduate Business program strongly encourages business students to undertake internships and other experiential learning opportunities when possible. These hands-on experiences can be a valuable part of a student's career development. Also, demonstrated leadership experience along with community service and a global learning experience are additional desirable factors that many employers seek in candidates. The Undergraduate Business Career Services team assists students with connecting the dots of their college experience to launch careers with positive impact.

Leadership Development

The Kenan–Flagler Leadership Initiative encourages undergraduate business students to develop the personal and professional skills needed to become exceptional leaders. This is accomplished by integrating leadership programming throughout the entire curriculum and in extracurricular situations. By incorporating leadership principles and practice, coupled with feedback and reflection, Kenan–Flagler aims to develop students into business professionals who can lead in their organization and positively influence their community. Examples of undergraduate business leadership development programming include self-assessment workshops, managerial simulations, executive coaching, student consulting projects, and student leader development.

STAR Program

Kenan–Flagler's Student Teams Achieving Results (STAR) program fields teams of top M.B.A.s and undergraduate business students to build comprehensive and actionable strategies for eligible corporations and not-for-profits. STAR teams begin the project by developing a scope of work with the client and signing a confidentiality agreement. Over the life of the project, teams typically analyze the market, assess the competitive situation, develop a strategy, and define an action plan that covers financials, risk assessment, and implementation. STAR teams are guided throughout the course by a course professor, a team-specific faculty advisor, and client executives. Opportunities in STAR–Domestic and Global Business Projects exist.

Student Involvement

Students in the undergraduate business program are encouraged to join a variety of student organizations during their time at Kenan–Flagler. These organizations include career-focused clubs (Accounting Club, Undergraduate Consulting Club, UNC Finance Society, Real Estate Club, Marketing Club, Operations Clubs, and others), affinity clubs (including Carolina Women in Business, Pride@KFBS, and Minority Business Student Alliance), and interest groups (including Sustainability Club, Undergraduate Healthcare Club and Family Business Club). All these organizations give students valuable professional networking opportunities with recruiters and alumni, community service activities, and a chance to connect socially with peers. In addition to student organizations, the program has a number of wellness-focused initiatives and programming to support student growth and well-being. Visit the undergraduate business program Web site for the most up-to-date information on undergraduate business organizations and wellness initiatives.

Global Programs

Kenan–Flagler undergraduate global programs are consistently highly ranked by students for the quality and variety of programs available. The Undergraduate Business program provides a portfolio of over 40 different programs in Europe, Africa, Asia, and Oceania that offer students the opportunity to earn business core and/or elective credit. Business students can develop their global perspective through participation in business semester abroad, faculty led global immersion electives (GIEs), summer study abroad, or international internships.

GLOBE® (Global Learning Opportunities in Business Education) is UNC Kenan–Flagler's flagship global program. This study abroad program is a partnership with Chinese University of Hong Kong, Copenhagen Business School, and the University of North Carolina. Every year, approximately 18 students from each school form a cohort and study together for a semester at each school. The GLOBE® program customizes the curriculum based on unique strengths of each region. Students take courses in subjects such as global leadership and organizational behavior, business and politics in the U.S., marketing in China, finance and financial institutions, and a capstone consulting project in the final semester of the program. These courses are GLOBE specific courses taken as a cohort. GLOBE students take other business courses during the semester to round out a full course load.

Over half a million dollars is available in scholarship funds for global programs for Kenan–Flagler students. Additionally, the Phillips Ambassador program offers $5,000 scholarships exclusively for Kenan–Flagler.

Undergraduate Awards

Each spring, Kenan–Flagler students, staff, and faculty nominate graduating seniors to be considered for academic excellence and core value awards. The core values of excellence, integrity, teamwork, community and leadership underpin everything the school stands for and the students who are given these awards have embodied these qualities throughout their time in Kenan–Flagler. The chosen students are recognized by their peers during the school's commencement ceremony. Beta Gamma Sigma, the national business honorary society, offers top-performing students the chance to be inducted into that organization each spring.

Undergraduate Business Symposium

Since its inception in 1983, the Undergraduate Business Symposium continues to be the flagship career event for the Undergraduate Business program and an annual highlight for the UNC Kenan–Flagler community. It is the largest and longest-running student-organized event of its kind. Each year the event brings together more than 425 undergraduates and 125 company representatives from a diverse set of industries and organizations from across the country. The Undergraduate Business Symposium provides students with the opportunity to learn about a variety of industries and organizations, the chance to network and interact with business representatives and UNC Kenan–Flagler faculty, obtain insights into the dynamic business landscape, and the opportunity to showcase their analytical, communication, and problem-solving skills.

Introduction

The UNC Adams School of Dentistry is proud to be one of few schools in the United States to offer curricula in dental hygiene, doctor of dental surgery, post-D.D.S., advanced dental education, and Ph.D. programs all under one roof. The various programs span many disciplines and offer multiple career paths. Whatever program you select, you can feel confident you are receiving a top-tier education from some of the nation's leading dental educators.

The school is committed to excellence in dental education at all levels. Whether applicants want to apply to the school's dental hygiene program, pursue their D.D.S. degree, or enroll in the six-year oral and maxillofacial surgery residency program, the school actively invests in providing the best education possible to its students. The academic environment fosters the pursuit of knowledge in the basic, behavioral, and clinical sciences. Independent thinking and lifelong learning are encouraged through degree-granting and continuing education programs. A high standard of professional and personal ethics, as well as technical excellence, are integral to the learning experience.

The school thoroughly prepares each of its graduates for their career and sets them on a path to success. Whether students plan to enter the general practice of dentistry, the dental specialties, dental allied health fields, research, or teaching, the UNC Adams School of Dentistry prides itself in producing some of the country's best clinicians, researchers, and academicians.

Programs

Doctor of Dental Surgery (D.D.S.) Program

The UNC Adams School of Dentistry offers a four-year Doctor of Dental Surgery (D.D.S.) program to produce dental practitioners who are qualified to enter general dental practice, dental research, teaching, public service or postdoctoral programs, including graduate programs in various dental specialties. The school is interested in recruiting students who are willing to accept professional responsibilities in their communities; to participate in professional activities; and to pursue a lifetime of learning to enhance their delivery of effective patient care and service to the profession and the public. There is not sufficient space in the dental school to admit all students who meet the quantitative and qualitative standards. For this reason, the quality of the student's undergraduate work is of great importance in selection for admissions, as well as motivation to pursue a career in dentistry.

Dental Hygiene Programs

The dental hygiene programs are designed to educate and prepare dental hygienists for careers in a diverse and changing health care environment. Being a part of the UNC Adams School of Dentistry enables students to have a variety of experiences in clinical patient care, community dental health, and dental specialties, including geriatric dentistry, pediatric dentistry, periodontics, and research. The emphasis is on creating well-rounded dental hygiene health care professionals who will treat a variety of patients and provide leadership in the profession.

The school offers both undergraduate and graduate level education for dental hygiene students. The undergraduate program prepares students to become registered dental hygienists, while the graduate program focuses on allowing already-registered dental hygienists to begin careers in academia.

Graduate and Advanced Dental Education

The UNC Adams School of Dentistry is proud to offer 15 advanced dental education and graduate programs for prospective students to consider, in addition to observer externship opportunities. These programs are designed to further the knowledge of students and to provide specialty training in various fields of dentistry.

More information about the dental hygiene (<https://www.dentistry.unc.edu/academicprograms/dh/>) and graduate and advanced dental education programs (<https://www.dentistry.unc.edu/academicprograms/ade/>) can be found in this catalog and on the school's Web site (<http://www.dentistry.unc.edu>).

Facilities

The UNC Adams School of Dentistry is currently the largest dental school facility in the nation. The school has grown to include several buildings, located within a dynamic health science campus. Among the school's buildings are Tarrson Hall, a state-of-the-art clinical teaching facility, and Brauer Hall, which includes patient simulation laboratories with the latest in dental equipment. The majority of the school's research takes place in Koury Oral Health Sciences, completed in April 2012. The 216,000-square-foot facility houses a variety of classroom and lecture spaces, as well as cutting-edge research laboratories, all of which encourage collaborative research and learning experiences. The school is equipped with state-of-the-art classrooms, case study rooms, laboratory (simulation and dental material labs), clinical facilities, and Kirkland Auditorium. The school also features an atrium with a media wall, social seating, and dining areas with a food court.

Information Relevant to the UNC Adams School of Dentistry Experience

Immunization Requirements

The State of North Carolina immunization requirements and the UNC Adams School of Dentistry immunization requirements for dental hygiene and doctor of dental surgery students are listed below. Documentation of all is required with application.

State Requirements

- Three DTP (diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis), Td (tetanus, diphtheria), or Tdap (tetanus, diphtheria, pertussis) doses. (This fulfills the primary series requirement.)
 - One Tdap booster after completion of the primary series that did not include a Tdap, and then a Td vaccine every 10 years thereafter.
- Three polio (unless greater than 18 years of age).
- Two measles (rubeola), two mumps, one rubella (two MMR doses meet this requirement) or positive titers.
- Hepatitis B series (not required for individuals born before July 1, 1994). See school requirements below.

UNC Adams School of Dentistry Requirements

- Varicella vaccination series (two shots) or a positive titer.
- Hepatitis B vaccination series (three shots) and a positive hepatitis B antibody (HBsAb) quantitative titer. (Please make sure your physician does not order a qualitative titer.) Ideally, a titer is recommended one to two months after completion of the series for proof of immunity to hepatitis B but can be checked at a later date.
- Two-step tuberculosis skin test (TST) or a TB blood test (IGRA). DDS and DH students report to Campus Health and follow the testing procedures required. Advanced Dental Education students report to Employee Health and follow the testing procedures required.

The matriculating student is required to submit an official certificate of immunizations that is signed by an authorized healthcare provider. Immunization documentation is to be submitted to both to UNC Campus Health Services (CHS) and to the UNC Adams School of Dentistry through ConnectCarolina by a published and specified date. CHS will notify students who are not in compliance with the state immunization requirements noted above. Individuals who have not met the state immunization requirements after 30 calendar days from the first date of attendance will be administratively withdrawn from the University by the University Registrar. See the UNC Campus Health Web site (<http://campushealth.unc.edu/services/immunizations/health-science-students-immunizations/>).

Students with deficiencies in the additional immunization requirements of the school will be notified of the deficiencies by the UNC school's director of clinical compliance. The school will work with students to meet these additional requirements. The failure to comply with the school's requirements after consultation with the director of clinical compliance and the agreed-upon resolution schedule will result in administrative withdrawal from the school.

Additional Requirements

Annually:

- Influenza vaccine not earlier than September 1.
- Tuberculosis screening.
- Verification of health insurance. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill requires all eligible students to have health insurance (see the UNC Campus Health Student Health Insurance Web site (<http://campushealth.unc.edu/charges-insurance/mandatory-student-health-insurance/>)). Students are required to waive with existing creditable insurance each semester or they will automatically be enrolled in the UNC System Student Health Insurance Plan, which is administered by Student Blue/BCBS of NC. To waive or enroll/renew, visit the Student Blue Web site (<http://www.bcbsnc.com/unc/>).

Biennially:

- American Heart Association certified CPR for Healthcare Providers training. Documentation of current certification is required of the matriculating student. (Note that the school requires in-person CPR skills assessment.)

Infection Control: One of the consequences of the delivery of health care is the possibility of contracting an infectious disease such as tuberculosis, hepatitis, HIV, or herpes. To minimize this risk, the school has adopted an Infection Control Policy that requires the wearing of a clinical overgarment, disposable gloves, a mask, and protective eye covering when oral examinations and dental procedures are being performed.

Infectious Disease Status

Students engaged in patient care activities are required to know their tuberculosis and hepatitis B (HBV) status, and are encouraged to learn their hepatitis C (HCV) and HIV status. State regulations require health care workers, including students, who perform surgical or dental procedures or who assist in such procedures in a way that may result in an exposure of patients to their blood, and who know themselves to be infected with HIV or HBV, to report their status to the state health director. See UNC's policy (<http://ehs.unc.edu/manuals/ehsmanual/chapter-6/occupational-health-requirements/>).

Late Registration

University regulations require students who do not register before the first day of classes in any semester or summer session to pay an additional fee of $20 for delayed registration. Any student who believes that she/he can show sufficient justification for the delay may petition for a refund by completing a form, which can be found online (<https://registrar.unc.edu/guide/registration-policies/late-fee-refund-petition/>), and outlining the reason for delay. This form must bear the approval of the dean of the UNC Adams School of Dentistry.

Awarding of Degrees and Certificates

To be awarded a degree or certificate, students must satisfactorily complete all requirements of their respective program.

Class and Clinic Attendance

Regular class and clinic attendance is a student obligation. No right or privilege exists that permits a student to be absent from any given number of sessions.

Patient Care Responsibilities

Students are granted the privilege of participating in the patient care system of the UNC Adams School of Dentistry and are expected to provide care consistent with our patient-centered philosophy. Patients are a central part of the health care team and are involved in the planning of their care. It is the responsibility of the dental student to provide patients with the information needed so they make informed decisions about their treatment. The dental student has the responsibility to provide high-quality, evidence-based care to all their assigned patients in a timely manner and to uphold the ethical responsibilities as outlined in the school's Code of Professional Conduct and the Code of Clinical Behavior.

Current academic policies and procedures can be found online (https://unc.policystat.com/policy_search/category/?terms=54058&search_query). However, policies are subject to change at any time. The manual provides guidelines for governing the School of Dentistry educational programs and advises students, faculty, and staff of academic policies and procedures related to the respective programs.

Scott S. De Rossi, Dean and Professor

The UNC Adams School of Dentistry offers a four-year Doctor of Dental Surgery (D.D.S.) program to produce dental practitioners who are qualified to enter general dental practice, dental research, teaching, public service, or postdoctoral programs, including graduate programs in various dental specialties. The school is interested in recruiting students who are willing to accept professional responsibilities in their communities; to participate in professional activities; and to pursue a lifetime of learning to enhance their delivery of effective patient care and service to the profession and the public. There is not sufficient space in the dental school to admit all students who meet the quantitative and qualitative standards. For this reason, the quality of the student's undergraduate work is of great importance in selection for admission, as well as motivation to pursue a career in dentistry.

Admissions

The D.D.S. admissions process at the University of North Carolina Adams School of Dentistry is dedicated to selecting and enrolling students to study dentistry and to provide qualified dental practitioners to the State of North Carolina and beyond. The process does not discriminate against candidates based on race, ethnicity, creed, color, socioeconomic levels, political persuasion, or sexual preference.

Admission Requirements

Students preparing for the study of dentistry are encouraged to complete a residential four-year curriculum leading to the B.A. or B.S. degree. Students not pursuing a degree must complete a predoctoral program of at least three years of accredited college courses (96 semester hours or 144 quarter hours). The UNC Adams School of Dentistry will accept a maximum of 64 semester hours of credit from an accredited community, technical, or online college or university. Any community, technical, or online college or university courses submitted for credit must be acceptable to the UNC Office of Undergraduate Admissions. However, students who have 64 hours of credit from a community, technical, or online college or university must complete all additional course work at an accredited residential four-year college or university. See the course descriptions in the prerequisites table below by clicking on the course abbreviations (e.g., BIOL 101). The prerequisite courses (required predoctoral courses) must be completed prior to admission (preferably on-site at a residential four-year college or university). Undergraduate students attending a school other than UNC–Chapel Hill should use this catalog as a guide for completing the prerequisite courses. Required courses not completed at an accredited four-year institution must be transferable to UNC–Chapel Hill as equivalent courses.

Prerequisites

Code	Title	Hours
Biology
The basic requirement is eight semester hours (two courses, laboratories required, one laboratory must include dissection, one of which must be human anatomy or vertebrate zoology with a laboratory).		8
BIOL 101 & 101L	Principles of Biology and Introductory Biology Laboratory ^H
BIOL 252	Fundamentals of Human Anatomy and Physiology ^{1, H}

BIOL 474 & 474L	Evolution of Vertebrate Life and Vertebrate Structure and Evolution Laboratory 1, H
--------------------	---

Chemistry

The basic requirements are eight semester hours of general chemistry (two courses, laboratory required), six semester hours of organic chemistry (two courses, laboratory not required) and three semester hours of biochemistry (laboratory not required). 17

CHEM 101 & 101L	General Descriptive Chemistry I and Quantitative Chemistry Laboratory I
CHEM 102 & 102L	General Descriptive Chemistry II and Quantitative Chemistry Laboratory II ^H
CHEM 261	Introduction to Organic Chemistry I ^H
CHEM 262	Introduction to Organic Chemistry II ^H
CHEM 430	Introduction to Biological Chemistry ^H

Physics

The requirement is two college-level courses of non-calculus-based physics that will cover basic principles of physics relevant to living things. 8

PHYS 114	General Physics I: For Students of the Life Sciences ²
PHYS 115	General Physics II: For Students of the Life Sciences ²

English

The basic requirement is six semester hours (or courses required for a degree from an accredited college or university). 6

Total Hours 39

^H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

¹ Take either BIOL 252 or both BIOL 474 and BIOL 474L.

² Although the two basic physics courses at UNC are calculus-based, non-calculus based courses are also acceptable as prerequisites.

Additional Preparation

Prospective dental students should consider the following recommendations when preparing for the dental school admissions process.

Both the development of a strong preclinical science knowledge and a broad exploration of the liberal arts are valued in our applicants. Courses in art, biostatistics, business, communication/public speaking, compositional writing, computer science, English, ethics, foreign languages, immunology, literature, microbiology, molecular biology, music, philosophy, political science, psychology, sociology, and/or statistics should be considered.

Experiences in functioning as part of a team are critical in the health professions. Prospective students should demonstrate the ability to function as both a leader and a productive team member.

We want our students to be able to work with diverse populations. Experiences working in or with diverse groups of people is suggested.

Exploration of dentistry through shadowing is important in informing perspective and confirming interest in the profession. While no minimum number of shadowing hours is required, we strongly recommend that applicants thoroughly explore the dental field with a strong emphasis on the practice of general dentistry. Multiple, long-term experiences are more highly valued than short-term interactions. Local and global experiences are equally valued; the significance of an experience is more important than the location.

Dental Admission Test

All students must complete the Dental Admission Test (DAT), conducted by the American Dental Association, before being considered for admission to the UNC Adams School of Dentistry. This test is administered by Prometric Inc. (<http://www.prometric.com>) across the country and should be taken in the spring or fall of the year prior to the desired admission date. Applying at the end of the spring semester is encouraged to facilitate early consideration for an interview by the admissions committee. DAT test scores must be valid and may not be more than three years old. During the admissions cycle (June through October), applicants may submit unofficial DAT scores by fax, by email or in person because of the delay associated with reporting official scores to the Office of Admissions and Student Life.

Purpose of the Test

The Dental Admission Testing Program is designed to measure general academic ability, comprehension of scientific information, and perceptual ability. The Dental Admission Testing Program does not endorse any test preparation courses and has no data on the content or efficacy of test preparation courses designed to prepare examinees to take the DAT. The Department of Testing Services urges individuals considering participation in test preparation courses to review the course materials carefully to ensure that they reflect the current content of the DAT. While all dental schools require examinees to participate in the Dental Admission Testing Program, test results are only one factor considered in evaluating admission potential. For more information or to contact the ADA Department of Testing Services, which administers the test, visit the American Dental Association's Dental Admission Test Web site (<http://www.ada.org/dat.aspx>).

Personal Qualifications

While a high level of scholarship and manual dexterity are important criteria for predicting satisfactory achievement in dental school, the personal qualifications of applicants are also critically important. Good moral character is an important prerequisite for entering the dental profession. No school wants to train prospective dentists who lack either the highest ethical standards or a sense of social responsibility.

Selection Factors

The UNC Adams School of Dentistry is committed to maintaining its diverse student body. To that end, individuals from a wide range of backgrounds who have had different experiences and have the potential to contribute to dentistry or dental practice are considered by the admissions committee. The school also strives to admit individuals who will benefit from and contribute to the educational environment and the dental profession and be prepared at graduation to enter a wide range of careers. The school expects applicants to demonstrate the following skills, experiences, or potentials:

- First, an applicant must possess satisfactory academic abilities as evidenced by having successfully completed the prerequisite (required pre dental) courses and the Dental Admission Test at an acceptable level of performance.
- Second, an applicant should possess psychomotor ability sufficient to perform the necessary technical skills required in dentistry. These skills are evidenced by an acceptable performance on the perceptual ability exam of the Dental Admission Test and by participation in hobbies and other experiences that require psychomotor activity outside of the normal college curriculum.

- Third, an applicant must demonstrate a service commitment and a desire to help others. This is evidenced by participation in extracurricular and volunteer activities that require interaction with others. A caring attitude is considered central to the practice of dentistry, and the school expects an applicant to demonstrate such an attitude. A pre dental curriculum designed to expand social awareness and extracurricular experiences demonstrating social sensitivity will be important factors in an application for admission.

- Fourth, an applicant should possess the potential to be a self-directed, lifelong learner. By definition, the dental profession requires a practitioner to learn continually in order to provide the highest level of patient care. This attitude is evidenced by appropriate self-learning activities and other experiences that indicate a high level of independent, intellectual curiosity.

- Fifth, an applicant must demonstrate knowledge of the dental profession. Such knowledge can be obtained from talking with and observing dentists and reading appropriate dental literature. The dental school expects applicants to have a firm grasp of what the dental profession is and what important issues are facing the profession.

Selected applicants are invited to the school for a series of personal interviews with faculty and student members of the admissions committee. An evaluation from the interview combined with the applicant's academic record, engagement in various activities, and performance on the Dental Admission Test are the basis for the applicant's consideration for acceptance. Applicants are encouraged to submit any material relating to activities or experiences beneficial to their being considered for admission.

Application Process and Admissions

All inquiries regarding admission and applications should be directed to the Admissions Assistant by calling (919) 537-3348 or by writing to the Office of Admissions and Student Life, UNC Adams School of Dentistry, The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Koury Oral Health Sciences, Suite 3501, 385 S Columbia St., Chapel Hill, N.C., 27599-7450. The school participates in the Associated American Dental Schools Application Service (AADSAS), which is sponsored by the American Dental Education Association (ADEA). Applicants are required to file an AADSAS application (<https://aadsas.liaisoncas.com/applicant-ux/#/> login) as well as the School of Dentistry supplemental application.

Supplemental application materials include the supplemental application itself, a nonrefundable application fee, DAT scores, a 2' x 2' passport photo, and the North Carolina residency application for in-state applicants (<https://ncresidency.cfnc.org/residencyInfo/>). The AADSAS application deadline is Oct. 1. The D.D.S. supplemental application deadline is Oct. 1 for admission to the following year's class. Applicants are encouraged to file their application several months prior to that date. An email will be sent once ADEA AADSAS has released your application to us.

Deposit

An applicant accepted for admission must deposit $500 with the University Cashier within 30 days or the number of days designated by the admissions committee. When the applicant registers, the deposit will be credited to the applicant's account. If the applicant does not register, the deposit will be forfeited. There is no refund of a deposit. Acceptance to the D.D.S. program is provisional based on satisfactory completion of further requirements, including, but not limited to, background checks.

Personal Interview

A personal interview with faculty and student members of the admissions committee is required. This interview is by invitation only and is scheduled after the application has been reviewed. A representative from the Office of Admissions and Student Life is pleased to consult with prospective students to provide guidance in the admissions process; however, these meetings must occur outside of the active application cycle for which the prospective student is applying.

Internationally Trained Dentists: Advanced Standing Program (ASPID)

Approved in February 2018, the UNC Adams School of Dentistry offers the Advanced Standing Program for International Dentists (ASPID) as an entry for graduates of foreign dental schools, except Canadian graduates, who seek to receive additional training and practice dentistry in the United States.

The first cohort of ASPID students started in January 2020, with a six-month intensive track leading to integration of the students into the third-year predoctoral D.D.S. class during the fall semester of that same year. During the first six months, ASPID students will enroll in didactic, preclinical and laboratory courses that will prepare them to be fully integrated into the third year of our predoctoral dental education.

The students will participate in specially-designed preclinical laboratory and didactic courses to review key topics relative to the practice of oral health care. To apply, applicants are required to successfully pass both National Dental Boards Part I and II or the new Integrated National Board Dental Exam, the standard licensure tests for practice in the United States. Transcripts from international schools must be evaluated by Educational Credential Evaluators (ECE).

Admission Requirements for Transfer Students

Current students at other U.S.- or Canada-accredited dental schools wishing to transfer will be considered if space is available in the class and completed application forms have been submitted, including acceptable scores on the DAT and Part I of the National Board Dental Examination. Applications for advanced standing must be requested from the school.

Several other factors will also be considered: prior academic record, compatibility of the curricula of the two schools, reason for transfer and residency status. Transfers may be made into the second-year class or third-year class. At least two years must be completed at the school to receive a D.D.S. degree from this institution. These students should understand that transferring from one dental school to another often requires an additional year of dental education due to the incongruity of the curricula at the respective schools.

Requirements

The predoctoral curriculum is current as of the 2020–2021 academic year but it remains subject to change.

The primary intent of the dental school curriculum is to produce dental practitioners who: (1) are qualified to enter general dental practice, postdoctoral programs including graduate programs in various dental specialties or dental research, teaching or public service; and (2) can accept professional responsibilities in their communities, participate in professional activities and pursue a lifetime of learning that enhances their delivery of effective services to patients and the profession.

The curriculum is under continuous review and is subject to change at any time upon approval of the faculty and the dean. The faculty reserves the right to make changes in curriculum and in regulations when, in its judgment, such changes are in the best interest of the students, patients and the school. Ordinarily, students may expect to receive a degree by meeting the requirements of the curriculum as specified in the policy manual when they enter the school or in any subsequent catalog or policy manual published while they are students. The Adams School of Dentistry is not obligated to offer a course listed in the catalog in any particular year.

Course Exemption: On a limited basis, students may be exempted from courses in the D.D.S. curriculum if they have completed such courses previously. Requests for exemption are handled on an individual basis through the Office of Admissions and Student Life and the appropriate course director.

First Year Courses

The first year of the D.D.S. curriculum includes courses in the core basic sciences (gross anatomy, histology, biochemistry, physiology, microbiology and pathology), introductory dental sciences (cariology, dental anatomy, dental materials science, conservative operative dentistry, epidemiology, evidence-based dentistry, periodontology, oral diagnosis and radiology, growth and development, and occlusion) and oral biology. In addition to this course work, students participate in Introduction to Patient Management. Also included are seminars on interviewing skills, ethics, rotation through patient care services and the delivery of preventive care. These courses introduce the student to the relationship between basic science and clinical practice as well as the relationship between the health care provider and the patient. Basic social science concepts are integrated throughout the curriculum.

Third Year Courses

In the third year, students spend a significant amount of time providing comprehensive care for their patients in mentored group practices. A series of intermediate dental science courses are offered. Between their third and fourth years, students are required to complete extramural rotations at clinical sites located throughout the state and beyond, enabling them to participate in the delivery of dental care in a variety of settings. Students spend eight weeks at off-campus sites: four at a community or public health dental clinic and four at a non-private hospital dental clinic (when available).

Fourth Year Courses

Fourth-year students assume responsibility for patients who require more advanced dental care in mentored, general dentistry group practices. Advanced dental science courses, updates and practice-related materials are offered during the fourth year. Students participate in a critical thinking course that emphasizes the application of evidence-based dentistry in clinical practice. In addition, those students who are deemed eligible may participate in optional specialty experiences that include patient care, additional extramural rotations and research experiences.

Opportunities

Spurgeon Student Government

The Spurgeon Student Government exists as the governing body for all students of the UNC Adams School of Dentistry. Named after the late Dr. J.S. Spurgeon, a prominent and outstanding dentist from Hillsborough, N.C., the organization holds monthly meetings in which elected representatives from each class of dental, advanced education and dental hygiene students discuss and plan the functions of student government. Several projects are carried out each year including social, academic and scholastic events. The school is host to many student-led organizations and programs allowing students opportunities to become involved in the community, in research and in school programs. For a listing of these organizations and specific details about these organizations, please visit our Web site (<http://www.dentistry.unc.edu/experience/unclife/orgs/>).

Student Membership in the Dental Community

In addition to serving in various class and student organization officer positions, students are active members of the dental school community. They have membership on most standing dental school committees. There are other ways for students to be involved, as the school supports many student organizations. These organizations allow students to be involved with dentistry at the local and national levels. Please visit the Web site (<http://www.dentistry.unc.edu/experience/unclife/orgs/>) for a full list of our student organizations.

International Opportunities

As 21st century oral health practitioners, dental students, whether pursuing a career in clinical practice or academia, must be fully cognizant of how oral health functions in a global community. The school provides many opportunities for students to engage with peoples and cultures in other countries, including yearly service and academic projects in Brazil, China, India, Malawi, Moldova, Mexico, Nepal, Nicaragua, Philippines, and Uganda. In addition, the school maintains exchange agreements with Ajman University at UAE, Moldova's Nicolae Testemitanu State University of Medicine and Pharmacy, National University of Singapore, Qingdao Dental Hospital and Peking University in China, University of São Paulo and Federal University of Minas Gerais in Brazil, Yenepoya University and JSS University in India, Makerere University in Uganda, and King's College London in England. Students who take part in global service and outreach learn how dentistry and health care services are administered in other nations as well as the health care needs of their populations and possible sustainable projects for the hosting communities. This global and cultural experience enlightens their worldview and broadens their understanding of health care systems locally and globally.

Research Experience

The UNC Adams School of Dentistry's faculty, students, research fellows, and visiting scholars generate new knowledge in the basic, applied, and clinical sciences, as well as in areas of health services, health policy, and health education. The overarching emphasis is on the promotion of oral health and function. Discoveries in these areas not only offer the potential to improve oral health, but also overall health.

The student research program supports and encourages participation in active research, as well as participation in student research leadership positions at the local and national levels. A student researcher engages in experiences working with an active research team in the laboratory, in the clinic, or with research in epidemiology, health services, health outcomes, community outreach, or dental education. There are several programs within the school that foster research participation by pre-doctoral students. These programs include research fellowships, the Student Research Group, and Dentistry Research Day.

Information Relevant to the UNC Adams School of Dentistry Experience

Immunization Requirements

The State of North Carolina immunization requirements and the UNC Adams School of Dentistry immunization requirements for dental hygiene and doctor of dental surgery students are listed below. Documentation of all is required with application.

State Requirements

- Three DTP (diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis), Td (tetanus, diphtheria), or Tdap (tetanus, diphtheria, pertussis) doses. (This fulfills the primary series requirement.)
 - One Tdap booster after completion of the primary series that did not include a Tdap, and then a Td vaccine every 10 years thereafter.
- Three polio (unless greater than 18 years of age).
- Two measles (rubeola), two mumps, one rubella (two MMR doses meet this requirement) or positive titers.
- Hepatitis B series (not required for individuals born before July 1, 1994). See school requirements below.

UNC Adams School of Dentistry Requirements

- Varicella vaccination series (two shots) or a positive titer.
- Hepatitis B vaccination series (three shots) and a positive hepatitis B antibody (HBsAb) quantitative titer. (Please make sure your physician does not order a qualitative titer.) Ideally, a titer is recommended one to two months after completion of the series for proof of immunity to hepatitis B but can be checked at a later date.
- Two-step tuberculosis skin test (TST) or a TB blood test (IGRA). DDS and DH students report to Campus Health and follow the testing procedures required. Advanced Dental Education students report to Employee Health and follow the testing procedures required.

The matriculating student is required to submit an official certificate of immunizations that is signed by an authorized healthcare provider. Immunization documentation is to be submitted to both to UNC Campus Health Services (CHS) and to the UNC Adams School of Dentistry through ConnectCarolina by a published and specified date. CHS will notify students who are not in compliance with the state immunization requirements noted above. Individuals who have not met the state immunization requirements after 30 calendar days from the first date of attendance will be administratively withdrawn from the University by the University Registrar. See the UNC Campus Health Web site (<http://campushealth.unc.edu/services/immunizations/health-science-students-immunizations/>).

Students with deficiencies in the additional immunization requirements of the school will be notified of the deficiencies by the UNC school's director of clinical compliance. The school will work with students to meet these additional requirements. The failure to comply with the school's requirements after consultation with the director of clinical compliance and the agreed-upon resolution schedule will result in administrative withdrawal from the school.

Additional Requirements

Annually:

- Influenza vaccine not earlier than September 1.
- Tuberculosis screening.
- Verification of health insurance. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill requires all eligible students to have health insurance (see the UNC Campus Health Student Health Insurance Web site (<http://campushealth.unc.edu/charges-insurance/mandatory-student-health-insurance/>)). Students are required to waive with existing creditable insurance each semester or they will automatically be enrolled in the UNC System Student Health Insurance Plan, which is administered by Student Blue/BCBS of NC. To waive or enroll/renew, visit the Student Blue Web site (<http://www.bcbsnc.com/unc/>).

Biennially:

- American Heart Association certified CPR for Healthcare Providers training. Documentation of current certification is required of the matriculating student. (Note that the school requires in-person CPR skills assessment.)

Infection Control: One of the consequences of the delivery of health care is the possibility of contracting an infectious disease such as tuberculosis, hepatitis, HIV, or herpes. To minimize this risk, the school has adopted an Infection Control Policy that requires the wearing of a clinical overgarment, disposable gloves, a mask, and protective eye covering when oral examinations and dental procedures are being performed.

Infectious Disease Status

Students engaged in patient care activities are required to know their tuberculosis and hepatitis B (HBV) status, and are encouraged to learn their hepatitis C (HCV) and HIV status. State regulations require health care workers, including students, who perform surgical or dental procedures or who assist in such procedures in a way that may result in an exposure of patients to their blood, and who know themselves to be infected with HIV or HBV, to report their status to the state health director. See UNC's policy (<http://ehs.unc.edu/manuals/ehsmanual/chapter-6/occupational-health-requirements/>).

Late Registration

University regulations require students who do not register before the first day of classes in any semester or summer session to pay an additional fee of $20 for delayed registration. Any student who believes that she/he can show sufficient justification for the delay may petition for a refund by completing a form, which can be found online (<https://registrar.unc.edu/guide/registration-policies/late-fee-refund-petition/>), and outlining the reason for delay. This form must bear the approval of the dean of the UNC Adams School of Dentistry.

Awarding of Degrees and Certificates

To be awarded a degree or certificate, students must satisfactorily complete all requirements of their respective program.

Class and Clinic Attendance

Regular class and clinic attendance is a student obligation. No right or privilege exists that permits a student to be absent from any given number of sessions.

Patient Care Responsibilities

Students are granted the privilege of participating in the patient care system of the UNC Adams School of Dentistry and are expected to provide care consistent with our patient-centered philosophy. Patients are a central part of the health care team and are involved in the planning of their care. It is the responsibility of the dental student to provide patients with the information needed so they make informed decisions about their treatment. The dental student has the responsibility to provide high-quality, evidence-based care to all their assigned patients in a timely manner and to uphold the ethical responsibilities as outlined in the school's Code of Professional Conduct and the Code of Clinical Behavior.

Current academic policies and procedures can be found online (https://unc.policystat.com/policy_search/category/?terms=54058&search_query). However, policies are subject to change at any time. The manual provides guidelines for governing the UNC Adams School of Dentistry educational programs and advises students, faculty, and staff of academic policies and procedures related to the respective programs.

The dental hygienist is an educator and motivator as well as a health care provider. As a practicing member of the dental health team, the hygienist is primarily concerned with the maintenance of oral health and the prevention of dental disease. Additionally, dental hygienists may assume professional leadership roles; participate in the development, implementation, and evaluation of community health programs; engage in research activities; or serve as consultants and assume managerial roles in certain types of dental care delivery systems.

Students are subject to the academic requirements in place when they are admitted to the dental hygiene program; consequently, the requirements described in this catalog particularly apply to students admitted to the school during the 2020–2021 academic year.

All course descriptions can be found in ConnectCarolina.

Admission to the Program

Applicants may be admitted for dental hygiene study after completion of the dental hygiene prerequisites, provided they meet requirements of the University. To assure proper planning for admission, applicants should maintain close contact with the program during the application process.

Enrollment is limited, and applicants are accepted on a competitive basis. Admission to the University does not guarantee admission into the dental hygiene program. Selections are based on academic achievement with an emphasis on performance in science courses, character, knowledge of working with the dental team, and a sincere interest in dental hygiene as a professional career. For UNC–Chapel Hill students, application for admission to the program is usually made during the second year of General College study. Interested students should submit an online application, which can be accessed from ConnectCarolina.

For transfer applicants, all prerequisite dental hygiene coursework and General College courses taken at other institutions must be approved for transfer in advance by the Office of Undergraduate Admissions. Official transcripts from all schools attended (including high school) must be submitted.

Three letters of recommendation must be submitted with the application. Two of the letters should be from previous college course directors and one letter should be a character reference. In addition, applicants must shadow in a dental office for a minimum of 20 hours. This requirement may be fulfilled through prior dental assisting experience.

Prior to being admitted and enrolled, all applicants will be required to present evidence of satisfactory completion of prerequisite courses required by the major. Applicants with a previous degree should contact the Office of Undergraduate Admissions to determine fulfillment of General College requirements. For questions about specific admission requirements on the prelicensure and graduate programs in dental hygiene please visit our Web site (<https://www.dentistry.unc.edu/>) or call our office at (919) 537-3474.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the dental hygiene program, students should be able to:

- Possess the skills and knowledge needed to provide optimal dental hygiene patient care while valuing and adhering to the ethical beliefs as stated by the American Dental Hygienists' Association Code of Ethics
- Promote the values of optimal oral health as related to general health and overall wellness to all patients
- Embrace an interdisciplinary role within the health care system and assess, plan, implement, and evaluate oral health care programs and activities for diverse population groups while facilitating access to care and services
- Assess, plan, implement, and evaluate treatment in the promotion of oral and systemic health using an evidence-based approach
- Value the dental hygiene profession through career growth and development and commitment to lifelong learning

Requirements

All baccalaureate-seeking dental hygiene students must fulfill the General Education (p. 120) requirements. In addition to completing ENGL 105, a foreign language through level 3, a quantitative reasoning course (STOR 151 recommended), and a lifetime fitness course, dental hygiene students must fulfill the Approaches requirements and successfully complete at least five Connections courses, including global issues, experiential education, and U.S. diversity. Other specific requirements include the following courses:

Code	Title	Hours
BIOC 107	Introduction to Biochemistry ¹	4
or CHEM 101 & 101L	General Descriptive Chemistry I and Quantitative Chemistry Laboratory I
BIOC 108	Introduction to Biochemistry	4

Additional Information for the Dental Hygiene Programs

Upon provisional acceptance into the dental hygiene program, all students must provide an acceptable criminal background check and provide documentation of required immunizations. See 'Immunization Requirements' details in the Compliance (p. 1075) section.

One of the consequences of the delivery of health care is the possibility of contracting infectious disease such as tuberculosis, hepatitis, herpes, or HIV. To minimize this risk, the UNC School of Dentistry has adopted an Infection Control Policy that requires the wearing of a clinical overgarment, disposable gloves, a mask and protective safety eye covering when oral examinations and dental hygiene services are being performed.

Dental school fees are required that include instrument rental and other supplies needed for clinical care and the education of patients. Additional costs may occur for projects required in the curriculum.

Special Opportunities in Dental Hygiene Departmental Involvement

Students are eligible to become members of the student American Dental Hygienists' Association, American Dental Education Association, American Association of Dental Research, American Association of Public Health Dentistry, and other specialty organizations. Student membership fees may be required.

Experiential Education

Students have the opportunity to participate in community-based clinical experiences as well as providing oral hygiene programs in the community. Service-learning opportunities are possible as an elective. Each semester students will be involved with hands-on experiences providing dental hygiene services. During the final semester of dental hygiene, students will participate in a three-week practicum. Due to the location of community sites, undergraduate students may need access to transportation. Expenses for travel are the responsibility of the student.

Licensure

Certificate and baccalaureate degree graduates are eligible for dental hygiene licensure examinations at the state and national levels. Candidates must pass both the national and clinical board examinations in order to be granted a license to practice dental hygiene. Additional costs are associated with the examinations required for licensure. Some dental hygiene licensure examinations require background checks with fingerprint analysis.

Accreditation

The dental hygiene program's accreditation status is approval without reporting requirements as determined by the Commission on Dental Accreditation.

Undergraduate Awards

Dental hygiene students are eligible for awards through the Spurgeon Dental Society in the UNC Adams School of Dentistry and the Dental Foundation of North Carolina. In addition, student awards are also available through the American Dental Hygienists' Association, American Association of Public Health Dentistry, American Dental Education Association, and other specialty organizations.

Undergraduate Research

Research opportunities are available at the undergraduate level for dental hygiene students. Students are encouraged to become involved in research activities pertaining to dental hygiene and dentistry. Student research grants are available through the University, professional organizations, and private industry.

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

Upon satisfactory completion of the baccalaureate program, students are eligible for application to graduate programs in dental hygiene education, public health, and other areas. The UNC Adams School of Dentistry offers a master of science (M.S.) graduate degree program in dental hygiene education to which graduates of the dental hygiene program may apply. Graduates also are eligible to apply for admission to the school's predoctoral dental curriculum provided they successfully complete the required program prerequisites.

The growth of the dental health care field assures an excellent employment outlook for the coming years. Courses of study provide comprehensive educational experience to qualified individuals for the practice of dental hygiene in accordance with the current and changing demands for health services and in accordance with the laws and ethics pertaining to practice.

Information Relevant to the UNC Adams School of Dentistry Experience

Immunization Requirements

The State of North Carolina immunization requirements and the UNC Adams School of Dentistry immunization requirements for dental hygiene and doctor of dental surgery students are listed below. Documentation of all is required with application.

State Requirements

- Three DTP (diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis), Td (tetanus, diphtheria), or Tdap (tetanus, diphtheria, pertussis) doses. (This fulfills the primary series requirement.)
 - One Tdap booster after completion of the primary series that did not include a Tdap, and then a Td vaccine every 10 years thereafter.
- Three polio (unless greater than 18 years of age).
- Two measles (rubeola), two mumps, one rubella (two MMR doses meet this requirement) or positive titers.
- Hepatitis B series (not required for individuals born before July 1, 1994). See school requirements below.

UNC Adams School of Dentistry Requirements

- Varicella vaccination series (two shots) or a positive titer.
- Hepatitis B vaccination series (three shots) and a positive hepatitis B antibody (HBsAb) quantitative titer. (Please make sure your physician does not order a qualitative titer.) Ideally, a titer is recommended one to two months after completion of the series for proof of immunity to hepatitis B but can be checked at a later date.

- Two-step tuberculosis skin test (TST) or a TB blood test (IGRA). DDS and DH students report to Campus Health and follow the testing procedures required. Advanced Dental Education students report to Employee Health and follow the testing procedures required.

The matriculating student is required to submit an official certificate of immunizations that is signed by an authorized healthcare provider. Immunization documentation is to be submitted to both to UNC Campus Health Services (CHS) and to the UNC Adams School of Dentistry through ConnectCarolina by a published and specified date. CHS will notify students who are not in compliance with the state immunization requirements noted above. Individuals who have not met the state immunization requirements after 30 calendar days from the first date of attendance will be administratively withdrawn from the University by the University Registrar. See the UNC Campus Health Web site (<http://campushealth.unc.edu/services/immunizations/health-science-students-immunizations/>).

Students with deficiencies in the additional immunization requirements of the school will be notified of the deficiencies by the UNC school's director of clinical compliance. The school will work with students to meet these additional requirements. The failure to comply with the school's requirements after consultation with the director of clinical compliance and the agreed-upon resolution schedule will result in administrative withdrawal from the school.

Additional Requirements

Annually:

- Influenza vaccine not earlier than September 1.
- Tuberculosis screening.
- Verification of health insurance. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill requires all eligible students to have health insurance (see the UNC Campus Health Student Health Insurance Web site (<http://campushealth.unc.edu/charges-insurance/mandatory-student-health-insurance/>)). Students are required to waive with existing creditable insurance each semester or they will automatically be enrolled in the UNC System Student Health Insurance Plan, which is administered by Student Blue/BCBS of NC. To waive or enroll/renew, visit the Student Blue Web site (<http://www.bcbsnc.com/unc/>).

Biennially:

- American Heart Association certified CPR for Healthcare Providers training. Documentation of current certification is required of the matriculating student. (Note that the school requires in-person CPR skills assessment.)

Infection Control: One of the consequences of the delivery of health care is the possibility of contracting an infectious disease such as tuberculosis, hepatitis, HIV, or herpes. To minimize this risk, the school has adopted an Infection Control Policy that requires the wearing of a clinical overgarment, disposable gloves, a mask, and protective eye covering when oral examinations and dental procedures are being performed.

Infectious Disease Status

Students engaged in patient care activities are required to know their tuberculosis and hepatitis B (HBV) status, and are encouraged to learn their hepatitis C (HCV) and HIV status. State regulations require health care workers, including students, who perform surgical or dental procedures or who assist in such procedures in a way that may result in an exposure of patients to their blood, and who know themselves to be infected with HIV or HBV, to report their status to the state health director. See UNC's policy (<http://ehs.unc.edu/manuals/ehsmanual/chapter-6/occupational-health-requirements/>).

Late Registration

University regulations require students who do not register before the first day of classes in any semester or summer session to pay an additional fee of $20 for delayed registration. Any student who believes that she/he can show sufficient justification for the delay may petition for a refund by completing a form, which can be found online (<https://registrar.unc.edu/guide/registration-policies/late-fee-refund-petition/>), and outlining the reason for delay. This form must bear the approval of the dean of the UNC Adams School of Dentistry.

Awarding of Degrees and Certificates

To be awarded a degree or certificate, students must satisfactorily complete all requirements of their respective program.

Class and Clinic Attendance

Regular class and clinic attendance is a student obligation. No right or privilege exists that permits a student to be absent from any given number of sessions.

Patient Care Responsibilities

Students are granted the privilege of participating in the patient care system of the UNC Adams School of Dentistry and are expected to provide care consistent with our patient-centered philosophy. Patients are a central part of the health care team and are involved in the planning of their care. It is the responsibility of the dental student to provide patients with the information needed so they make informed decisions about their treatment. The dental student has the responsibility to provide high-quality, evidence-based care to all their assigned patients in a timely manner and to uphold the ethical responsibilities as outlined in the school's Code of Professional Conduct and the Code of Clinical Behavior.

Current academic policies and procedures can be found online (https://unc.policystat.com/policy_search/category/?terms=54058&search_query). However, policies are subject to change at any time. The manual provides guidelines for governing the School of Dentistry educational programs and advises students, faculty, and staff of academic policies and procedures related to the respective programs.

Admission to the Program

Applicants may be admitted for dental hygiene study after completion of an associate of arts or associate of science degree and the dental hygiene prerequisites, provided they meet requirements of the University. To assure proper planning for admission, applicants should maintain close contact with the program during the application process.

Enrollment is limited, and applicants are accepted on a competitive basis. Admission to the University does not guarantee admission into the dental hygiene program. Selections are based on academic achievement with an emphasis on performance in science courses, character, knowledge of working with the dental team, and a sincere interest in dental hygiene as a professional career. For UNC–Chapel Hill students, application for admission to the program is usually made during the second year of General College study. Interested students should submit an online application, which can be accessed from ConnectCarolina.

For transfer applicants, all prerequisite dental hygiene coursework and General College courses taken at other institutions must be approved for transfer in advance by the Office of Undergraduate Admissions. Official transcripts from all schools attended (including high school) must be submitted.

Three letters of recommendation must be submitted with the application. Two of the letters should be from previous college course directors and one letter that includes a character reference. In addition, applicants must shadow in a dental office for a minimum of 20 hours. This requirement may be fulfilled through prior dental assisting experience.

If admitted to Carolina, the Office of Undergraduate Admissions will complete a course-by-course analysis of all coursework and provide a complete report before the enrollment deadline. Transcript analysis will not be completed for prospective students until after admission. It is critical that the most current rules are applied to each situation, and these may change from the time of application to the time of enrollment.

Prior to being admitted and enrolled, all applicants will be required to present evidence of satisfactory completion of prerequisite courses required by the major. Applicants with a previous degree should contact the Office of Undergraduate Admissions to determine fulfillment of General College requirements. Specific admission requirements on the prelicensure and graduate programs in dental hygiene can be obtained by calling the dental hygiene office at (919) 537-3474 or online at our Web site (<https://www.dentistry.unc.edu/>).

^H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

After completion of the basic professional program, a post-certificate in dental hygiene is awarded. Enrollment to complete the baccalaureate degree requirements is an option for the student with a certificate or current baccalaureate degree.

Additional Information for the Dental Hygiene Programs

Upon provisional acceptance into the dental hygiene program, all students must provide an acceptable criminal background check and provide documentation of required immunizations. See 'Immunization Requirements' details in the Compliance (p. 1077) section.

One of the consequences of the delivery of health care is the possibility of contracting infectious disease such as tuberculosis, hepatitis, herpes, or HIV. To minimize this risk, the UNC Adams School of Dentistry has adopted an Infection Control Policy that requires the wearing of a clinical overgarment, disposable gloves, a mask and protective safety eye covering when oral examinations and dental hygiene services are being performed.

Dental school fees are required that include instrument rental and other supplies needed for clinical care and the education of patients. Additional costs may occur for projects required in the curriculum.

See the program page for special opportunities (p. 1074).

Information Relevant to the UNC Adams School of Dentistry Experience

Immunization Requirements

The State of North Carolina immunization requirements and the UNC Adams School of Dentistry immunization requirements for dental hygiene and doctor of dental surgery students are listed below. Documentation of all is required with application.

State Requirements

- Three DTP (diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis), Td (tetanus, diphtheria), or Tdap (tetanus, diphtheria, pertussis) doses. (This fulfills the primary series requirement.)
- One Tdap booster after completion of the primary series that did not include a Tdap, and then a Td vaccine every 10 years thereafter.
- Three polio (unless greater than 18 years of age).

- Two measles (rubeola), two mumps, one rubella (two MMR doses meet this requirement) or positive titers.
- Hepatitis B series (not required for individuals born before July 1, 1994). See school requirements below.

UNC Adams School of Dentistry Requirements

- Varicella vaccination series (two shots) or a positive titer.
- Hepatitis B vaccination series (three shots) and a positive hepatitis B antibody (HBsAb) quantitative titer. (Please make sure your physician does not order a qualitative titer.) Ideally, a titer is recommended one to two months after completion of the series for proof of immunity to hepatitis B but can be checked at a later date.
- Two-step tuberculosis skin test (TST) or a TB blood test (IGRA). DDS and DH students report to Campus Health and follow the testing procedures required. Advanced Dental Education students report to Employee Health and follow the testing procedures required.

The matriculating student is required to submit an official certificate of immunizations that is signed by an authorized healthcare provider. Immunization documentation is to be submitted to both to UNC Campus Health Services (CHS) and to the UNC Adams School of Dentistry through ConnectCarolina by a published and specified date. CHS will notify students who are not in compliance with the state immunization requirements noted above. Individuals who have not met the state immunization requirements after 30 calendar days from the first date of attendance will be administratively withdrawn from the University by the University Registrar. See the UNC Campus Health Web site (<http://campushealth.unc.edu/services/immunizations/health-science-students-immunizations/>).

Students with deficiencies in the additional immunization requirements of the school will be notified of the deficiencies by the UNC school's director of clinical compliance. The school will work with students to meet these additional requirements. The failure to comply with the school's requirements after consultation with the director of clinical compliance and the agreed-upon resolution schedule will result in administrative withdrawal from the school.

Additional Requirements

Annually:

- Influenza vaccine not earlier than September 1.
- Tuberculosis screening.
- Verification of health insurance. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill requires all eligible students to have health insurance (see the UNC Campus Health Student Health Insurance Web site (<http://campushealth.unc.edu/charges-insurance/mandatory-student-health-insurance/>)). Students are required to waive with existing creditable insurance each semester or they will automatically be enrolled in the UNC System Student Health Insurance Plan, which is administered by Student Blue/BCBS of NC. To waive or enroll/renew, visit the Student Blue Web site (<http://www.bcbsnc.com/unc/>).

Biennially:

- American Heart Association certified CPR for Healthcare Providers training. Documentation of current certification is required of the matriculating student. (Note that the school requires in-person CPR skills assessment.)

Infection Control: One of the consequences of the delivery of health care is the possibility of contracting an infectious disease such as tuberculosis, hepatitis, HIV, or herpes. To minimize this risk, the school has adopted an Infection Control Policy that requires the wearing of a clinical overgarment, disposable gloves, a mask, and protective eye covering when oral examinations and dental procedures are being performed.

Infectious Disease Status

Students engaged in patient care activities are required to know their tuberculosis and hepatitis B (HBV) status, and are encouraged to learn their hepatitis C (HCV) and HIV status. State regulations require health care workers, including students, who perform surgical or dental procedures or who assist in such procedures in a way that may result in an exposure of patients to their blood, and who know themselves to be infected with HIV or HBV, to report their status to the state health director. See UNC's policy (<http://ehs.unc.edu/manuals/ehsmanual/chapter-6/occupational-health-requirements/>).

Late Registration

University regulations require students who do not register before the first day of classes in any semester or summer session to pay an additional fee of $20 for delayed registration. Any student who believes that she/he can show sufficient justification for the delay may petition for a refund by completing a form, which can be found online (<https://registrar.unc.edu/guide/registration-policies/late-fee-refund-petition/>), and outlining the reason for delay. This form must bear the approval of the dean of the UNC Adams School of Dentistry.

Awarding of Degrees and Certificates

To be awarded a degree or certificate, students must satisfactorily complete all requirements of their respective program.

Class and Clinic Attendance

Regular class and clinic attendance is a student obligation. No right or privilege exists that permits a student to be absent from any given number of sessions.

Patient Care Responsibilities

Students are granted the privilege of participating in the patient care system of the UNC Adams School of Dentistry and are expected to provide care consistent with our patient-centered philosophy. Patients are a central part of the health care team and are involved in the planning of their care. It is the responsibility of the dental student to provide patients with the information needed so they make informed decisions about their treatment. The dental student has the responsibility to provide high-quality, evidence-based care to all their assigned patients in a timely manner and to uphold the ethical responsibilities as outlined in the school's Code of Professional Conduct and the Code of Clinical Behavior.

Current academic policies and procedures can be found online (https://unc.policystat.com/policy_search/category/?terms=54058&search_query). However, policies are subject to change at any time. The manual provides guidelines for governing the UNC Adams School of Dentistry educational programs and advises students, faculty, and staff of academic policies and procedures related to the respective programs.

Introduction

The School of Education is committed to the preparation of candidates who can assume leadership roles in the field of education. Such preparation is accomplished through the coherent integration of the abilities and predispositions of candidates, the knowledge and abilities of faculty members, and the contextual elements of academic and field settings. The growth and development of candidates is promoted through curriculum, instruction, research, field experiences, clinical practice, assessments, evaluations, and interactions with faculty members and peers. All of these elements work together to build a solid foundation for exemplary practices in education.

Programs of Study

Students are subject to the requirements in place when they are admitted to the School of Education; consequently, the requirements for approved programs described in this catalog particularly apply to students admitted to the school during the 2020–2021 academic year.

Advising

To best facilitate completion of all degree requirements students are strongly encouraged to meet with an academic advisor every semester.

The School of Education's director of advising, Audrey Fulton, meets with students who are interested in or admitted to any of the SOE's undergraduate programs. Students interested in making an advising appointment can contact Ms. Fulton (abfulton@email.unc.edu). Based on a student's academic program, he or she may also need to continue to meet with an advisor in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Admission to the School of Education

Human Development and Family Studies

Admission to the human development and family studies major (p. 1090) is offered every semester. Admission is based on, but not limited to, a 2.5 grade point average, good academic standing, expressed interest in the helping professions, and space available. For more information, please visit the School of Education Web site (<http://soe.unc.edu/hdfs/>).

Education Minor

The undergraduate minor in education is appropriate for undergraduate students interested in furthering their knowledge of education as a means of career development or to enhance their understanding of current schooling, community, and policy directions.

To declare a minor in education, you must see an advisor by appointment. During the declaration appointment, your advisor will review with you the requirements for the minor. If it is feasible for you to complete the minor within the eight-semester limit, you and your advisor will complete a declaration form to get you declared.

For more information, please visit the School of Education Web site (<http://soe.unc.edu/academics/education-minor/>).

UNC Baccalaureate Education in Science and Teaching (UNC–BEST)

UNC–BEST is a collaboration between the School of Education and the College of Arts and Sciences (<http://college.unc.edu/>). This innovative program offers undergraduate science and mathematics majors the opportunity to complete requirements for a bachelor of arts or bachelor of science and obtain licensure as a secondary science or mathematics teacher in North Carolina in four years. Students will be prepared for N.C. licensure in either mathematics (9–12) or comprehensive science (9–12).

UNC–BEST Admissions Requirements

- Math or science (biology, chemistry, geological sciences, and physics) major
- Minimum 2.7 GPA
- SAT or ACT score requirements*
SAT: Math–550, Reading–550, 1100 Combined
ACT: Math 24, English–24, 24 Composite
- Completion of online application

*Applicants who do not meet the minimum SAT and ACT score requirements can take the Praxis Core Academic Skills for Educators: Score–468 Composite; Reading–156/Writing–162; Math–150

K-12 Music Education

K-12 Music Education is a collaboration between the School of Education and the Department of Music. This program offers undergraduate bachelor of music (B.M.) students the opportunity to complete requirements for a bachelor of music and obtain licensure as a K–12 music teacher in North Carolina in four years. Students will be prepared for N.C. licensure in teaching music at the K–12 grade level.

Music Education Admissions Requirements

- Music major
- Minimum 3.0 GPA
- SAT or ACT score requirements*
SAT: Math–550, Reading–550, 1100 Combined
ACT: Math–24, English–24, 24 Composite

- Online application which includes:
 - Personal statement (500–750 words describing your interest in teaching, pertinent background experiences, and relevant aspirations)
 - 2 letters of recommendation (one letter must be from a UNC instructor)
 - Resume

*Applicants who do not meet the minimum SAT and ACT score requirements can take the Praxis Core Academic Skills for Educators: Score–468 Composite; Reading–156/Writing–162; Math–150

Pre-M.A.T. (Early Affiliation to the Master of Arts in Teaching)

The Pre-M.A.T. is an opportunity for UNC–Chapel Hill undergraduates to engage with select M.A.T. coursework, faculty, and staff in order to pre-plan their intended entry into the Master of Arts in Teaching (M.A.T.) upon graduation. While joining the Pre-M.A.T. is not a requirement to be considered for admission to the M.A.T., there are many benefits of joining, which include:

- M.A.T. prerequisite advising/course planning with a School of Education advisor
- Access to select M.A.T. courses as an undergraduate, which may reduce M.A.T. tuition costs, if the student is admitted
- Opportunity to get to know M.A.T. faculty and current students
- Undergraduate student engagement opportunities related to teaching and learning

Students interested in more information or applying to become a Pre-M.A.T. 'early affiliate' can email the School of Education's director of advising and undergraduate student engagement, Audrey Fulton (abfulton@email.unc.edu).

Major

- Human Development and Family Studies, B.A.Ed. (p. 1090)
- Human and Organizational Leadership and Development, B.A. (p. 1093)

Minor

- Education Minor (p. 1095)

Establishing Licensure

At UNC, two undergraduate pathways for coursework prepare students for N.C. teacher licensure: UNC–BEST and K–12 Music Education. While the School of Education does not offer an undergraduate major that leads to N.C. teacher licensure, UNC students have the opportunity to engage with select master of arts in teaching (M.A.T.) coursework, faculty and staff in order to pre-plan their intended entry into the M.A.T. upon graduation. Information on the Pre-M.A.T. can be found here (<http://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/schools-college/education/#admissiontext>) or by contacting the School of Education's director of advising and undergraduate student engagement, Audrey Fulton (abfulton@email.unc.edu).

North Carolina licensure requirements are distinct from the School of Education's degree requirements. Applications for North Carolina licensure must be submitted through the N.C. Department of Public Instruction's online licensure system by the graduate seeking licensure. Forms are no longer submitted by the UNC School of Education licensure officer. The UNC School of Education licensure reviews and either approves or denies all licensure applications routed to UNC through the N.C. Department of Public Instruction online licensure system. More information about applying for N.C. licensure is available on the School of Education Web site (http://soe.unc.edu/services/student_affairs/licensure/).

The programs described in this catalog are approved by the N.C. Department of Public Instruction, the State Board of Education, and the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education (now the Council for the Accreditation of Educator Preparation).

UNC Baccalaureate Education in Science and Teaching (UNC–BEST)

UNC–BEST is a collaboration between the School of Education and the College of Arts and Sciences (<http://college.unc.edu/>). This innovative program offers undergraduate science and mathematics majors the opportunity to complete requirements for a bachelor of arts or bachelor of science and obtain licensure as a secondary science or mathematics teacher in North Carolina. Students will be prepared for N.C. licensure in either mathematics (9–12) or comprehensive science (9–12).

UNC–BEST students are enrolled in their respective major in the College of Arts and Sciences and, once accepted into the UNC–BEST program, complete the requirements to earn North Carolina teaching licensure.

To be recommended for N.C. licensure, UNC–BEST students must complete Praxis testing appropriate to their content area. More information about the testing requirements is available on the School of Education testing Web site (http://soe.unc.edu/services/student_affairs/testing.php).

EDUC–Education

Undergraduate-level

EDUC 65. First-Year Seminar: School Daze: What's School Got to do with Getting an Education?. 3 Credits.

This seminar explores the concepts of schooling and education. Students will be challenged to reconsider their experiences and notions about pre-K through 12 schooling and to examine alternatives.

Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 89. First-Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Course content will vary each semester.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 101. First Year Thriving. 2 Credits.

The course will introduce students to the scholarship on transitions and potential paths for thriving at a liberal arts institution. Students apply research on learning science, emerging adulthood, cultural competence, and well-being to enhance their own experience. First year students only.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 111. Career Exploration. 1 Credit.

Career Exploration is a designed to expose first and second year students to career development theories, while providing a framework for exploring and discovering their interests and skills. Previously offered as EDUC 131. No seniors.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 121. Tutoring in the Schools I. 2 Credits.

Provides a basic introduction to teaching and education. This course consists of a seminar based with field placements in different levels of schools.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 122. Tutoring in the Schools II. 1 Credit.

Combines tutoring training with a field placement for tutoring in literacy and mathematics in grades kindergarten through three.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 130. Navigating the Research University. 1 Credit.

This course will provide students with knowledge to succeed at a research university. Students will consider what it means to have a liberal arts education and will learn about motivation, resiliency, and self-advocacy. Students will reflect on their current work toward academic success and their path to graduation.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 149. Experiential Education and Civic Identity. 1 Credit.

The course will introduce students to the history and contemporary scholarship of experiential education. It will explore high impact practices in higher education and the role that experiences such as Outward Bound expeditionary education courses can play in an undergraduate student's development and success in college and on the development of civic identity. 28-day Outward Bound course or similar expeditionary education experiences per instructor discretion.
Gen Ed: EE- Field Work.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 150. The Science of Learning (Intensive). 1 Credit.

This course is an abbreviated and intensive version of EDUC 330: The Science of Learning. It is designed to optimize the beliefs and techniques critical for thriving at a rigorous university. Students will be exposed to research, particularly from cognitive psychology and behavioral neuroscience, which identifies the most effective methods of learning. Participants will also be given opportunities to implement such methods. Students may not receive credit for both EDUC 150 and EDUC 330.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 181. Introduction to Human Development and Family Studies. 3 Credits.

Introduces students to theories and major research areas in human development and family studies while connecting this theory and research to careers in the helping professions. Students shadow a professional in a field of their choice.
Gen Ed: SS.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 190. Special Topics in Education. 1-3 Credits.

This course provides students the opportunity for introductory exploration and discussion of selected topics in education.
Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 15 total credits. 5 total completions.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 211. Career Planning and Job Searching. 1 Credit.

This course is designed for juniors and seniors who are preparing to embark on their post-Carolina job search. Students will learn how to develop the necessary tools and skills required to execute an effective job search, while understanding and applying theoretical concepts related to strengths, adaptability, and resilience in career development. Course previously offered as EDUC 132. No first year students.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 221. Tutoring in the Schools III. 1 Credit.

Combines tutoring training with a field placement for tutoring in literacy and mathematics in grades four through eight.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 222. Tutoring in the Schools IV. 1 Credit.

Focuses on the relationship among arts, creativity, and education.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 230. Thriving After the First Year: Accessing High Impact Opportunities. 1 Credit.

The course is designed primarily to help students identify and access meaningful HIPs aligned with their individual values, needs, and goals. Students will be guided to ask critical and reflexive questions that will help them describe and link their unique purpose at the university with their potential contributions to the world. The course includes substantive content on student belonging and student engagement. Not open to first-year students.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 231. The Science of Well-Being. 3 Credits.

Students will learn the science of well-being for emerging adulthood. The course will bridge contemporary literature on development, non-cognitive factors, positive psychology (e.g., hope, optimism) and more. Learn and invest in your well-being as a student at UNC-Chapel Hill and beyond. No First-year students.
Gen Ed: SS, CI.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 250. Risk and Resiliency: Challenges and Opportunities in Education. 4 Credits.

Explores factors that put children at risk for educational failure and interventions to increase resiliency. Service and learning experiences in educational and community agencies are integral to the course.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 301. Junior Transfer Seminar - Thriving in Transition. 3 Credits.

Course challenges students to think critically about educational issues as they transition to a research university. Through readings, videos and activities, students explore the value of higher education, the development of intelligence, and the role of habit and happiness in college success. Students also conduct and present original qualitative research.
Gen Ed: SS, EE- Field Work.
Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 309. An Examination of Quality and the Pursuit of Betterness. 3 Credits.

A three-credit seminar on leadership styles, philosophies, and issues related to leadership. Each class will overlap these concepts (topical or theory/practice, service, and self-awareness.)

Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 311. Life-Career Design. 3 Credits.

This course examines the contemporary research in career development (e.g. happiness, purpose, decision-making, values, experiential learning). The course guides students to use design thinking to apply the concepts to life action plans. Students will increase self-awareness and self-advocacy to maximize their potential and envision multiple pathways for further education and life-work balance. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors only.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 316. Advanced Leadership Development Seminar. 3 Credits.

This is a three-credit course with a focus on delving deeper into issues relevant to leadership and education. This course is open to seniors, juniors, and sophomores with student organization experience and an interest in an advanced exploration of leadership.

Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 317. Dynamics of Effective Leadership. 1 Credit.

The course is intended to provide an introduction to leadership theory, a forum for reflection upon personal strengths and contributions to leadership, and an opportunity to explore the nature of working in teams and groups.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

EDUC 318. Peer Leadership in the University Environment. 2 Credits.

This course revolves around and centers on the Relational Leadership Model which defines leadership as the relational and ethical process of people together attempting to accomplish positive change.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 320. Navigating Education in Borderlands. 3 Credits.

This course provides students a preliminary introduction to qualitative research methods as a mechanism for critically examining the concept of borders and implications for students' own educational experiences. While immersed in a geographic borderlands space, students will explore the 'border' as not just the physical border between Mexico and the US, but as Gloria Anzaldúa presents in her 1987 book Borderlands/ La Frontera, as a 'psychic, social, and cultural terrain that we inhabit'.

Gen Ed: SS, EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 325. Introduction to Counseling and Coaching. 3 Credits.

This course provides students with an overview of the major counseling and group work theories, an introduction to individual and group work counseling techniques, the conditions that facilitate an effective working relationship with clients across the lifespan applying cultural awareness and sensitivity, the general stages in group and individual counseling processes, and professional ethics. The course also provides an overview of coaching as a method of helping families thrive. Course restricted to majors.

Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 330. The Science of Learning. 3 Credits.

Students study several facets of learning in the modern world, and investigate what scholarship in cognitive psychology, educational psychology, and the learning sciences can do to help us maximize that learning.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 349. Adulting. 3 Credits.

The course critically analyzes the contemporary and cultural application of emerging adulthood theory. Themes center on identity, competence, managing emotions, purpose, intimacy, civic engagement, and more.

Practical learning and skills surrounding financial literacy are included.

Students co-create core adulting skills through research and skill demonstrations. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors only.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 375. Identity and Sexuality. 3 Credits.

This course will guide students in the examination of the vital role that sexuality, sexual identity, gender, race and class play in families, communities, and educational settings. These and other socio-cultural factors, which often intersect and are embedded in historic ways of constructing what it means to be 'normal', fundamentally shape how individuals understand themselves, their place in the world, as well as others around them.

Gen Ed: US.

Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 387. Peer Tutoring. 3 Credits.

Peer Tutoring is an APPLS service-learning course that provides undergraduates the opportunity to serve fellow students through tutoring. Tutors must have an overall GPA of 3.0 or higher.

Gen Ed: EE- Service Learning.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

EDUC 390. Special Topics in Education. 3 Credits.

This course provides students the opportunity for intensive exploration and discussion of selected topics in education.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics.

Grading status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level

EDUC 400. Autism in Our Communities: An Interdisciplinary Perspective. 3 Credits.

Students have 30 hours of service-learning with individuals with autism at community partner sites. Class discussions introduce students to diverse topics related to autism spectrum disorder. This is an APPLS course.

Gen Ed: EE- Service Learning.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: SPHS 400.

EDUC 401. Introduction to Early Childhood Development: Birth to Eight. 3 Credits.

This course examines the field of child development as it contributes to the teaching and learning of children in early childhood and elementary educational settings, ages birth to eight.

Grading status: Letter grade.

EDUC 402. Models of Early Childhood Service Delivery. 3 Credits.

Human development and family studies (HDFS) is a pre-professional major for undergraduate students interested in careers that will improve the lives of children and families across the variety of contexts and cultures in which families live, learn, and work. These careers are called 'helping professions' and might include education, public health, social work, health services, counseling services, and more. This program results in a bachelor of arts degree in education.

The HDFS program does not result in teaching licensure but may be used to apply to a teaching license program at the postbaccalaureate or graduate level.

Admission to the human development and family studies major is required and offered every semester. Admission is based on, but not limited to, a 2.5 grade point average, good academic standing, expressed interest in the helping professions, and space available. For more information, please visit the School of Education Web site (<http://soe.unc.edu/hdfs/>).

Admitted students must earn a grade of C or better for each course counting to fulfill a degree requirement within the HDFS major. If a student earns a grade of C- or lower in a course, it will not satisfy a degree requirement within the HDFS major. The student will need to repeat that course or an equivalent. If a course is repeated, the student can only count the credit hours once when calculating the number of credit hours toward degree.

In the event that a student fails the internship or is dismissed for violating the School of Education, site placement, or the University Code of Ethics, they will be referred to the School of Education Appeals Committee.

If a student intends to declare a major in HDFS and has already declared (or intends to declare) a minor in education, only six credit hours can double count for the education minor and the HDFS major.

Students are subject to the requirements in place when they are admitted to the School of Education; consequently, the requirements for approved programs described in this catalog particularly apply to students admitted to the school during the 2020–2021 academic year.

Department Programs

Major

- Human Development and Family Studies, B.A.Ed. (p. 1090)
- Human and Organizational Leadership and Development, B.A. (p. 1093)

Minor

- Education Minor (p. 1095)

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the human development and family studies program, students should be able to:

- Apply theories and knowledge about lifespan human development from many perspectives—psychological, sociological, educational, and cultural
- Demonstrate awareness of professional behaviors and ethical considerations needed to serve children, youth, and families
- Assess individual and family experiences from diverse cultural backgrounds and perspectives, such as race, ethnicity, sexual identities, ability, socioeconomic status, immigrant status, and urban versus rural settings
- Demonstrate the ability to develop resources and initiatives using appropriate strategies and technologies to support the well-being of children, families, schools, and communities through presentations, research, and service learning

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (course and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a C or better in all courses for the HDFS major (core and additional requirements).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

Special Opportunities in Education

Honors in the School of Education

During the fall semester of the senior year, an honors student in the School of Education participates in the first of a two-course sequence. This first course is an honors thesis class to begin the thesis preparation and writing process. During the spring semester of the senior year (likely the HDFS internship semester), the student takes the second course in the honors class sequence. Across the two courses the student completes an honors thesis. In the spring semester there is an oral examination to defend the thesis. The program is limited to students with a minimum cumulative grade point average of 3.3 at the start of the fall semester of the senior year. That is, students who wish to undertake a senior honors thesis project must have a cumulative GPA of 3.3 or higher in order to begin the project, and must maintain a cumulative GPA of 3.3 or higher through graduation.

The human and organizational leadership and development (HOLD) program prepares graduates to understand, lead, and work effectively with a diverse set of stakeholders in organizations focused on learning and human development. The curriculum provides students with a grounding in the science of learning and adult learning, organizational and leadership theory, quantitative and qualitative social science research methods, and data-informed decision making. Students will gain an insight into the learning and development in a broad range of organizations, including businesses, non-profits, and government agencies that are committed to cultivating clients' and workers' capacities. In order to thrive in learning-oriented organizations, students must be skilled collaborators and communicators, keen observers of social structure and dynamics, as well as careful data consumers and analysts.

Admission

The School of Education will admit students to the HOLD program beginning Fall 2021. Additional information about admission procedures and deadlines will be available during the 2020-21 academic year.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the human and organizational leadership and development program, students should be able to:

- Gather and analyze data to critically assess and understand organizational dynamics
- Demonstrate organizational leadership skills, including effective written and oral communication, project management, and cultural sensitivity
- Collaborate with diverse stakeholders to change organizations and cultivate human development.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (course and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a C or better in all courses for the HDFS major (core and additional requirements).

The undergraduate minor in education is appropriate for undergraduate students interested in furthering their knowledge of education as a means of career development or to enhance their understanding of current schooling, community, and policy directions.

To declare a minor in education, you must see an advisor by appointment. During the declaration appointment, the advisor will review with you the requirements for the minor and determine if you can complete the program within the eight-semester limit.

If you intend to declare a minor in education and have already declared (or intend to declare) a major in human development and family studies (B.A.Ed.), only six (6) credit hours can double count for the education minor and the HDFS major.

More information is available on the School of Education's Web site (<http://soe.unc.edu/academics/education-minor/>).

Introduction

The School of Information and Library Science (SILS) was founded in 1931 and is one of the most highly regarded programs of its kind in the nation. The school first offered a minor in information systems in 1997 and initiated a major in information science in 2003. UNC–Chapel Hill is the only university in the state offering a bachelor's degree in information science and is one of only a small number of schools nationwide offering such a program.

Information science is the study of cognitive, social, technological, and organizational roles of information in all its forms. It rests on three foundational pillars:

1. content: the substance of the information being created, communicated, stored, and/or transformed;
2. people who interact with the content as creators of information, recipients of information, or intermediaries in the communication process; and
3. technology used to support the creation, communication, storage, or transformation of the content.

The bachelor of science in information science is designed to prepare its graduates for a variety of careers in the information industry, including information architecture, database design and implementation, Web design and implementation, business systems analyst, and information consulting, as well as for graduate study. The minor in information systems provides students with an understanding of computing, multimedia, electronic information resources, and the Internet that complements their major field of study. Students concentrate their studies in the junior and senior years.

Advising

All majors are assigned a faculty advisor upon admission to SILS. Students must meet with their advisor every semester to review their status. The department's director of undergraduate studies and undergraduate student services coordinator work with current and prospective majors by appointment. Further information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be obtained from the SILS Web site.

Students who are double majoring are encouraged to meet periodically with an academic advisor in the College of Arts and Sciences. It is the student's responsibility to make sure he or she is making good progress toward completing a second major outside of SILS. Information systems minors are not assigned a faculty advisor from SILS but should continue to meet with their assigned advisor in their major department.

Career Opportunities

Career Services at SILS assists individuals in all aspects of career development, including assessing strengths and skill sets, developing a job search strategy, and connecting students and alumni with information professionals in their field.

SILS also works closely with University Career Services and its programs and services, including on-campus recruiting for both summer internships and professional positions. Students are encouraged to take advantage of both the offerings from Handshake as well as targeted events for SILS students.

Preparing for the Major in Information Science

Students are subject to the requirements in place when they are admitted as a degree-seeking student to the University; consequently, the School of Information and Library Science requirements described in this catalog particularly apply to students admitted to the University during the 2019–2020 academic year.

First-year students and sophomores who plan to apply for the B.S.I.S. must complete the following prerequisites.

Code	Title	Hours
INLS 161	Tools for Information Literacy	3
PSYC 101	General Psychology	3
INLS 201	Foundations of Information Science	3
COMP 110 or COMP 116	Introduction to Programming ^H Introduction to Scientific Programming	3

^H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

Undergraduate students who have completed all prerequisite courses may apply for admission to the major program. Participation is limited, and admission is competitive. Criteria for admission include the candidate's academic record, work and extracurricular experience, and substantive thinking about the role of information in society (and, for applicants to the minor, in their major field). Candidates from a variety of disciplinary backgrounds are sought for the minor. Prior computer experience is not a criterion for admission to the minor.

Admission

To apply for admission, students must 'Apply for Change of Major' in ConnectCarolina. Information regarding the application process is available on the school's Web site (<http://sils.unc.edu/programs/undergraduate/admissions/>). Applicants are asked to provide the following materials:

- A current résumé, including information about work experience and/or extracurricular activities
- A brief essay (100–300 words) on why you want to pursue an information science (IS) major/minor. More specifically, 1) what experiences led you to realize you would benefit from further education in IS, and 2) how will pursuing an education in IS enable you to achieve your future plans?

Applications for the spring semester are available September 1 through October 1. Applications for the fall semester are available February 1 through March 1. Applications are accepted only during the application windows. No paper applications are accepted.

Questions can be addressed to the Undergraduate Student Services Coordinator, School of Information and Library Science, CB# 3360, 107 Manning Hall; or by sending email to sils-ug@ils.unc.edu; or by calling (919) 962-0208.

INLS—Information and Library Science Undergraduate-level

INLS 73. First-Year Seminar: Smart Cities. 3 Credits.

Topics and trends in sustainable and smart cities. Role of information in the design of network resources and impact on urban design, development, and urban living will be explored.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 89. First-Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.

Special topics course; content will vary each semester.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 151. Retrieving and Analyzing Information. 3 Credits.

Introduction to and application of the processes that can be used in seeking information, evaluating the quality of the information retrieved, and synthesizing the information into a useful form.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 161. Tools for Information Literacy. 3 Credits.

Tools and concepts for information literacy. Includes software use and maintenance, computer applications, and networked information systems.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 201. Foundations of Information Science. 3 Credits.

Examines the evolution of information science; information representation, organization and management; search and retrieval; human information seeking and interaction; organizational behavior and communication; policy, ethics and scholarly communication.

Gen Ed: SS.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 202. Retrieval and Organizing Systems. 3 Credits.

Introduction to foundational core concepts and core techniques in information organization, information retrieval, and data mining.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 201.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 203. Human Information Behavior. 3 Credits.

Introduces key areas and concepts in information science, to include task modeling, information-seeking behavior, search behavior, human-computer interaction, usability, user interfaces, social media, and social media analysis.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 201.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 318. Human Computer Interaction. 3 Credits.

Design, implementation, and evaluation of interfaces for computer systems. User-based techniques, usability issues, and human factors.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 382.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 382. Information Systems Analysis and Design. 3 Credits.

Analysis of organizational problems and how information systems can be designed to solve those problems. Application of database and interface design principles to the implementation of information systems.

Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, INLS 161.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 384. Information and Computer Ethics. 3 Credits.

Overview of ethical reasoning, followed by examination of ethical issues relevant to information science, including access to information and technology, societal impacts of technology, information privacy, surveillance and security, intellectual property, and professional ethics.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 201.

Gen Ed: PH, CI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 385. Information Use for Organizational Effectiveness. 3 Credits.

Basic concepts in the way that information, people, and technology interact to influence organizational effectiveness. Principles of problem solving, teamwork, leadership, and organizational change/innovation.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 393. Information Science Internship. 3 Credits.

Permission of the school. Supervised observation and practice in information science. The internship typically takes place in an information agency or an information technology company. Faculty-led seminars and a paper enhance the experience. Pass/Fail only.

Gen Ed: EE- Academic Internship.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

INLS 396. Independent Study in Information Systems. 1-3 Credits.

Study by an individual student on a special topic under the direction of a specific faculty member. A prospectus/plan for the work is required in advance of registration.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-levelINLS 418. Human Factors in System Design. 3 Credits.

Design, implementation, and evaluation of interfaces for computer systems. User-based techniques, usability issues, and human factors.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 382.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 465. Understanding Information Technology for Managing Digital Collections. 3 Credits.

Prepares students to be conversant with information technologies that underlie digital collections in order to evaluate the work of developers, delegate tasks, write requests for proposals, and establish policies and procedures. Teaches students how to think about information technology systems and recognize and manage interdependencies between parts of the systems.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 467. Introduction to Information Security. 3 Credits.

Students will learn about many of the current issues facing businesses as well as how to prevent and discuss these issues and controls in depth. Focus will be placed upon preventing loss of information and protecting networks. Students should be able to understand any security control, describe its usage and rationale, as well as test and verify these controls are working as expected.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 161.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 490. Selected Topics. 1-3 Credits.

Exploration of an introductory-level special topic not otherwise covered in the curriculum. Previous offerings of these courses do not predict their future availability; new courses may replace these.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 9 total credits. 3 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 493. Professional Field Experience. 1 Credit.

Second field experience course to be offered to coincide with the student's information science project in a local organization. Enrollment restricted to IS majors and minors; Instructor permission required.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 393.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

INLS 500. Human Information Interactions. 3 Credits.

The behavioral and cognitive activities of those who interact with information, with emphasis on the role of information mediators. How information needs are recognized and resolved; use and dissemination of information.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 203 or graduate standing.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 501. Information Resources and Services. 3 Credits.

Analysis, use, and evaluation of information and reference systems, services, and tools for both printed and electronic delivery. Provides a foundation in electronic information search techniques, question negotiation, interviewing, and instruction.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 509. Information Retrieval. 3 Credits.

Study of information retrieval and question answering techniques, including document classification, retrieval and evaluation techniques, handling of large data collections, and the use of feedback.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: COMP 487.

INLS 512. Applications of Natural Language Processing. 3 Credits.

Students with graduate standing in SILS may take the course without the prerequisite. Explores current and future uses of natural language technologies. Topics vary and may include translation, generation, deception, health informatics, ethics and evaluation, and student-selected areas of interest.

Requisites: Prerequisite, COMP 110, 116, or 410.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: COMP 486.

INLS 513. Resource Selection and Evaluation. 3 Credits.

Identification, provision, and evaluation of resources to meet primary needs of clientele in different institutional environments.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 515. Consumer Health Information. 3 Credits.

Examines concepts of health, health conditions, policy, and information collections and services from social and cultural perspectives. Analysis and design for provision and access to consumer health information services.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 520. Organization of Information. 3 Credits.

Introduction to the problems and methods of organizing information, including information structures, knowledge schemata, data structures, terminological control, index language functions, and implications for searching.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 523. Introduction to Database Concepts and Applications. 3 Credits.

Design and implementation of basic database systems. Semantic modeling, relational database theory, including normalization, indexing, and query construction, SQL.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 161; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 525. Electronic Records Management. 3 Credits.

Explores relationships between new information and communication technologies and organizational efforts to define, identify, control, manage, and preserve records. Considers the importance of organizational, institutional and technological factors in determining appropriate recordkeeping strategies.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 530. Young Adult Literature and Related Materials. 3 Credits.

A survey of print and nonprint library materials particularly suited to the needs of adolescents.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 534. Youth and Technology in Libraries. 3 Credits.

This course encourages students to explore the array of technologies available to children and adolescents, the issues surrounding the use of technology, the role of care givers, and potential impacts on development.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 539. Going the Last Mile: Information Access for Underserved Populations. 3 Credits.

In this course we investigate the special challenges of providing information services to marginalized populations in an increasingly digital world.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 540. Building a Personal Digital Library. 3 Credits.

Students will implement a personal digital LifeTime Library. Topics include creation of a personal digital library, organization of the material, creation of descriptive metadata, management, and sharing of the collection.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 541. Information Visualization. 3 Credits.

An introduction to information visualization through reading current literature and studying exemplars. The course reviews information visualization techniques, provides a framework for identifying the need for information visualization, and emphasizes interactive electronic visualizations that use freely available tools. Students will construct several visualizations. No programming skills are required.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 550. History of the Book and Other Information Formats. 3 Credits.

The history of the origin and development of the book in all its formats: clay tablets to electronic. Coverage includes scientific and other scholarly publications, religious works, popular literature, periodicals, and newspapers.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 551. History of Libraries and Other Information-Related Cultural Institutions. 3 Credits.

The history of cultural institutions related to information from earliest times to the present day. Includes specific institutions, trends in service and facilities, and individuals important in the development of these institutions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 554. Cultural Institutions. 3 Credits.

This course will explore cultural institutions—libraries, museums, parks, zoological and botanical gardens, reconstructions and other settings—as lifelong educational environments.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 556. Introduction to Archives and Records Management. 3 Credits.

Survey of the principles, techniques, and issues in the acquisition, management, and administration of records, manuscripts, archives, and other cultural and documentary resources in paper, electronic, and other media formats.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 558. Principles and Techniques of Storytelling. 3 Credits.

An overview of storytelling, its historical development, and the presentation and administration of storytelling programs. The class focuses on performance skills merged with theoretical issues.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 560. Programming for Information Science. 3 Credits.

Introduction to programming and computational concepts. Students will learn to write programs using constructs such as iteration, flow control, variables, functions, and error handling. No programming experience required.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 561. Digital Forensics for Curation of Digital Collections. 3 Credits.

Students will learn about hardware, software, principles, and methods for capturing and curating digital data that have been stored on removable media (i.e., hard drives, floppy disks, USB memory sticks).

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 570. Intermediate Programming and Data Analysis. 3 Credits.

Intermediate programming concepts in information processing and data analysis. Students will learn object-oriented programming, data structures, data analysis methods, and information processing techniques in the context of information science topics.

Requisites: Prerequisite, COMP 110, COMP 116, or INLS 560, or equivalent course.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 572. Web Development I. 1.5 Credit.

Introduction to Internet history, architecture, and applications. Introduces design principles for creating usable and accessible Web sites. Develops technical skills and understanding of standards.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 161.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 573. Mobile Web Development. 1.5 Credit.

An introduction to techniques and technologies for the development of mobile Web sites and their applications.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 161.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 576. Distributed Systems and Administration. 3 Credits.

Distributed and client/server-based computing. Includes operating system basics, security concerns, and issues and trends in network administration.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 161 or 461.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 578. Protocols and Network Management. 3 Credits.

Network protocols and protocol stacks. Included are discussions of protocol classes, packet filtering, address filtering, network management, and hardware such as protocol analyzers, repeaters, routers, and bridges.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 161 or 461.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 581. Research Methods Overview. 3 Credits.

An introduction to research methods used in information and library science, exploring the design, interpretation, analysis, and application of published research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 582. Systems Analysis. 3 Credits.

Introduction to the systems approach to the design and development of information systems. Methods and tools for the analysis and modeling of system functionality (e.g., structured analysis) and data represented in the system (e.g., object-oriented analysis) are studied.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 382 or graduate standing.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 584. Information Ethics. 3 Credits.

An overview of ethical reasoning, followed by discussion of issues most salient to information professionals, e.g., intellectual property, privacy, access/censorship, effects of computerization, and ethical codes of conduct.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 585. Management for Information Professionals. 3 Credits.

Introduction to management principles and practices for information professionals working in all types of organizations. Topics include planning, budgeting, organizational theory, staffing, leadership, organizational change and evaluation, and decision making.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 586. Project Management. 1.5 Credit.

Strategies and skills needed to effectively manage projects, integrating project management theory with best practices in different organizational perspectives. Individual and team assignments include readings and case studies.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 609. Experimental Information Retrieval. 3 Credits.

This course takes an in-depth look at experimental information retrieval systems that focus on different search tasks and are evaluated in community-wide evaluation forums such as TREC and INEX.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 509.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 613. Text Mining. 3 Credits.

This course will allow the student to develop a general understanding of knowledge discovery and gain a specific understanding of text mining. Students will become familiar with both the theoretical and practical aspects of text mining and develop a proficiency with data modeling text.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 620. Web Information Organization. 3 Credits.

Similar programming background needed. Understand the Web as a platform for information organizing systems. Learn how the Web has been designed to be a service platform, data publishing platform, and application platform.

Requisites: Prerequisites, INLS 520 or 560.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 621. Personal Information Management. 3 Credits.

This course focuses on issues in personal information management research and practice, including information organization, human cognition and memory, task continuity across devices, preservation, and the role of technology in personal information management.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 623. Database Systems II: Intermediate Databases. 3 Credits.

Intermediate-level design and implementation of database systems, building on topics studied in INLS 523. Additional topics include MySQL, indexing, XML, and nontext databases.

Requisites: Prerequisites, INLS 382 or 582, and 523.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 624. Policy-Based Data Management. 3 Credits.

Students will develop policies for managing digital repositories and persistent archives. The rules will be implemented in the integrated Rule-Oriented Data System (iRODS), which organizes and distributes data into shareable collections.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 461 or COMP 110 or 116.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 625. Information Analytics. 3 Credits.

This course introduces analytical techniques to deal with very large data sets. Students will become familiar with predictive modeling, clustering, data mining, and paradigms such as map resource.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 560; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 626. Introduction to Big Data and NoSQL. 1.5 Credit.

Information is being generated at an exponential scale in many areas, from astronomy to social networking and e-marketing. Processes for handling these data are data intensive, require heavy read/write workloads, and do not need the stringent ACID properties of relational databases. Several specific systems will be studied as examples.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 523.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 641. Visual Analytics. 3 Credits.

This project-based course provides an overview of visual analytics. Material includes foundational concepts and theories, seminal and recent research in the field, and hands-on experience with commonly used technologies. Programming experience strongly recommended.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 651. Audio-Visual Archives Management. 1.5 Credit.

An introduction to the management of audio, film, and video archives with an emphasis on the history of recording, best practices for preservation and access, and copyright. Through selected readings, lecture, class discussion, assignment, and hands-on demonstration, students will gain an understanding of the history of recording, format identification, storage and handling, philosophy of media preservation, and copyright.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 660. Social Media and Society: A Theoretical and Empirical Overview. 3 Credits.

Explores the evolution, implications, and complications of social media in multiple spheres of life including sociality, community, politics, power and inequality, education, and information from theoretical and empirical perspectives.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 672. Web Development II. 3 Credits.

Study of design and implementation of applications using both client and server side configuration and programming. Example topics include PHP, ruby on Rails, and Javascript.

Requisites: Prerequisite, INLS 572.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 685. Project Management: Strategy and Applications. 3 Credits.

This course is a broad introduction to project management principles, tools, and strategies intended for use in a variety of applications. Key topics include project planning tools, project process groups, risk assessment, budgeting/cost estimation, and team management. Through the use of readings, videos, assignments, and forum discussions, students will have the opportunity to demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the strategy behind successful project management and problem resolution.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 690. Intermediate Selected Topics. 1-3 Credits.

Exploration of a special topic not otherwise covered in the curriculum, at an intermediate level. Previous offering of this course does not predict future availability; new courses may replace these. Topic varies by instructor.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 9 total credits. 3 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 691H. Research Methods in Information Science. 3 Credits.

Senior standing and permission of the instructor. Restricted to information science majors. An introduction to research methods used in information science. Includes the writing of a research proposal.

Gen Ed: CI, EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 692H. Honors Thesis in Information Science. 3 Credits.

Senior standing and permission of the instructor. Restricted to information science majors. Students in the SILS undergraduate honors program engage in independent research and write an honors thesis reporting the research under the supervision of a faculty member.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 696. Study in Information and Library Science. 1-3 Credits.

Study by an individual student on a special topic under the direction of a specific faculty member. Six credit maximum for master's students. Graduate faculty.

Requisites: Prerequisite, permission of the instructor.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

INLS 697. Information Science Capstone. 3 Credits.

Senior standing required. Information science major or minor. Contemporary topics of information science, information systems, information technology, information design, and information management. Assessment of future impact of new developments.

Grading status: Letter grade.

The bachelor of science in information science is designed to prepare its graduates for a variety of careers in the information industry, including information architecture, database design and implementation, Web design and implementation, business systems analyst, and information consulting, as well as for graduate study.

The information science major integrates the study of the creation and management of information content, the characteristics and needs of the people who create and use information, and the technologies used to support the creation and manipulation of information. Graduating students will

- Understand the many ways in which information can be created, communicated, stored, and/or transformed in order to benefit individuals, organizations, and society
- Possess practical skills for analyzing, processing, and managing information and for developing and managing information systems in our knowledge-based society. They will possess problem-solving and decision-making skills, be able to use information tools effectively, and be able to take a leadership role in our information economy
- Comprehend the value of information and information tools, and their role in society and the economy

- Be prepared to evaluate the role of information in a variety of industries, in different organizational settings, for different populations, and for different purposes
- Maintain a strong sense of the role of information in society, including historical and future roles

Admission (p. 1097) to the program is required.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the information science program, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate knowledge of the many ways in which information can be created, communicated, stored, and/or transformed, in order to benefit individuals, organizations, and society
- Demonstrate practical skills in analyzing, processing, and managing information and developing and managing information systems in a knowledge-based society
- Apply problem-solving and decision-making skills
- Effectively utilize information tools in preparation to taking a leadership role in the information economy
- Recognize the value of information and information tools, and their role in society and the economy
- Evaluate the role of information in a variety of industries, in different organizational settings, for different populations, and for different purposes

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill

- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

B.S.I.S. students are not allowed to complete more than 45 credits of their program (i.e., 45 of the 120 credits needed for graduation from UNC–Chapel Hill) in INLS courses. They may take a few additional INLS electives but are encouraged to acquire a broad education in the liberal arts and sciences.

All INLS courses (p. 1098) must be completed with a grade of C or better. Students may not select the Pass/Fail option for any of the courses fulfilling requirements for the B.S.I.S. major or for any additional INLS electives, except for INLS 393. INLS 393 is only graded Pass/Fail. A minimum grade point average for graduation is 2.0.

Special Opportunities in SILS

Dual Bachelor's–Master's Degree Program

The dual bachelor's–master's program is intended to enable information science majors to obtain both their bachelor's and master's degrees by early planning of an undergraduate program that integrates well with the graduate degree requirements for either a master's in information science (M.S.I.S.) or a master's in library science (M.S.L.S.).

Applying to the dual-degree program occurs in two steps. First, the student must apply to the B.S.I.S. program with intent to pursue the dual degree. The student must apply to the master's program in the sixth, seventh, or eighth semester of undergraduate study. For admission to study at the master's level in the fall semester, students should meet the application deadline in the prior spring, and for admission in the spring semester, the prior fall. In other words, students must apply in time to be continually enrolled, with no "gap" semester. The curriculum for the dual degree can be found on the SILS Web site (<http://sils.unc.edu/programs/bs-ms/curriculum/>).

Up to 12 credit hours of information science coursework taken while an undergraduate can be applied to the master's degree if the coursework is not also used to satisfy the graduation requirements for the bachelor's degree. The requirements for the master's degree can be found in the Graduate Catalog.

Students interested in the dual-degree program are strongly advised to consult the director of undergraduate studies or the undergraduate student services coordinator at SILS in their sophomore year to discuss eligibility and an appropriate plan of study.

Honors in Information Science

An honors program is available to information science majors who have demonstrated the ability to perform distinguished work. The honors thesis allows exceptional students in the undergraduate major to demonstrate the ability to treat a problem in a substantial and scholarly way. Students write an honors thesis on a topic related to information science and defend it before a faculty committee. They may graduate with honors or highest honors.

The honors program consists of two courses: INLS 691H and INLS 692H.

INLS 691H will be taken in the fall of the senior year. In this course, each student selects a research topic of interest, learns about research methods, and writes a research proposal. Assuming satisfactory completion of INLS 691H, students register for INLS 692H in the spring of their senior year. The student and advisor meet regularly to discuss the student's research and writing. The second reader for the thesis, identified jointly by the student and advisor, is chosen by the end of January. The director of the SILS honors program is the third reader. Refer to Honors Carolina for official due dates. The final approved thesis must be submitted electronically via the Carolina Digital Repository (CDR).

Students may apply for the honors program in the spring of their junior year. The requirements for conducting an honors thesis in information science include having taken at least four INLS courses, including two numbered above 299, and having a total INLS grade point average of at least 3.5. The student should have an overall grade point average of at least 3.3. Enrolling in INLS 692H is contingent on completing INLS 691H with a grade of A- or higher.

Students who complete a high-quality thesis will graduate with honors; those whose thesis is exceptional will graduate with highest honors.

Facilities/Resources

SILS maintains a combined specialized library and computer laboratory with ample seating for student collaborative work. The SILS Library is part of the UNC–Chapel Hill Academic Affairs Library System, and its collections are available for use in the library by all interested persons. The current collection consists of over 100,000 volumes and several hundred serials titles. The SILS computer laboratory is located in the school's Information Technology and Resource Center in Manning Hall and is available to students enrolled in SILS courses and programs. More than 40 PCs are available for student use, with space for use of student laptops in a wireless environment. A large selection of software is available, including data management, word processing, publishing, statistical analysis, Internet tools, graphics, development tools, multimedia, etc. Student assistants staff the help desk and are available to check out equipment and to answer questions.

SILS students also have access to a small student lounge in Manning Hall.

Field Experience

As a professional school at UNC–Chapel Hill, we encourage students to use the technical and theoretical knowledge they gain in the classroom in professional settings. Many SILS students participate in field experiences (INLS 393) whereby they gain experience in a setting of the student's choosing.

Students must spend 135 hours with the site, attend field experience seminars, and produce a short paper for their field experience faculty advisor. Students are eligible for field experiences once they have junior status and three INLS courses: INLS 161, INLS 201, and INLS 382. Field experiences can be taken in any semester, including the summer, and can be in any information setting.

Student Involvement

Undergraduate students are encouraged to participate in ILSSA (Information and Library Science Student Association). All of the school's standing committees have student representation. In addition, students may participate in professional associations in information and library science, including the student chapters of the Association for Information Science and Technology (ASIS&T), the Student Chapter of the American Library Association (SCALA), Special Libraries Association (SLA), the Art and Museum Library and Information Student Society (AMLISS), the Student Chapter of the Society of American Archivists (SCOSAA), and Checked Out: SILS Diversity.

Study Abroad

SILS has formal study abroad agreements with seven information schools in the Czech Republic, Singapore, Denmark, South Korea, Chile, Spain, and Ireland. Students can spend a summer, semester, or year studying abroad to earn course credit toward their information science major or information systems minor. The exchanges are administered through the UNC Study Abroad Office but are managed by SILS. Credit transfer should be confirmed with SILS before beginning the exchange. In addition, UNC–Chapel Hill has formal university ties with approximately 75 other universities — many of them with library and information science schools. SILS also offers short-term summer seminars in various locations. These programs are two weeks in length and offer an in-depth view on information science. Students who wish to enjoy an international experience while studying at SILS are encouraged to talk with the SILS international programs coordinator.

Undergraduate Awards

Two scholarships of $1,000 each are awarded to newly admitted undergraduates in the spring and fall. Undergraduates completing an honors thesis are eligible to apply for a Carnegie Grant. This award of up to $200 may be used to offset any costs that might occur during their research.

Undergraduate Research

Undergraduates enrolled in the honors program conduct research as part of the completion of their honors thesis. Students not in the honors program may also take advantage of a number of opportunities to participate in research with faculty members.

Introduction

The Hussman School of Journalism and Media was founded as the Department of Journalism in 1924 and became the School of Journalism in 1950. The school offers a course of study leading to the bachelor of arts with a major in media and journalism and a minor in media and journalism.

When the school was last accredited in 2015 by the Accrediting Council on Education in Journalism and Mass Communications (ACEJMC), the national team stated that the school "has earned a reputation as one of the premier programs" in the country.

Today, more than 10,000 of the school's alumni are active in every aspect of media and journalism. They hold high positions with newspapers, international news agencies, magazines, Internet companies, broadcasting companies, and advertising agencies; in public relations, business journalism, photo and video journalism, and graphic design; and in research, government, education, and industry.

Advising

For students who have been accepted to the Hussman School of Journalism and Media, advising is available year round by appointment and on a walk-in basis in the Undergraduate Hub in Carroll Hall. See the school's Web site (<http://hussman.unc.edu/ug/studentservices/academicadvising/>) for details. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with an advisor. Advising for College of Arts and Sciences second majors is available by appointment in Academic Advising, located in Steele Building.

Graduate School

The school offers an M.A. degree in mass communication and a Ph.D. degree in mass communication. MEJO graduate courses may be used as minor or supplementary courses for the M.A. and Ph.D. in other fields. For further information about the graduate program, write to the senior associate dean for graduate studies of the Hussman School of Journalism and Media or see the school's Web site (<http://hussman.unc.edu/grad/>).

Career Opportunities

The school operates a Career Services Office (located in the Undergraduate Hub in Carroll Hall), which is designed to fit the right graduating senior (or alumnus or alumna) with the right job. Students in the school are also encouraged to use University Career Services.

Contact Information

Information is available from the Undergraduate Hub in Carroll Hall, from the Dean's Office in 117 Carroll Hall, or from the senior associate dean for undergraduate studies. Current and prospective students will also find the school's Web site (<http://www.hussman.unc.edu>) helpful. A weekly newsletter is sent by email to media and journalism majors and prospective majors during the academic year. Contact the undergraduate hub coordinator to be added to the listserv.

Admission to the School

Students are subject to the requirements in place when they are admitted to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; consequently, the requirements described in this catalog particularly apply to students admitted to the University during the 2020–2021 academic year.

Students enroll in the General College of the University during their first two years, after which they may transfer to the Hussman School of Journalism and Media. (Students may take some MEJO courses in the first two years as noted in the section on preparing for the major.) It is highly recommend that students interested in the school declare in advance that their primary major will be in media and journalism. At the same time students should indicate a study area of interest.

Undergraduate admission to UNC–Chapel Hill is handled by the University's Office of Undergraduate Admissions, and requests for information and application forms should be sent to that office. The Office of Undergraduate Admissions also will advise transfer students on the proper first-year and sophomore courses to take in preparation for junior-year transfer to Chapel Hill from other campuses.

Students typically are admitted to the school when they attain sophomore standing with a total of 45 or more completed hours and have completed most of the requirements of the General College on the Chapel Hill campus or have earned grades of C or better in equivalent courses at other recognized institutions. To qualify to enter from the General College or from another UNC–Chapel Hill department or school, students must apply for admission to the school. Students can take up to 24 hours of MEJO courses prior to being admitted.

Because the University limits the number of transfer students from other institutions, transfer applicants compete for admission to the school on the basis of grade point averages and other academic credentials, and on such matters as commitment to a career in journalism and media and letters of recommendation. The Office of Undergraduate Admissions makes the final decision on admitting transfer students, after consultation with the school.

Preparation for the Major

Students should take MEJO 153 and MEJO 121 in the first semester of their sophomore year. MEJO 101 is open to first-year students and sophomores. Seniors have first priority for courses, then juniors, then sophomores. Many courses require prerequisites and are restricted to majors only.

The school prepares students for careers in journalism and media by offering an academic program that provides a basic liberal arts education, an understanding of the responsibilities of a free press and the role of free speech in a democratic society, and a fundamental knowledge of journalistic and media techniques and substance.

The philosophy that guides the school is that journalists and communicators must understand the political, social, economic, and cultural forces that operate within society. For this reason, students acquire a background in the humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences while preparing themselves for journalism and media careers.

More than perhaps any other field, journalism requires a strong foundation in word usage, grammar, punctuation, and other writing skills. Students must score at least 70 percent on the school's usage and grammar examination as a condition for graduation. The examination is administered several times a semester and during the summer.

Students are responsible for meeting all other graduation requirements. If they have questions about their requirements they should consult an advisor in the school's Undergraduate Hub (Carroll Hall) or a senior associate dean. Specific information about graduation requirements, advising, registration, and other procedures is also available on the school's Web site.

The school cannot guarantee that courses needed to satisfy a student's degree requirements will be offered during summer school. Students who plan to complete degree requirements in summer school should be aware that low enrollments sometimes force the school to cancel certain courses or sections during either or both summer sessions.

- Demonstrate an understanding of the history and role of professionals and institutions in shaping communications.
- Demonstrate an understanding of gender, race ethnicity, sexual orientation and, as appropriate, other forms of diversity in domestic society in relation to journalism and media.
- Demonstrate an understanding of the diversity of peoples and cultures and of the significance and impact of mass communications in a global society.
- Understand concepts and apply theories in the use and presentation of images and information.
- Demonstrate an understanding of professional ethical principles and work ethically in pursuit of truth, accuracy, fairness and diversity.
- Think critically, creatively and independently.
- Conduct research and evaluate information by methods appropriate to the communications professions in which they work.
- Write correctly and clearly in forms and styles appropriate for the communications professions, audiences and purposes they serve.
- Critically evaluate their own work and that of others for accuracy and fairness, clarity, appropriate style and grammatical correctness.
- Apply basic numerical and statistical concepts.
- Apply tools and technologies appropriate for the communications professions in which they work.

In addition to the ACEJMC competencies listed above, the school espouses and lives by the Hussman statement of core values:

- Impartiality means reporting, editing, and delivering the news honestly, fairly, objectively, and without personal opinion or bias. Credibility is the greatest asset of any news medium, and impartiality is the greatest source of credibility.
- To provide the most complete report, a news organization must not just cover the news, but uncover it. It must follow the story wherever it leads, regardless of any preconceived ideas on what might be most newsworthy.
- The pursuit of truth is a noble goal of journalism. But the truth is not always apparent or known immediately. Journalists' role is therefore not to determine what they believe at that time to be the truth and reveal only that to their readers, but rather to report as completely and impartially as possible all verifiable facts so that readers can, based on their own knowledge and experience, determine what they believe to be the truth.

- When a newspaper delivers both news and opinions, the impartiality and credibility of the news organization can be questioned. To minimize this as much as possible there needs to be a sharp and clear distinction between news and opinion, both to those providing and consuming the news.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

The requirements were updated in the 2018–2019 Catalog on 8/21/2018.

^H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

¹ MEJO 141 may also be used towards the 'conceptual' requirement (see below).

² Cannot be used towards the 'Outside Concentration' requirement.

³ PHIL 272/POLI 272/PWAD 272 can be used to satisfy the 'Outside Concentration' requirement because it also fulfills the GL and NA Gen Ed requirements.

⁴ Students are expected to gain a depth of knowledge of a topic outside the school. Completing another major or minor would fulfill this requirement.

Students who wish to complete a second major outside the school and who did not declare the second major before being admitted to the school must download a second-major declaration form from the school's Web site and return it to Student Records and Registration in Carroll Hall for approval. They must then meet with an academic advisor in the College of Arts and Sciences to ensure that they can meet all requirements for the second major.

Requirements in Both Study Areas

The degree earned is the bachelor of arts with a major in media and journalism. Two areas of study are offered: a concentration in advertising/public relations and a concentration in journalism. Areas of study are not noted on the diploma. Some courses are required for all majors in the school, and each area of study has specific course requirements.

Students who enter the University in fall 2013 or later must complete a minimum of 39 credits in media and journalism with a grade point average of 2.0 or better. A grade of D in a MEJO core course will not be counted in the minimum number of media and journalism credits required for graduation; the course must be retaken if it is required for the major. If the course is not specifically required, then another course that meets the requirement the first course was meeting may be taken in its stead. MEJO 393 cannot be counted in the minimum of 39 credit hours required, but will count in the total 120-credit hours required by the University. The school will normally accept only six credit hours of media and journalism courses taken at other institutions and requires students to pass exemption examinations to receive credit for certain basic courses. The school typically does not accept transfer credit for MEJO 153.

Of the basic 120 hours for graduation at least 72 hours must be outside media and journalism. Please check the course list below or ConnectCarolina for prerequisite information for MEJO courses.

Students must achieve a passing score of at least 70 on the school's usage and grammar examination.

Special Opportunities in Journalism and Media

Honors in Journalism and Media

An honors program is available to students who have demonstrated their ability to perform distinguished work. Invitation to the senior-level honors courses (MEJO 691H and MEJO 692H) is based upon a grade point average of 3.5 or better in the major and 3.3 overall, recommendation by a faculty member in the school, and approval by the director of the honors program. Students successfully completing the program graduate with honors or with highest honors. A number of other courses carry the honors designation.

Student Involvement

Students are encouraged to work on campus publications and programs such as The Daily Tar Heel, Black Ink, Blue & White, The Siren, Synapse, and the Her Campus Web site, among others. The school also offers a number of opportunities to gain professional experience including 'Carolina Week,' 'Carolina Connection,' 'Sports Xtra,' The Durham VOICE, Reese Innovation Lab, and Heelprint Communications. Students are also encouraged to join appropriate professional organizations, including campus chapters of the Society of Professional Journalists, American Advertising Federation, Public Relations Student Society of America, Carolina Association of Black Journalists (affiliated with the National Association of Black Journalists), Radio Television Digital News Association, Society for News Design, National Press Photographers Association, Carolina Association of Future Magazine Editors, and SABEW.

Internships

The school strongly encourages students to obtain internships because they provide invaluable professional experience. Reporting, advertising, photo and video journalism, graphic design, broadcast news, public relations, business, and other internships are possible. Majors can enroll in MEJO 393 to receive internship credit (one credit hour, repeatable three times). MEJO 393 fulfills the experiential education General Education requirement. The school's career services staff oversees internship credit. MEJO 393 cannot be counted in the minimum of 39 credit hours required by the school, but it will count in the total 120 credit hours required by the University. MEJO 153 is a prerequisite.

Study Abroad

Students are encouraged to study abroad. In addition to the programs available to all students through the UNC Study Abroad Office, the school has its own study abroad exchanges with top media and journalism schools in Australia, Argentina, Chile, France, Hong Kong, London, and Spain. Students should consult with the school's study abroad advisors (located in the Undergraduate Hub in Carroll Hall) to determine any media and journalism course credit prior to the study abroad term.

Undergraduate Scholarships

Many special scholarships are available to media and journalism majors and to students transferring into the school. For information, see the school's Web site (<http://hussman.unc.edu/funding/>).

Undergraduate Research

Some undergraduates participate in research through a research pool that assists faculty members in their research and creative activities, through independent studies with faculty members to work on specific projects, and through the school's honors program, which engages the student in substantive research that culminates in a thesis in the senior year.

Stock market swings on Wall Street, changes in how corporate America operates and is governed, and fluctuations in the United States and global economies have left many journalists and communication professionals scrambling to improve their skills to cover such stories. The bachelor of arts with a major in business journalism teaches undergraduate students the concepts, skills, and techniques needed to report and write about such issues for journalism and media in the 21st century. It is the only such program in the University system and the only such undergraduate program at any public university east of the Mississippi River.

The Hussman School of Journalism and Media, in conjunction with the Kenan–Flagler Business School, created the major in business journalism to enable potential journalists and other communication professionals to address the growing need for understanding how markets and business work and the ability to explain these increasingly complex areas in a way that the average media consumer can understand. The program prepares undergraduate students for positions primarily in journalism but also in public relations and internal communications.

Admission Requirements

Students must apply within the School of Media and Journalism. Applications will be accepted in the fall only. The earliest students may apply is the fall of their sophomore year. Because admission to the major is by application only, students should provisionally declare reporting as their intended specialization in the school with an advisor in the Academic Advising Program. To enter the program, students must be classified as a sophomore with a total of 45 or more completed hours the fall following their application and have a cumulative grade point average of 3.1.

Students must provide the following documents:

1. application
2. résumé
3. writing sample
4. 200-word statement explaining why they want to join the program
5. two letters of recommendation

The business journalism major and minor programs are not currently accepting students; however, the business journalism certificate remains.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the business journalism program, students should be able to:

- Understand and apply the principles and laws of freedom of speech and press
- Think critically, creatively, and independently
- Conduct research and evaluate information
- Write correctly and clearly early in students' career at the School of Media and Journalism
- Apply tools and technologies appropriate for the communications professions in which they work
- Demonstrate specific knowledge in a substantive area of the field

In addition to the above ACEJMC competencies listed above, the school espouses and lives by the Hussman statement of core values:

- Impartiality means reporting, editing, and delivering the news honestly, fairly, objectively, and without personal opinion or bias. Credibility is the greatest asset of any news medium, and impartiality is the greatest source of credibility.

Students from outside the school may earn a minor in media and journalism. Areas of study in advertising/public relations and journalism are available. Participation is limited, and interested students must submit applications in the Records and Registration suite by January 15. Preference is given to students who have already taken multiple journalism and media courses.

The business journalism major and minor programs are not currently accepting students; however, the business journalism certificate remains.

A certificate signifying a concentration of three or more courses in a related field of study is noted on a student's transcript. A limited number of students (within and outside the school) are admitted to each program and guaranteed a seat in the required courses.

Certificate in Business Journalism

The certificate in business journalism is offered for students within and outside the school interested in a career in business reporting or editing as well as for students interested in careers in corporate communication and corporate advertising. Students interested in applying to the program should contact the director of the business journalism program. Students must complete three courses (nine credit hours) to receive the certificate.

Divisions of the Department of Allied Health Sciences in the UNC School of Medicine offer two professional majors to undergraduate students: the bachelor of science degree with a major in clinical laboratory science (p. 1126) and the bachelor of science degree with a major in radiologic science (p. 1131). Students must apply for admission to these programs, usually in the sophomore year; admission is competitive. Following completion of the first two years' work in the University's General College, admitted students complete their final two years in clinical laboratory science or radiologic science.

In addition, the Division of Speech and Hearing Sciences offers a minor in speech and hearing sciences (p. 1134) for undergraduate students interested in pursuing a graduate degree in speech-language pathology or audiology.

Introduction

Clinical laboratory science (CLS), also called “medical laboratory science,” is the health profession that provides laboratory information and services needed for the diagnosis and treatment of disease. The field of clinical laboratory science combines many sciences, including microbiology, hematology, chemistry, and immunology. Clinical laboratory scientists perform a variety of laboratory tests, ensure the accuracy of the test results, explain the significance of laboratory test results, and evaluate new methods for laboratory tests. Some of the tests performed in the clinical laboratory are relatively simple. Others, such as DNA analysis and flow cell cytometry, are complex and require extensive education.

Examples of laboratory tests performed by clinical laboratory scientists include

- Detection of the abnormal cells that cause leukemia
- Analysis of cardiac enzyme activity released during a heart attack
- Identification of the type of bacteria causing an infection
- Analysis of the coagulation factors in cases of abnormal bleeding
- Detection of blood group antibodies that cause transfusion reactions
- Analysis of genetic markers for cystic fibrosis
- Typing patients for histocompatibility matches prior to transplantation

Admission to the Program

A maximum of 20 students are chosen for admission each year. Students are selected on the basis of science and mathematics prerequisite courses, grades, a written application, interviews, and letters of recommendation. Successful completion of the prerequisite courses listed under the major does not guarantee admission to the program. Because enrollment is limited, students are encouraged to begin the application process early in the fall preceding the year of enrollment. The first deadline for completed applications is the second Tuesday in January. Completed applications received after that deadline will be considered for admission if positions are available in the program.

Students are subject to the requirements in place when they are admitted to this program; consequently, the requirements described in this catalog particularly apply to students admitted during the 2020–2021 academic year.

Advising

First-year and sophomore students interested in the clinical laboratory science (CLS) major have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. The director of the Division of Clinical Laboratory Science is available to meet with current and prospective majors by appointment (see contact information above). The Division of Clinical Laboratory Science provides academic advising for students who are enrolled in the program. Further information on the curriculum may be obtained from the division’s Web site.

Facilities

The laboratory facility for first-year clinical laboratory science courses includes individualized work areas with reagents, supplies, and laboratory instruments for students. In senior courses, students develop their skills in state of the art clinical laboratory facilities.

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

Clinical laboratory science provides a basis for a broad range of future endeavors. Graduates with a B.S. degree in clinical laboratory science can elect to pursue further study in medicine, dentistry, veterinary medicine, business or management, hospital administration, computer science, education, clinical chemistry, clinical microbiology, immunology, or another laboratory science area. The Division of Clinical Laboratory Science also offers a master’s degree in clinical laboratory science.

Clinical laboratory scientists are employed in hospital laboratories, commercial laboratories, physicians’ office laboratories, research institutes, clinical trials, and forensic laboratories. Clinical laboratory scientists also may be employed as technical or sales representatives for corporations. Graduates of the program are very successful on national certification exams and enjoy high employment rates. See the alumni section of the Web site for examples of careers in clinical laboratory science.

CLSC–Clinical Laboratory Science Undergraduate-level

CLSC 150. Current Topics in Clinical Laboratory Medicine. 1 Credit.

A survey of topics in laboratory medicine including transfusions, forensic science, infectious diseases, and hematologic diseases.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level

CLSC 410. Laboratory Mathematics. 1 Credit.

Permission of the instructor for nonmajors. Basic mathematical principles, calculations, quality assurance, and method validation relevant to the clinical laboratory.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 410L. Basic and Molecular Laboratory Methods. 2 Credits.

Majors only. Basic skills associated with the clinical laboratory including pipetting, spectrophotometry, standard curves, dilutions, and immunoassays. Molecular methods include small volume pipetting, microwell plating, nucleic acid extraction, and PCR techniques.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 420. Urinalysis and Body Fluids. 1 Credit.

Permission of the instructor for nonmajors. The physical, chemical, and microscopic analysis of body fluids in the clinical laboratory with an emphasis on correlation of laboratory data.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 420L. Urinalysis Laboratory. 1 Credit.

For clinical laboratory science majors only. The physical, chemical, and microscopic examination of urine with an emphasis on the correlation of laboratory data.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 430. Biochemistry. 3 Credits.

Permission of the instructor for nonmajors. Physiological biochemistry of the metabolic pathways and alterations in selected diseases. Also includes principles and applications of molecular techniques in the clinical laboratory.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 440. Hematology I. 2 Credits.

Permission of the instructor for nonmajors. Introduction to normal hematopoiesis, blood cell function and identification, hematologic tests, principles of hemostasis, and hemostasis disorders.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 440L. Hematology I Laboratory. 1 Credit.

Permission of the instructor for nonmajors. Basic clinical assays for identification and evaluation of erythrocytes, leukocytes, and platelets with an emphasis on microscopy. Also includes coagulation testing.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 442. Hematology II. 3 Credits.

Majors only. Hematologic disorders involving erythrocytes and leukocytes, with an emphasis on the analysis and interpretation of laboratory data.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 442L. Hematology II Laboratory. 1 Credit.

Majors only. Microscopic identification and evaluation of abnormal erythrocyte and leukocyte morphology, correlation with other laboratory data, and clinical interpretation.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 450. Immunology. 3 Credits.

Permission of the instructor for nonmajors. Basic immunology and serology. Innate and immune body defenses. The development and properties of cellular and humoral elements and their alterations in pathological and other conditions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 460. Special Pathogens. 2 Credits.

Permission of the instructor for nonmajors. Study of clinically significant fungi, parasites, and atypical or unusual bacteria. Correlation of disease, disease transmission, mechanisms of pathogenicity, and diagnostic testing.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 460L. Parasitology and Mycology Laboratory. 1 Credit.

Permission of the instructor for nonmajors. Clinical laboratory diagnostic methods for human parasitic and fungal infections. Microscopic morphology of fungal organisms and parasites, including their various life cycle forms.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 462. Clinical Bacteriology. 3 Credits.

Majors only. Principles and practice of clinical bacteriology. Study of medically significant bacteria with correlation of human disease, mechanisms of bacterial pathogenicity, and laboratory diagnostics.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 462L. Clinical Bacteriology Laboratory. 2 Credits.

Majors only. A comprehensive course describing bacteria that infect humans. Correlation of diseases and pathological mechanisms of bacteria.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 470. Clinical Chemistry. 3 Credits.

Majors only. An introduction to the methods of analysis used in the clinical chemistry laboratory. Emphasis on the correlation of chemistry laboratory values with disease states.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 470L. Clinical Chemistry Laboratory. 2 Credits.

Majors only. Performance of clinical laboratory assays for significant biochemical molecules. Principles of analysis, quality control, method evaluation, and basic laboratory instrumentation are presented.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 480. Immunohematology. 3 Credits.

Majors only. Introduction to blood group serology with an emphasis on the major blood group systems, pretransfusion testing, and antibody identification.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 480L. Immunohematology Laboratory. 2 Credits.

Majors only. Laboratory techniques for red cell typing, antibody identification, and pretransfusion testing.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 540L. Clinical Hematology Laboratory. 4 Credits.

Majors only. Laboratory rotation in clinical hematology.

Requisites: Prerequisite, CLSC 440.

Gen Ed: EE- Field Work.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 542L. Clinical Hemostasis Laboratory. 2 Credits.

Majors only. Laboratory rotation in clinical coagulation.

Requisites: Prerequisite, CLSC 440.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 550L. Clinical Immunology Laboratory. 1 Credit.

Majors only. Laboratory rotation in clinical immunology.

Requisites: Prerequisite, CLSC 450.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 560L. Clinical Microbiology Laboratory. 4 Credits.

Majors only. Laboratory rotation in clinical microbiology.

Requisites: Prerequisite, CLSC 462.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 570L. Clinical Chemistry Laboratory Rotation. 4 Credits.

Majors only. Laboratory rotation in clinical chemistry.

Requisites: Prerequisite, CLSC 470.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 580L. Clinical Immunohematology Laboratory. 4 Credits.

Majors only. Laboratory rotation in clinical immunohematology.

Requisites: Prerequisite, CLSC 480.

Gen Ed: EE- Field Work.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 582L. Clinical Transplantation Medicine Laboratory. 1 Credit.

Majors only. Clinical rotation in histocompatibility, flow cytometry, and hematopoietic progenitor cell laboratories.

Requisites: Prerequisite, CLSC 480.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 620. Clinical Laboratory Management. 2 Credits.

Majors only. Foundation in the technical and nontechnical aspects of supervision and management of clinical laboratory testing.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 630. Research Methods in Clinical Laboratory Science. 2 Credits.

Majors only. An overview of the knowledge of research design and methods commonly used in the clinical laboratory research arena, providing the basis for the critical examination of professional literature.

Gen Ed: CI.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 670. Clinical Laboratory Science Educational Methods. 2 Credits.

Majors only. Introduction to the basic principles of clinical laboratory education, including objectives, learning formats, test development, and clinical teaching.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 2 total credits. 1 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

CLSC 695. Undergraduate Research in Clinical Laboratory Science. 3 Credits.

This mentored and self-directed course provides students with research experience in the clinical laboratory field. Students will apply knowledge of research methods to generate results and communicate results to others. This is a clinical laboratory science elective course. Seniors only.

Requisites: Prerequisite, CLSC 630 or CLSC 730.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

Admission (p. 1124) to the program is required.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the Clinical Laboratory Science program, students should be able to:

- Perform and evaluate pre-analytical, analytical, and post-analytical procedures to ensure the quality of laboratory results
- Perform laboratory tests, analyze and verify results, and resolve common problems in all the major areas of the clinical laboratory
- Explain the principles and methods used in laboratory tests in all major areas of the clinical laboratory
- Explain the clinical significance of laboratory procedures in diagnosis and treatment of disease and maintenance of health
- Correlate information from different laboratory departments to verify results or resolve problems
- Evaluate patient results and suggest or select appropriate additional testing
- Determine the priority of laboratory requests and arrange the workload for optimal patient care and efficiency
- Obtain acceptable blood samples for laboratory tests using standard phlebotomy procedures
- Use quality assurance principles and practices to ensure the accuracy and reliability of laboratory information
- Perform preventive and corrective maintenance of equipment and instruments
- Use the principles of method evaluation to select new techniques and instruments
- Explain and apply the major principles and practices of laboratory administration, supervision, and budgeting
- Explain and apply principles of effective test utilization
- Comply with all standard safety regulations and monitor changes in safety regulations
- Use educational methods to present information and develop instructional materials
- Use computer systems to produce documents, research information, communicate with others, and enter and retrieve laboratory information
- Apply principles of management to the acquisition and evaluation of laboratory information systems
- Communicate effectively with laboratory personnel, other health care professionals, patients, and the public
- Demonstrate professional conduct and interpersonal skills with patients, laboratory personnel, other health care professionals, and the public
- Demonstrate ethical standards in all matters related to medical information and patient care

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill

- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

The schedule of academic work for clinical laboratory science majors includes the following General Education requirements. Students must complete all Foundations and Approaches requirements and take at least five Connections courses, including global issues, experiential education, and U.S. diversity. In addition, the following prerequisite courses must be completed before entering the Clinical Laboratory Science program:

After admission (p. 1129) to the CLS program, students take courses in all the major areas of clinical laboratory science including clinical chemistry, hematology, hemostasis, microbiology, transfusion medicine, and transplantation medicine. Senior students rotate through the clinical laboratories at UNC Hospitals and other laboratories in the state. They also take advanced courses in the clinical laboratory sciences. Honors contracts are available for students in the Honors program.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

In the first and sophomore years, clinical laboratory science majors satisfy General Education requirements and take a basic science curriculum comparable to that of other science students. In the sophomore year, students apply for admission (p. 1124) into the final two years of the program. Students in the UNC–Chapel Hill General College are required to satisfy all Foundations and Approaches requirements and take at least five Connections courses, including global issues, experiential education, and U.S. diversity courses.

The junior year includes courses that cover the principal areas of clinical laboratory science. Students also learn and practice laboratory techniques in a student laboratory. Senior students rotate through the clinical laboratories at UNC Hospitals and other laboratories in the state. They also take advanced courses in the clinical laboratory sciences.

The suggested course sequence for the required preclinical laboratory science courses at UNC–Chapel Hill is listed below. Transfer students receiving placement credit may have a slightly different sequence.

Special Opportunities in Clinical Laboratory Science

Departmental Involvement

Student ambassadors in the Department of Allied Health Sciences organize students' professional activities and social events. The CLS Service Society provides opportunities for students to work together to promote the CLS profession and provide services to the community.

Experiential Education

Senior clinical courses provide a range of clinical laboratory experience in chemistry, hematology, hemostasis, microbiology, transfusion medicine, immunology, histocompatibility, and molecular testing.

Certification

Upon successful completion of the clinical laboratory science curriculum, graduates receive the B.S. degree with a major in clinical laboratory science. A certificate also is awarded by the Division of Clinical Laboratory Science and the Department of Allied Health Sciences. Graduates of the program are eligible to take the national certification examination in medical laboratory science.

Accreditation

The Clinical Laboratory Science Program is accredited by the National Accrediting Agency for Clinical Laboratory Sciences, 5600 N. River Road, Suite 720, Rosemont, IL, 60018-5119, (773) 714-8880, www.naacls.org (<http://www.naacls.org>).

Undergraduate Awards

Louise Ward Scholarships: Three scholarships are awarded to clinical laboratory science students each year based on academic excellence, potential for success as a clinical laboratory science student and practitioner, and financial need.

Additional scholarships available to clinical laboratory science students include

- The Lanning-Taylor Scholarship, awarded to a senior clinical laboratory science student
- The Raleigh Pathology Laboratory Associates Scholarship, awarded to a junior or a senior student
- The WakeMed Health and Hospital Annual CLS Scholarship, awarded to a junior or senior student
- The Allene W. Alphin and Jesse C. Alphin Scholarships, awarded to two clinical laboratory science students

Outstanding CLS Student: Each year a clinical laboratory science senior is named as the outstanding student based on nominations from clinical and academic faculty members.

Introduction

The School of Medicine's radiologic science program is designed to prepare individuals for professional practice and associated responsibilities in the health specialty of medical imaging. Graduates provide patient assessment and care required for medical imaging procedures in addition to insuring that the highest quality imaging study is completed with the patient's radiation dose as a factor. In addition to diagnostic radiology, students may select other imaging modalities and practice areas for additional competence and training. These other areas include pediatrics, mammography, computed tomography, magnetic resonance imaging, vascular interventional radiology, and cardiac catheterization laboratory. The curriculum includes course discussions and projects on global health imaging issues and the potential for international experiences in medical imaging departments and programs abroad.

Admission to the Program

Following completion of the first two years' work in the University's General College, students may be admitted to the professional major offered by the Department of Allied Health Sciences of the UNC School of Medicine. Students enrolled at other colleges and universities who are interested in transferring to the Chapel Hill campus following their sophomore year should contact the Office of Undergraduate Admissions and the Division of Radiologic Science early in their college career to assure proper planning and transferability of courses. Students are encouraged to begin the application process early in the fall semester preceding the year of intended enrollment. The program begins in Summer Session II each year. Transfer applications should be received in the Office of Undergraduate Admissions by the designated University deadline, which is usually early January.

Since enrollment in the major is limited, completion of the student's course of study in the General College does not guarantee a position in the professional class. Students should contact the Division of Radiologic Science in the fall semester preceding anticipated enrollment to receive admissions information. Student selections are made on a competitive basis with consideration given to academic achievement, character, both written and oral communication skills, and demonstrated interest in medical imaging as a professional career.

Students are subject to the requirements in place when they are admitted to this program; consequently, the requirements described in this catalog particularly apply to students admitted during the 2019–2020 academic year.

Advising

First-year and sophomore students interested in the B.S. degree with a major in radiologic science have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building during the first two years of the degree program. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. The director of the Division of Radiologic Science is available to meet with current and prospective majors by appointment (see contact information above). The division's faculty provides academic advising for students who are enrolled in the program. Further information on the curriculum may be obtained from radiologic science Web site (<http://www.med.unc.edu/ahs/radisci/>).

Facilities

The program has a state-of-the-art laboratory with digital imaging capabilities in the Burnett-Womack Building adjacent to the offices and classroom building. The laboratory includes radiography and fluoroscopic equipment with digital imaging plate readers and software.

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

The Division of Radiologic Science bachelor of science degree program provides a basis for further study. Additional clinical specializations are available in diagnostic medical sonography (ultrasound), nuclear medicine, and radiation therapy. Graduates may elect graduate studies in health physics, business and education, management, public health, and other health professions. The division offers a master's in radiologic science degree program for those students seeking advanced clinical practice as a radiologist assistant.

The clinical practice of medical imaging (radiologic technology) may include one or more of the specialty areas listed here, depending on professional preference and the type, size, and mission of the health facility where the technologist is employed: general radiography (such as orthopedics or pediatrics), vascular imaging, cardiac catheterization, computed tomography, and magnetic resonance imaging. Responsibilities and salaries vary according to the area and scope of practice.

Employment opportunities available in a variety of settings, in both rural and urban areas, include

1. more generalized practice in medium to small hospitals;
2. specialized clinical practice in a large hospital;
3. clinics and free-standing imaging centers, which may offer both special and general practice opportunities; or

4. clinical practice coupled with expanded responsibilities in quality control, service education, and supervision, particularly in a large hospital.

RADI–Radiologic Science

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level

RADI 432. Concepts and Perspectives in Radiologic Science. 1 Credit.

This overview of radiologic science encompasses patient care, imaging modalities for diagnosis and treatment, radiation protection, health care trends, and information management systems. Pass/Fail course.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

RADI 442. Introduction to Radiologic Science. 3 Credits.

Majors only. Lectures, discussions, demonstrations, and laboratory exercises are combined to introduce topics including patient assessment, image characteristics, radiation protection, positioning skills, medical terminology, and the role of imaging sciences in health care.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 461. Radiography I. 4 Credits.

Prepares students for standard radiography of upper extremities, lower extremities, axial skeleton, bony thorax, chest, abdomen, and the basic skull, considering pathologies and gross, radiographic, and cross-sectional anatomy. Three lecture hours and two laboratory hours.

Requisites: Prerequisites, AHSC 440 and RADI 442.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 462. Radiographic Imaging I. 4 Credits.

An overview of radio-graphic imaging methods examining the imaging process as a sequence of events from X-ray production through hard copy processing. The imaging equipment is discussed in terms of function, influence on the image, the impact of alteration on image characteristics, and compensation techniques for changes in the sequence. Three lecture hours and two laboratory hours.

Requisites: Prerequisites, AHSC 440 and RADI 442.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 463. Clinical Education I. 4 Credits.

A clinical course focusing on the application and evaluation of radiography in the hospital setting. With supervision, the student develops clinical skills through observation and participation in radiographic procedures. Twenty practicum hours.

Requisites: Prerequisites, AHSC 440 and RADI 442.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 465. FOUNDATIONS IN RAD THER. 4 Credits.

RADI 471. Radiography II. 3 Credits.

The course content prepares students for standard radiography of cranial bones, facial bones, and special cranial projections. Contrast studies include gastrointestinal, urinary, biliary, cardiovascular, and other special procedures. The course includes pathologies, and gross, radiographic, and cross-sectional anatomy. Two lecture hours and two laboratory hours.

Requisites: Prerequisite, RADI 461.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 472. Radiographic Imaging II. 4 Credits.

A detailed study of specific elements of the radiographic process, with an emphasis on the interrelationships of the radiographic parameters, refinement of image analysis and problem-solving skills, and quality control testing for evaluating the performance of the radiographic equipment and accessories. Three lecture hours and two laboratory hours.

Requisites: Prerequisite, RADI 462.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 473. Clinical Education II. 4 Credits.

A continuation of RADI 463 with emphasis on the application and evaluation of more complex radiographic studies. Twenty practicum hours.

Requisites: Prerequisite, RADI 463.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 574. Clinical Education III. 3 Credits.

Under general supervision, the student will function at an increased level of responsibility in general diagnostic radiography in a variety of clinical settings outside of the university setting.

Requisites: Prerequisite, RADI 473.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 575. Clinical Education IV. 5 Credits.

Under general supervision, the student will function at an increased level of responsibility in radiography in clinical settings outside of the university setting. The course includes a comprehensive review examination and case studies.

Requisites: Prerequisite, RADI 574.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 583. Clinical Education V. 4 Credits.

A clinical course utilizing contract learning to provide students an opportunity to gain additional competency in specialized areas of radiology. Twenty-four education and independent study hours.

Requisites: Prerequisites, RADI 574 and 575.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 584. Clinical Education VI. 6 Credits.

This course is a continuation of RADI 583 using learning contracts to allow students to explore and gain additional expertise in various areas of radiology. Twenty-four clinical hours.

Requisites: Prerequisite, RADI 583.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 585. Radiologic Health Physics. 3 Credits.

A course in the physics of diagnostic radiology, including radiation effects on tissue, radiation detection and measurement, protection methods and techniques, and environmental radiation issues. Three lecture hours.

Requisites: Prerequisite, RADI 472; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 586. Research in Radiologic Science I. 1 Credit.

Majors only. The major part of the course is devoted to an investigative project on a discipline-related topic of student interest. Select issues affecting professional affairs of radiologic technologists are also included.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 591. Practicum in Radiologic Science. 4 Credits.

This course offers an elective clinical experience in an area of student interest.

Requisites: Prerequisite, RADI 584.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 594. Professional Communications and Interactions. 3 Credits.

Majors only. This course provides for a brief cognitive and skills approach to communication skills, the teaching/learning process, and methods and materials of instruction and delivery. Three lecture/discussion hours per week.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 597. Leadership in Radiologic Science. 3 Credits.

Majors only. In this course students will analyze the theoretical literature on leadership and apply that knowledge in the analysis of various radiology environment situations. Three lecture hours.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 660. Pathophysiology. 3 Credits.

Majors only. This course will enhance and integrate the student's knowledge of anatomy, physiology, and pathology related to all human body systems. Emphasis will be placed on understanding how structure, function, and disease are interrelated. Three lecture hours per week.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 662. Instrument and Imaging Methods. 4 Credits.RADI 670. Integrated Principles of Radiographic Analysis. 4 Credits.

This course involves students in situational problem solving and radiographic analysis. Integration of concepts and knowledge of anatomy, pathology, procedures, patient care, and imaging principles are emphasized. Four lecture hours.

Requisites: Prerequisite, RADI 660.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 672. Radiographic Imaging II. 4 Credits.

A detailed study of specific elements of the radiographic process, with an emphasis on the interrelationships of the radiographic parameters, refinement of image analysis and problem-solving skills, and quality.

Three lectures hours and two laboratory hours.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 681. Trends in Medical Imaging Practices Issues in the Radiology Practice Environment. 3 Credits.

Majors only. The course covers issues related to health care systems, medicolegal ethics, and practice and quality assurance. Three lecture hours per week.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 686. Research in Radiologic Science II. 2 Credits.

Majors only. Students complete a research project involving a major clinical or policy issue in radiologic science. This course is an expansion of the fall semester research culminating in both a paper and presentation.

Grading status: Letter grade.

RADI 694. Clinical Decisions in Radiology. 3 Credits.

Majors only. This course involves the pharmacology of common radiology medications and advanced patient assessment techniques. With the additional knowledge and skills, students can make informed decisions regarding patient care. Three lecture hours.

Grading status: Letter grade.

The School of Medicine's radiologic science program is designed to prepare individuals for professional practice and associated responsibilities in the health specialty of medical imaging. Graduates provide patient assessment and care required for medical imaging procedures in addition to insuring that the highest quality imaging study is completed with the patient's radiation dose as a factor. In addition to diagnostic radiology, students may select other imaging modalities and practice areas for additional competence and training. These other areas include pediatrics, mammography, computed tomography, magnetic resonance imaging, vascular interventional radiology, and cardiac catheterization laboratory. The curriculum includes course discussions and projects on global health imaging issues and the potential for international experiences in medical imaging departments and programs abroad.

Admission (p. 1129) to the program is required.

Mission

The radiologic science program prepares students to practice competently and effectively as medical imaging professionals in diverse healthcare environments with awareness of global health issues. The academic and clinical foundation in the curriculum develops graduates with professional flexibility and adaptability to assume prominent roles and responsibilities after graduation in both career and scholarly pursuits.

Program Goals

- Develop competent, effective, medical imaging professionals
- Support development of skills necessary to practice in diverse healthcare environments and to acquire prominent roles in radiologic science
- Program curriculum, teaching methods, and philosophy promote development of integrative, critical thinking, and communication skills to include written, oral, and electronic discourse

- Graduates successfully pursue scholarly activities such as contributions to the profession and post-baccalaureate education
- Encourage global awareness of cultural and health care perspectives

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the radiological sciences (B.S.) program, students should be able to complete the following goals and outcomes.

(Goal one) Obtain a level of clinical competence appropriate for an entry-level medical imaging professional.

Outcomes:

- Students will demonstrate accurate patient positioning techniques.
- Students will utilize radiographic exposure factors to optimize image quality and minimize patient dose.
- Students will practice radiation protection principles for patient and occupational safety.

(Goal two) Possess critical thinking skills to adapt to changing clinical environments and patient needs.

Outcomes:

- Students will adapt procedures based on patient needs and clinical situation limitations.
- Students will analyze images to assure diagnostic quality.

(Goal three) Exhibit professionalism through consistent, responsible, and ethical behavior.

Outcomes:

- Students will provide nondiscriminatory care for all patients.
- Students will demonstrate adherence to program policies and procedures.

(Goal four) Demonstrate effective communication skills.

Outcomes:

- Students will practice effective oral communication skills in the classroom and in the clinical setting.
- Students will demonstrate effective written communication skills.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 18 hours of C or better in the major core requirements (some majors require 21 hours).

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

The schedule of academic work for radiologic science (medical imaging) majors includes the following General Education requirements. Students must complete all Foundations and Approaches requirements and take at least five Connections courses, including global issues, experiential education, and U.S. diversity. In addition, the following specific requirements apply to students in the General College:

Code	Title	Hours
Foundations quantitative reasoning requirement (select one):		3-4
MATH 130	Precalculus Mathematics
MATH 231	Calculus of Functions of One Variable I ^{1, H}
Six courses in the physical and life sciences
BIOL 101 & 101L	Principles of Biology and Introductory Biology Laboratory ^H	4
BIOL 252 & 252L	Fundamentals of Human Anatomy and Physiology and Fundamentals of Human Anatomy and Physiology Laboratory ^H	4
CHEM 101 & 101L	General Descriptive Chemistry I and Quantitative Chemistry Laboratory I	4
	or BIOC 107 Introduction to Biochemistry
Select one option:		8
PHYS 104 & PHYS 105	General Physics I and General Physics II
PHYS 114 & PHYS 115	General Physics I: For Students of the Life Sciences and General Physics II: For Students of the Life Sciences
PSYC 101	General Psychology	3
Total Hours		26-27

^H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

¹ MATH 231 is a prerequisite for PHYS 114 (see above). If By-Examination (BE) or transfer credit is awarded for PHYS 104 and PHYS 105, then MATH 130 may be used for the Foundations quantitative reasoning requirement. If students plan to take PHYS 114 at UNC–Chapel Hill, then MATH 231 is required for the Foundations quantitative reasoning requirement.

After admission (p. 1129) to the program, the curriculum in radiologic science includes courses in gross anatomy, pathophysiology, radiography, imaging methods, research, practice issues, and clinical practice. The first year of the program provides the foundation and skills for clinical practice and patient care in diagnostic radiography. The second year of the program builds on this foundation and enhances skills for career and practice advancement through communications, physics, and research. During the second year, the student elects areas of clinical concentration, such as magnetic resonance imaging, computed tomography, advanced diagnostic imaging, cardiac catheterization, and vascular/interventional imaging.

Special Opportunities in Radiologic Science

Experiential Education

All of the clinical education courses provide students with the opportunity to gain competence and proficiency in all areas of radiologic science practice in a variety of clinical environments. Students may also participate in our global experiences in Switzerland and in Malawi.

Undergraduate Awards

Undergraduate students are considered for the Faculty Award for Excellence, the Award for Academic Excellence, and the Tina Robbins Award.

Undergraduate Research

Students complete a two-semester research sequence leading to a project and paper during the senior year of the program and are encouraged to submit the research projects to state and national research competitions.

Certification

Upon graduation, students are eligible to take the national certification examination from the American Registry of Radiologic Technologists in Radiography and in other clinical areas of expertise.

Accreditation

The program leading to the B.S. degree with a major in radiologic science is fully accredited by the Joint Review Committee for Education in Radiologic Technology.

Scholarships and Grants

Students in the Division of Radiologic Science are eligible for Phyllis Ann Canup Pepper Scholarships, the Dr. Jerry Lambiente Loyalty Fund Scholarship, the Rufus "Buddy" Clarke Loyalty Fund Scholarship, the Jerome Puryear and Latonya Brown-Puryear Scholarship, and the Jane Cox Hendrix Scholarships.

Introduction

Graduate study in speech and hearing sciences is concerned with the body of knowledge and scientific study that pertain to speech, language, hearing, balance, swallowing, and their disorders, and with professional, academic, and research activities in those areas. The Division of Speech and Hearing Sciences offers three graduate degrees: a master's (M.S.) in speech-language pathology, a professional doctorate (Au.D.) in audiology, and a research doctorate (Ph.D.) in speech and hearing sciences. A minor in speech and hearing sciences is available for undergraduate students at UNC-Chapel Hill who anticipate pursuing one or more of these graduate degrees.

Advising

All students interested in a minor in speech and hearing sciences have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. The department's director of undergraduate studies will meet with current and prospective minors by appointment. (See contact information above.) Further information may be obtained from the division's Web site.

Admission to the minor is competitive by application. Undergraduate students have the option of taking these courses without declaring a minor; however, students in the minor will have priority for registration. For students interested in pursuing graduate study, additional coursework is highly recommended, including courses in biological science, physical science, social/behavioral science, developmental bases of communication, and statistics. Detailed information on the application process and preprofessional coursework can be found on the division's Web site (<https://www.med.unc.edu/ahs/sphs/prospective-students/undergraduate-minor/>).

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor 'core' requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum of 12 hours of C or better in the minor (some minors require more)

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 196).

Introduction

The School of Nursing at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is nationally recognized as one of the premier nursing schools in the United States. With a trifold mission of excellence in nursing education, research, and service, the School of Nursing offers a full complement of nursing education programs, including bachelor's and master's of science in nursing, an R.N.–M.S.N. option, a post-master's program, a doctor of nursing practice, and a Ph.D. program, as well as pre- and postdoctoral fellowships. Since its inception in 1950, the school has led nursing education in North Carolina, and today boasts one of the highest nationwide passing rates on the NCLEX licensure examination and a rich tradition of cutting-edge nursing science. The School of Nursing is one of only a handful of schools in the country to house a Biobehavioral Laboratory for the promotion of nursing discovery, and one of only three schools in the nation to be selected to participate in the Hillman Scholars Program for Nursing Innovation.

Program of Study

The School of Nursing at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill offers an undergraduate program of study designed to provide students with the knowledge, skill, and understanding necessary to function effectively in all areas of professional nursing. The curriculum leading to the bachelor of science in nursing (B.S.N.) degree offers two options for study:

1. two years of upper-division courses in the School of Nursing, which follow two years of lower-division courses in the General College (or equivalent courses completed at another college/university);
2. an accelerated second degree option for students with a previous bachelor's degree (A.B.S.N. Option).

Students are subject to the requirements in place when they are admitted to the School of Nursing; consequently, the requirements described in this bulletin particularly apply to students admitted to the School of Nursing during the 2019–2020 academic year.

Admission (p. 1142) to the program is required.

Advising

All first degree students intending to major in nursing have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor to learn the latest course requirements necessary to become an outstanding candidate for a career in nursing, and to review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. In addition, students can visit the Health Professions Advising Office (second floor, Hanes Hall) soon after entering the University for specific guidance on career preparation. Advising information, advising hours, and information about joining the pre-health listserv may be found on the office's Web site (<http://careers.unc.edu/students/pre-professional-pre-graduate-advising/pre-health/>).

Facilities

The School of Nursing is located in Carrington Hall. The Education-Innovation-Simulation Learning Environment (EISLE) provides undergraduate students with a simulated clinical environment in which to practice and acquire fundamental psychomotor and psychosocial skills necessary for clinical application. Under the close supervision of nursing faculty and teaching assistants, students learn therapeutic techniques and procedures, utilize problem-solving approaches, and prioritize patient care in simulated situations.

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

The school offers a master of science in nursing (M.S.N.), a doctor of nursing practice (D.N.P.) degree in five advanced practice areas, and a Ph.D. degree in nursing science. B.S.N. graduates may pursue the M.S.N. or D.N.P. after one year of clinical practice, or they may pursue the Ph.D. directly following the B.S.N., prior to completion of any master's-level coursework. For further information on the graduate program, contact the Office of Student Affairs as noted below or see the school Web site (<http://nursing.unc.edu/>).

The school works closely with University Career Services to prepare all B.S.N. graduates for the transition from student to professional practitioner. A preparatory career development series and career fair are offered annually. Additionally, the school cooperates with clinical agencies across the country to make available to students an array of information on employment opportunities in a myriad of settings and entry-level roles.

Requirements Lower-Division Courses in the General College

Students are admitted to the baccalaureate nursing program at the upper-division level. All lower-division courses must be completed before beginning nursing courses. Lower-division courses taken at another college or university must be approved for transfer by the UNC–Chapel Hill Office of Undergraduate Admissions as comparable to the courses offered on this campus. Prospective students can request an unofficial transfer evaluation to determine the status of compliance with lower-division requirements. The unofficial transfer evaluation request form (<https://nursing.unc.edu/academic-programs/bsn/who-can-apply/transcript-evaluation/>) should be attached to copies of all United States college transcripts and sent to the UNC–Chapel Hill School of Nursing address on the form.

All students must meet the Foundations and Approaches requirements outlined elsewhere in this catalog. Nursing students also must satisfy the following Connections requirements: global issues*, U.S. diversity*, and at least two others, bringing the total credit hours required of B.S.N. applicants to 68. Special Note: Applicants must complete the two-course combination, Anatomy and Physiology I and Anatomy and Physiology II sequence from the same college/university, OR a complete course in anatomy and a complete course in physiology. If these courses are not completed on this campus, they must be approved equivalents to the courses offered at UNC–Chapel Hill.

Beginning with the fall 2020 application cycle (fall 2021 matriculation), the 5-semester B.S.N. option is open to first degree applicants only. Students holding a bachelor's degree in another field must apply to the 4-semester accelerated B.S.N. option.

First Degree Applicants

Students seeking a first bachelor's degree are admitted to the upper-division (junior/senior) B.S.N. (five-semester) option, typically in the spring semester of the sophomore year. Students must complete all lower-division (first-year/sophomore) courses prior to matriculating into the School of Nursing. The first nursing courses begin in the fall of the junior year.

Admission Criteria

Admission to the School of Nursing is competitive. The minimum cumulative grade point average for admission to the B.S.N. option is a 2.8 on a 4.0 scale. Admission to UNC–Chapel Hill as a first-year student or sophomore transfer does not guarantee admission to the School of Nursing as a junior. Applicants must be eligible to return to all institutions previously attended.

At the time of application, applicants to the B.S.N. option must have completed at least three of the five key science courses within the past five years. The key science courses are:

³	A grade of C or better is required.
⁴	STOR 155 is strongly recommended for students interested in graduate study.

The admissions committee critically evaluates each applicant's academic performance, descriptive essays, community service history, and special skills and abilities that have the potential to affect care delivery or contribute overall to the nursing profession. The ideal applicant will clearly demonstrate a strong academic history as well as a commitment to the ideology of nursing and service to others. Performance in required science courses is particularly important.

Second Degree Applicants

Students who have completed a bachelor's degree in a subject other than nursing may only pursue admission to the accelerated and intensive A.B.S.N. (four-semester) option. Second degree students will have 60 credit hours from their previous degree counted toward the B.S.N. degree. Applicants have to complete (or verify completion as part of their previous degree) only six courses from the lower-division requirements:

Code	Title	Hours
BIOL 252 & 252L	Fundamentals of Human Anatomy and Physiology and Fundamentals of Human Anatomy and Physiology Laboratory ^{1,2,H}	4
MCRO 251	Introductory Medical Microbiology ¹	4
PHYI 292	^{1,2}	5
PSYC 101	General Psychology ³	3
One course from the following:		3
STOR 151	Introduction to Data Analysis ³
STOR 155	Introduction to Data Models and Inference ^{3,4}
a U.S. diversity or global issues Connections (p. 120) course		3

H	Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.
¹	A grade of B- or better is required.
²	Applicants may choose to take following course combination instead of BIOL 252/252L and PHYI 292: BIOL 252 & 252L and BIOL 253 & 253L: Fundamentals of Human Anatomy and Physiology with Lab and Advanced Human Anatomy and Physiology with Lab
³	A grade of C or better is required.
⁴	STOR 155 is strongly recommended for students interested in graduate study.

Admission Criteria

Admission to the School of Nursing is competitive. The minimum cumulative grade point average for admission to the B.S.N. option is a 2.8 on a 4.0 scale, and the minimum cumulative grade point average for the A.B.S.N. option is a 3.0 on a 4.0 scale. All applicants seeking admission as second degree students must have earned the first degree prior to submitting the nursing application. Applicants must be eligible to return to all institutions previously attended. At the time of application, applicants to the A.B.S.N. option must have completed all five key science courses noted above, while applicants to the B.S.N. option must have completed at least three of these courses. The key science courses must have been completed within the past five years. See grade requirements above. The admissions committee review is as described previously.

Application

Applications for the B.S.N. option may be submitted by the December deadline for fall (August) matriculation, while applications to the A.B.S.N. option may be submitted by the October deadline for summer (May) matriculation. All first and second degree applicants, including current UNC–Chapel Hill students, must complete a two-phased electronic nursing application. The application link, instructions, deadlines, and decision timeframe can be found on the School of Nursing Web site (<https://nursing.unc.edu/academic-programs/bsn/apply/>).

NURS–Nursing Undergraduate-level

NURS 253. Individual Development across the Lifespan. 2 Credits.

Majors only. This course emphasizes a lifespan approach to theories and perspectives on individual growth and development. Content focuses on physical, cognitive, and socioemotional development, and risk factors from birth to death.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 254. Discipline of Nursing I. 1 Credit.

Majors only. This course introduces the discipline, profession, and practice of nursing through a study of history, values, culture, legal issues, and education. Critical thinking central to nursing practice is introduced.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 261. Nursing Role in Normal Nutrition. 2 Credits.

Majors only. This course involves the nursing application of nutritional concepts to the care of individuals, families, groups, and populations across the life span.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 301. Foundations of Relationship-Centered Care and Diversity and Inclusion: Carolina Core I. 3 Credits.

This course provides socialization into relationship-centered nursing practice. All Carolina Core tenets are introduced; however, diversity and inclusion, relationship-centered care, and scholarly communication are a central emphasis. Students will obtain a beginning ability to act as a therapeutic agent. Majors Only.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 302. Research, Ethics and Innovation: Carolina Core II. 3 Credits.

This course focuses on research, ethics, and health innovations as a basis for scientific inquiry to address problems that require solutions. All Carolina Core tenets are examined; however, nursing inquiry, evidence-based nursing practice, and ethical conduct in research are central foci. Majors Only.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 310. Clinical Nursing Skills and Health Assessment I: On Campus Clinical I. 2 Credits.

The first in a series of four on campus clinical courses, this course introduces foundational clinical nursing skills and integrates knowledge and skills of comprehensive health assessment for the adult and older adult. The clinical environment is simulated to provide the application of nursing principles and skills. Majors Only.

Requisites: Corequisites, NURS 330 and 351.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 311. Clinical Nursing Skills and Health Assessment II: On Campus Clinical II. 2 Credits.

This is the second in a series of four on-campus clinical courses with application of advanced clinical nursing skills and comprehensive health assessment to specialized populations. This course emphasizes application of mental health and reproductive health concepts. The clinical environment is simulated to provide the application of nursing principles and skills. Majors only.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 310 and 330; Corequisite, NURS 352.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 320. Culture and Nursing Care. 2 Credits.

Relationship of culture to health and health care practices. Role of culture in structure and delivery of health care in selected countries, and with selected indigenous and minority populations. Admission to NURS major or permission of instructor

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 321. Nursing Global Clinical Practicum. 1 Credit.

Practicum addressing needs of individuals, families, or communities in a global or 'local as global' setting.

Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, NURS 320.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 2 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

NURS 330. Nursing Care of Adults I. 4 Credits.

This course considers how nursing influences the health and healing capacities of adults. Students will attain the knowledge necessary to complete a comprehensive assessment of the older adult's physical, functional, psychosocial, and cognitive capacities. Clinical experiences in post-acute care settings provide opportunities for clinical reasoning, clinical care, and knowledge integration. Majors only.

Requisites: Corequisites, NURS 310 and 351.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 351. Pathophysiology/Pharmacology Across the Lifespan I. 3 Credits.

Part one of a two-part course series focusing on the physiologic changes that occur as a result of select disease processes. Additionally, the clinical manifestations of altered health and related pharmacotherapy are addressed. Majors only.

Requisites: Corequisite, NURS 330.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 352. Pathophysiology/Pharmacology Across the Lifespan II. 3 Credits.

Part two of a two-part course series focusing on the physiologic changes, the clinical manifestations of altered health, and the pharmacotherapy used to treat complex disease processes. Safe and effective medication administration by the Registered Nurse will be explored. Majors only.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NURS 351.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 360. Concepts, Processes, and Skills for Evidence-Based Nursing. 4 Credits.

Majors only. The course introduces fundamentals of nursing practice and integrates the nursing process with emphasis on the application of evidenced-based practice. The role of the nurse as a member of the healthcare team is emphasized. The lab setting provides practical application of principles and skills required for clinical practice.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 361. Pathophysiology. 3 Credits.

Majors only. This course is concerned with alterations involved in disruptions of normal physiology as well as pathophysiological principles underlying therapeutic interventions and outcomes.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 362. Pharmacology across the Lifespan. 3 Credits.

Majors only. Using the science of pharmacology and pharmacologic principles underlying therapeutic interventions, this course focuses on an introduction to nursing responsibilities regarding pharmacologic therapy across the lifespan.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 364. Nursing Care of Adults with Major Health Problems, I. 6 Credits.

Majors only. This is the first of two adult health courses in which students apply critical thinking skills to nursing care of adults with major health problems.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 253, 261, 361, and 366. Corequisites, NURS 360 and 362.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 365. Evidence-Based Care of Older Adults. 3 Credits.

This course emphasizes evidence-based care of the older adult across the care continuum and examines resources available for caregivers of this population.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 366. Health Assessment. 3 Credits.

Majors only. This course addresses concepts and methods of comprehensive health assessment of children, adults, and elders. Emphasis will be on data collection as a basis for initiation of caring and decision making in nursing practice.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 371. Nursing Inquiry and Evidence-Based Practice. 3 Credits.

Students are introduced to key concepts of evidence-based nursing practice, including the research process, protection of human subjects, and retrieval and appraisal of evidence to maintain a scientifically sound practice.

Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, NURS 364; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 382. Family-Centered Genomic Health Care. 1 Credit.

Majors only. This course explores essential competencies in genetics and genomics for registered nurses. The learner gains knowledge about family assessment and the impact of genomic issues on individuals and families.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 384. Family Focused Genomic Health Care. 1 Credit.

This course focuses on the essential competencies in genetics and genomics for all registered nurses. A family perspective is used to help students relate advances in genomics to nursing care. Majors Only.

Grading status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level

NURS 401. Integrating Principles of Leadership, Quality and Safety, and Informatics into Nursing Practice. 3 Credits.

This course focuses on systems thinking and complexity, development of leadership roles and skills, and interprofessional communication and teamwork. All Carolina Core tenets are examined; however, leadership, quality and safety, and informatics are central foci. Majors Only.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NURS 301.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 402. Foundations of Population Health and Global Health: Carolina Core IV. 2 Credits.

In this course, all Carolina Core tenets are explored; however, there is a focus on population health and global health as essential components of nursing. Students will examine global health challenges as well as policy strategies of promoting health for all. Majors Only.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 301, 302, and 401.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 410. Clinical Nursing Skills and Health Assessment III: On Campus Clinical III. 2 Credits.

The third in a series of four on campus clinical courses with application of advanced clinical nursing skills and comprehensive health assessment to specialized populations. This course emphasizes application of leadership, pediatric and community health concepts. The clinical environment is simulated to provide the application of nursing principles and skills. Majors Only.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 310, 311, and 352; Pre- or corequisite, NURS 430.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 411. Clinical Nursing Skills and Health Assessment IV: On Campus Clinical IV. 2 Credits.

Fourth in a series of four on-campus clinical courses with application of advanced clinical nursing skills to specialized populations with a focus on transition to practice. The clinical environment is simulated to provide the application of nursing principles and skills.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 352, 410, 430, and 483; Corequisite, NURS 697.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 430. Nursing Care of Adults II. 5 Credits.

Centers on management of adults experiencing complex health problems and focuses on application of evidence based practice and skill acquisition needed to care for acutely ill patients through transitions in an illness experience. Clinical experience in acute care settings provide application for clinical reasoning, clinical care, and knowledge integration. Majors Only.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 311, 330, and 352.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 456. Discipline of Nursing II. 2 Credits.

Majors only. This course emphasizes professional development through exploration of a variety of roles and practice environments. Students analyze personal and professional goals and values to develop a framework for nursing practice.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 254 and at least one of the following: NURS 470, 472, 477, or 479.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 2 total credits. 1 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 461I. Exploring Social Determinants of Health Across Populations. 3 Credits.

This seminar allows students to explore how social determinants of health affect the health of populations.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: EDUC 461I.

NURS 470. Public Health Nursing. 5 Credits.

Majors only. Students apply public health concepts to community practice to improve health and reduce disparities across the lifespan, emphasizing interventions using partnership strategies at individual/family, organizational, and policy levels.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 364 and 371. Co-requisites, NURS 472, 477, or 479.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 472. Nursing Care of Infants, Children, and Their Families. 5 Credits.

Majors only. Nursing care of infants, children, and their families is explored. Knowledge from a variety of disciplines is applied through the nursing process to the direct care of infants and children.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NURS 364.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 477. Psychiatric Mental Health Concepts for Broad Clinical Application in Nursing. 5 Credits.

Majors only. Using theories of psychosocial development, psychopathology, therapeutic communication, and psychotherapy, this course requires students to examine the range and complexities of human emotional suffering and methods of effective intervention.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 253, 361, and 362. Corequisites, NURS 364 and 382.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 479. Maternal/Newborn Nursing. 5 Credits.

Majors only. The course focuses on application of caring and critical thinking skills in providing evidence-based nursing care to childbearing families.

Requisites: Prerequisite, NURS 364.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 481. Mental Health Promotion and Psychiatric Care Across Populations and Settings. 4 Credits.

Using selected theories of human psychosocial development, psychopathology, and psychotherapy, this course requires students to advance their use of therapeutic communication skills, examine the range and complexities of human emotional suffering, and apply methods of effective intervention. Majors Only.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 330 and 351; Pre- or corequisites, NURS 311 and 352.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 482. Reproductive Health and Nursing Care of the Childbearing Family. 4 Credits.

The course emphasizes development of caring and critical thinking skills in providing evidence-based nursing care focused on reproductive health and care of childbearing families. Majors Only.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 301 and 330; Pre- or corequisites, NURS 302, 311, and 352.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 483. Family-Centered Nursing Care from Birth through Adolescence. 4 Credits.

This course emphasizes development of caring and critical thinking skills in providing evidence-based, family centered, culturally responsive nursing care to infants, children, and adolescents throughout the care continuum. Majors Only.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 311, 330, and 352; Corequisite, NURS 410.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 484. Public Health Nursing in Community Settings. 4 Credits.

Students apply evidence-based public health concepts to community practice to improve health and reduce disparities across the life span, emphasizing interventions using partnership strategies at individual, family, organizational, and policy levels. Majors only.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 311, 330, and 352; corequisite, NURS 410.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 487. Practicum in Nursing: Work-Study Experience. 3 Credits.

Certification as Nurse Aide I and II also required as pre- or corequisite.

Majors only. This course provides the student an opportunity to participate in a work-study experience in participating health care agencies. Students participate in a reflective experience that integrates classroom and experiential learning.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 254 and 364.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 488. Practicum in Nursing: Health Services Improvement Work Experience. 3 Credits.

Majors only. Certification as a Nurse Aide I and Nurse Aide II are recommended. Practice in health care settings is the course focus. Students participate in a reflective experience that provides the context to integrate classroom and experiential learning into an evolving professional identity.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 254 and 364.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 489. Practicum in Nursing: Global Health Experience. 3 Credits.

Majors only. Certifications as a Nurse Aide I and Nurse Aide II are recommended. Practice in global health care settings is the course focus. Students participate in a reflective experience that provides the context to integrate classroom and experiential learning into an evolving professional identity.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 254, 364, and two of the following: NURS 470, 472, 477, 479, 591.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 491. Improving Nursing Practice: Application of Concepts, Theories, and Research. 3 Credits.

Majors only. This course emphasizes analysis of clinical problems that affect the nursing care of selected populations. Students also apply the nursing process, therapeutic communication skills, and teaching-learning principles in clinical situations.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 492. Conceptual Bases of Professional Nursing Practice. 3 Credits.

Majors only. Selected concepts, theories, and models are synthesized, appraised, and applied as a basis for making judgments and decisions in nursing practice.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 494. Community Health Nursing for the Public's Health. 3-6 Credits.

Majors only. Prepares R.N. students for population-focused practice in community health nursing. Analyses and applications of selected theories; health promotion/protection and disease prevention strategies are emphasized.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 496. Advanced Practicum in Nursing. 1-3 Credits.

Majors only. The focus of this course is the development of knowledge and experience related to research or service learning and its application to the practice of nursing and health care.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 497. Preparation for Professional Practice. 1 Credit.

This course will assist students in preparation for the NCLEX-RN examination through a strategic and systematic individualized plan of study that utilizes testing programs and other relevant resources.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 3 total credits. 3 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 510. Management of the Critically Ill. 3 Credits.

This hybrid course, offered in collaboration with UNC Hospitals, focuses on collaborative management of critically ill adult patients. Students will gain advanced skills and demonstrate critical thinking to apply evidence based practice to care for critically ill patients across the continuum of care.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 311 and 352; pre- or corequisite, NURS 430.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 512. Care of Individuals with Cancer and their Families. 3 Credits.

This course focuses on the cancer experience of individuals and families across the lifespan (pediatric to older adults). The cancer control continuum framework will guide content focused discussions on prevention and risk reduction, screening, diagnosis, treatment, survivorship, and end-of-life care.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 301 and 330; pre- or corequisite, NURS 352.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 588. Leadership in Health Care Organizations. 4 Credits.

Majors only. This course explores organizational leadership and management practices and theories. Current social, economic, legal, ethical, and policy issues affecting practice, education, and the profession of nursing are examined.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 364, 371, and 487 or 489, and 472 or 477 or 479. Corequisite, NURS 488.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 591. Nursing Care of Adults with Major Health Problems, II. 8 Credits.

Majors only. This senior-level course focuses on applying critical thinking, clinical decision making, and evidence-based nursing practice to complex health problems of adults. Unique health needs of older adults are addressed.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 364 and 371; co-requisite, NURS 456.

Gen Ed: EE- Field Work.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 600. SHAC: Student Health Action Coalition. 0 Credits.

This course provides service-learning opportunities to apply nursing practice within the context of interprofessional care for vulnerable populations by participating with Student Health Action Coalition (SHAC) activities.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 0 total credits. 8 total completions.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

NURS 601. Experiential Learning in Nursing. 0 Credits.

This course provides experiential educational opportunities to apply nursing practice through volunteer participation in select communities. Majors only.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 0 total credits. 8 total completions.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

NURS 607I. Interprofessional Team Work and Communication - Key to Patient Safety. 3 Credits.

Majors only. This interprofessional course focuses on understanding roles, teamwork, and communication to improve patient safety within the health care environment. National standards and initiatives will be the foundation of the course. Pass/Fail only.

Grading status: Pass/Fail.

NURS 609. Health Care in the Global Context. 1 Credit.

A faculty-led experiential learning opportunity focusing on development and knowledge related to research, health care systems, or service learning and its application to nursing and health care. Majors only or permission of the instructor.

Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, NURS 320.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 8 total credits. 8 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 611. Supporting the Childbearing Family. 3 Credits.

Application required. An interprofessional, service-learning approach to studying maternity care. Students will receive professional doula training and volunteer as birth doulas within the Volunteer Doula Service Program at North Carolina Women's Hospital.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 613I. Intermediate Spanish for Health Care I. 3 Credits.

This intermediate course is the equivalent of the third semester of college Spanish. Students will hone their listening and speaking skills in class primarily through role-playing activities and class discussion. Activities center on an original film set in a health clinic in rural North Carolina.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: PUBH 613, AHSC 613I, SOWO 613I.

NURS 614I. Intermediate Spanish for Health Care II. 3 Credits.

Permission of the instructor. This primarily e-learning course provides public health students with the opportunity to improve their oral communication skills in Spanish at the intermediate level via DVD, Web, and workbook. Instructor-led. Online course.

Requisites: Prerequisite, PUBH 613.

Grading status: Pass/Fail

Same as: PUBH 614I, AHSC 614I, SOWO 614I.

NURS 615I. Advanced Spanish for Health Care I. 3 Credits.

Required preparation, third semester Spanish or equivalent. This advanced course reviews the grammar of the third and fourth semester of college Spanish. Students hone their listening and speaking skills through role-playing activities and class discussion. Activities center on an original film set in a Latino-run health clinic.

Grading status: Letter grade

Same as: PUBH 615, AHSC 615I, SOWO 615I.

NURS 620. Mindfulness and Self-Compassion for Caring Professionals. 3 Credits.

This course is designed to introduce students to rationale, research, and practices of mindfulness and self-compassion. Upon course completion, students will exhibit knowledge and skills related to mindfulness/contemplative practice/training, research evidence on mindfulness for enhancing provider self-care, patient/client engagement, and wellness (e.g., reducing stress, burnout, and fatigue; increasing resilience). Majors only; permission of the instructor for non-majors.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 642. Health Promotion and Illness Prevention in Advanced Nursing Practice. 2 Credits.NURS 647. Contemporary Issues in the Role of Advanced Practice Nursing. 3 Credits.

Graduate students only. This course examines the evolution, current issues, and roles in advanced practice nursing within the context of contemporary healthcare delivery.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 671. Nursing Inquiry and Evidence-Based Practice for Advanced Scholarship. 3 Credits.

Introduction to scientific inquiry, evidence-based practice, and nursing/healthcare innovations. Emphasis on: theory; ethics; problem identification; question development; design selection; data analysis and interpretation; statistical applications; and appraisal of research reports. Admission to an undergraduate BSN program and eligible to take required undergraduate nursing research course; the Hillman Scholars program; or PhD in Nursing Program required.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 675. Hillman Scholars in Nursing Innovation: Integrative Seminar. 1 Credit.

Cultivates students' development as nurse scientists, scholars, and leaders to improve health care quality, safety, and delivery, and to influence policies that promote health and strengthen health systems outcomes. Admission to the Hillman Scholars Program in Nursing Innovation is required.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 680. Experimental Courses. 1-3 Credits.

Pilot test for new courses in the nursing program.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 685I. Care of the Dying and Bereaved throughout the Life Span. 3 Credits.

Students from a variety of health sciences-related disciplines gain an understanding of issues in working with dying and bereaved individuals of all ages and their families.

Repeat rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 687. Ethical Issues in Nursing. 2 Credits.

Examination and discussion of major ethical issues arising in the professional practice of nursing in the context of systematic consideration of the nature of ethical choice.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 691H. Honors in Nursing, Part I. 3 Credits.

Permission of the program director. Majors only. Preparation of a two-semester honors project under the direction of department advisors.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 692H. Honors in Nursing, Part II. 3 Credits.

Permission of the program director. Majors only. Preparation of a two-semester honors project under the direction of department advisors.

Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research.

Grading status: Letter grade.

NURS 697. Capstone: Transitions in Care and Practice. 6 Credits.

Students will incorporate previously learned leadership concepts, clinical skills, therapeutic communication, and critical thinking to deliver quality nursing care, using evidence based practice, in varied settings with faculty and RN guidance. Preparing for the NCLEX-RN examination and strategies for successful transition from student nurse to registered nurse will be explored. Majors only.

Requisites: Prerequisites, NURS 430, 481, 482, and 483; Corequisites, NURS 402 and 411.

Gen Ed: EE- Field Work.

Grading status: Letter grade.

Courses in the nursing major are taken at the upper-division level. The courses build on a strong foundation in the sciences and humanities to develop the knowledge and skills needed to practice nursing in contemporary society. Clinical experiences take place in a broad variety of settings that reflect current patterns of health care delivery and provide opportunities for students to develop competence in empathetic care, critical thinking, technical skills, clinical judgment and decision making, interdisciplinary collaboration, and management of care.

Admission (p. 1135) to the program is required.

Program of Study

The School of Nursing at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill offers an undergraduate program of study designed to provide students with the knowledge, skill, and understanding necessary to function effectively in all areas of professional nursing. The curriculum leading to the bachelor of science in nursing (B.S.N.) degree offers two options for study:

1. two years of upper-division courses in the School of Nursing, which follow two years of lower-division courses in the General College (or equivalent courses completed at another college/university) OR a previously earned bachelor's degree plus the noted prerequisites (B.S.N. Option); and
2. an accelerated second degree option for students with a previous bachelor's degree (A.B.S.N. Option).

Students are subject to the requirements in place when they are admitted to the School of Nursing; consequently, the requirements described in this catalog particularly apply to students admitted to the School of Nursing during the 2020–2021 academic year. Students admitted in prior years will follow the plans of study in the catalog year in which they were admitted to the School of Nursing.

Critical Information for ALL Nursing Students

Essential Standards for Admission, Progression, and Graduation

The curricula leading to degrees in nursing from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Nursing require students to engage in diverse and complex experiences directed at the acquisition and practice of essential nursing skills and functions. Unique combinations of cognitive, affective, psychomotor, physical, and social abilities are required to perform these functions satisfactorily. In addition to being essential to the successful completion of the requirements of a nursing degree, these skills and functions are necessary to ensure the health and safety of patients, fellow students, faculty members, and other health care providers.

The Essential Standards document describes the nonacademic qualifications, required in addition to academic qualifications, which the school considers critical for entrance to, continuation in, and graduation from a UNC–Chapel Hill School of Nursing degree program. Candidates for nursing degrees, with the exception noted for selected graduate programs, must be able to meet these minimum standards, with or without reasonable accommodation, for successful completion of degree requirements. Refer to the school's Web site (<https://nursing.unc.edu/academic-programs/bsn/>) for additional information.

Professional Risk

The practice of nursing involves the care of individuals who are ill or injured. Communicable diseases are common in health care delivery settings and may be a threat to nursing students. During the performance of clinical practice/research activities, a student may have contact with patients/subjects with HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis, hepatitis B, hepatitis C, and other infections. Such contact, although rare when proper preventive measures are used, may result in a student's being exposed to infectious agents and/or transmitting an infectious disease to other students, faculty members, patients, family members, and subjects. During pregnancy, the fetus may be at risk. Students enrolled in the School of Nursing at UNC–Chapel Hill are expected to provide care to patients who may have known or unknown communicable diseases. Application to and acceptance of an offer from the School of Nursing indicates a student's understanding of related professional risks.

Fitness for Practice

All students admitted to the School of Nursing are required by the North Carolina Board of Nursing to provide documentation of their fitness to provide safe nursing care to the public. Failure to provide requisite documentation will result in the withdrawal of the admission offer. Additionally, North Carolina law requires incoming students to present to the University, before the first day of enrollment, evidence verifying that the student has received all required immunizations.

Further, federal and state statutory regulations and clinical affiliate contractual mandates require that nursing students demonstrate particular cognitive and clinical competencies consistent with minimum professional practice standards. Students must attain and maintain full compliance with all such requirements. The school also requires students to undergo, at the student's expense, a 12-panel urine drug screen and a criminal history database check following admission acceptance. The check covers all addresses where the student has lived, worked, or attended an educational institution in the past seven years or since the 16th birthday, whichever is less. Database checks will address all criminal charges, felony and misdemeanor level convictions (except minor traffic related violations), and the Sexual Offender/Predator Registry for all states in which the student has lived. Reports are shared with clinical agencies that require that all charges be resolved prior to the start of clinical practice. Clinical agencies may impose additional requirements at their discretion, which must be completed at the student's expense. Questions about these requirements may be directed to the clinical contract and compliance coordinator.

Disability Statement

Consistent with its mission and philosophy, the School of Nursing at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is committed to providing educational opportunities to students with disabilities. In accordance with the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act, the school provides reasonable accommodations to otherwise qualified students with disabilities. The decision regarding appropriate accommodations will be based on the specifics of each case.

Students who seek reasonable accommodations for disabilities must contact the Office of Accessibility Resources & Service (<https://ars.unc.edu/>) ([919] 962-8300). Staff in this office will determine a student's eligibility for, and recommend, appropriate accommodations and services. Also see the School of Nursing's policy (<https://sonportal.unc.edu/current-students/student-handbook/>).

Computer Requirements

All School of Nursing students are required to use e-mail for conveying course/clinical/research/other school-related business. All e-mail communication regarding School of Nursing matters must utilize the student's University e-mail address only. The use of external e-mail services is not permitted. School of Nursing courses use the Sakai learning management system, which requires frequent reliable access to Internet resources. For both these reasons, easy access to personal computers and the Web are imperative. The School of Nursing provides a PC laboratory solely for the use of undergraduate students, and students may also access PC laboratory facilities elsewhere on campus.

All B.S.N. and A.B.S.N. option students are required to have a laptop computer that meets the minimum requirements specified for the preloaded laptop computers available through the University's Carolina Computing Initiative (CCI) program (<http://cci.unc.edu/new-students/minimum-laptop-requirement/>). Choosing a vendor for the laptop purchase is the student's prerogative; however, it is important to note that the University provides "software and operating system support for non-CCI laptops on a best-effort basis. Hardware support for non-CCI laptops is the responsibility of the owner" (source: CCI.unc.edu (<http://CCI.unc.edu>)). In addition to the computer itself, students must have an internet service provider (ISP) and an account for a high-speed access service.

Of note: the School of Nursing uses ExamSoft for testing. Students are required to purchase this program and ensure computer compatibility with the program.

Vehicular Requirements

Because of the broad scope of clinical facilities and locations, undergraduate nursing students must have access to a car. For information about the North Carolina requirements for automobile liability insurance, vehicle registration, and operator's license, write to the North Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles, Raleigh, N.C. 27602. Students and/or parents are responsible for maintaining appropriate insurance coverage. Some insurance companies may consider such travel as "business driving." Expenses for travel are the responsibility of the student.

Registered Nurse Licensure Examination Requirements

The North Carolina Board of Nursing (NCBON) requires all graduates of the School of Nursing who apply to take the National Council Licensure Examination (NCLEX) to undergo a routine criminal background check, which necessitates submission of a complete set of fingerprints with the NCLEX application. A Social Security Number is required for the licensure application to the NCBON.

New Student Orientation

All newly admitted B.S.N. and A.B.S.N. students are required to attend a mandatory orientation session one business day prior to the start of courses during their first semester. To determine when classes begin, view the University's academic calendar (<http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-calendar/>). UNC–Chapel Hill students who are studying abroad in the spring semester prior to matriculation should ensure their study abroad program will allow them to return to Chapel Hill prior to the new student orientation.

Student Learning Outcomes

The student learning outcomes described in this catalog apply to students admitted to the School of Nursing during the 2020–2021 academic year. Students admitted in prior years will be held to the expectations of the student learning outcomes in the catalog year in which they were admitted to the School of Nursing.

The B.S.N. program prepares graduates as nurse generalists to:

- Demonstrate care for individuals, families, groups, communities, and populations in a culturally responsive manner. Culturally responsive care includes the intersection of cultural humility and sensitivity, determinants of health, and individuality to promote health equity. {Diversity and Inclusion}

- Exhibit professional values reflective of ethical principles, consistent with the nursing code of ethics and the scope and standards of professional nursing practice. {Ethics}
- Develop global health knowledge and skills to engage in solutions to improve health equity in North Carolina and around the world. {Global Health}
- Contribute to the development and implementation of innovations to improve health outcomes. Health innovations can be promotive, preventive, protective, and/or restorative. {Health Innovations}
- Use informatics to communicate, support clinical decision-making and patient education, and enhance the quality and safety of care. {Informatics}
- Exhibit patient advocacy, appraise and apply evidence, and evaluate policy within an ever-changing healthcare environment. {Leadership}
- Identify the needs of populations and implement interventions with other members of the healthcare team that are expected to promote optimal health, prevent disease, and improve health equity across diverse settings. {Population Health}
- Contribute to a culture of safety and quality improvement by delivering evidence-based, patient-centered care within intra and interprofessional teams. {Quality and Safety}
- Demonstrate empathy for, connection to, and being with the patient. This requires a balance between knowledge, skills, professional confidence, maturity, and compassion towards ourselves, our colleagues, patients and families based in the principles of relationship-centered care. {Relationship-Centered Care}
- Use the research process to appraise and apply evidence with clinical knowledge to maintain a scientifically sound practice. {Research}
- Present written and verbal ideas in a logical and cohesive manner to effectively share evidence of best practice. {Scholarly Communication and Writing}

Requirements of the Major

A.B.S.N. and B.S.N. Options

Students are admitted to the baccalaureate nursing program at the upper-division level. All lower-division courses must be completed before beginning nursing courses.

Students are subject to the requirements in place when they are admitted to the School of Nursing; consequently, the requirements described in this catalog particularly apply to students admitted to the School of Nursing during the 2020–2021 academic year. Students admitted in prior years will follow the plans of study in the catalog year in which they were admitted to the School of Nursing.

Special Opportunities in NursingHillman Scholars Program in Nursing Innovation

UNC–Chapel Hill School of Nursing is one of only two schools nationally that has been awarded renewal funding for the Hillman Scholars Program in Nursing Innovation (<https://nursing.unc.edu/academic-programs/bsn/hillman-scholars-program-in-nursing-innovation/>) grant. The program's primary goal is to create a new cadre of nurse scientists and leaders who will design innovative solutions for health care delivery. This highly competitive program is open to new B.S.N. and A.B.S.N. students and provides a pathway for students to earn their B.S.N. and Ph.D. in five to six years. At least four academically talented nursing students will be admitted to the program each year and receive financial and enhanced mentoring support to facilitate their progress towards the Ph.D. By completing a Ph.D. early in their career, Hillman Scholars will have a longer time to influence patient care through leadership, innovation, and research in academic and clinical settings.

Departmental Involvement

Students are encouraged to participate in student leadership opportunities (<http://nursing.unc.edu/current-students/student-handbook/student-organizations-and-activities-general/>). These include the elected class governance system, the dean's Student Advisory Council or course management team options, the Association of Nursing Students (the only preprofessional nursing organization available), the Student Health Action Coalition, and a variety of special interest groups.

Experiential Education

The nursing program requires extensive direct clinical practice in a variety of acute care, chronic care, and community-based settings considered essential for the preparation of competent practitioners. Clinical contact time varies by study option and course but averages approximately 12 to 16 hours per week.

Financial Aid

Students granted admission to the School of Nursing seeking the baccalaureate degree at UNC–Chapel Hill may be considered for a variety of nursing-specific scholarships and other financial aid opportunities. For assistance, contact the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid by phone at (919) 962-8396 or through the Web at studentaid.unc.edu (<http://studentaid.unc.edu>), or call the Office of Students Affairs at (919) 966-4260.

Study Abroad

Students are encouraged to participate in a variety of study abroad options (<https://nursing.unc.edu/outreach/global-partnerships/>) offered through required or elective courses.

Undergraduate Awards

During the final semester of study, high achieving students (GPA \geq 3.5) in each option will be invited to membership in Sigma Theta Tau International Nursing Honor Society. The George Livas Award recognizes the graduating student who most clearly demonstrates academic excellence and leadership. Other awards presented during the school's commencement ceremony honor those students achieving the highest grade point average in their respective option.

Undergraduate Research

Through the honors program (<http://honorscarolina.unc.edu>) the University and the School of Nursing recognize undergraduates who have demonstrated exceptional academic ability and independent work in their major. Qualified and interested students in their last two semesters of study will be paired with a faculty advisor who guides the student in an independent study honors project. The Assistant Dean for the undergraduate program supervises the honors program. Students participating in the honors program must have a cumulative University grade point average that meets University requirements. In addition, students must have and maintain a 3.4 cumulative nursing grade point average. Calculation of the cumulative grade point average is based solely on the required hours earned to date for the nursing degree. Grade point averages are not rounded. The student and honors advisor must complete a written contract, and the student must register for NURS 691H and NURS 692H. Each honors course carries three hours of credit and is assigned a letter grade by the advisor. A student's project must show evidence of independent, creative, abstract, analytical, and critical thinking.

Introduction

Pharmacists are the drug information experts and are among the most trusted and most accessible of health care professionals. Generalists practice in a variety of environments, including community pharmacies, health-system pharmacies, and the pharmaceutical and health care industries. Specialty pharmacy practitioners pursue training beyond the doctor of pharmacy (Pharm.D.) through residencies and fellowships and may ultimately practice in areas such as pediatrics, geriatrics, cardiology, oncology, ambulatory/community care, and others.

Pharmacists evaluate complex approaches to drug therapy and advise patients and other health care professionals on strategies to achieve the best results from pharmaceutical care. Other pharmacists are engaged in practices that monitor, manage, and implement policies affecting drug prescribing and use across large groups of patients, such as those enrolled in a health plan.

The UNC Eshelman School of Pharmacy's doctor of pharmacy is a 4-year professional program that offers a curriculum centered on patient care.

The doctor of pharmacy leads to a strong understanding of health quality and delivery across many innovative avenues.

Our Pharm.D. program offers a highly immersive curricula, where students aren't confined to classroom lecture environment. Patient care immersion experiences commence during students' second year of study.

As if the changes in health care and employer demands aren't enough, the amount of information about health and medicines that aspiring health professionals must master has grown substantially. We no longer accept the outdated assumption that a professor's job is to teach you everything you need to know. We recognize that you are a native of this highly interconnected world where information is easily available and freely accessible and technologies abound to support your learning.

Advising

Advising in the UNC Eshelman School of Pharmacy is a form of teaching. Advising fosters within student pharmacists skills, abilities, and dispositions that encourage directed career exploration as well as ongoing professional development, lifelong learning, and growth. Faculty advisors serve as content experts and mentors and are assigned to new students prior to the first semester of study. To fully maximize both curricular and co-curricular experiences, students are encouraged to schedule consistent and ongoing advising appointments throughout the course of their study. Professional advisors are also available to assist with student success strategies, decision making, and goal setting. Advising-related inquiries can be addressed to the Office of Curricular and Student Affairs (<http://pharmacy.unc.edu/osa/>) in 109 Beard Hall.

Facilities

The UNC Eshelman School of Pharmacy houses state-of-the-art teaching and research laboratory facilities. The School utilizes cutting-edge video teleconferencing and recording equipment used primarily for delivery of instruction to the satellite campus but also available to graduate and continuing education.

Career Opportunities

Pharmacy offers a variety of opportunities for career advancement and job security. Because pharmacy education draws from the chemical, physical, biological, and behavioral sciences to develop its knowledge base, pharmacists can contribute to the rational use of medications in many settings. Pharmacists work in all areas of the health care system, including

- Community pharmacy, as a practitioner or a manager in a retail pharmacy, clinic, or office practice
- Health system pharmacy, as practitioner, supervisor, or manager in large or small hospitals, nursing homes, extended care facilities, and health-maintenance organizations
- Pharmaceutical industry, in positions involving research, production, product development, product marketing, and drug information
- Government, in the United States Public Health Service, Veterans Administration, Drug Enforcement Administration, Food and Drug Administration, and military services

Admission Requirements

The doctor of pharmacy requires at least two years of undergraduate study (at least 72 credit hours), followed by four years of study in the professional program.

Applicants must complete all prerequisites by the end of May of the year they plan to enroll.

Students who will have earned a baccalaureate degree prior to enrolling in their first year of the program must complete the math and science prerequisites only.

Students who will not have earned a baccalaureate degree prior to enrolling in their first year of the program must complete both the math and science prerequisites and the general education requirements.

Application Procedures

Students applying to the UNC Eshelman School of Pharmacy must submit complete applications to the Pharm.D. program through the Pharmacy College Application Service (PharmCAS) and the school. For application deadlines, processes, and procedures, visit the Web site (<http://www.pharmacy.unc.edu>).

Prerequisites

All prerequisite courses must be completed with a letter grade of C minus or better (not Pass/Fail).

Program of Study

The Pharm.D. grants entry into the profession and practice of pharmacy. It is neither an undergraduate nor a graduate degree program, but rather a professional degree such as an M.D. or D.D.S. The Pharm.D. curriculum requires a minimum of two years to satisfy prerequisite requirements, normally completed in the General College, followed by four years of professional coursework. Students are subject to the requirements in place when they are admitted to the program.

The doctor of pharmacy program is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education. Graduates of the school's Pharm.D. program may sit for the state licensure examination for pharmacists.

The school has a satellite campus for the Pharm.D. program at Asheville, NC. The first students were enrolled in this satellite program in August 2011. Students based at the satellite campus receive the same instruction and are subject to the same admission and progression standards as students on the Chapel Hill campus.

Students graduating from the UNC Eshelman School of Pharmacy are expected to develop the following core competencies through coursework, immersion experiences (practica), and cocurricular experiences:

1. In-depth knowledge and proficient skills in the pharmaceutical sciences and the practice of pharmacy: Demonstrate an in-depth understanding of medicines, human health, and health care, and apply the principles and practice of pharmacy to advance human health and health systems
2. Accessing and analyzing information: Identify, locate, critically evaluate, and process information to arrive at an informed opinion
3. Critical thinking and problem solving: Engage in the comprehensive exploration of issues, ideas, and events to identify, prevent, or solve problems
4. Communication: Effectively develop, express, and listen to ideas that inform, inspire, or create focus
5. Collaboration and influence: Work effectively with others to create networks and groups that respect differences and make progress toward a common goal
6. Adaptability: Demonstrate a willingness and ability to change in order to fit new surroundings, ideas, trends, and technologies
7. Initiative: Be self-directed; seek out new opportunities, ideas, and strategies; take responsibility for implementing plans and ideas
8. Curiosity and inquisitiveness: Demonstrate a desire to learn and understand more than is currently understood
9. Professionalism and ethical behavior: Uphold the highest standards of professional and ethical behavior and act appropriately, thoughtfully, and with integrity at all times

In addition, pharmacy graduates must pass national and state licensing examinations in order to practice as pharmacists.

See the Courses tab for a list of required and available courses.

Special Opportunities in the UNC Eshelman School of Pharmacy

Student Organizations

Pharmacy students are active in campus and community activities through their involvement with approximately 15 pharmacy student organizations. They belong to groups that link them to such national professional organizations as the American Pharmacists Association and the American Society of Health System Pharmacists. Pharmacy students provide medication reviews for elderly citizens, staff clinics for indigent patients, and participate in health fairs on campus and in local malls or corporations. Several times each year trips are planned to attend meetings across the nation. Student leadership is fostered through intentional involvement in student organizations and enrolled students are highly encouraged to invest in the opportunities offered through student organizations.

Experiential Education

The school provides doctor of pharmacy students with a structured, supervised program of participation in the practice of pharmacy. Students gain experience in problem solving and providing patient care while applying the foundational and pharmaceutical sciences learned in the classroom and laboratories. Under the supervision of faculty and selected preceptors, students learn to make decisions based on professional knowledge and judgment. The school requires up to 15 months of full-time precepted practice with early practice experiences in the second and third professional year, followed by nine months of advanced practice experiences in the fourth professional year. The experiential education requirements of the program meet the North Carolina Board of Pharmacy experience requirement (1,500 hours) to sit for the licensure examination.

Residencies and Fellowships

To increase the depth of their education, many Pharm.D. graduates seek residency training in pharmacy practice. Pharmacy residencies, like medical residencies, provide stipends for further clinical training. There are over 4,000 pharmacy residency positions in the United States with sites in hospitals, community pharmacies, and some specialized facilities. Residency programs may be taken in general pharmacy practice and in specialty areas such as pediatrics, drug information, infectious diseases, oncology, psychiatry, and many others. Some Pharm.D. graduates seek additional training in research methods in drug development, pharmacokinetics, pharmacoeconomics, or pharmacotherapy. Postgraduate fellowship programs involve advanced training in these areas and may occur at academic centers or in the pharmaceutical industry. Like residencies, they are paid positions.

History

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill established what was possibly the first United States summer school in 1877. It enrolled 235 students in courses from 10 disciplines. Women were first admitted into University courses during this summer session. Students came from 42 North Carolina counties and several neighboring states. By 1925, 19,983 students had enrolled in Summer School. The University has continued annually to provide a wide offering of summer academic opportunities to the people of North Carolina and other residents from this country and abroad. From 1934 to 1987 the programs were administered by the Office of Summer Sessions. The traditional name of Summer School was reinstated in 1988.

Opportunities

The College of Arts and Sciences as well as many professional schools offer summer courses for undergraduate and graduate students. The same faculty members who make the University one of the nation's best teach the courses, assisted by visiting professors who are specially recruited by departments for this purpose.

Summer School is central to the teaching mission of the University. The summer is one of the three periods during which the campus is open for formal instruction. Summer courses are of comparable quality and provide the same credit as corresponding courses in the fall or spring terms.

For students who have problems in the fall or spring terms getting courses they need or have to choose between courses, summer provides a time when the courses can be taken. This option relieves pressure on fall and spring enrollments, creates opportunities to enhance students' programs, increases student access to courses in nonmajor fields and other schools, and ensures that students can complete their degree requirements in a timely manner. Summer also allows incoming students the opportunity to take courses and become acclimated to campus before the fall term begins.

Because some subjects are best learned in an intensive and concentrated way, summer provides a time when students can focus on a single field. This learning style is particularly useful for some laboratory experiences, concentrated arts courses, and foreign languages. Some curricula require field study or research projects, and summer uniquely allows time for these studies.

During the summer, faculty members and students can concentrate on one or two courses without interruptions of other administrative, academic, and social events that exist during the year. The total number of students is fewer in the summer, and the mix includes greater diversity and a higher proportion of nontraditional and visiting students than during the fall or spring terms. Because class sizes are smaller and classes meet daily, students interact more with faculty members and with one another.

The summer program is also one of the key ways the campus reaches out to visiting and postdegree students who can benefit from what the University has to offer. Finally, summer is a time for faculty members to develop and experiment with new content and teaching models that can be incorporated into fall or spring courses.

Programs

Summer School offers two sessions of five weeks each, a three-week Maymester, and other short courses with various beginning and ending dates. In recent years about 500 sections of courses have been offered each summer to about 6,000 students. The available courses include many that satisfy undergraduate degree requirements. Twelve semester hours of credit typically would be earned by a full-time summer student over both summer sessions. Many students take fewer hours or attend only one session. About 95 percent of summer students are regular UNC–Chapel Hill students, and the other 5 percent are visiting students.

In recent summers, enrolled students have come from all 100 counties in North Carolina and all 50 states, as well as the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and 60 foreign countries.

Highlights

Summer School highlights include concentrated three-week courses offered in Maymester, five-week online courses, some field courses and law courses that extend beyond the usual Summer Session I, some courses taught especially for public school teachers that begin after mid-June when the public schools end their term, and other credit programs that operate on a concentrated schedule. Courses are offered in the late afternoon or evening. Some offerings combine off-campus activities and on-campus classes or combine online and face-to-face learning formats.

Student Services and Advising

Summer School coordinates and distributes information on summer course offerings for credit in all Academic Affairs units. Course offerings are available on the Summer School Web site in mid-December. Regular UNC–Chapel Hill students who need information on summer courses and early registration should contact their advisor, dean, or the relevant academic department. These students and all others can obtain updated information daily on the Web site (<http://summer.unc.edu>).

Summer School admits and advises visiting students. A potential visiting student can obtain information and an online application from the Web site (<http://summer.unc.edu>). The dean of Summer School serves as the dean for these students to approve any schedule adjustments and to represent their interests in other academic and administrative matters. All UNC–Chapel Hill majors and minors have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building. They are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker.

Summer School students are able to use most of the campus facilities enjoyed by students in the fall and spring semesters, such as the libraries, makerspaces, and athletic facilities. Information on summer University housing and on dining plans is available in March on the Summer School Web site. The Carolina Union, Carolina intramural coed recreational sports, and The Summer Tar Heel also provide activities, events, and information during the summer.

The William and Ida Friday Center for Continuing Education is the University's arm for extending credit and non-credit instruction to North Carolinians who wish to further their education in non-traditional ways.

Services provided by the Friday Center include:

- Advising and student services for non-degree undergraduate and graduate students
- Advising and student services for dual-enrolled high school students
- Exam proctoring for students enrolled in distance courses

Courses and programs (for-credit) offered by the Friday Center include:

- Carolina Courses Online, a portfolio of undergraduate, semester-based courses that are offered online in the fall, spring, and summer semesters. Degree-seeking and non-degree students can enroll in Carolina Courses Online.
- Self-Paced Online, a portfolio of undergraduate, self-paced courses that are offered online. Self-paced courses are for non-degree students only. Enrollment is approved on a rolling basis.
- Pre-Health Certificate Program, which helps students who have earned an undergraduate degree prepare for advanced study in the health professions.
- The Correctional Education Program, a partnership with the North Carolina Department of Public Safety, which enables qualified inmates in the North Carolina prison system to take correspondence and on-site courses for credit.

Carolina Courses Online (CCO)

The following courses are offered through the Carolina Courses Online (CCO) program. Not all courses are offered each semester. Check the course listings on the Friday Center Web site (<http://fridaycenter.unc.edu/creditprograms/carolinacoursesonline/courses/>) for each semester's offerings.

General Education Curriculum and Degree Requirements

Making Connections: The General Education Curriculum

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill strives to cultivate the range of skills, knowledge, values, and habits that will allow graduates to lead personally enriching and socially responsible lives as effective citizens of rapidly changing, richly diverse, and increasingly interconnected local, national, and worldwide communities. To this end the General Education curriculum seeks to provide for all students

1. the fundamental skills that will facilitate future learning,
2. broad experience with the methods and results of the most widely employed approaches to knowledge,
3. a sense of how one might integrate these approaches to knowledge in ways that cross traditional disciplinary and spatial boundaries, and
4. a thorough grounding in one particular subject.

The undergraduate major is dedicated to the last of these curricular objectives; the others fall under the purview of the General Education curriculum.

The Making Connections curriculum is divided into four broad categories (Foundations, Approaches, Connections, and Supplemental General Education) that can be described in the chart below and the sections that follow.

Foundations

General Education rests on certain foundational skills and knowledge, including the ability to communicate effectively both in English and another language and to apply quantitative reasoning skills in context. Consequently, the Foundations component of the curriculum includes courses in English composition and rhetoric, at least one foreign language, and quantitative reasoning. It also includes a lifetime fitness course that encourages the lifelong health of graduates. In most cases, students should be able to fulfill the Foundations requirements by taking no more than 15 credit hours.

Note on the Importance of Communication Skills

The faculty of the General College and the College of Arts and Sciences expects students to write and speak effectively. Instructors should help students realize that there is a direct relationship between thinking clearly, writing clearly, and speaking clearly. Faculty members in all disciplines and professions should therefore develop the writing and speaking skills of their students. Students should expect to be graded on spelling, grammar, and style, as well as on the content and organization of their written work; in addition, students should expect to be graded on presentation, style, poise, and diction, as well as on the content and organization of their oral presentations.

Students who wish to improve their writing can make appointments with a tutor in the Writing Center. This free, noncredit service is available to any member of the University community.

English Composition and Rhetoric (CR), One Course

- One course (three hours)

Code	Title	Hours
ENGL 105	English Composition and Rhetoric	3
or ENGL 105I	English Composition and Rhetoric (Interdisciplinary)

All entering first-year, first-time students at the University must complete, or transfer in, ENGL 105 or ENGL 105I. ENGL 105 introduces students to several disciplinary contexts for written work and oral presentations required in college courses, whereas ENGL 105I introduces students to one specific disciplinary context — digital humanities, natural sciences, social sciences, humanities, law, business, or health and medicine — for such written, digital, and oral assignments. Exempting the course on the basis of nationally normed examinations is not possible. Students may prepare for ENGL 105 or ENGL 105I while in high school by taking courses in English composition and speech communication beyond the requirements for admission to the University.

Transfer students who have not completed the CR Foundations requirement are strongly urged to register for ENGL 105 during their first semester at Carolina.

Students must complete the CR requirement during the first academic year on campus. Any student whose native language is not English will be required, as all students are, to complete ENGL 105. However, such students may be permitted also to fulfill the Foundations foreign language requirement with ENGL 105, provided that an authorized representative of the appropriate University department has confirmed the student's native language proficiency up to or through level 4.

Foreign Languages (FL), Through Level 3

- Through level 3

The study of a foreign language enables students to see more clearly the nature and structure of their native language while gaining an understanding of a foreign culture. Students are required to complete courses or demonstrate proficiency in the study of a foreign language through level 3. Certain majors may require additional levels of foreign language study.

Students should improve their language preparation by continuing their foreign language study through the senior year of high school. It is preferable that they complete four years of one high school language rather than, for example, taking two years each of two different languages.

Placement in a foreign language is determined by the student's score on a College Board SAT Subject Test, the Advanced Placement Test in a foreign language (taken at the completion of language study in high school), or the appropriate placement test as determined by the UNC–Chapel Hill academic department offering foreign language instruction. Regardless of placement, continuous enrollment, beginning in the first or second semester, is strongly recommended until the Foundations foreign language requirement is completed.

Students whose placement in a foreign language is below level 4 and who wish to continue in this language are required to take the number of courses that are needed to complete through level 3 of that language. That number varies depending on the level into which a student places.

Students who place into level 4 of a foreign language have satisfied the Foundations foreign language requirement and will receive placement

(PL) but no credit hours for level 3. Note: Students who place into level 4 of Latin on the online diagnostic exam are required to take an additional on-campus test if they wish to receive placement (PL) credit for level 3 and thus fulfill the foreign language General Education requirement; see the Department of Classics (<https://classics.unc.edu/>) for additional information. Students who place beyond level 4 of their high school language have fulfilled the Foundations foreign language requirement and are awarded placement (PL) but no credit hours for levels 3 and 4.

For information about foreign language placement for native and experiential speakers, see Foreign Language Placement Credit (p. 1257).

Quantitative Reasoning (QR), One Course

- One course (three hours)

Through the study of quantitative reasoning and methods, students acquire and reinforce the ability to use analytic and quantitative ideas in both theoretical and applied contexts. In today's world of fast-paced scientific and technological advances, the importance of such skills cannot be overstated.

Students should prepare by taking precalculus and/or calculus in high school and by continuing their mathematical studies up through their senior year of high school. Not doing so may put them at a disadvantage when they arrive at the University.

Students may satisfy the quantitative reasoning requirement either by taking or receiving advanced placement for one of the courses listed below. Several of these courses have a prerequisite of MATH 110 (algebra) or a placement score beyond MATH 110 on the College Board SAT Subject Test in Mathematics, Level 1 or Level 2. Unless a particular major requires those specific courses, however, a student may fulfill the quantitative reasoning requirement with courses that do not require MATH 110 as a prerequisite. MATH 110 placement carries no credit hours, although students who place into MATH 110 and complete it successfully will earn credit hours towards graduation.

Students should be aware that some undergraduate degree programs require completion of specific mathematical sciences courses beyond those needed to fulfill General Education requirements.

Lifetime Fitness (LFIT), One Course

- One course (one hour)

Lifetime fitness (LFIT) courses combine the practice of a sport or physical activity that can be sustained in later life with broader instruction in lifelong health. These courses carry one hour of academic credit and may be declared Pass/Fail. Students can enroll in only one, one-credit lifetime fitness course during their career at the University, and only one lifetime fitness course can be counted toward the 120 hours needed for graduation.

Approaches

The Making Connections curriculum also acquaints students with six distinctive Approaches to knowledge, as represented by courses in the physical and life sciences, the social and behavioral sciences, historical analysis, philosophical and/or moral reasoning, literary arts, and the visual and performing arts. Students meet these requirements by taking courses worth a total of 25 credit hours.

Physical and Life Sciences (PL, PX), Two Courses

- Two courses (seven hours)

Students must take two courses, at least one of which has a required laboratory component. Science courses combining lecture and laboratory components normally constitute four hours of credit. Some lecture courses may be taken singly for three credit hours or combined with an optional matching laboratory for one additional credit hour. All courses in this category emphasize a physical science, a life science, the scientific basis of technology, or a combination of these topics. Students who have exceeded minimum high school science requirements typically have an advantage in the University's science courses.

Physical and Life Sciences with Laboratory (PX)

Some of the courses listed below have an optional laboratory and may be used to satisfy the physical and life sciences with laboratory (PX) requirement.

Note: The lecture is either a pre- or corequisite to the laboratory; see course description. The student must take both the lecture and the associated laboratory in order to receive credit for the physical and life sciences with laboratory (PX) requirement. Without the associated optional laboratory, the lecture course counts as a physical and life sciences (PL) class.

Social and Behavioral Sciences (SS, HS), Three Courses

- Three courses from at least two different academic units (nine hours); at least one of the three courses must be classified as a historical analysis (HS) course.

Courses in social and behavioral sciences focus on the scientific study of individual or collective behavior, considering the various dimensions of individual behavior, the family, society, culture, politics, and the economy.

^H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

Connections

The Making Connections curriculum builds on previously acquired knowledge and establishes links between discrete forms of knowledge, both by encouraging interdisciplinary contact and conversation and by inviting students to develop and apply their academic expertise in environments beyond the University classroom.

Because Connections courses may meet multiple requirements at once (including Approaches requirements, other Connections requirements, major and/or minor requirements, or the Supplemental General Education requirement), most students should be able to fulfill the eight Connections requirements without taking credit hours in addition to those needed to fulfill Foundations, Approaches, and major/minor requirements.

Communication Intensive (CI), One Course

Communication intensive courses integrate written work, oral presentations, and processes of revision into the course subject matter in substantive and important ways. They build on and enhance skills acquired in English composition and rhetoric classes as well as foreign language classes by preparing students to write and speak effectively in disciplinary areas.

^H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

Quantitative Intensive (QI), One Course

Quantitative intensive courses focus especially on the ways that quantitative reasoning can be applied within particular fields. They involve modeling and problem solving, numerical reasoning, the collection and interpretation of quantitative data, mathematical analysis, the application of formal logic and proofs, or some combination of these. The requirement can be satisfied by taking one course from the list below or by taking a second quantitative reasoning (QR) course from the list of approved courses in that category.

^H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

Experiential Education (EE), One Course

- One course or credit-bearing activity is required.

Experiential education courses connect academic inquiry with a structured, active learning experience in which students exercise initiative and apply academic knowledge in various real-world contexts (geographic, social, cultural, etc.). Students may satisfy the experiential education requirement in a number of ways. They may participate in specifically approved undergraduate research programs or approved service-learning courses, take an approved course with a substantial field work component, participate in a University-approved study abroad program, complete an approved internship or honors thesis administered through an academic unit, or participate in an approved community- or audience-oriented creative activity. Please see the Study Abroad Program Office (<http://studyabroad.unc.edu>) for additional experiential education opportunities.

Global Issues (GL), One Course

Courses in global issues provide knowledge and understanding of transnational connections and global forces. Those forces involve interrelationships among cultures, societies, nations, and other social units, and they include processes such as migration, urbanization, trade, diplomacy, cultural adaptation, and information flow.

^H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

Supplemental General Education

Students who pursue the bachelor of arts degree also must satisfy a Supplemental General Education requirement. The intent of this requirement is to broaden a student's perspective on the major by examining its relationship to work in at least one other field. Students may fulfill the Supplemental General Education requirement in three ways:

- By completing a second major or a minor; or
- By completing three courses (nine hours) above 199 that are offered outside the home department or curriculum of the first major. These three courses can neither be used to fulfill the requirements of the first major nor be cross-listed with courses that a student has used to satisfy major requirements; or
- By completing a concentration outside a professional school as part of the degree requirements for graduating from the school.

Catalog Year

The requirements of the Making Connections curriculum apply to students beginning undergraduate study in or after the fall semester of 2006. Because students are subject to the requirements in place when they were admitted to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the General Education requirements described in this Catalog particularly apply to students entering the University during the 2020–2021 academic year.

The courses listed above satisfy the General Education requirements during the 2020–2021 academic year. Because the content and structure of a course may change, the requirements it fulfills also may change. To determine which courses will satisfy General Education requirements in future years, students should consult ConnectCarolina or subsequent issues of the Catalog.

Office of Undergraduate Curricula

James Thompson, Associate Dean

Nick Siedentop, Curriculum Director

The Office of Undergraduate Curricula (<http://curricula.unc.edu>) has primary responsibility for monitoring all curricular changes in the General College and the College of Arts and Sciences. This office receives and reviews all requests for new courses, course revisions, changes to degree programs, and proposals for new minors, majors, and curricula.

Requirements for Undergraduate Degree Programs

The requirements and limitations that apply to all undergraduate degree programs are as follows:

- Students must successfully complete at least 120 semester hours of coursework (requirements are higher than this minimum in some bachelor of science degree curricula)
- Students must have at least a 2.000 final cumulative grade point average on all work attempted at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.
- Students must satisfy all General Education requirements. In some B.S. programs offered by professional schools, General Education requirements may be reduced. No course used as a General Education requirement may be declared Pass/Fail, except for lifetime fitness (LFIT) courses and some forms of experiential education that award only Pass/Fail credit.
- A minimum of 45 academic credit hours must be earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses. These may include credits from study abroad programs sponsored by the University.
- At least 24 of the last 30 academic credit hours applied to the degree requirements must be earned in UNC–Chapel Hill courses.
- The maximum number of credit hours from distance-learning courses, all of which must be designated UNC–Chapel Hill, that can be counted toward an undergraduate degree in the College of Arts and Sciences is 24. Refer to Policies and Procedures (p. 1257) for more information.
- No more than 45 semester hours in any subject, as defined by subject code, may be used toward fulfilling the B.A. graduation requirement in the College of Arts and Sciences (excluding ENGL 100, ENGL 105, and ENGL 105I).
- Students completing the requirements for more than one major field of study will earn only one degree and receive only one diploma. For additional information, including which degree is awarded when completing more than one major field of study, refer to Policies and Procedures (p. 1285).

The Policies and Procedures (p. 1256) section of this catalog contains information on many important topics, including registration, academic course load, academic eligibility, repeating course enrollments, final examinations, and the grading system, among others.

Students who enter the University as first-year students are expected to complete their undergraduate degree in eight semesters. Summer terms are not included in the semester count. Students who wish to attend a ninth semester must submit a written petition to, and receive permission from, their dean's office. Permission to enroll in a ninth semester or beyond must be secured in advance. Permission to enroll in a ninth semester or beyond will not be granted for the sole purpose of completing multiple areas of study (i.e., a secondary major and a minor or two minors). However, students who receive permission to enroll in a ninth semester or beyond for other reasons may retain a secondary major or minor.

Transfer students (who transfer in the UNC–Chapel Hill equivalent of two or more semesters) may enroll in up to 10 total semesters and complete up to three areas of study (i.e., a secondary major and a minor or two minors).

Maintained by the Educational Policy Committee. Last approved on January 27, 2017, see Resolution 2017-1 (<https://facultygov.unc.edu/files/2017/01/Res201701OnMultipleAreasofStudy.pdf>).

Students must complete a major field of study as prescribed by the academic unit.

Requirements for Majors

The following requirements and limitations apply to all undergraduate academic majors at the University:

- Unless specifically prohibited by departments or curricula, major or minor courses may be used to satisfy General Education requirements.
- Courses in a student's major academic unit, or specifically required by the major, including foreign language courses, electives, and any additional required courses (or any courses cross-listed with such required courses) may not be declared a Pass/Fail course (p. 1264).
- Although a specific grade point average in the major is not required, a minimum of 18 hours of C or better (C- does not qualify) in the major core is required. Certain majors require 21 hours of C or better grades in the major core.
- Students transferring credits in their major field must earn a grade of C (not C-) or better in at least three-fourths of those courses and credit hours in the major that are taken at UNC–Chapel Hill. Courses taken on a study abroad program through the UNC Study Abroad Office may receive TREQ credit; TREQ credit contributes to the hours of C in the major.
- All students, including students transferring from another institution, must take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill.
- Some majors require a gateway course that must be taken first, before enrolling in any other courses that satisfy the core requirements in the major. Students must earn a grade of C or better (C- does not qualify) in the gateway course. Unless otherwise noted, the gateway course is not counted in the hours of C in the major core.
- No more than two courses (six to eight credit hours) of BE credit (p. 1257) may be used as part of the major core.

Requirements for Minors

Students enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences who wish to complete a minor in a professional school must receive permission from the professional school.

The following requirements and limitations apply to all undergraduate academic minors:

- A student may have no more than two minors, regardless of the student's major degree program. Academic units may exclude certain minors from being elected and completed by students majoring in these units.
- More than half (not merely half) of the credit hours and courses (including cross-listed courses) taken to satisfy the minor requirements must be counted exclusively in the minor and not double-counted in other majors or minors.
- At least nine hours of 'core' requirements in the minor must be completed at UNC–Chapel Hill and not at other academic institutions. Certain academic units may require that more than nine hours must be completed at the University.
- Some academic units may disallow the double-counting of courses in the minor and as General Education courses.
- A minimum of 12 hours of C (not C-) grades or better is required in the minor, though some minors may require more. Students who transfer courses into the minor must earn C or better grades in three-quarters of the courses and hours that they take for the minor at UNC–Chapel Hill. Students who use By-Examination (BE) credit (see section below) toward a minor may have fewer than 12 hours of coursework remaining to complete the minor (especially for minors with fewer than five courses or 15 hours); in these situations, earning grades of C or better in all of the remaining coursework is required.
- No more than one BE credit (p. 1257) course (three to four credit hours) may be used as part of a minor.
- All courses in the minor unit must be taken for a regular letter grade. Courses in a student's minor unit, or specifically required by the minor, including foreign language courses, electives, and any additional required courses (or any courses cross-listed with such required courses) may not be declared a Pass/Fail course (p. 1264).
- If students plan to pursue the completion of a minor, they are encouraged to declare their minor by early in the junior year.

Combining Majors and Minors

Students in the College of Arts and Sciences are permitted to study up to three subjects in depth. They may do this in one of the following ways:

- one major
- two majors
- one major and one minor
- two majors and one minor
- one major and two minors

Students enrolled in professional schools who wish to have a second major or minor in the College of Arts and Sciences must receive permission from their professional school and the College of Arts and Sciences; students who receive permission to have a second major in the College of Arts and Sciences are required to complete all General Education requirements, including all eight Connections. Students enrolled in professional schools who wish to have a second major or minor in a different professional school must receive permission from both professional schools.

A student may pursue in-depth study in multiple areas by fulfilling all major/minor requirements in each of the selected disciplines, in addition to General Education requirements. Students may not pursue two concentrations (emphases, options, or tracks) within the same major. In general, students may pursue a minor in the same department or curriculum as the major, provided they follow the double-counting rules described below and do not exceed 45 credit hours of coursework in any one subject. For example, a major in Asian studies with a concentration in Japanese and a minor in Korean, both housed in the Department of Asian Studies, are permitted. Some departments may restrict majors and minors within the same academic unit, so please consult an academic advisor, the department, or the curriculum.

Courses that fulfill core requirements for a major or minor may be double-counted (applied to a second major or minor) with the following general limitation: more than half (not merely half) of the courses and course credit hours taken in each major/minor must be exclusive to that major/minor. In a 10-course major, for example, at least six courses, and at least 51 percent of the credit hours, should be counted exclusively in that major and should not double-count even if cross-listed with courses in a student's second major or a minor. Some majors may further restrict double-counting courses. Students who are pursuing two majors and a minor (or two minors and a major) may, in principle, use a single course to satisfy requirements in all three areas of study, provided that more than half (not merely half) of the courses and course credit hours taken in each major/minor are exclusive to that major/minor.

Graduation

Beginning with the first day of registration for the term for which students expect to graduate, they should file an application for graduation online in ConnectCarolina or in person in the office of the dean. For students in the College of Arts and Sciences, this is the office of the Academic Advising Program. A student who has not filed an application for graduation on or before the announced deadlines for fall or spring graduation will not be included in the graduation program.

Students must pay tuition, fees, and other obligations owed the University before receiving a diploma.

Graduation Requirements and Tar Heel Tracker

For students in the College of Arts and Sciences, total graduation requirements are determined by advisors in the Academic Advising Program (Steele Building) in conjunction with ConnectCarolina's Tar Heel Tracker degree-audit system. For students admitted to a professional school (education, media and journalism, nursing, information and library science, public health, business, dentistry), total graduation requirements are determined by advisors in their school in conjunction with ConnectCarolina's Tar Heel Tracker.

Undergraduate Degree Programs

The University offers programs of study leading to the bachelor of arts (B.A.), bachelor of arts in education (B.A.Ed.), bachelor of arts in media and journalism (B.A.M.J.), bachelor of fine arts (B.F.A.), bachelor of music (B.Mus.), bachelor of science (B.S.), bachelor of science in business administration (B.S.B.A.), bachelor of science in information science (B.S.I.S.), bachelor of science in nursing (B.S.N.), bachelor of science in pharmaceutical sciences (B.S.Ph.S.), and bachelor of science in public health (B.S.P.H.) degrees.

The College of Arts and Sciences offers more than 50 major fields of study (p. 202). Professional school majors are also available to undergraduates by application and acceptance. Specific requirements for each major are included in this catalog. For information about the other undergraduate degree programs, please refer to the professional schools' sections in this catalog.

Bachelor of Arts

Students seeking a bachelor of arts (B.A.) degree must complete the Supplemental General Education requirement. Among other options, completing a minor or a second major fulfills the Supplemental General Education requirement.

Bachelor of Science

Four-year programs leading to the degree of bachelor of science (B.S.) provide for specialization in a particular field and necessary instruction in related fields. In some B.S. programs offered by professional schools, General Education requirements may be reduced. Most B.S. programs, however, require students to complete quantitative reasoning courses beyond the General Education minimum and/or require specific quantitative reasoning courses.

Bachelor of Fine Arts

A four-year program leading to the degree of bachelor of fine arts (p. 311) is offered by the Department of Art and Art History. It provides, for qualified students, preprofessional training in creative aspects of the field of art. Approximately one-half of the program is in the field of the major, and the other half is in the liberal arts and sciences.

Bachelor of Music

The four-year program leading to the degree of bachelor of music (p. 794), housed in the Department of Music, emphasizes training and achievement in the performance or composition of music. Approximately one-half of the program (63 credit hours) is in the field of the major, and the other half (57 hours) is in the liberal arts and sciences.

Dual Bachelor's–Graduate Degree Programs

The University offers several dual bachelor–graduate degree programs. The programs currently offered are listed below. The requirements for the bachelor's degree must be completed within eight semesters of study (or 10 semesters of study for transfer students (p. 196)). The requirements for the graduate degree can be completed in as few as two additional semesters, for a possible total of 10 (or fewer) semesters of study. For information about the requirements and application process, please consult the relevant academic unit in this catalog.

- Biostatistics (p. 408) (B.S.P.H. –M.S.), Gillings School of Global Public Health
- Computer science (p. 482) (B.S. –M.S.), College of Arts and Sciences
- Contemporary European studies (p. 596) and political science (B.A. –M.A. Trans-Atlantic Master's Program), College of Arts and Sciences
- Education M.A.T. (p. 1078) (multiple bachelor's degree majors possible), School of Education
- English and comparative literature (p. 542) with a concentration in literature, medicine, and culture (B.A. –M.A.), College of Arts and Sciences

- Environmental science and engineering (p. 590) (multiple B.S. degree majors possible or B.S.P.H.–M.S. or M.S.P.H.), Gillings School of Global Public Health
- Environmental science and information science (p. 574) (B.S. –M.S.I.S.), College of Arts and Sciences and the School of Information and Library Science
- Environmental studies or environmental science and public administration (p. 567) (B.A. or B.S. –M.P.A.), College of Arts and Sciences and the School of Government
- Environmental studies or environmental science and mass communication (p. 567) (B.A. or B.S. –M.A.), College of Arts and Sciences and the School of Media and Journalism

- Statistics and analytics (p. 1023) and statistics and operations research (B.S. –M.S.), College of Arts and Sciences

Joint Degree Programs with the National University of Singapore (NUS)

UNC–Chapel Hill undergraduates can spend anywhere from two to four semesters at the National University of Singapore and receive a joint bachelor of arts degree from both institutions. Programs are offered in biology (p. 384), economics (p. 505), English (<http://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/programs-study/english-major-ba/>), geography (p. 625), history (p. 728), and political science (p. 871).

Undergraduate Honors: Degrees with Distinction

To graduate with distinction or with highest distinction, students must have completed at least 45 academic hours at UNC–Chapel Hill and have an overall grade point average of at least 3.500 or 3.800 respectively. The grade point average is based on the grades received and recorded by the Office of the University Registrar as of the degree award date. No changes are permitted to the awards after that date.

Undergraduate Honors: Degrees with Honors

Students who wish to graduate from UNC–Chapel Hill with honors or highest honors must complete a senior honors thesis project in their major field(s) of study. Such students need not have been members of Honors Carolina. They must, however, meet academic eligibility standards set by Honors Carolina and the individual departments, curricula, and professional schools that sponsor senior honors thesis programs.

Students with double majors may graduate with honors or highest honors in both fields of study. To do so, they must complete a distinct project in each field. Students may not undertake a senior honors thesis project in a minor field (Creative Writing is the sole exception) or in a field outside of their declared major(s).

Students who successfully complete a senior honors thesis project will have the designation "Honors" or "Highest Honors" recorded on their diplomas and transcripts and will be denoted in the Commencement bulletin at graduation. Creative Writing minors earning honors or highest honors will also be recognized in the Commencement bulletin and have a special remark added to their transcripts, but no designation will appear on their diplomas.

Application for honors work: Students should apply to the honors advisor in the department or curriculum of the major. Ordinarily, application is made during the junior year, although it is done earlier in some departments. Detailed information concerning the application should be obtained from the honors advisor in the major.

Requirements for eligibility: Students who wish to undertake a senior honors thesis project must have a cumulative grade point average of 3.300 or higher. Academic units that wish to impose a higher grade point average eligibility standard may do so by requiring that students meet both the cumulative 3.300 grade point average standard set by Honors Carolina office and a higher grade point average standard for all coursework required for the major.

Nature and purpose of honors study: Programs are provided for students who have demonstrated a high level of scholastic ability and achievement and who desire to pursue an intensive, individualized program of study in their major discipline. Senior honors thesis students must complete an original and substantial research, performance, or creative project under direct supervision by a faculty advisor.

Senior honors thesis projects are scheduled as a two-semester sequence of honors courses led by unit-designated faculty, independent study overseen by the faculty thesis advisor, or a combination of the two. Detailed guidelines on approved senior honors thesis scheduling formats are available on the Honors Carolina Web site (<http://honorscarolina.unc.edu>). Regardless of the scheduling format used, students must complete a total of 6.0 credit hours of senior honors thesis coursework during consecutive semesters, not during summer sessions.

A special written or oral examination on the student's program is required during the final semester of honors study. The department or curriculum may impose other requirements that it deems appropriate. In every instance, study for honors will require academic excellence. When the student has fulfilled all requirements, the department or curriculum will recommend to the associate dean for honors that the degree be awarded with honors or with highest honors. The degree with highest honors is conferred in recognition of extraordinary achievement in a program of honors study.

Procedures for granting degrees with honors: The grade for coursework in connection with an honors project is determined by the faculty advisor and is (like all grades) subject to appeal. Successful completion of honors study does not automatically confer departmental honors. Before awarding a degree with honors or highest honors, the College of Arts and Sciences requires the recommendation of a student's examining committee and the endorsement of that committee's recommendation by the chair of the department or curriculum. A negative recommendation by the department is final and cannot be appealed. The associate dean for honors makes the final decision to award a degree with honors on the basis of the department's positive recommendation and the student's cumulative grade point average.

Phi Beta Kappa

This national collegiate honor society is open to undergraduate students in the College of Arts and Sciences and in exceptional circumstances (as described below) to students enrolled in undergraduate professional degree programs. The following students in the College of Arts and Sciences are eligible for membership:

- Students who have completed at least 75 semester hours of graded academic coursework in the liberal arts and sciences at UNC–Chapel Hill with a quality point average of at least 3.850
- Students who have completed at least 105 semester academic course hours in the liberal arts and sciences, at least 45 of which must have been graded coursework taken at UNC–Chapel Hill with a quality point average of at least 3.750

No grades made at an institution from which a student has transferred shall be included in determining a student's eligibility. The quality point average shall include all academic coursework in the liberal arts and sciences taken and counted toward the candidate's degree (physical activity grades and hours are not included). Grades and hours received on courses taken after the candidate has received his or her degree shall not be counted.

Undergraduate students not enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences who meet the general semester hours and quality point average described in the second bullet above and who have completed at least 90 semester hours of coursework in the departments and curricula of the College of Arts and Sciences (or the equivalents accepted for transfer credit from other institutions) are eligible for election.

Dean's List

To be eligible for the Dean's List, full-time students who enter the University as first-time, first-year students beginning in fall 2010 must meet the following requirement:

- A 3.500 grade point average with no grade lower than a C and enrollment in at least 12 hours of letter-grade credit, exclusive of physical education activities (PHYA) courses.

The grade point average is based on the grades received and recorded by the Office of the University Registrar at the time the Dean's List is published. No changes are permitted to the Dean's List after that date.

Academic Enrichment Programs

The University offers a variety of programs and opportunities designed to engage students in the curriculum and to enhance the academic experience at Carolina. There are opportunities available from first-year to senior-year. Students are encouraged to take full advantage of these opportunities and to start planning early in their academic career.

- First-Year Seminars (p. 1233)
- Study Abroad (p. 1233)
- Undergraduate Research (p. 1234)
- Honors Carolina (p. 1234)
- Honors Beyond Chapel Hill (p. 1235)
- Internships (p. 1235)
- Distinguished Scholarships (p. 1237)
- Languages across the Curriculum (p. 1238)
- Student Life and Leadership (p. 1238)
- North Carolina Fellows Program (p. 1239)
- Summer Bridge (p. 1239)

The First-Year Seminars program at UNC–Chapel Hill builds and sustains a vibrant campus-based educational community committed to promoting the success of first-year college students by coordinating a varied offering of seminar-format courses that allow students to work closely with our best faculty on intriguing topics.

First-year seminars (FYS) introduce students to the intellectual life of the University. They are taught by faculty who are active scholars and accomplished teachers, and have a limited enrollment of only 24 students who are in the first two semesters of their undergraduate experience. The seminars address a range of topics across disciplines, often including the most pressing issues of the day. First-year seminars share a common focus on how scholars pose problems, discover solutions, resolve controversies, and evaluate knowledge. They also provide students with a comfortable and engaging social network.

Students in first-year seminars are active participants in the learning process. The seminars encourage self-directed inquiry by using a variety of activities inside and outside the classroom, including field work, case studies, performances, computer projects, laboratory explorations, archival research, and group presentations.

Eligibility and Enrollment

Enrollment in FYS is restricted to full-time students in their first two semesters of their first year of college and the summer after. Students are limited to a maximum of two FYS in any one semester, and a maximum of two FYS across the first two semesters at Carolina. Enrollment in a third FYS can only occur with an approved petition from the associate dean of first year curricula, and will not be approved for a third seminar in a single semester.

Study Abroad

Study abroad can positively impact a student's academic success, career path, and personal growth. UNC–Chapel Hill's study abroad programs are available to all students. According to UNC Chapel Hill's strategic plan, Carolina Next: Innovations for Public Good (<https://carolinanext.unc.edu/>), "our graduates must demonstrate global competencies and skills to thrive as engaged citizens and successful professionals." In 2019, UNC became the country's only public university offering a Global Guarantee — promise that every undergraduate student can have access to a global experience during their time at Carolina.

UNC–Chapel Hill's study abroad programs are high-quality, credit-bearing academic experiences available at hundreds of locations worldwide to students in all academic programs, majors, and minors. Carolina strives to ensure that study abroad programs are accessible, affordable, and safe. A wide range of study abroad options meet the academic needs, financial realities, schedules, and language abilities of Carolina students. Programs include undergraduate student exchanges, faculty-led, direct enroll, and short-term immersion programs during the summer, semester, and academic year. Financial aid can be used toward study abroad program costs. We award some $1 million in study abroad scholarships annually.

The UNC Study Abroad Office (<https://studyabroad.unc.edu/>) in the College of Arts & Sciences is the primary unit responsible for managing study abroad programs for undergraduate students enrolled in the College (including Honors Carolina), and some professional schools.

- The Kenan-Flagler Business School Undergraduate Global Programs (<https://www.kenan-flagler.unc.edu/programs/undergraduate-business/global-programs/>) office administers semester, summer, and short-term immersion programs for all major and minor students admitted to the Kenan-Flagler Business School.
- The Hussman School of Journalism and Media (<http://hussman.unc.edu/ug/studentservices/globalprograms/>) administers semester, summer, and short-term immersion programs for students admitted to the Hussman School.
- Undergraduate students in the Gillings School of Public Health, School of Education, School of Information and Library Science, and School of Nursing are eligible for education abroad opportunities specific to their degree programs.

Study abroad credit is awarded to students participating in approved programs administered by the Study Abroad Office and other UNC global programs offices. Students may earn academic credit for approved internship, research, and service-learning programs abroad. Students seeking to participate in non-approved programs for academic credit may submit a petition for approval to the Study Abroad Office.

The credit approval process for study abroad courses is coordinated by the UNC Study Abroad Office or the UNC school sponsoring the program, and credit is awarded after the program ends and official transcripts have been received. UNC students may earn course credit that fulfills elective, General Education, language, and major/minor requirements abroad. All students who participate in approved study abroad programs earn experiential education (EE) General Education credit. Major/minor credits for study abroad courses that have not been pre-approved must be granted by the director of undergraduate studies or designated authority in the relevant department.

Study Abroad Grading

The University awards course credit for a study abroad program when the student has earned a grade of C or its equivalent and when a similar course is offered by the university. For courses in which grades are reported on a scale other than A–F, such as pass/fail, students will earn credit only if the study abroad institution or program verifies that the passing grade represents achievement at the level of C or higher. If students receive final grades of C- or below (or the equivalent, if reported on a scale other than A–F), they will not earn credit or satisfy academic requirements. For courses completed in units other than semester hours, the university will convert credit earned to semester hours. Some programs, such as UNC–Chapel Hill faculty-led and short-term immersion options, offer UNC-graded course credits.

Additional information on study abroad credit and grading can be found on the Study Abroad Web site (<http://studyabroad.unc.edu>).

UNC undergraduate students have a unique opportunity to earn a second bachelor's degree by enrolling for at least two semesters at the National University of Singapore (NUS), one of Carolina's strategic global partner institutions, and fulfilling degree requirements at both UNC and NUS. The joint degree program is available to students majoring in biology, economics, English literature, geography, global studies, history, or political science. There is no additional tuition cost to joint degree students. For more information about the joint degree program, contact the UNC Study Abroad Office (abroad@unc.edu), (919) 962-7002.

Students are encouraged to begin planning for study abroad as early as possible after enrolling at UNC to ensure that a global experience is part of their academic program. The first step is to attend a Study Abroad 101 information session. Students can then schedule a one-on-one advising session in the Study Abroad Office, or contact the global programs staff in their professional school. Study abroad staff assist students in selecting the best programs for their academic, financial, personal, and professional goals.

Deadlines for UNC Study Abroad Office

October 10: Study Abroad Office applications and study abroad scholarship applications due for spring semester study abroad

February 10: Study Abroad applications and study abroad scholarship applications due for fall semester, academic year, and summer study abroad

Deadlines for other UNC global programs offices vary year to year.

The mission of the Office for Undergraduate Research (OUR) is to facilitate and enrich undergraduate research opportunities for all students and academic disciplines at Carolina. By engaging in research, students develop problem-solving skills and self-confidence, learn how discoveries are made, and apply classroom knowledge to solve real-world problems. OUR supports a variety of programs that help students identify research opportunities and develop research skills. The office is located on the third floor of Steele Building and is a division of the Office of Undergraduate Education.

OUR maintains a searchable database of research opportunities and provides professional and peer counseling to aid students as they enter the research community. In addition, OUR offers opportunities for undergraduate students to apply for Summer Undergraduate Research Fellowships (SURFs). It funds multiple grants to support undergraduate research and travel awards for students to present their research at professional meetings. OUR also sponsors the Celebration of Undergraduate Research each spring at which nearly 300 students present their results to the campus and community.

Honors Carolina is a remarkable collection of courses, special events, and learning opportunities geared toward the top students at Carolina. It is the University's way of investing in truly exceptional undergraduate students by providing challenges and opportunities, both inside and outside the classroom.

Honors Carolina is more than honorific. It is a rigorous, interdisciplinary academic program designed for students who are eager to explore beyond their immediate academic concentrations and anticipated career trajectories. We want and expect our students to be committed to living a life of the mind.

Some enrolling first-year students are invited to participate immediately in Honors Carolina. Other students may apply to the program at the beginning of their second semester or first year of study. Details of the application process are available on the Honors Carolina (<http://honorscarolina.unc.edu/>) Web site. Honors Carolina students must maintain a cumulative grade point average of 3.000 or higher and complete a minimum number of honors credit hours by graduation in order to receive the "Honors Carolina Laureate" distinction on their transcript.

Members of Honors Carolina receive priority registration for more than 200 honors courses each year. These are small classes, taught by award-winning professors who encourage classroom discussion and hands-on research. Departments and curricula often provide honors versions of the courses listed in their sections of this bulletin; interested students also should consult the course listings at the Honors Carolina (<http://honorscarolina.unc.edu>) Web site. Honors courses are open to all academically qualified students on a space-available basis.

Honors Carolina offers programs and resources to help students explore their interests, prepare for life after graduation, and connect with students, faculty, alumni, and leaders around the globe. From professional development workshops and informal dinners with alumni to information sessions with employers and graduate schools and individual appointments with an Honors Carolina career and professional development and career coach, Honors Carolina helps students navigate their interests and plan their paths for the future.

The Honors Carolina Student Association coordinates a variety of social and cocurricular activities, including a dinner and discussion series for students and faculty, a mentoring program for first-year students, and networking receptions with distinguished alumni.

To graduate from the University with honors or highest honors (p. 198), students must complete a senior thesis in their academic major. Senior honors thesis programs are offered in nearly 50 departments, curricula, and professional schools throughout the University. Interested students should consult with the honors advisor in their major about department-specific requirements.

Honors Global offers innovative learning opportunities in London, Oxford, Rome, Cape Town, Singapore, Silicon Valley, and Washington, DC. Students take courses with UNC–Chapel Hill faculty program directors and with instructors from some of the world's leading institutions of higher education and organizations. The London program is based at Winston House, UNC–Chapel Hill's European Study Center, located in Bloomsbury, close to the city's leading universities and cultural institutions. All of the programs provide graded honors credit and fulfill General Education and major requirements. All Honors Carolina programs and fellowships are open and accessible to all UNC undergraduates with a 3.0 GPA.

Burch Field Research Seminars deliver unique, hands-on learning experiences that showcase the relationship between faculty research and undergraduate teaching. Seminars are held in changing locations around the globe. Recent topics have included the rise of renewable energy in China and Korea, nation-building and conflict resolution in Vienna and the Balkans, biomedical engineering and healthcare innovations in Scotland, and international law in Rwanda and the Hague.

Burch Fellowships allow students to design an educational adventure anywhere in the world. Burch Fellows receive grants up to $6,000 to support self-designed, off-campus learning experiences like these: working with NASA astrobiologists in Antarctica to study the possibility of life on other planets; coordinating refugee integration through music in Sicily; and studying the impacts of medical training for rural women in India.

Carolina Blue Honors Fellowships enable students to embark on a summer internship focused on learning and working in sports entrepreneurship abroad. Grants of up to $5,000 support self-designed, international opportunities such as helping an athlete performance data start-up build its products in New Zealand, leading a fan engagement campaign for a sports marketing business in Barcelona, or helping a professional soccer club get off the ground in Tanzania.

Robinson Honors Fellowships focus on the history and culture of Europe and the Mediterranean from the golden age of Greece to the upheaval of World War I. Robinson Fellows pursue a project of their own design exploring the realms of art, art history, classics, literature, history, medieval and early modern studies, music, philosophy, political thought, and religious studies. Grants of up to $6,000 fund experiences such as studying the construction of the great cathedrals of Europe, interning in Sotheby's Old Master Paintings division in London, or working on a Roman archaeological dig site in Israel.

Weir Honors Fellowships in Asian Studies allow students to become fluent in Mandarin and gain practical, independent work experience in China, home to one of the world's oldest civilizations and the 21st century's fastest growing economy. Weir Fellows are awarded all funds above their normal UNC tuition to spend the spring semester in Beijing for intensive language study and then complete an eight-week summer internship in either Beijing or Shanghai exploring careers in fields such as banking, law, journalism, public health, and historic preservation.

Undergraduate Internships

Many departments and curricula offer internship credit (see list below). Students who are interested in this option should plan ahead by checking with the relevant department/curricula about available opportunities, deadlines, and the academic requirements for holding an internship.

Sarah Morris, Library Liaison to ODS

semorris@live.unc.edu

The Office of Distinguished Scholarships (ODS) provides a central location for information about nationally and internationally competitive scholarships, fellowships, and internships and assists Carolina students and alumni in putting their best foot forward when applying for these awards. ODS offers regular information sessions and hands-on workshops. Staff members are available to provide general advising to any applicant for any nationally or internationally competitive award. They will also suggest interviewing strategies and can connect applicants to additional resources, including our library liaison who can assist with researching and writing project statements.

In addition, ODS administers the institutional vetting process called “endorsement” for 14 scholarship and fellowship programs:

- Beinecke (for juniors)
- Boren (all years)
- Churchill (for seniors and alumni)
- Goldwater (for sophomores and juniors)
- James C. Gaither (formerly Carnegie) (for seniors and alumni)
- Luce (for seniors and alumni)
- Marshall (for seniors and alumni)
- Michel David-Weill (for seniors)
- Mitchell (for seniors and alumni)
- Rhodes (for seniors and alumni)
- Schwarzman (for seniors and alumni)
- Truman (for juniors)
- Udall (for sophomores and juniors)
- Yenching (for seniors and alumni)

ODS strongly believes that the preparation required to compete for the prestigious scholarships is an important educational opportunity. In applying for these scholarships, candidates improve their self-awareness and ability to articulate not only their past accomplishments but also their goals and priorities for the future. See ODS’s funding finder STRIVE (<http://strive.unc.edu>) to search for many more opportunities for students and alumni.

Languages Across the Curriculum

Languages Across the Curriculum

Visit Program Website (<https://areastudies.unc.edu/lac/>)

The LAC program offers students the opportunity to use world languages in a variety of courses outside the language and literature curricula.

The program aims to promote a better understanding of world regions while demonstrating the relevance of practical language skills across the disciplines.

Successful completion of a LAC course option will improve students’ ability to:

1. Communicate in the target language about course topics;
2. Describe how course topics relate to world regions that speak the target language;

3. Explain course topics from the perspective(s) of individuals who use the target language;
4. Use the target language to conduct course research.

Administratively housed in the Center for Global Initiatives, the LAC program receives support from the College of Arts and Sciences and from six Title VI National Resources Centers for international and area studies: the African Studies Center, the Carolina Asia Center, the Carolina Center for the Study of the Middle East and Islamic Studies, the Center for European Studies, the Center for Global Initiatives, and the Institute for the Study of the Americas.

Since spring 1996, the LAC program has offered course options in a variety of languages, disciplines and course formats. Currently, LAC courses are offered in Arabic, Chinese, French, German, Italian, Portuguese, Spanish, and Swahili. Students who enroll in LAC recitation or discussion sections can receive one graded hour of world language credit. Some three-hour seminars in the target language are also available.

There are several types of LAC courses. For course offerings (by semester) and additional information, visit the program’s Web site (<http://areastudies.unc.edu/lac/>).

Bobby Kunstman, Director for Student Life and Leadership

bobby.kunstman@unc.edu

The Office of Student Life and Leadership (SLL) brings together student leaders, student organizations, and student activities under one umbrella; making the campus a better community and home for students, staff, and faculty. Being involved in SLL programs gives students opportunities to enrich their academic and social experience at UNC. The office houses Student Organizations, Leadership Development, Student Activities, Carolina Union Activities Board (CUAB), Assessment and Development, and Student Government

The mission of Student Life and Leadership is to create an inclusive Carolina community through engagement and intentional educational opportunities. We are an office that values authentic connections, collaboration, integrity, life-long learning, and social justice.

The Leadership Development team is committed to serving the Carolina community by advocating for leadership as a process of social change. Various programs and activities are offered that help students develop competencies needed to be effective leaders. Additionally, two academic courses are offered: EDUC 317 and EDUC 309 where students learn theory that will help them to develop their leadership style and skills as well as understand how to incorporate those skills to lead and create positive social change.

The Student Organizations team works with all 900+ student organizations to facilitate their use of university resources and to empower students in their provision of services, programs and activities that enhance the academic experience, extend learning and build community at Carolina. Students can get involved in a student organization through Heel Life. The Heel Life Web site (<https://heelife.unc.edu/>) is the online hub of student activity and involvement at Carolina. Individual students, student organizations and university departments use the site to maximize the Carolina student experience. The site houses a complete list of active student organizations at Carolina, as well as a calendar of events. Student organizations may use Heel Life to promote upcoming activities, manage membership rosters, store important documents and photos, and more. The site also offers tools to identify and track individual involvement experiences through the Co-Curricular Transcript (CCT).

The Carolina Union Activities Board (CUAB) enhances life at Carolina through high-quality programming and events for the entire University community. These include films, art, music, entertainment, and more. Students can become involved in CUAB and help to build the Carolina community by helping to plan and implement engaging activities to reach all students.

Assessment and Development focuses on measuring the impact of co-curricular programs and services championed by Student Life and Leadership and the Carolina Union. Additionally, this area of Student Life and Leadership also oversees the employment experiences of students working in the Carolina Union. This area offers professional and leadership development opportunities which empower participants to make connections between their aspirations and the transferrable skills gained through employment in the Carolina Union at the student and full-time staff level.

Student Government is the representative liaison before administrators, faculty, the Board of Trustees and Governors, and even the state legislature. Student Government works to address policy issues that matter to UNC and its students, handle funding requests for student organizations, maintain the Student Government Code (the rules by which Student Government operates), and respond to requests for help from students in a broad range of issues regarding student life at UNC–Chapel Hill.

North Carolina Fellows Program

The North Carolina Fellows Program is a three-year cohort-based leadership program housed in the Office of Student Life and Leadership, and has been present on the UNC–Chapel Hill campus since 1968. The mission of the North Carolina Fellows Program is to reimagine traditional understandings of leadership by engaging in meaningful dialogue, creating a supportive community, increasing self-awareness amongst its members, and encouraging positive change.

Program components include retreats, a three-credit-hour course for sophomore students, a junior seminar, a one-credit capstone course for senior students, and monthly seminars where all three cohorts come together to discuss a variety of topics. Interested students can apply during the spring semester of their first year.

Summer Bridge is a six-week transition program that helps incoming first-year students adjust to Carolina by providing academic enrichment, community building, and co-curricular and experiential learning activities. The program is designed to ease participants' personal and academic transition from high school to the University. Students enroll in two academic courses, which usually represent a combination of English composition and quantitative skills. They also participate in activities designed to supplement their summer experience by engaging in high-impact learning experiences often facilitated by units such as the UNC Learning and Writing Centers, University Career Services, and Student Life and Leadership. Additionally, cultural and recreational activities are significant components of the program, as students are introduced to the University and the array of opportunities and resources available. Any student who has been admitted to UNC–Chapel Hill and is a North Carolina resident is eligible to apply.

The Academic Advising Program (<http://advising.unc.edu/>) serves all undergraduate students in the General College and the College of Arts and Sciences.

The charge of the Academic Advising Program is to assist students with all aspects of their academic planning while providing a foundation for appropriate academic decisions. Students are assigned a primary advisor but may see any advisor for their concerns. Advisors provide students with assistance and advice about options for course selection, maintaining required scholastic standards, and planning a complete educational program. Advisors help ensure that students are making satisfactory progress towards their degree. Advisors discuss choices about majors with advisees and help them identify appropriate courses to satisfy General Education and major/minor requirements. In addition, advisors explain academic policies, procedures, and regulations and provide referrals to appropriate campus resources as needed.

Advisors' office locations, office hours, and contact information (<http://advising.unc.edu/>) are posted online.

All first-year students and sophomores are assisted by advisors in the Academic Advising Program. During their junior and senior years, students pursue academic majors/minors either in the College of Arts and Sciences or in one of the professional schools. To enter a professional school, students must be accepted into the program and should consult admission information for that school.

As juniors and seniors, students may receive academic advice regarding major studies, course registration, graduate school, internships, and career opportunities from faculty advisors in their major department or curriculum offices, or from the professional school to which they have been admitted. Some departments and schools require students to meet with a departmental advisor each term before they can register for the next term. Students in majors/minors that are part of the College of Arts and Sciences should also consult with an advisor in the Academic Advising Program at least once each year to ensure that they are making acceptable progress toward meeting degree requirements, including General Education requirements. Consulting Tar Heel Tracker can help students keep track of requirements, anticipate "what-if" scenarios, and prepare for meetings with advisors.

Each student is ultimately responsible for selecting appropriate courses and complying fully with all published regulations and requirements.

To avoid problems with registration and to ensure graduation by the expected date, students are strongly encouraged to declare a major during their sophomore year or early in their junior year. Students who have not declared a major before registration opens for their sixth semester will not be permitted to register for their sixth semester until they have consulted with an advisor in the Academic Advising Program.

Center for Student Success

Marcus L. Collins, Ed.D., Associate Dean and Director

2203 SASB North; (919) 966-2143.

The Center for Student Success (CSS) (<http://cssac.unc.edu>) has a simple mission, which is connecting with you to promote your academic and personal growth to all UNC-Chapel Hill students. Its constituent offices and programs (The Learning Center, The Writing Center, Peer Mentoring, Summer Bridge, Carolina Males Scholars, First-Generation College Students/Lookout Scholars, and Transfer Student Support) support you in developing the skills and strategies needed to excel at UNC and beyond. Our commitment to student learning supports the University's mission to "teach a diverse community of undergraduate, graduate, and professional students to become the next generation of leaders." We also support the University's commitment to diversity and in doing so sponsor programs and activities that promote academic excellence, increase retention, and improve the campus climate for diversity among our undergraduates.

The Learning Center

Kim Abels, Ph.D., Director

0118 and 2109 SASB North, (919) 962-3782

The Learning Center (<http://learningcenter.unc.edu>) helps students optimize their learning strategies to meet all their academic goals at Carolina. To make an appointment with an academic coach or check out this year's event calendar, visit the Learning Center's Web site (<http://> learningcenter.unc.edu/). The Learning Center regularly offers an array of programs and services popular with undergraduate students, including:

- One-on-one appointments with an academic coach. Coaching appointments provide opportunities for students to set personal academic goals and get support and accountability in the process.
- Peer tutoring for many introductory courses. Students can find drop-in support on Tuesday and Wednesday nights at Dey Hall or make an appointment for select courses.
- STEM support, including academic coaching and learning groups for BIOL 101, CHEM 101, CHEM 102, CHEM 261, MATH 130, and MATH 231.
- Workshops on topics such as metacognitive learning strategies, reading speed and comprehension, time management, and more.
- Handouts and videos (<http://learningcenter.unc.edu/tips-and-tools/>) offering tips and tools to make students' academic lives easier.
- Study groups and boot camps providing opportunities to gather with other students to maximize study time and strategies.
- Test prep resources for GRE, GMAT, MCAT, and LSAT in partnership with The Princeton Review, at discounts of 20 percent.
- ADHD/LD support. Individual appointments and coaching groups are available.

The Writing Center

Kim Abels, Ph.D., Director

0127 SASB North; 221 Greenlaw Hall; (919) 962-7710

The Writing Center (<http://writingcenter.unc.edu/>) helps students become stronger, more flexible writers. To make an appointment with a writing coach or to submit your draft online, visit the Writing Center's Web site (<https://writingcenter.unc.edu/>). The Writing Center is a free service for students, offering:

- One-on-one appointments (<https://writingcenter.unc.edu/about/writing-coaching/>) with a writing coach. Coaching appointments are 45-minute conversations with undergraduate and graduate students who are specially trained to support students' development as writers.
- Online coaching (<https://wc-online.unc.edu/ota/app/>) services. Students can submit drafts online, specify their concerns, and request targeted feedback.
- Feedback on any writing project at any stage of the writing process. Students can work with a coach on everything from application essays to zoology lab reports. They can come in with nothing but ideas, with an outline, or with a draft. Coaches meet students where they are and help them move forward in the process.
- Handouts and videos (<https://writingcenter.unc.edu/tips-and-tools/>) on the writing process, citation and sentence-level concerns, writing-specific assignments, and writing in specific disciplines.
- Write Night events designed to help students make substantial progress on their drafts at key points each semester.
- English language resources (<https://writingcenter.unc.edu/esl/>) and language specialists who support the academic and social communication of Carolina's international students.
- Volunteer opportunities! With our Speaking Group (<https://writingcenter.unc.edu/esl/speaking-groups/>) and U.S. English Pronunciation (<https://writingcenter.unc.edu/esl/esl-mini-courses/>) class, Carolina students can build relationships and gain valuable exposure to global cultures.

- Job opportunities (<https://writingcenter.unc.edu/about/english-402/>)! Undergraduate students can apply to work as writing coaches after taking ENGL 402 in the spring semester.

The Peer Mentoring Programs

Erica Wallace, M. Ed., Coordinator, Peer Mentoring and Engagement

0118 SASB North; (919) 962-2185

Peer Mentoring assists in the academic, social, and personal developments and adjustment of racial/ethnic minority students, students from low-income backgrounds, and transfer students in their first year at UNC. Incoming students can request peer mentors who are academically successful and socially involved members of the Carolina Community. The Minority Advisory Program (MAP) consists of students with cumulative grade point averages of 2.5 or higher who volunteer to serve as peer mentors mostly to minority first-year undergraduates. These peer mentors provide academic counseling, bridge communication between CSS and first-year students, and assist them with their transition from high school to university life. CSS also oversees the peer mentoring program for Carolina Covenant Scholars and community college students participating in the Carolina Student Transfer Excellence Program (C-STEP). As with MAP, Carolina Covenant Scholars and C-STEP volunteers serve as peer mentors to first-year Carolina Covenant Scholars and C-STEP participants to assist them with their academic and social transition to Carolina.

UNC Summer Bridge Program

Euna Victoria Chavis, B.A., Coordinator, Summer Bridge

0118 SASB North, (919) 843-8967

The UNC Summer Bridge program is a six-week transition program that helps incoming first-year students adjust to Carolina by providing academic enrichment, community building and, co-curricular and experiential learning activities. Any student who has been admitted to UNC–Chapel Hill and is a North Carolina resident is eligible to apply. Summer Bridge students have the opportunity to engage in support programming throughout the academic year as well.

Carolina Male Scholars

2203 SASB North; (919) 966-2143

Carolina Male Scholars is an overarching and all-inclusive University initiative for undergraduate men at Carolina. More specifically, CMS is a community designed to help males of color develop academically, socially, and professionally. Current partnerships and collaborations involved campus units such as Undergraduate Admissions, Carolina Housing, Diversity and Inclusion and Summer School.

First Generation College Students/Lookout Scholars

Carmen Gonzalez, M.A., Director, Lookout Scholars

2203 SASB North; (919) 843-3688

Nearly 20% of all undergraduate at UNC–Chapel Hill are the first in their family to attend college. At Carolina, we proudly call our first-generation college students Carolina Firsts. There are several programs and opportunities designed specifically to engage, connect and celebrate Carolina Firsts.

Transfer Students

Luke Fayard, M.A., Program Coordinator, Transfer Student Support

2203 SASB North; (919) 966-5245

The University offers distinct programs and opportunities designed specifically for transfer students to acclimate to the Carolina community. The Transfer Student Coordinator serves as the primary contact for transfer students at UNC and provides support to encourage the success, persistence and graduation of transfer students.

Library System

- Library hours (<http://library.unc.edu/hours/>)
- Ask a question (<http://library.unc.edu/ask/>)

Everyone is welcome in all campus libraries, including the House Undergraduate Library (open 24/5), Davis Library, the Wilson Special Collections Library, the Health Sciences Library, and libraries with various subject specialties. Your OneCard is your library card.

The libraries' Web page (<http://library.unc.edu>) provides direct access to many research materials including online books and journals, as well as information about places to study and experts who can help with research on any topic. You can contact the Library (<http://library.unc.edu/ask/>) through e-mail, chat, and text messaging services.

Special facilities at the University Libraries include state-of-the-art design and media production labs in the R.B. House Undergraduate Library; a makerspace with 3D scanning and printing at the Kenan Science Library; and the Davis Library Research Hub, with equipment and expertise for GIS, data visualization, and digital humanities.

Math Help Center

Miranda Thomas, Ph.D., Director

The Math Help Center (<http://math.unc.edu/undergraduate/math-help-center/>), located in 237 Phillips Hall, provides additional instructional support for students enrolled in MATH 110 through MATH 233. The center is staffed by both graduate and undergraduate tutors who work with students in small groups or individually. The center's main purposes are to provide assistance and to increase the success rate for students in specific math courses.

Pre-Graduate School Advising

William Taylor, Ph.D., Coordinator

This resource is offered to students in the College of Arts and Sciences interested in pursuing graduate studies through the Pre-Graduate Education Advising Program (<http://pregrad.unc.edu>) in Hanes Hall (second floor). The program advises undergraduate students considering a graduate degree in various disciplines (sciences, arts and humanities, social sciences, and professional arenas). These advisors can help clarify the differences between a doctorate and a master's degree and the opportunities a terminal degree may offer. The program is primarily responsible for helping students considering graduate school understand what their next steps are in researching and applying to graduate programs, so that they can move forward independently and effectively. The advisors are happy to help students identify the departmental or curricular advisors, the director of undergraduate studies for their major, and other faculty members students should contact during their process.

Health Professions Advising

Mary-Charles Horn, M.A., Health Professions Advisor

UNC–Chapel Hill has no formal pre-health curriculum or major. Instead, students should choose one of the four-year B.A. or B.S. degree programs and incorporate appropriate prerequisite courses in their planning. Health professional schools encourage students to major in what they are interested in studying; no specific majors are recommended. Students are strongly encouraged to visit the Health Profession Advising Office (Ground Floor, Steele Building) soon after entering the University to learn the latest course requirements and other preparations necessary to become an outstanding candidate for their health career of choice. The office gives advice about many professions, including allopathic medicine, osteopathic medicine, podiatric medicine, dentistry, nursing, pharmacy, physical therapy, physician assistant, veterinary medicine, optometry, chiropractic, and other allied health professions. Health Professions Advising information, office hours, and information about joining the Health Professions Advising listserv may be found on the office's HPA Web site (<http://prehealth.web.unc.edu/>).

Prelaw Advising

William Taylor, Ph.D., Advisor

UNC–Chapel Hill has no formal prelaw curriculum or major. Instead, students should follow one of the four-year B.A. or B.S. degree programs. Most law schools do not require, or even recommend, that students major in any particular field; instead, most law schools prefer applicants who have pursued a course of study that gives a foundation for undertaking legal studies, with an emphasis on reading, writing, speaking, and analytical and critical thinking. However, a student wishing to practice patent law will need a degree in one of the sciences.

Prelaw students should emphasize academics. The campus Learning Center offers programs designed to help enhance reading skills. Students are encouraged to take advantage of this opportunity. Students also are encouraged to schedule an appointment on Handshake (<https://careers.unc.edu/students/resources/schedule-appointment/>) with Dr. Taylor in Hanes Hall (second floor). They also may wish to visit the prelaw Web site (<http://prelaw.unc.edu>), where they can gain helpful information and join the prelaw listserv to receive important announcements.

Research Institutes and Centers

The intellectual life of the University and the research activities of undergraduates, graduate students and faculty alike receive valuable encouragement and support from a variety of institutes and centers. These institutes do not operate as instructional agencies within the University; rather, they serve to obtain financial and organizational assistance for the scholars who constitute their membership.

Most research centers and institutes can be found on the UNC Research Web site (<http://research.unc.edu/units/a-z/>).

Scholarly Journals

The University has published scholarly journals since 1884, when the Journal of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society first appeared.

The following list contains some of the publications currently produced by the University's graduate and professional programs.

American Diplomacy (<https://americandiplomacy.web.unc.edu/>). A journal for commentary, analysis and research on American foreign policy and its practice.

Annali d'Italianistica (<http://www.ibiblio.org/annali/>). The mission of this publication is to promote the study of Italian literature in its cultural context, to foster scholarly excellence, and to select topics of interest to a large number of Italianists.

Carolina Papers in International Health and Development (<http://cgi.unc.edu/about/history/>). A series of UNC–Chapel Hill graduate student working papers designed to promote scholarship in the fields of health and development and to raise awareness of such issues among international studies specialists.

Endeavors (<http://endeavors.unc.edu/>). Features outstanding research and creative work undertaken by faculty and students at the University. Distributed free, the magazine reaches 8,600 on- and off-campus readers in an effort to engage others in Carolina research.

North Carolina Law Review (<http://www.nclawreview.org/>). Published by the School of Law to stimulate research and publication by faculty and students.

Studies in the Romance Languages and Literatures (<http://romlpub.unc.edu/ncsrl/>). For 60 years, this publication has supported and disseminated scholarship in the romance literatures.

The University of North Carolina Studies in the Germanic Languages and Literatures (<http://gsll.unc.edu>). An internationally renowned monograph series in the field of Germanic studies. gsll.unc.edu (<http://gsll.unc.edu>)

In addition, the University of North Carolina Press (<https://uncpress.org/>) publishes the following journals

Social Forces, one of the best known journals in sociology and related fields.

The High School Journal, for educational practitioners and theorists nationwide.

Studies in Philology, publishing articles on British literature before 1900 and articles on relations between British literature and works in the classical, Romance, and Germanic languages.

Campus Safety

285 Manning Drive (via Hardin Drive)
Monday - Friday, 7:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.
(919) 962-8100 (non-emergency) or 911

UNC Police is committed to creating and maintaining an environment where students, employees, and visitors to campus can feel safe in this vital community. Through its philosophy of community-oriented policing (COP), the department strives to employ professionalism, problem solving, and innovative strategies to remain one of the premier public safety agencies in the nation.

Familiarize yourself with security resources such as the campus-wide network of emergency call boxes, Smart911, self-defense instruction, other crime prevention classes, and much more.

In addition, the University has the capacity to send emergency warnings by text message to students, faculty, and staff through its Alert Carolina initiative. The entire University community is encouraged to educate itself regarding UNC's emergency communications resources and to register cell phones for this method of communication by visiting the Alert Carolina Web site (<https://alertcarolina.unc.edu/>).

The LiveSafe App provides students, faculty, and staff a direct connection to UNC Police so that everyone can easily communicate all their safety needs. Its easy-to-use features help you stay safe every day and enable us to better protect you. Benefits include the ability to share information, tips, and safety concerns with UNC Police via pictures, video, or audio messaging; easy access to call or message UNC Police to summon help; access to SafeWalk (<https://safewalk.unc.edu/>), a GPS-tagged monitoring feature that allows your friends and family to keep you virtually covered until you arrive safely at a destination; and easy-to-find information and location of safety resources on and off campus. To download and set up LiveSafe on your iPhone or Android phone, select "University of North Carolina Chapel Hill" as your affiliation and fill in your user profile.

UNC-Chapel Hill students and staff can learn how to respond in an active shooter scenario by attending a "Shots Fired" training presentation offered by UNC officers.

Concerns may be addressed at the following campus telephone numbers:

Carolina Housing

Student and Academic Services Building North
CB# 5500
450 Ridge Road
(919) 962-5401
housing@unc.edu

Carolina Housing (<https://housing.unc.edu/>) works to provide convenient housing that is secure, inclusive, and supportive. Students create a home in our on-campus communities, build lifelong friendships and develop skills for their current and future successes as they journey through their Carolina experience. Students are encouraged to work towards leaving their "HEELprint" on the larger University by connecting with resources, taking advantage of leadership opportunities, and making a difference while they are Carolina students. By getting involved, students develop an identity with the larger University community, create social networks, and find opportunities for intellectual, spiritual, physical, and occupational growth.

Carolina Housing is an integral part of the academic and social community at UNC-Chapel Hill. It is committed to providing an environment conducive to the educational, psychological, and social development of residents. It strives to build a community that balances respect for the individual as well as the rights and interests of the whole community. All members of the residence hall and apartment community — residents, staff, and visitors — are expected to act in a manner that demonstrates respect and consideration for those around them.

Carolina Housing offers a variety of academic success and engagement initiatives to help student staff and on-campus residents develop healthy academic habits and support systems that lead to student success. These initiatives include residential learning programs, academic advising in the residence halls, transitional programming for first-year students, faculty engagement programs such as Meals with Heels and the Scholar in Residence, individual community programming on academic success, and an experiential education course, EDUC 318. This holistic approach complements classroom experiences and lays the foundation for students to become better prepared to succeed in life beyond college.

Graduate Student Housing. Carolina Housing recognizes that the living needs of graduate and professional students are usually different from those of undergraduates. At Carolina, graduate and professional students can enjoy the benefits of being affordably close to classes, facilities, and events, and living in a community of fellow graduate students where the atmosphere is characterized by early quiet hours and respect for personal time and space.

Baity Hill Graduate and Family Housing is Carolina's on-campus community for graduate students providing apartment-style housing. The property houses students with families and graduate students with roommates. This one- and two-bedroom apartment community is situated on rolling hills adjacent to the campus. The apartments are within walking distance of the campus and are served by campus and city bus routes. Rental costs compare favorably with similar area housing.

Parking is available for graduate students on a limited basis, and a fare-free campus bus service offers several routes that connect the north, middle and south regions of campus. Find specifications for apartments by visiting the 'Apartments' section of the Carolina Housing Web site (<http://housing.unc.edu>).

Generally, demand for on-campus housing for graduate students exceeds the supply. On-campus housing is not guaranteed for graduate students, although every effort is made to offer a space to all applicants. Returning residents have priority to re-contract for the following academic year before spaces are offered to new graduate students. Additional information is available in the 'Apartments' section of the Carolina Housing Web site (<http://housing.unc.edu>).

Off-Campus Graduate Student Housing. Off-campus housing refers to any housing not owned and operated by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. This category includes small group housing such as fraternities and sororities, as well as apartments, houses, and rooms. Two-thirds of the University's students live in the off-campus market. Students will find furnished and unfurnished units, as well as units within walking distance to campus or spread throughout Chapel Hill and Carrboro.

Carolina Union

The Carolina Union (<https://carolinaunion.unc.edu/>) creates safe, inclusive, and educational experiences that enable students to maximize their time at Carolina. 'Carolina Union' is the term used for both the Frank Porter Graham Student Union Building and the University department that serves students in many areas of their cocurricular lives. Governed by a board of directors consisting of students and faculty, the Carolina Union's role is to unify the campus community by providing programs, services and facilities.

Cultural, educational, and social programs are planned and implemented by the Carolina Union Activities Board (<https://carolinaunion.unc.edu/programs-orgs/carolina-union-activities-board/>) (CUAB).

The Union contributes to the educational mission of the University by providing cultural, social, educational and entertainment programs. The Union also provides many services for the University community, supporting and enhancing student organizations and the programs they create.

(919) 966-4042

The Office of the Dean of Students (<https://odos.unc.edu/>) provides support and assistance to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill community, empowering students to succeed in navigating the University environment. Its four pillars — Care, Collaborate, Celebrate, and Empower — inform its programs, services, and initiatives. The office often serves as a beginning point of contact for students, faculty members, staff, families, and community constituencies regarding various student concerns. It supports student academic, personal, and professional development through a combination of individual initiatives, innovative outreach programs, and cocurricular opportunities, as well as policy development and oversight.

In alignment with the mission of Student Affairs at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Off-Campus Student Life ([\[offcampus.unc.edu/\]\(http://offcampus.unc.edu/\)\) is committed to educating all students \(undergraduate, graduate and professional\) in life skills related to living off campus and in the community. These skills include:](http://

<div data-bbox=)

- Becoming responsible tenants and community members knowledgeable of city ordinances and community quality of life issues
- Making informed choices about housing and roommates
- Gaining proficiency in problem solving when landlord and roommate difficulties arise
- Understanding personal safety and responsibility

For many students, transitioning into off-campus housing is as much a part of their college experience as first moving into the residence halls. For graduate and professional students, living in graduate housing like Baity Hill or in the community (Chapel Hill, Carrboro, or beyond) during their entire time at Carolina fits with their place in life and needs as a post-college adult. But, there can be significant challenges when leaving the intentional structure of an on-campus living environment. We are here to help students navigate their way as successful neighbors in our greater Chapel Hill–Carrboro community. We advocate for and educate toward the development of students as knowledgeable, active, and responsible community citizens. Students living off campus and in the community have rights and responsibilities associated with their pursuit of an enjoyable and safe living experience. We provide services and educational opportunities to promote the understanding of these rights and responsibilities throughout the off-campus student population.

Fraternity and Sorority Life (<https://ofslci.unc.edu/>) provides services, programs, and assistance to the 61 fraternities and sororities that make up the Chapel Hill Greek community. The office's mission is to enhance the academic experience, holistic development, and civic contribution of students by providing effective services and developmental opportunities that enrich the Carolina experience. Fraternity and Sorority Life advocates for the fraternal movement by educating, advising, and empowering fraternities and sororities and their members to live according to their organizational values and contribute to the University and greater community.

Information Technology Services (ITS) leads UNC–Chapel Hill in planning, implementing and maintaining the University's technology services. The ITS staff is dedicated to delivering reliable, secure and satisfying information technology solutions and experiences to the University community. ITS collaborates with a broad spectrum of faculty, student and staff stakeholders to ensure effective, efficient, and timely services that meet their needs.

2-Step Verification

its.unc.edu/2-step (<https://its.unc.edu/2-step/>)

The main benefit of activating 2-step verification is a significant increase in protection of your account from hackers. We are all used to having one layer of security — our password — to protect our accounts. With 2-Step, if a criminal gets through the password layer, he or she will still need your phone or other second verification method to get into your account.

2-Step is required within ConnectCarolina to access W-2s and student financial information. Also, 2-step verification is required to use Office 365, including Heelmail.

Adobe Creative Cloud

adobe.unc.edu (<http://adobe.unc.edu>)

UNC–Chapel Hill provides all students and instructional faculty and staff with access to Adobe Creative Cloud, a package of creative desktop applications for digital imaging, design, web and video, plus online services and storage. Popular creative desktop and mobile tools available with Adobe Creative Cloud licenses include Photoshop, Illustrator, Acrobat Pro, and InDesign. These programs are utilized frequently in the classroom and are available at no additional cost to students. New students can activate their license by visiting adobe.unc.edu (<http://adobe.unc.edu>).

Carolina Computing Initiative

cci.unc.edu (<http://cci.unc.edu>)

As part of the University's coordinated technology plan, the Carolina Computing Initiative (CCI) aims to ensure that Carolina students, faculty, and staff have access to high-quality computers and exceptional support services. The CCI is one of a number of University initiatives to ensure that the academic community has the tools needed to prepare for 21st-century digital literacy. Undergraduate students are required to bring laptops that meet the minimum standards set by the University for their graduating class. Eight out of every 10 students choose a CCI laptop package to fulfill this requirement. Students who own a CCI model laptop receive the highest level of support available on campus, including on-campus hardware repairs and access to loaner laptops.

Many students who choose a CCI laptop package are eligible for assistance with purchasing the laptop. Laptop grants that cover the entire cost of the CCI laptop package are awarded to incoming students throughout the summer. New students can apply for this need-based financial aid by submitting the College Board CSS/Financial Aid Profile to UNC–Chapel Hill. For more information on the laptop grants, see <http://cci.unc.edu/new-students/laptop-grant> (<http://cci.unc.edu/new-students/laptop-grant/>).

Why Standardize?

Adopting the University's computer standards offers students and families the most value for their money, the highest level of technology at the best price, and access to convenient and reliable support on campus. Standardization reduces the number of problems that would typically arise from using a variety of hardware, software, and operating systems. It also enables faculty members to more readily incorporate technology into their instruction and that the technology-related disruptions will be kept to a minimum.

Why a Laptop for Your Student?

Portable laptops give students access to learning resources (online discussion forums, library resources, and class notes) and student services (grades, schedules and registration) anytime, anywhere.

Buying Your Student's Computer

The Tech Shop
(919) 843-5044

All CCI laptop package purchases are made through the Tech Shop, the technology division of UNC–Chapel Hill's Student Stores. For information on purchasing computers that meet the University's specifications, go to cci.unc.edu (<http://cci.unc.edu>).

First-Year Students

While first-year students are not required to purchase a Carolina Computing Initiative (CCI) laptop, the vast majority do (more than 80 percent on average). Students who opt to bring a different model laptop are still required to bring a laptop that meets the technology requirements specified by the University. For details on the University's laptop specification, visit cci.unc.edu/new-students/minimum-specs (<https://cci.unc.edu/new-students/minimum-specs/>).

While software and operating system support is available for non-CCI laptops, the level of support for students who own a CCI laptop is much higher. Hardware support and loaner laptops are available on campus for students who own CCI laptops, while for non-CCI laptops, hardware support is the responsibility of the student. For more information about the advantages of owning a CCI model specifications, visit cci.unc.edu/new-students/why-buy-cci (<http://cci.unc.edu/new-students/why-buy-cci/>).

Transfer Students' Minimum Laptop Specifications

Students are required to have a laptop that meets minimum specifications for their class year. All CCI computer models offered meet these requirements and are available for purchase by transfer students. For details on the University's laptop specifications, visit cci.unc.edu/new-students/minimum-specs (<http://cci.unc.edu/new-students/minimum-specs/>).

Insurance and Warranty

Laptops purchased through the CCI come with a comprehensive, four-year protection plan that exceeds the coverage available under standard homeowners insurance and the manufacturer's warranty. This protection plan covers theft, accidental damage, and damage from a power surge, fire, or natural disaster while in the United States, Canada, and Puerto Rico. The policies include a $100 deductible per incident. International insurance is also available upon request. For more insurance and warranty information, visit cci.unc.edu/new-students/insurance-warranty (<http://cci.unc.edu/new-students/insurance-warranty/>).

Printing

ITS Labs offers the Pharos Printing System. UNC–Chapel Hill fee-paying students are given an allotment of pre-paid pages on their One Card for printing each semester. Once the allotted pages have been used, students may purchase additional pages. In addition to campus locations, print stations can also be found in most on-campus housing communities. Students can print directly to these print stations by installing the CCI Printing software from shareware.unc.edu (<http://shareware.unc.edu>). They also can print from their laptop or smartphone by going to mobileprint.unc.edu (<http://mobileprint.unc.edu>). More details on this service are available at cci.unc.edu/printing (<http://cci.unc.edu/printing/>).

ITS Service Desk

The ITS Service Desk is the central point of contact for students who need assistance with technology issues. Students can receive help resolving software and hardware issues through the Service Desk's on-campus walk-in services, 24/7 phone services, live chat, or Web submission requests.

The ITS Service Desk attempts to resolve just about any technological issues that a student may have, but most often helps students with in-depth troubleshooting of software issues such as blue-screening, error messages, virus/malware issues and Microsoft Office issues; maintenance issues such as providing software upgrades to Windows and Mac operating systems and installation of UNC mobile-friendly printing software that allows printing from multiple locations on campus as well as installation of specialized software like SAS and ARC GIS that would be needed for advanced coursework.

Setups of phones and other mobile devices for UNC network and email use, assistance with internal sites such as ConnectCarolina and Sakai, as well as performance of hardware repairs for CCI-purchased computers (cci.unc.edu (<http://cci.unc.edu>)) are also a strong focus of the Service Desk.

Students can get further information about walk-in help site locations, tech support services, and tips through help.unc.edu (<http://help.unc.edu>) and through the Service Desk's social media content.

ResNET: Residential Networking, Education, and Technology

The ITS ResNET team is responsible for providing on-site technology support and education for on-campus residents and Carolina Housing. The ResNET program, one of the largest in the nation, is comprised of 53 student employees who live in the residence halls. ResNET RCCs help on-campus residents with any technology questions, device setup requests, support high-speed wired and Wi-Fi networking, and maintain device installations in Carolina Housing spaces. ResNET also has four full-time staff to support the systems and processes that run Carolina Housing.

Note: Granville Towers residents receive internet services from a third-party company and should contact Granville for more details.

Tech Fairs

Each semester ResNET hosts 30+ Tech Fair events in the residence halls. Residents can visit to have their computers cleaned and updated, and technology questions answered. ResNET also provides information about technology initiatives across campus, and brings items like 3D printers and XR headsets for residents to experience new technologies in person.

Cable Television

Students living on campus have access to high-quality cable television service with 100+ television channels. On-campus residents also have access to cable via the streaming service Stream2. Support for residence hall cable television service is provided by ResNET and Stream2. For more information, or to view the cable television channel line-up, visit help.unc.edu (<http://help.unc.edu>) and search for CABLE.

Download CarolinaGO

CarolinaGO, the University's official mobile app, is a collaboration between ITS and student leaders. With CarolinaGO, students can access a mobile version of ConnectCarolina, check dining hours, find bus schedules, check CCI printing availability, and more. A walking directions module also makes it easy for new students and families to navigate campus. Search "CarolinaGO" in the iTunes and Google Play app stores to download.

Stay Up-to-Date with ITS

During the course of the academic year, technology changes and/or unplanned outages sometimes occur. ITS encourages students and family members to follow ITS on Twitter @UNCTarHeelTech. ITS posts upcoming maintenance windows, technology changes, outage information, training information, and more.

The James M. Johnston Center for Undergraduate Excellence

225 Graham Memorial
218 E. Franklin Street
(919) 966-5110

The James M. Johnston Center for Undergraduate Excellence (<http://honorscarolina.unc.edu/johnston-center/>) is a 'democracy of learning' open to students, faculty, alumni, and visitors from all corners of the Carolina campus and beyond. The mission is to encourage undergraduates' active engagement with research, scholarship, and artistic endeavor; to promote innovative teaching; and to provide a social setting in which students can engage in thoughtful discussions with professors and classmates.

The Johnston Center houses Honors Carolina (<http://honorscarolina.unc.edu/>), the Office of Burch Programs (<http://honorscarolina.unc.edu/fellowships/burch-fellowship/>) and Honors Study Abroad (<http://honorscarolina.unc.edu/global-honors/>), the Office of Distinguished Scholarships (<http://honorscarolina.unc.edu/ods/>), the Office for Undergraduate Research (<http://honorscarolina.unc.edu/research/>), the Robertson Scholars Program (<https://robertsonscholars.org/>), and the Beasley Multimedia Center.

The Johnston Center's student-faculty advisory committee advises its director on all aspects of programming and planning.

The Minority Male Mentoring and Engagement (<http://menofcolor.unc.edu/>) initiative, housed in the Center for Student Success and Academic Counseling (<http://cssac.unc.edu>) (CSSAC), develops, implements, and assesses programming for minority males. It focuses on mentoring and promoting academic success and engagement, especially for students after their first year at the University. The coordinator trains and supervises graduate/professional students, faculty and staff members, alumni, and members of the community to engage and mentor undergraduates in high impact activities. Additionally, this initiative provides a clearinghouse for University-wide efforts tailored to undergraduate, underrepresented males of color. See the Men of Color Engagement (<http://menofcolor.unc.edu/>) Web site.

New Student and Family Programs

Student Academic Services Building South, Suite 3318
(919) 962-8304
newstudents@unc.edu

The mission of New Student and Family Programs (NSFP) is to provide new undergraduate students the information and activities needed to transition smoothly to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and to promote an ongoing relationship between the families of all current undergraduate students and the University in support of their students' success at Carolina.

To fulfill this mission, New Student and Family Programs provides a number of transition programs and services, communications for new students and families, and student leadership opportunities.

All new first-year and transfer students (and their families) attend New Student Orientation prior to their first semester at Carolina. The transition process continues when students arrive each fall with a variety of Tar Heel Beginnings program offerings, including Week of Welcome. NSFP is also home to several transfer student initiatives, including the Tar Heel Transfers student organization, Tau Sigma honor society, and Transfer Student Ambassador Program.

NSFP's family programming includes Carolina Family Weekend each fall, regular communications through our UNC Family Experience portal, and family engagement opportunities, including the Carolina Parents Council.

NSFP provides a number of student leadership opportunities with five student employee teams, including our Orientation Leaders, the Tar Heel Beginnings Board, Transfer Student Ambassadors, Project Coordinators, and our Undergraduate Fellows.

Student Affairs

Carr Building
230 East Cameron Avenue
(919) 966-4045
studentaffairs@unc.edu

Student Affairs (<https://studentaffairs.unc.edu/>) serves the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in collaboration with academic programs by providing transformational opportunities for students in the areas of student life, health and wellness, leadership and service, and diversity.

The importance of the learning process is paramount at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Student Affairs provides many services and programs that encourage and support the learning that takes place beyond the classroom. These departments and programs aim to assist students in integrating the various aspects of their lives so as to promote learning, self-awareness, self-determination, and broadened perspectives on the world. Student Affairs departments and programs afford students the opportunity to gain knowledge and develop skills to improve performance inside and outside the classroom; to enhance leadership potential; to find opportunities to serve fellow students and the community; to explore, plan, and prepare for a career; to plan for an active and rewarding life; to develop citizenship; and to improve interpersonal and life skills.

While Student Affairs offers programs designed primarily for undergraduate students, The Graduate School, on its own and in conjunction with various Student Affairs offices, offers programs and services intended to specifically address the needs of graduate and professional students.

The Office of the Vice Chancellor coordinates Student Affairs programs and provides guidance and leadership for its departments. The office also acts in a consulting role for faculty, administrators, and students who wish to raise issues that concern the University community, with a particular focus on student needs.

Student Dining Services

Carolina Dining Services (<https://dining.unc.edu/>) operates 10 separate dining facilities at UNC—Chapel Hill. Meal purchases can be made with the UNC One Card using a meal plan, Dining Flex, à la carte, expense, or cash. All meal purchases made with the UNC One Card are not subject to the 6 percent North Carolina state sales tax on such items. Cash purchases are taxable. To find out more about acquiring a UNC One Card, visit the One Card Office Web site (<https://onecard.unc.edu/>) or the UNC One Card office on the third floor of UNC Student Stores.

Students can use their meal plans at several of the campus all-you-care-to-eat dining facilities. Top of Lenoir is an award-winning facility with an array of menu choices. The Rams Head Dining Hall is a 30,000 square foot state-of-the-art facility that includes several restaurants and all-you-care-to-eat venues.

Carolina Dining Services offers several meal plans that offer the convenience and value of purchasing meals on campus ahead of time.

Student Government

The by-laws of the Board of Trustees of the University invest in the chancellor of the University "the duty . . . to exercise full authority in the regulation of student conduct and in matters of student discipline." At the same time the chancellor has delegated authority to exercise disciplinary and administrative functions in student life to agencies of student government. Within the context of this delegated authority and responsibility, the student body at the University has been self-governing for decades.

Student government at Carolina is more than 100 years old, and hundreds of students are involved in the various branches every year. From serving on the Board of Trustees to the appropriation, oversight, and authority of student fees, from instituting governmental service to enforcing the Honor Code, student government affects the life of every student every day.

The entire framework of student government's activities rests on its ability to maintain the foundation of administrator-student relations. The University should serve as an advisor, not as a supervisor, to the student body. To enjoy this freedom, students at Carolina must be willing to take a certain amount of responsibility to develop their own community and community values. Student government serves to maintain this freedom and the advisory, not supervisory, relationship.

In 1876 the Honor System officially ended all vestiges of the monitorial system; in 1904 a judicial body, the University Council, was established; in 1938 the Student Legislature was established; and in 1946 a written constitution was approved. In 1968 the coeducational Honor Court was formed out of the Men's Court and Women's Court to hear all Honor Code cases. The Instrument of Student Judicial Governance was ratified and put into operation in 1974, was significantly revised in 2003, and then amended in 2015 and 2017.

Student government at UNC–Chapel Hill approximates the federal system of government with its three branches: an executive branch, a legislative branch, and a judicial branch.

The Executive Branch of Student Government

This group (<http://execbranch.unc.edu/>) serves as the official voice of the student body to the University and broader community, including the town of Chapel Hill and the state of North Carolina. Heading the executive branch is the student body president, assisted by the vice president, the president of the Graduate and Professional Student Federation, student body treasurer, student body secretary, the chief of staff, and the senior advisor. As determined by and reflective of the needs of the student body, the president structures his/her cabinet and committees and makes appointments to a wide range of University committees that address those needs and other concerns as they arise during the year. These committees usually include hardship parking, elections board, University services, information technology, student life, minority affairs, first-year focus council, and public service.

Legislative Branch

Student Congress (<http://congress.unc.edu/>) is unicameral, consisting of 41 representatives elected by the student body, with the student body president and the student body treasurer serving as nonvoting ex officio members. The speaker of the Student Congress is elected from among the 41 representatives. Graduate and professional students and on- and off-campus undergraduates are proportionally represented in the Congress.

Student Congress handles considerable legislation and, as one of its primary responsibilities, oversees the student activity fees budget and other student fee areas. Established by student and University committees before approval by the Board of Trustees, a predetermined amount of the fees paid by each student provides the source of funds for Student Congress's annual allocation and subsequent appropriations budgets. These funds are allocated to petitioning student organizations that have received official University recognition. The student body can petition for changes in the student activities fee at any time.

Student Congress representatives are elected in the spring for one-year terms, and each member serves on one of three standing committees: finance, rules and judiciary, and student affairs. A fourth committee, ethics, is composed of senior members of the Congress.

Judicial Branch

There are two major areas that comprise the judicial branch; the first is responsible for the Instrument of Student Judicial Governance, and the second is responsible for resolving issues related to the Student Code (<http://congress.unc.edu/student-code/>).

The Honor Court hears all cases involving potential violations of the Honor Code. There are separate courts for undergraduate students, graduate students, and students in the Schools of Law, Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, and Business. The Honor Court is organized as follows:

- Office of the Student Attorneys General: The appropriate (undergraduate or graduate) student attorney general investigates all potential violations of the Honor Code. Staff members also present cases to the Honor Court and assist students accused of violating the Honor Code.
- University Hearings Board: These boards are made up of faculty, staff, and students. The University Hearings Board generally hears appeals of Honor Court cases.
- Students interested in serving on the Honor Court or the student attorney general's staff should contact the Honor System Office at (919) 966-4084 for information about how to apply.
- Student Supreme Court: This court adjudicates all issues of student constitutional law to be decided under the Student Code. This body most closely fills the traditional judicial branch of government and consists largely of students with previous experience in student government, mediation, and/or law.

For Graduate Students

The Graduate and Professional Student Federation (GPSF) (<http://gpsf.unc.edu>), the official representative of graduate and professional students at the University, is organized based on school, departmental, and curricula organizations. The GPSF provides communication between graduate and professional students, represents graduate and professional students both within and outside the University community, and provides structures capable of dealing with ongoing issues and concerns. It also allocates and administers the funds appropriated to it from student fees. Every duly enrolled graduate and professional student is automatically a member of the GPSF.

Transportation and Parking

Public Safety Building at 285 Manning Drive (via Paul Hardin Drive)
(919) 962-3951
Weekdays 7:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Transportation and Parking (<https://move.unc.edu/>) is an essential part of UNC and is responsible for coordinating all traffic, parking, and transportation around campus.

Parking

Every student at UNC–Chapel Hill who parks an automobile on weekdays in University parking areas is required to obtain and display a parking permit. Parking permit holders must park only in specific zones as indicated on their parking permits. Please note the signs at the entrances to each lot which detail the hours of enforcement for that parking area.

Students, excluding first years, may apply for parking permits during online registration procedures (<https://move.unc.edu/parking/student-parking/>) or at the UNC Transportation and Parking offices in the Public Safety Building. Vehicles found parked illegally may be cited by Transportation and Parking's Parking Control Division, and subsequent violations may result in further citations, immobilization ('booting'), or towing of the vehicle. Citations may be appealed through UNC Transportation and Parking's Appeals Office within 10 calendar days upon receipt of the citation. Citations can be appealed in person during office hours Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., online (<https://move.unc.edu/account/>), or by regular mail.

The Parking Control Division operates MAP, the cost-free Motorist Assistance Program. At all times, including University holidays, if a vehicle requires a jump start or if the keys are locked inside the vehicle, motorists may call for assistance at (919) 962-8100.

The Commuter Alternative Program

The Commuter Alternative Program (<https://move.unc.edu/cap/>) (CAP) is designed to reward UNC employees and students for the use of bicycling, walking, transit, and ridesharing. CAP is only available to off-campus students who do not have a parking permit. CAP offers prizes, discounts from local merchants, and other benefits to all members.

Local and Regional Transit

The University, Chapel Hill, and Carrboro work together to provide the fare-free Chapel Hill Transit (<http://www.townofchapelhill.org/town-hall/departments-services/transit/>) system. No bus pass is needed when boarding a Chapel Hill Transit bus, and anyone can ride. Campus U route and RU (Reverse U) shuttles run in continuous loops from 7:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m., serving nearly every area on campus.

Commuting students can use any of the Park & Ride lots served by Chapel Hill Transit. All Park and Ride lots require a permit, which may be purchased through UNC (<https://move.unc.edu/transit/park-ride/>) or through the Town of Chapel Hill (<http://www.townofchapelhill.org/prlots/>). In the case of an emergency, UNC–Chapel Hill's Emergency Ride Back service is available to provide transportation to the Park & Ride lots or any location within Carrboro or Chapel Hill municipal boundaries.

Regional transit to RDU Airport, Raleigh, Durham, Hillsborough, and other nearby cities is available through GoTriangle (formerly Transit Transit). Bus service to Alamance, Guilford, and Chatham counties is also available, and all regional transit agencies provide free Park & Ride (<http://move.unc.edu/transit/>) lots. Get transit directions using Google Maps (<https://transit.google.com>) and see buses in real-time online (<http://triangle.transloc.com/>) or by downloading the TransLoc Rider app. For more route information, call GoTriangle at (919) 485-RIDE or visit the GoTriangle Web site (<https://gotriangle.org/>).

Point-to-Point

Point-to-Point (<http://move.unc.edu/p2p/>) (P2P) offers fare-free, fixed-route service aboard the P2P Express buses, operating on a continuous loop around campus during evening hours, 7:00 p.m. until 4:00 a.m., seven nights a week when residence halls are open during fall, spring, and summer semesters. Students must show their UNC OneCard to board the P2P Express. After dark, a demand-response van can be accessed by students in areas that are not served by the P2P Express route. P2P also offers fare-free, demand-response transportation service to disabled students and students going to or from Campus Health Services 24 hours a day. It also offers additional services including the fixed-route P2P Shuttle serving Baity Hill, an airport shuttle to RDU for select school breaks, and more. On-demand services can be requested with the TransLoc Rider app.

Safe Ride

Safe Ride, operated by Chapel Hill Transit (<http://chtransit.org>), aims to provide increased mobility between 11:00 p.m. and 2:30 a.m. There are three Safe Ride bus routes operating on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights. They provide service between campus and many private student housing developments, as well as other off-campus destinations.

UNC Bicycle Registration

Bicycle registration is required for bicycles on campus. The program serves as a deterrent to crime, aids in the identification of lost or stolen bicycles, and enables UNC to plan for improved bicycle parking facilities around campus in the future. All students who register their bikes will receive a 50-percent-off coupon for a u-lock from UNC Student Stores. Forms for the free bicycle registration are available online (<http://move.unc.edu/bike/>) or at the Public Safety Building. Cyclists who live off-campus may join the Commuter Alternative Program.

ShareTheRideNC Rideshare Matching

ShareTheRideNC (<http://unc.sharetheridenc.org/>) is an easy way to share the seats in your car or catch a ride. The UNC–Chapel Hill private ShareTheRideNC community allows you to find friends, classmates, and coworkers going the same way you are. ShareTheRideNC helps you offer or request rides for commutes, road trips, and popular events. If you have a car, split costs by offering rides. If you don't have a car, find rides where you need to go.

Zipcar

UNC–Chapel Hill introduced Zipcar (<http://www.zipcar.com/unc/>) to campus in 2004 to provide cars on demand by the hour or day. Since then, students, faculty members, and staff from UNC–Chapel Hill have been taking advantage of this car-sharing program by self-reserving Zipcars on campus, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, through online and mobile devices.

RESOURCES: CAREER PLANNING

University Career Services

219 Hanes Hall
204 E. Cameron Avenue
(919) 962-6507
ucs@unc.edu

The mission of University Career Services (<http://careers.unc.edu>) (UCS) is to support the mission of the University and Student Affairs by providing personalized and innovative career education to empower student success and transformation. Our vision is for all UNC–Chapel Hill students to create lives of purpose and prosperity in alignment with their personal goals.

USC services for both undergraduate and graduate students include workshops, one-one-one career coaching meetings, full- and part-time job and internship opportunities online (Handshake (<https://careers.unc.edu/students/resources/handshake/>)); CliftonStrengths and other assessments; and many print and electronic resources. Our programs include career panels and fairs, industry nights, and pre-graduate and law school exploration programs.

Services are limited to enrolled students in a UNC–Chapel Hill degree program and alumni for six months after graduation. Students in law, dentistry, and medicine and students enrolled in the M.B.A. and M.A.C. programs are served by career services in their departments, rather than by UCS.

Office hours are from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday.

RESOURCES: HEALTH AND WELLNESS

Accessibility Resources and Service

Accessibility Resources and Service (<https://accessibility.unc.edu>) (ARS) supports the University's commitment to accessibility. In consultation with faculty members, staff, and students, ARS works to identify and eliminate barriers that limit a student's ability to independently meet the demands of University life. Individual needs are addressed on a case-by-case basis through the provision of reasonable accommodations that allow the University to maintain the integrity of its programs and services.

In the first instance, prospective and existing students are invited to connect with ARS through the submission of a self-identification form and documentation (<https://ars.unc.edu/students/new-applicants/connect-ars/>).

ARS is located in the Student Academic Services Building North (Suite 2126) between the Rams Head Center and Morrison Residence Hall. Office hours are 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. ARS staff can be contacted by email at ars@unc.edu or by (ars@unc.edu962-8300)) telephone at (919) 962-8300 (V) (TTY-711 [NC RELAY]), and more information is available on the ARS Web site (<https://ars.unc.edu>).

Campus Health Services

Campus Health Services (<http://campushealth.unc.edu>) (CHS), located next to Kenan Stadium in the James A. Taylor Building, provides a broad range of health care services including primary care, orthopedics, obstetrics and gynecology, nutrition services, dermatology, travel information and immunization, and allergy management. For convenience, in-house laboratory, radiology, pharmacy, and physical therapy services also are available. CHS also provides counseling and psychological services; please see the Counseling and Psychological Services section for greater detail about services offered.

Eligibility

Any student or postdoctoral fellow who has paid the campus health fee for the current semester or summer session is eligible for health care at CHS. Spouses of full-time students and postdoctoral fellows can receive care at CHS.

Health Fee

Currently, the fee covers the cost of most professional services (there is no charge for office visits) provided by CHS physicians, nurse practitioners, physician's assistants, nurses, physical therapists, and registered dietitians. The health fee also provides reduced charges for prescription drugs, miscellaneous supplies, laboratory tests, X-rays, medical procedures, and specialty services. Spouses of students are eligible to receive the same services as students by paying the campus health fee at CHS and demonstrating appropriate insurance coverage.

Hours

Hours of operation vary according to the academic calendar. Hours of operation during the academic year are 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. Students are typically seen on an appointment basis from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Acute care services are provided between 8:00 p.m. and 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday during the fall and spring semesters. Weekend acute care services are considered premium services and there is an associated visit charge. Hours of operation in the summer are 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. If CHS is closed, students have access to a nurse advice line through UNC Healthlink, and there is always a CHS physician on call. Call (919) 966-2281 to verify hours of operation, schedule an appointment, or to speak with the Healthlink nurse when CHS is closed.

Immunizations

North Carolina law mandates that all new students at the University document the completion of immunization requirements. Failure to comply may result in cancellation of registration 30 days after classes begin. Vaccines are offered at Campus Health Services at reasonable rates for students who need to complete their immunization requirement.

Mandatory Health Insurance

The University requires proof of health insurance as a condition of enrollment. The University offers a group health insurance plan, including major medical benefits to single and married students, their spouses/partners, and children.

Campus Recreation

Campus Recreation offers amenities for all fitness and recreation wants, needs, and desires of the UNC population. It provides a diverse and intentional recreational program in a safe, inclusive, and accessible environment which enhances the social, mental, and physical well-being of the entire University community. Campus Recreation enjoys a unique dual reporting relationship with the Department of Exercise and Sport Science (EXSS) and its rich history and commitment to a healthy and active lifestyle, and with Student Affairs, which represents the Carolina spirit of student development and learning outside the classroom.

Facilities

Campus Recreation offers a variety of facilities to satisfy the wants and needs of all UNC students, faculty members, and staff. The two fitness centers, the Student Recreation Center and Rams Head Recreation Center, offer cardiovascular and weight training equipment, as well as an indoor track, locker rooms, and group fitness studios. Basketball, squash, and racquetball courts, along with equipment for check-out, can be found throughout Fetzer Hall and Woollen Gym. These facilities also feature a cycle studio, climbing walls, and multipurpose rooms that can function for practice and instruction of a variety of fitness types. Both an indoor and an outdoor pool are located near the heart of campus. North and South Campus feature recreation complexes and fields for playing basketball, volleyball, tennis, and any other sport. The Outdoor Education Center, located off Country Club Road, is also a great facility for experiencing how recreation and the outdoors can go hand-in-hand.

Intramural Sports

Intramural Sports offers opportunities for students to compete against their peers in a friendly and structured environment.

Sport Clubs

A sport club is a University-recognized student organization formed by individuals with a common interest in a sport. Its primary goal is to promote and develop interest in a particular sport and recruit new members. Clubs may be instructional, recreational, and/or competitive.

Fitness

Fitness is housed in the Student Recreation Center (SRC) and Rams Head Recreation Center (RHRC). Both facilities offer a wide variety of cardiovascular equipment, including many stationary bikes, stair climbers, treadmills, and cross-trainers/elliptical machines.

Over the years, Fitness and Counseling and Wellness Services (of Campus Health Services) have teamed together to enhance student wellness through greater collaborative programming, such as Powerfully Pink (a breast cancer awareness program), Women's Health and Fitness Day, the Farmer's Market, Fit Wellness into Your Day, and the Get Fit from Head to Heel Challenge.

Counseling and Psychological Services

Counseling and Psychological Services (<https://caps.unc.edu/>) (CAPS), a department of Campus Health Services, is located on the third floor of the James A. Taylor Building.

The CAPS staff is strongly committed to addressing the mental health needs of a diverse student body through timely access to consultation and connection to clinically appropriate services. CAPS affirms that people of every background are to be treated with respect and dignity. The professional ethics and standards of the multidisciplinary staff at CAPS set a framework for understanding how facets of identity (e.g., gender, ethnicity, race, sexual orientation, gender identity/expression, age, physical and mental abilities, religious beliefs, and socioeconomic background) impact life experience. The CAPS approach to mental health integrates physical, emotional, academic, spiritual, social, and cultural well-being. Counseling and Psychological Services include individual, couples, and group therapy, urgent consultation and crisis intervention, and medication evaluation/management. The CAPS staff consists of licensed psychologists, psychiatrists, clinical social workers, psychology practicum students, interns, and administrative support personnel.

Counseling and Psychological Services can be reached Monday through Friday from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at (919) 966-3658. CAPS invites initial evaluations without an appointment Monday through Thursday from 9:00 a.m. to noon and 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m., and on Friday from 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1:00 p.m. to 4 p.m. Students who have a psychological crisis should call (919) 966-3658 immediately. If the crisis occurs after hours, call Campus Health Services at (919) 966-2281.

Student Wellness Services

Student Wellness Services (<http://studentwellness.unc.edu>) seeks to enhance the individual and collective health of the community through a wide range of programs, services, and resources. Through partnerships with other campus departments, community agencies, student organizations, and peer mentors, we work to develop and advocate for a campus and community environment that creates, emphasizes, and supports healthy choices and positive decision making regarding health, safety, and wellness.

Student Wellness promotes wellness as a journey rather than an outcome and believes that students' health choices, as well as the culture of the community around them, involve a dynamic and multifaceted integration of eight dimensions of wellness: physical, emotional, spiritual, social, cultural, environmental, intellectual, and financial. Using these dimensions, Student Wellness provides integrative programs and services related to a variety of health topic areas, including healthy relationships and sexual health; stress management; sleep hygiene; alcohol and other substance education, interventions, and recovery supports; and violence prevention.

Student Wellness provides these programs and services on an individual, group, and larger campus community level.

Student Wellness Services has two locations: the first floor of the Student Academic Services Building (SASB) South, and the second floor of the James A. Taylor Campus Health Services Building. The office can be reached Monday through Friday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at (919) 962-9355.

RESOURCES: SERVICE AND LEADERSHIP

Campus Y

The Campus Y (<http://campus-y.unc.edu/>) is an extraordinarily vibrant, student-driven organization, promoting social justice and social innovation locally, nationally, and internationally. Over more than a century and a half of service, it has incubated such essential campus institutions as Student Stores, Career Services, Intramural Athletics, and New Student Orientation. It has also provided the incubation space and resources for launching fully independent nonprofit organizations such as Nourish International, the Student Environmental Action Coalition, and the Student Coalition for Action in Literacy Education. Over the course of a typical year, approximately 2,000 UNC-Chapel Hill students channel their idealism, passion, and sweat equity into a diverse array of service and advocacy initiatives, including but not limited to public health, youth development, education, human rights, micro-finance, food security, and environmental advocacy. The Campus Y is led by the student executive board and the chairs of more than 30 committees and is supported by a professional staff of three full-time employees. Students are encouraged to visit the Campus Y offices in the YMCA Building, adjacent to South Building, to learn about these opportunities and campus, community, youth, and global social justice issues.

Carolina Center for Public Service

Overview

The Carolina Center for Public Service (<https://ccps.unc.edu/>) (CCPS) engages and supports the faculty, students, and staff of UNC–Chapel Hill in meeting the needs of North Carolina and beyond. The center strengthens the University's public service commitment by promoting scholarship and service that are responsive to the concerns of the state and contribute to the common good.

How to Get Involved

APPLES Service-Learning is a student-led program that transforms educational experiences by connecting academic learning and public service. As part of APPLES students can:

- sign up for the Service-Learning Initiative (SLI) to learn more about local organizations and how to get involved in service. SLI: Launch is available for incoming first-year students in the fall and SLI: Engage is an opportunity for any other Carolina student to get involved in the spring.
- register for an APPLES Service-Learning course on Connect Carolina to complete 30 hours of service as part of an academic course. This might also fulfill the Experiential Education requirement.
- apply for a spring or summer internship to gain valuable professional experience while receiving a stipend and academic course credit
- explore communities beyond Chapel Hill on an alternative fall, winter, or spring break trip and serve alongside a team of peers
- implement a project with a social innovation fellowship. Fellows receive funding, mentorship, and academic credit to help ideas come to life.

For any inquiries about APPLES, email apples@unc.edu. (apples@unc.edu)

The Buckley Public Service Scholars (BPSS) program provides a framework for Carolina undergraduate students committed to making a positive impact through service. Students can register for the BPSS program at the beginning of the fall and spring semesters by visiting the Web site (<https://buckleyportfolio.ccps.unc.edu>). BPSS strengthens the culture of service and engagement at Carolina by:

- challenging students to increase the breadth and depth of their involvement in North Carolina communities and beyond
- fostering connections between the University, its students and the community
- promoting student participation in varying dimensions of public service: direct, organizational, and policy
- developing students' capacity for engaging in their communities in meaningful ways

For any inquiries about BPSS email bpss@unc.edu. (bpss@unc.edu)

The Center offers various competitive opportunities for undergraduate and graduate students to further their involvement in public service and community engagement, including:

- Community Engaged Fellowships for returning graduate and professional students
- Community Service Scholarships for undergraduate students
- Davis Projects for Peace for undergraduate students
- Ronald W. Hyatt Rotary Public Service Awards for undergraduate or graduate students
- Mingma Norbu Sherpa Fellowship for undergraduate or graduate students
- MacDonald Community Fellowships for undergraduate students with a strong connection to a community partner

For any inquiries contact Ryan Nilsen at rbnilsen@unc.edu. (rbnilsen@unc.edu)

To stay informed about the many different public service opportunities at Carolina, subscribe to the center's weekly Public Service News listserv (<https://ccps.unc.edu/news-events/public-service-news-listserv/subscribe-to-the-listserv/>).

POLICIES AND PROCEDURES

The University provides a list of campuswide official policies (<http://policies.unc.edu>). The policies and procedures in this section of the catalog include information about course credit; registration and enrollment; attendance, grading, and examination; academic standing, transcripts; and other important information.

Regulations and Requirements for Undergraduate Students

Students are responsible for observing the procedures, regulations, and requirements of the University as they are set forth here and in other official University publications. This section describes many of the requirements and regulations that apply to undergraduates, but it is not a complete list of all such regulations and requirements. Unless otherwise stated, the regulations described in this section will govern the academic progress of students from their first year in the General College through their final semester in the College of Arts and Sciences or one of the undergraduate professional schools. The staff of the University will gladly provide students with detailed information concerning their academic program or academic problems, but this does not relieve any student of individual responsibility for meeting the University's requirements and observing University regulations.

Regulations and Requirements for Graduate Students

The Graduate School Handbook contains most of the policies and procedures of The Graduate School at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Students should become familiar with the material pertaining to their degree programs, and, together with their faculty advisors, make certain that the chosen program of study complies with all policies.

Policy Changes

The following policies were changed since the publication date of this catalog:

Distance-Learning Courses

- Any Spring 2020 classes that were converted to remote instruction will not contribute to the limit of distance learning courses that a student can apply towards a degree in the College of Arts and Sciences.
- All Summer 2020 classes will not contribute to the limit of distance learning courses that a student can apply towards a degree in the College of Arts and Sciences.
- Any Fall 2020 classes offered using the remote or HyFlex instruction mode will not contribute to the limit of distance learning courses that a student can apply towards a degree in the College of Arts and Sciences.

See Distance-Learning Courses (p. 1257) in the 2020-2021 Catalog.

CREDIT AND EVALUATION

Calculation of Transferred Semesters Based on the Number of Transferred Credit Hours

Several academic procedures, including the determination of academic eligibility, depend on the tally of semesters that students have completed. When credit hours are transferred, a calculation must be made as to the number of semesters the student is regarded as having used up. This calculation is based on the number of credit hours accepted by UNC–Chapel Hill for transfer, not on the number of semesters in which the student was enrolled at other colleges. Excluded from this calculation are transfer hours awarded for courses taken concurrent with high school.

Students are regarded as having used up one semester for every full multiple of 15.0 semester credit hours accepted for transfer. When credits are transferred from a college that operates on the quarter-term system, one quarter-term credit hour equals two-thirds of a semester credit hour.

See “Transfer Candidates” in the “Undergraduate Admissions (p. 19)” section of the Catalog for additional information.

The same formula is applied to credit hours that a student earns while enrolled in a part-time program of study at UNC–Chapel Hill, with 90 hours regarded as six semesters and 105 hours regarded as seven semesters. Note: Hours earned in any UNC–Chapel Hill summer term are not included in this formula.

The formula also applies to transfer credit hours awarded for any courses taken at other institutions during a fall or spring semester (but not during summer terms) after a student matriculates at UNC–Chapel Hill.

Credit by College Board Advanced Placement, International Baccalaureate, or SAT Subject Examinations

Students who meet UNC–Chapel Hill standards on certain approved College Board Advanced Placement examinations, examinations of the International Baccalaureate Program, or certain SAT Subject Tests (e.g., foreign language) may receive academic credit for comparable University coursework. Each year the Office of Undergraduate Admissions publishes (<https://admissions.unc.edu/credit/credit/test-and-placement-credit/>) the minimum scores necessary for the awarding of course credit (also listed below for AP and IB exams); however, final authority for awarding this placement credit lies with the chair of the department or curriculum in which credit is to be received. Minimum scores for placement may change from year to year. Regulations for credit in the year in which the student began study at UNC–Chapel Hill as a full-time student determine the standards that apply, not the year in which the student took the examination. Such credit will not be contingent upon the completion of further work in the subject unless specified by an academic department.

By-Examination (BE) credit awarded based on a student’s scores on the Advanced Placement, International Baccalaureate, SAT Subject Tests, or departmental examinations may be used to fulfill General Education requirements. For students admitted as new first-year or transfer students beginning in fall 2009 or later, the following limitations apply to the use of By-Examination (BE) credit in a major or minor.

- No more than two courses (six to eight credit hours) of BE credit may be used as part of the major core.
- No more than one BE credit course (three to four credit hours) may be used as part of a minor.
- Grades of BE from an Advanced Placement, International Baccalaureate, or SAT II Subject Test may not count toward the requirement that students earn at least 18 hours of C or better grades in the major core, or toward the minimum hours of C required in the minor.

Students who wish to enroll in a course for which they have By-Examination credit should discuss their decision with an academic advisor. In the event that a student takes a course for which Advanced Placement, International Baccalaureate, or SAT Subject Test credit is awarded, the By-Examination credit will be forfeited when the course is completed, as well as any higher-level BE credit in that sequence. For example, a student whose test scores would award BE credit for MATH 231 and MATH 232 and who chooses to take MATH 231 at UNC–Chapel Hill will forfeit BE credit for both MATH 231 and MATH 232.

English

Beginning in fall 2012, the English department started offering a new foundation course, ENGL 105, which took the place of ENGL 101 and 102. All students entering in fall 2012 and beyond are required to take this course; there is no exemption through test placement. For additional information on English placement, please see the department's Web site (<https://englishcomplint.unc.edu/>).

Mathematics

For information about placement, see the department's Web site (<https://math.unc.edu/undergraduate/placement-information/>) on math placement.

Credit by Departmental Examination

Enrolled students who, through individual study or experience, have gained knowledge of the content of undergraduate courses offered by the University may, with the approval of the relevant department and school or college, receive credit (without grade) for such courses by special examination. The student must receive the approval of the department and college/school at least 30 days before the examination is taken, and the examination must be taken before the beginning of the last semester or full summer session before the student's graduation.

Policy on Credit for Internships—The College of Arts and Sciences

No internship automatically earns academic credit. Students who want academic credit for an internship should contact the director of undergraduate studies in a relevant academic department or curriculum (p. 1235) before beginning the internship and must complete an internship course in that academic unit. Not all departments and curricula offer internship courses.

Internships may not be used to meet the experiential education (EE) requirement unless the student earns academic credit for the internship through a department or curriculum. A student must enroll in a course that has been approved as meeting the EE requirement in order for an internship to fulfill that requirement.

Students who must earn academic credit as a condition of doing the internship—and who cannot get credit through an academic department or curriculum—should contact a counselor at University Career Services for possible credit in SPCL 493 before beginning the internship. The student must write a statement describing his or her learning objectives and a paper reflecting on the experience. SPCL 493 is a one-credit, Pass/Fail course that does not count toward any graduation requirements.

Distance-Learning Courses

See Policy Changes (p. 1256) for updates that were made after the publication of this catalog. In summary, due to changes in the instruction modes during the COVID-19 pandemic, classes that are converted to remote instruction in Spring 2020, Summer 2020, and Fall 2020 will not contribute to the distance-learning (online) courses that a student can apply towards a degree in the College of Arts and Sciences. Self-paced courses offered in any semester cannot count towards a degree in the College of Arts and Sciences.

The policy governing the use of distance-learning courses applies to all new and continuing full-time and part-time degree-seeking students, and they refer to Carolina Courses Online (CCO), Summer School, and other for-credit courses offered completely via similar modalities. The regulations do not apply to coursework taken prior to matriculation as degree-seeking students.

The following policies apply to distance-learning courses:

1. The maximum number of credit hours that can be counted toward an undergraduate degree in the College of Arts and Sciences is 24. There can be no exceptions to this upper limit.
2. First-semester, first-year students may not enroll in for-credit online courses unless unusual circumstances prevail, nor may first-year students take an online course in the summer prior to matriculation.

3. Full-time undergraduate students may enroll in a maximum of one for-credit online course per regular semester (after the first semester, if they are a first-year student) and a maximum of two for-credit online courses per summer session (courses offered over the full summer would count in both Summer Session I and Summer Session II).
4. Degree-seeking students who are not enrolled may take a maximum of two for-credit online courses in a regular semester or summer.
5. No more than two for-credit online courses may count toward a major (core requirement) or minor in the College of Arts and Sciences.
6. Self-paced courses cannot count toward a degree in the College of Arts and Sciences.
7. It is the responsibility of the senior associate dean for undergraduate education, in consultation with the associate dean and director of the academic advising program, to determine whether students in unusual circumstances warrant an exception to these policies.

Distance-learning courses offered at UNC–Chapel Hill are identified with the following section numbers in Connect Carolina:

- 956 – 974 (Departmental Distance Learning)
- 975 – 989 (Friday Center Distance Learning)
- 990 – 994 (Friday Center Distance Learning Carolina Courses Online)
- 01W – 09W (On-Campus Web Delivery Courses)

This policy is maintained by the College of Arts and Sciences. Last revised November 9, 2018; September 20, 2016.

Carolina Courses Online

Carolina Courses Online is a distance-education program that offers courses over the Internet. In-person attendance is not required, but courses follow the semester schedule. The courses are administered through the Friday Center for Continuing Education. To enroll, contact the Friday Center at (919) 962-1134 or visit its Web page (<http://fridaycenter.unc.edu>). Certain restrictions may apply. Students should consult the dean's office of their school for details.

UNC Online (UNCO)

UNC Online (UNCO) is a collaborative effort among the institutions of the UNC System, of which UNC–Chapel Hill is a part. UNCO is administered by the UNC System Office. Via the UNCO portal (<https://online.northcarolina.edu/unconline/>), students at UNC–Chapel Hill can enroll in semester-based online courses offered by other system institutions. Students taking courses through UNCO remain subject to the academic integrity and conduct policies of their home institution while participating in UNCO courses. Any currently enrolled degree-seeking student is permitted to enroll in UNCO courses; non-degree students are not permitted to enroll through UNCO. Students should consult with their academic advisor before enrolling in UNCO courses. Existing policies regarding transfer credits and using online courses toward graduation requirements still apply. UNC–Chapel Hill permits students to take one UNCO course per semester, up to 4 credits. Students will pay tuition at UNC–Chapel Hill at the prevailing tuition rates for that particular semester. Transfer credit will be posted to the UNC–Chapel transcript after completion of the course. The host institution's calendar will determine all start and end dates as well as breaks for the host institution's course and grade submission dates; these dates might not coincide with UNC–Chapel Hill dates. Withdraw and drop dates are determined by UNC–Chapel Hill. All registration, drop, and withdrawal actions must originate in the UNCO portal.

Foreign Language Placement Credit

Experiential Speakers of a Foreign Language

Enrolled students who have learned a language currently offered at UNC–Chapel Hill by experience (i.e., having grown up speaking another language in the home or having lived several years in another country) and who are conversant and literate in that language and in English, may take a placement test in that language for placement (PL) only and not for credit hours. If the student places beyond level 3, the student can use that language to fulfill the General Education foreign language requirement, but again, no credit hours will be awarded. The placement test must be taken before the beginning of the last semester or full summer session before graduation.

Native Speakers of a Foreign Language

For academic purposes, a native speaker is a student raised in a country outside the United States and formally educated through all or most of high school in a language other than English. Native speakers cannot use By-Examination (BE) credit in their native language to reduce the requirements for a major in that language and will not receive credit for levels 1 through 4 of their native language(s). However, upon recommendation of the appropriate language department, they may receive credit for courses taken at UNC–Chapel Hill beyond level 4 if those courses are heavily based on literature, film, culture, or other content. Native speakers of languages other than English may use ENGL 105, or its transfer equivalent, to satisfy their General Education foreign language requirement. Native speakers who wish to pursue placement (PL) in their language should complete the online form (<http://advising.unc.edu/for-students/advice-by-student-year/newly-admitted-students/newly-admitted-first-years/native-or-experiential-speakers-of-a-foreign-language/>).

Hours of Credit

Work is valued and credited toward degrees by semester hours, one such hour usually being awarded for one hour of classroom or direct faculty instruction and a minimum of two hours out of class student work each week. One hour of credit is usually awarded for each three hours of laboratory or field work or work in studio art.

For more information on the University's course numbering system, see UPM #4 (<http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/university-policy-memorandums/upm-4-standard-course-numbering-system/>).

For the definition of a credit hour, see UPM #29 (<http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/university-policy-memorandums/upm-29-definition-of-a-credit-hour/>).

Independent Studies for Credit

The University offers independent study experiences for undergraduate students. Such courses, including directed readings, internships/practica, mentored undergraduate research, and senior honors thesis courses for an individual student, are offered for academic credit through departments and curricula. Twelve hours of graded independent study credit may be counted toward graduation (excluding six hours of senior honors thesis credit). No more than 12 hours may be taken in any one semester, with the exception of students completing a full-time teaching internship program in the School of Education and other approved practicum/internship programs in the professional schools. Students may participate in formalized programs, or they may make individual learning contracts for work under the supervision of a member of the permanent faculty at the department/curriculum level. For information about independent study courses in their majors, students should consult the director of undergraduate studies or independent study coordinator in their major department or curriculum. Students, in consultation with the faculty member, must complete a learning contract and have it approved by the director of undergraduate studies (or designee). Registration for an independent study course must be completed after the learning contract has been approved and no later than the last day of 'late registration' (the end of the second week of classes in fall or spring semester or the equivalent date in each summer session). A template (<http://registrar.unc.edu/files/2014/02/Template-Adapted-for-Use-in-the-College-of-Arts-and-Sciences.pdf>) for such a learning contract is available online. Students are strongly encouraged to begin this process early, well before the beginning of the semester.

For more information, see UPM #30 (<https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/university-policy-memorandums/independent-study-policy/>).

This policy is maintained by the College of Arts and Sciences and Educational Policy Committee. Last revised November 28, 2017. See also Resolution 2012-12 (<http://faccoun.unc.edu/files/2011/03/Res2012-12OnIndependentStudyFinal.pdf>) and Resolution 2013-6 (<http://faccoun.unc.edu/files/2011/03/Res2013-06OnIndependentStudyTFReportFinal.pdf>).

Semester Schedule

UNC–Chapel Hill academic operations are on a semester calendar, primarily divided into the fall and spring semesters with standard course meetings within a 17-week session. Summer School offers two sessions of five weeks each, a three-week Maymester, and other short courses with various beginning and ending dates. For specific dates, see the University's Academic Calendar (<https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-calendar/>).

REGISTRATION, ENROLLMENT, AND WITHDRAWAL

Registration

General Policies

UNC–Chapel Hill students use the ConnectCarolina Student Center to register for courses. Students should refer to the Registration Guide (<http://registrar.unc.edu/guide/>) on the Office of the University Registrar's Web site for instructions regarding registration.

Students who register during the billing period must pay tuition and fees, or give notice of anticipated aid, to the Office of Student Accounts and University Receivables by the published tuition and fees due date or their schedule will be cancelled and all their classes dropped before the beginning of classes. Students who register after the billing period must pay estimated tuition and fees or give notice of anticipated aid before they can register for that semester. Students who register after the date designated for official registration must pay an additional fee of $20.00 for late registration. If the delay results from circumstances clearly beyond the student's control, an appeal may be made in writing to the registrar. The appeal must show sufficient justification for the delay and has to be approved by the dean of the school in which the student is enrolled.

North Carolina law requires that no person shall attend a college or university in North Carolina without presenting a certificate of immunization to the college or university on or before the first day of matriculation. This certificate indicates that the student has received immunizations required by law. New students at UNC–Chapel Hill must provide the director of Campus Health Services with an immunization record certified by a physician. Students who fail to present the required certificate of immunization within 30 days of enrollment will be withdrawn from the University. Their enrollment will not be reinstated until they have provided a certificate of immunization to Campus Health Services.

Registration for credit for any course at the start of the semester is limited to the first five days of classes unless a late registration is approved by the course instructor and the student's dean or academic advisor. Any student who has not registered for courses after the primary billing date will be restricted from accessing the registration system for that term and will be required to submit a prepayment. For more information, please see "Course Schedule Changes" below.

Registration Advising for First-Year Students and Sophomores

All first-year students and sophomores are assigned a primary academic advisor in the Academic Advising Program (Steele Building and Hardin Hall) in the College of Arts and Sciences but may see any advisor as appropriate. Advisors' names and office locations (<http://advising.unc.edu/see-an-advisor/>) are posted on the Web. First-year students must meet with an advisor for registration advising at least once during their first year before registering for their third semester on campus; an online module to assist students with registration, policies, and procedures is also available. All students are strongly encouraged to review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester and regularly meet with an advisor to ensure that they remain on track to graduate.

Advisors will answer students' questions and review their tentative course selections to help students achieve appropriate academic progress. In subsequent semesters, students are encouraged to discuss academic progress with their academic advisor. Students should follow instructions received from the Office of the University Registrar, which may be accessed by logging on to ConnectCarolina.

Registration Advising for Juniors and Seniors

Juniors and seniors receive academic advising during registration periods according to the directives set out by their college/professional school and major. Juniors who have not yet declared a major must meet with an advisor in the Academic Advising Program before registration.

The department or curriculum in which the student's primary major is housed determines the procedures juniors and seniors must follow for registration. In some cases, the student must meet with a faculty advisor in the department or curriculum of the primary major before being able to register each semester. These advisors answer questions specific to the major and about graduate and career opportunities in the field.

Students admitted to a professional school will receive advising and assistance on all academic matters from an advisor in their school.

Academic Level (Class Standing)

All students who begin their undergraduate careers at UNC–Chapel Hill are considered first-year students for the first and second semesters. In their third semester and thereafter, a student's classification (sophomore, junior, senior) is determined by the cumulative number of credit hours earned:

- 1–29 credit hours earned: first-year student
- 30–59 credit hours earned: sophomore
- 60–89 credit hours earned: junior
- 90 + credit hours earned: senior

Registration Priority

A student's first available date for registration (registration priority) is based on the number of semesters completed.

By policy of the Faculty Council (Resolution 2007–3), the University limits students to eight semesters of full-time study. Transfer students who transfer in the UNC–Chapel Hill equivalent of two or more semesters (see 'Calculation of Transferred Semesters Based on the Number of Transfer Hours') may enroll in up to 10 total semesters (Resolution 2017-1 (<https://facultygov.unc.edu/files/2017/01/Res201701OnMultipleAreasofStudy.pdf>)). To help ensure graduation within the eight-semester limit, students' registration priority will be based on the number of semesters completed; the more semesters students have completed, the higher their registration priority.

Terms in residence are tallied in three ways:

1. UNC–Chapel Hill full-time enrollment
Regardless of the number of credit hours, any fall or spring semester of enrollment in UNC–Chapel Hill courses (including UNC–Chapel Hill study abroad courses, but excluding Carolina Courses Online) counts as one semester of full-time study, unless the student is enrolled as a part-time student through Part-Time Classroom Studies. (Summer sessions at UNC–Chapel Hill do not count as semesters.)
2. UNC–Chapel Hill part-time enrollment
Each full multiple of 15 cumulative credit hours earned at UNC–Chapel Hill in fall or spring terms (not summer terms) counts as one semester of full-time study for any student enrolled as a part-time student through Part-Time Classroom Studies.

3. Transfer credits awarded for courses taken at other colleges
Each full multiple of 15 cumulative transfer-credit hours counts as one semester of full-time study. Excluded from this calculation are transfer hours awarded for courses taken either concurrent with high school or during any summer term after the student has matriculated at UNC–Chapel Hill.

Any term in which a student is enrolled exclusively in online courses does not count as a semester of full-time study. Students may refer further questions to the Academic Advising Program (if the student is in the College of Arts and Sciences) or to their respective dean's office.

Repeating Course Enrollments

A student who proceeds with enrollment in a course not designated as repeatable can only earn credit once toward the fulfillment of the University's minimum undergraduate degree requirement. The credit is earned from the course with the highest passing grade or, if grades are the same, the latter attempt. The grades of all attempts of the course, however, are computed in the student's cumulative grade point average.

Certain University courses (e.g., applied music, special studies, undergraduate research, etc.) may be taken more than once for credit and are so designated in the course catalog as repeatable. A particular physical education activity (PHYA) course may be taken more than once, so long as a different level of the same course (beginning, intermediate, and advanced) is taken during each separate enrollment. PHYA courses do not award academic credit hours toward an undergraduate degree, but the grade is factored into the cumulative grade point average. Students may enroll in no more than one lifetime fitness (LFIT) course, and only one LFIT course will count toward academic credit hours for an undergraduate degree.

For the purposes of receiving financial aid, hours for repeated courses will only be considered a part of the total upon which awards are based if:

1. the student is repeating a course previously failed, or
2. the course is the first repeat of a prior course in which a passing grade (D or higher) was received.

Maintained by the Educational Policy Committee. Last approved on April 21, 2017, see Resolution 2017-6 (<https://facultygov.unc.edu/files/2017/04/Res2017-6RepeatingCourseEnroll.pdf>).

Cancellation of Enrollment

A cancellation of enrollment is, in effect, the same as a student not registering. Classes are not reflected on the student's transcript, and no tuition and fees are charged. If a student registered for classes a cancellation is only applicable if there no documentation of student attendance or for the following administrative reasons. A registration cancellation will be processed for any student who has a "hold" on the tuition and fees due date for each term, and students will be notified. A cancellation will be processed if a student is not cleared financially; is not academically eligible to continue in school; or shows a cashier's hold, Office of Undergraduate Admissions hold, dean's office hold, or Campus Health Services cancellation hold. In some cases, a student may request to cancel his or her registration for personal reasons and may do so by following instructions (<http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/withdrawals-cancellations/>) listed on the Office of the University Registrar's Web site. To request a cancellation after classes begin, however, students must process the cancellation through their academic advising dean's office. For more information also see the sections on withdrawing from the University.

Administrative Changes to Course Registration

Students have the responsibility to maintain the accuracy of their course schedule. A department or curriculum in the College of Arts and Sciences has the option to drop a course from a student's registration if the student fails to attend both of the first two class meetings (or the first class meeting if the course meets only once each week). The appropriate dean's office will be responsible for informing departments of students who cannot attend the first two class meetings because of illness or other reasons approved by a dean. Students should never presume that an instructor or department/curriculum will systematically drop classes from the student's schedule. However, if such an action is taken by a department/curriculum, the registration openings resulting from these drops will be offered to other students seeking enrollment in the courses during the official add period (first five days of classes) or thereafter, as determined by the instructor of the class or by the department, curriculum, or school.

Departments/curricula can drop students' courses using the computerized registration system prior to the last day to reduce a course load for financial credit. To effect such a drop after that date but before the end of the eighth week, a student can drop the course through ConnectCarolina. (See 'Course Schedule Changes' below.) Students who have applied for graduation and who have requested an academic underload must have that request approved to receive financial credit for reducing their course load.

Auditing Courses

To audit a class, registered students and persons not registered must obtain a registration/drop/add form from the teaching department offering the class. Permission from the class instructor and the department chair is required and should be indicated on the form with a written signature. This procedure applies to fall, spring, and both summer terms.

Requests to audit a class may be submitted only after the end of the official registration period (last day for students to add a class or late register) when it has been determined that there is still space available in the class. This date can be found on the University Registrar's Calendar (<http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-calendar/>) for the specific term.

Auditing classes is permitted only in lecture-based courses and never in courses that include laboratories or performances. Auditing is not permitted in courses that focus on the development of written or oral communication skills or that rely heavily on class participation. Auditing is not permitted in independent studies courses, internships, special topics, directed readings, or similar courses. Auditing is also not permitted in classes that are offered primarily online. Students may not audit courses offered through the Friday Center for Continuing Education (Part-Time Classroom Studies, Carolina Courses Online, Self-Paced Courses, or tutorial programs) or courses preparing students for credit by examination.

Students auditing a course do not write papers, take quizzes or examinations, or request review of their work, and do not participate in class discussions unless otherwise directed by the course instructor. Students who audit a course may not subsequently receive course credit for that course. Additional information on the University's policy on auditing (<http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-> procedures/university-policy-memorandums/upm-9-auditing-courses/) is available online.

Students officially registered for other classes in the same term may audit a class without paying a fee. Persons not registered for classes must pay a $20.00 fee per class to the Office of Student Accounts and University Receivables, then bring the permission and receipt to the Office of the University Registrar to complete the process. Payments will only be accepted after the end of the official registration period. Effective fall 2017, individuals of age 65 or older may audit a class without paying a fee.

If requested, a copy of the registration transaction will be given to the student to provide to the class instructor at the beginning of the term.

Changes in Fall and Spring Semester Schedules

Continuous Course Enrollment: Foundations English Composition and Foreign Language Requirements

Effective in fall 2012, students admitted as first-year or as transfer students are required to complete ENGL 105/ENGL 105I (ENGL 100 and ENGL 105/ENGL 105I, if applicable) during their first year, and they must maintain continuous enrollment in Foundations foreign language courses until they have completed this requirement. Students are not permitted to drop ENGL 100, ENGL 105/ENGL 105I, or foreign language levels 1 through 3 being used to fulfill the Foundations requirement after the second week of the semester, unless approved by a dean in the Academic Advising Program. Such approval will be for exceptional circumstances only. Students should not stop attending English composition and rhetoric and Foundation foreign language classes without speaking with a dean in the Academic Advising Program.

Course Schedule Changes

Insofar as possible, changes in course registration schedules should be made during the first five days of classes. During this time, students may add courses using the online registration system. During days six through ten of classes, students must obtain permission to register or make additions to their schedule from the course instructor; if approved, the academic department, curriculum, or school will add the student through the computerized registration system. After the tenth day of classes, if students wish to register or make additions to their schedule, they must obtain a registration/drop/add form from their academic advisor, the concerned department, or their professional school and must obtain the signatures of both their instructor and their school dean (or dean's designee). For students in the General College and the College of Arts and Sciences, only the associate dean for advising (or dean's designee) has this authority. After the tenth day of classes, deans (or deans' designees) will approve only those registrations or course additions that have first been approved by the instructor. Approval of additions to a student's schedule during this period is at the deans' (or the deans' designees') discretion.

Course Schedule Changes during Weeks One and Two

During the first two weeks of classes, students may drop a course using the online registration system, but they are responsible for ensuring that their schedules do not fall below the minimum 12 academic hours required for full-time registration.

Course Schedule Changes during Weeks Three through Eight

When a course is dropped between the second and eighth week of classes, a notation of WC (withdrawal by choice) shall be recorded and used internally for tracking and reporting purposes. For external purposes, the WC notation is equivalent to the W grade. Once declared, a WC notation cannot be rescinded except when a student withdraws from an entire semester due to extenuating circumstances. All first-year, first-time students entering the University in fall 2014 or thereafter are allowed to accumulate no more than 16 hours of WC notations during their undergraduate career.

Different drop-add procedures apply to first-year students who entered the University as degree-seeking students prior to fall 2014, along with sophomore and junior transfer students who entered in fall 2014, and junior transfer students who enter in fall 2015. Details on the previous policy (<http://registrar.unc.edu/guide/registration-policies/drop-add-procedures/rules-course-drops/>) can be found on the University Registrar's Web site.

Course Schedule Changes after the Eighth Week of Classes: The Appeal Process

After the eighth week of classes, students must petition to drop courses through the dean's office of the school in which they are enrolled. For students in the General College and the College of Arts and Sciences, the associate dean for advising (or designee) has this authority.

To drop a course after the eighth week of classes, students must complete and submit an appeal to the appeals committee of their college or school. In the General College and the College of Arts and Sciences, an appeals committee meets weekly (except the week of July 4 and Christmas). Possible legitimate reasons for requesting a course drop after the eighth week of classes include serious illness, personal or family problems, financial problems requiring employment after the start of the semester, or other compelling and extenuating circumstances that prevent students from meeting their academic responsibilities.

Students must first discuss their reasons for requesting a late course drop with an academic advisor or their academic dean. The advisor or dean will explain the process for an appeal and refer the student to the online information and link to the online appeal form. The appeal must include a statement from the student and pertinent documentation that provides compelling support for the appeal. The student must submit all documents online to the office of the associate dean for advising in the Academic Advising Program of the College of Arts and Sciences and General College. Submission of an appeal does not ensure that the request will be granted, and students must continue to attend classes and complete all assignments until informed of the committee's decision. If a course drop is approved, the registration/drop/add form is processed through the Office of the University Registrar.

Students enrolled in professional schools should acquaint themselves with the appropriate appeals procedures in their schools.

The notation of W (withdrawn) is entered in the grade column of academic transcripts if students are permitted by their school to drop a course after the eighth week of classes or proportional equivalent for summer terms and other nonstandard enrollment periods. This notation is automatically entered unless the student's academic dean specifies otherwise.

Interinstitutional Registration

A student regularly enrolled in a degree program at the University may enroll by interinstitutional registration for a course at Duke University, North Carolina Central University, North Carolina State University, the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, or the University of North Carolina at Greensboro under the following conditions:

- Space must be available in the course.
- The student's academic dean must certify
 - a. that the course is appropriate for the student's degree program, and
 - b. that an equivalent course is not available at this university during the same term.
- Enrollment in interinstitutional registration is limited to one interinstitutional course per regular term, provided that the student is registered for the balance of her or his full-time load at UNC–Chapel Hill. All enrollment transactions must be processed by the Office of the University Registrar.
- A student will be billed by his or her home institution for all the courses taken (including interinstitutional courses) at the prevailing tuition rate. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will receive no fees from an interinstitutional student taking courses at this campus unless there is a special fee associated with a particular course. In such a case, the student must pay the fee.
- The last day for a student to submit an interinstitutional request to the Office of the University Registrar will be the last day to add a course without departmental approval, according to the registrar's calendar. If a student is interested in a course that begins after this deadline, due to differing university schedules, or separate modules that the course is being offered in, the deadline will be the fifth day after the start of that class. Start dates will be verified with the school offering the course.
- Students must comply with the academic calendar of their home institution for all dates, such as deadlines for adding and dropping courses.
- A student taking a course by interinstitutional registration will be graded in the course in accordance with the grading system of the institution where the course is taken, and grades will be converted in accordance with the grading system of the home institution. The transcript will identify the institution where the course was taken in the space where the descriptive course title is normally shown.

Additional information (<http://registrar.unc.edu/guide/special-enrollments/inter-institutional-programs/>), procedural instructions, and forms are available at the Office of the University Registrar's Web site.

Academic Course Load

Fall and Spring Semesters

To meet the minimum graduation requirement of 120 academic hours within the eight-semester limit, students should average 15 hours each semester. However, four-hour foreign language courses and four-hour laboratory science courses often account for course loads of 16 to 18 hours. Students may not enroll in more than 18 academic hours unless they have earned a 3.000 grade point average in the preceding regular semester and have a cumulative 2.500 grade point average. Exceptions require the approval of the student's dean. With approval of their dean, seniors meeting graduation requirements during their final semester in residence may enroll in up to 21 academic hours if they have a cumulative and preceding semester grade point average of 2.000.

The minimum course load for a single semester is 12 academic hours. Students may not go below the 12-academic-hour minimum without permission of their dean. All students should discuss semester enrollment of fewer than 15 academic hours with their advisor because such enrollments may affect academic eligibility and the ability to complete all degree requirements in the required eight semesters. PHYA courses are not considered academic hours and will not count toward the 12-hour minimum enrollment.

The approved maximum course load for students in a part-time program is eight credit hours in a fall, spring, or summer term.

Summer School

The summer term begins with the first day of Maymester and continues through the last day of the Summer Session II. Administered by Summer School, summer courses are offered in two sessions (Summer Session I and Summer Session II), with a Maymester period overlapping the first three weeks of Summer Session I. For UNC–Chapel Hill students, credit hours and grades count the same as in fall or spring terms. For visiting students, transfer of grades or credit is determined by their home institution.

The typical full course load is two courses, usually six credit hours. However, students may enroll in up to eight credit hours each in Summer Session I and in Summer Session II to allow for a four-credit course or an extra one-credit laboratory or physical activity course. Students with a 2.000 cumulative grade point average may enroll in a maximum of nine hours during a summer session with the approval of their dean. It is recommended that, if students enroll in a Maymester course, they not enroll in a second Maymester or Summer Session I class.

Carolina Courses Online

There are limits on the number of online courses that may be taken in a term and how they may apply to degree requirements. For full details, see "Distance-Learning Courses" (p. 1257) in this catalog.

Pass/Fail Option

The Pass/Fail option provides students an opportunity to enroll in an additional course (beyond the usual load of five academic courses) or to reduce their concerns about competing with prospective majors in a course in which they have considerable interest. Students who declare a course on the Pass/Fail option will receive the grade of PS (pass) when a letter grade of A through D is recorded on the official grade roster and F when the course is failed. For the purpose of computing a grade point average, a PS grade does not count as hours attempted; therefore, a PS grade does not affect a student's grade point average. However, an F under the Pass/Fail option counts as hours attempted and is treated in the same manner as F grades earned in any other course.

Course content and requirements are the same for Pass/Fail registrants as for regular registrants. The minimum performance for a PS grade is equivalent to the minimum performance for the letter grade of D.

Regulations Governing the Pass/Fail Option

The following regulations govern the use of the Pass/Fail option:

1. Students may only take one student-elected Pass/Fail course each semester.
2. No more than 23 total credit hours of Pass/Fail credit hours will be allowed in a student's undergraduate career, with no more than 16 hours (of the 23) from student-elected Pass/Fail classes and no more than 13 hours (of the 23) from established Pass/Fail courses.
3. The following courses may not be declared Pass/Fail:

- Courses used to satisfy General Education requirements (with the exception of lifetime fitness courses and some experiential education courses that are only offered as Pass/Fail courses).
- Courses a student has taken previously for a letter grade.
- Courses in a student's major or minor department or curriculum (or cross-listed with those departments or curricula), even if used as an elective. However, students who change their major (or minor) may count in the new major (or minor) one course previously completed with the grade PS.
- Courses specifically required by the major or minor, including foreign language courses and any additional required courses (but see the note below)
- Summer School courses
- Carolina Courses Online
- An honors seminar or honors course
- Courses taken via interinstitutional enrollment
- First-year seminars

Note: Prerequisites to courses specifically required for the major or minor may be taken Pass/Fail unless a specific grade is required in the prerequisite course.

Maintained by the Educational Policy Committee. Last approved on October 30, 2015, see Resolution 2015-12 (http://faccoun.unc.edu/files/2011/03/Res2015-12Pass-Fail_Final.pdf).

Pass/Fail Declaration Procedure

To declare a course on the Pass/Fail grading system, a student must complete the Pass/Fail course declaration form. It is obtained from the academic advisor or dean's office. Students should discuss the advisability of taking a course on the Pass/Fail grading system with their advisor before committing themselves to a formal declaration.

The period for making Pass/Fail declarations begins on the fifth day of classes of each semester and concludes at the end of the eighth week of classes. Pass/Fail declaration forms may not be submitted after the eighth week of classes.

Fifty Percent Tuition Surcharge

Undergraduate students seeking a baccalaureate degree at UNC–Chapel Hill are subject to a 50 percent tuition surcharge in some circumstances, as required by Section 9.10 (b), G.S. 116–143.7 (a). No surcharge will be imposed on any student who exceeds the degree credit hour limits within the equivalent of four academic years of regular term enrollment, or within five years of regular term enrollment in a degree program officially designated by the Board of Governors as a five-year program. For detailed information, please see the Office of the University Registrar's Web site (<http://registrar.unc.edu/reg-guide/fifty-percent-tuition-surcharge/>).

Students Subject to the Surcharge

The surcharge should be imposed for students who exceed eight or more terms in residence on all counted credit hours in excess of the threshold defined below for each of the following three categories of undergraduates:

1. For students earning a first baccalaureate degree in a program that requires no more than 128 credit hours, the surcharge shall be applied to all counted credit hours in excess of 140.
2. For students earning a first baccalaureate degree in a Board-approved program that requires more than 128 counted credit hours, the surcharge shall be applied to all credit hours that exceed 110 percent of the credit hours required for the degree. Such programs include those that have been officially designated by the Board of Governors as five-year programs, as well as those involving double majors or dual bachelor's/master's degrees.

3. For students earning a baccalaureate degree other than their first, the surcharge shall be applied to all counted credit hours that exceed 110 percent of the minimum additional credit hours needed to earn the additional baccalaureate degree.

Tuition Guarantee Program

Effective fall 2016, undergraduate students seeking a baccalaureate degree at UNC–Chapel Hill are eligible for fixed tuition as required by the North Carolina General Statute §116-143.9 and UNC Policy 1000.17, Policy for the Tuition Guarantee Program. Further information about the Tuition Guarantee Program can be found on the Web site for the Office of the University Registrar.

Withdrawal

After the term start, students withdrawing from the University should submit an official withdrawal request through their ConnectCarolina Student Center to start the process (see sections on medical and academic withdrawal below) before the end of classes during a semester or summer session. Students in attendance considering withdrawal should contact their academic advising dean's office, Campus Health Services, or Counseling and Psychological Services for additional information. Official term withdrawal from the University is required if a student wishes to drop all classes after a semester begins. An official withdrawal may facilitate readmission in a future term. Leaving the University without completing the official withdrawal process can result in the assignment of final class grades computed as failing in establishing grade point averages and possibly rendering a student academically in-eligible. Enrolled students who do not withdraw officially will be responsible for the full tuition and fee payments associated with enrollment for the entirety of the semester.

Medical Withdrawal

If a student decides to withdraw for reasons of illness, either physical or psychological, the student should contact Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services, whether the treatment was received there or elsewhere. If a medical withdrawal is authorized, the official withdrawal will be handled through the Office of the Director of Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services. A medical withdrawal is effected without grades and without a semester in residence.

Administrative Withdrawal

A student who is withdrawn for disciplinary purposes must comply with the specific requirements or conditions outlined by the adjudicating body (e.g., Honor Court, Emergency Evaluation and Action Committee, etc.) prior to readmission. Unless specified by the adjudicating body, the term(s) in which disciplinary suspension is active shall not be calculated in the four academic year degree credit hour equivalency. Preclearance from the adjudicating body may be required in certain cases.

Academic Withdrawal from All Courses

If a student decides to withdraw for reasons other than health related, or if a withdrawal cannot be authorized through Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services, the student should submit an official withdrawal request through the ConnectCarolina Student Center.

Grades are required from instructors once the drop deadline has passed. In determining an undergraduate student's eligibility for readmission the following conditions apply:

- For students who officially withdraw from the University after the second week of a fall or spring semester, a grade of W is assigned to each course the students were enrolled in at the time of withdrawal.
- Students who officially withdraw from the University are assigned a semester in residence if their withdrawal is initiated before the end of classes during a fall or spring semester and if it is accompanied by the recording of six or more academic hours of F grades for that semester's work (grades recorded after the drop deadline). This means that the F grades and no others will be computed in the semester and cumulative grade point average.
- Withdrawal from a summer session is not counted as a semester in residence. If the withdrawal is initiated after the drop deadline during a summer session, a grade of W is assigned to each course that the student is enrolled in at the time of withdrawal. The credit hours associated with the withdrawal will count as attempted but not passed hours in the determination of the student's academic eligibility. If the student is enrolled in five or more academic hours, the student must obtain grades from their instructors before the withdrawal can be processed; if the withdrawal is accompanied by the recording of five or more academic hours of F grades for that semester's work the F grades will be recorded and computed in the semester and cumulative grade point average.
- Students enrolled as summer session visitors from schools outside UNC–Chapel Hill must withdraw through the Office of the Dean of Summer School.
- If a student completes an official withdrawal or is withdrawn administratively for any reason from a fall or spring semester, tuition and fees will be prorated over a period of nine weeks at a rate of one-tenth of the semester's bill, after deducting an administrative charge. The last date for credit on a student's financial account for withdrawal is nine weeks after registration. If a student completes an official drop from a summer class within the first three days of classes for the session, tuition and fees will be prorated.
- If a student withdraws from the University during a semester and receives financial aid funds prior to the date of withdrawal, a portion of that money will be returned to the aid program(s). The repayment will be calculated by the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid when the official withdrawal is noted within the ConnectCarolina system.

Retroactive Withdrawal

- Students may request a retroactive term withdrawal from a semester or summer session under extraordinary circumstances. Such requests must be made in writing to the appeals committee of the college or school in which the student is currently enrolled. The decision of that appeals committee is final. If the retroactive term withdrawal is approved, the effective date of this action is always the last day of classes in the term or session. No refunds are ever provided when a retroactive withdrawal from a semester or summer session is approved.

ATTENDANCE, GRADING, AND EXAMINATION

Class Attendance Policy

(Maintained by the Education Policy Committee. Resolution 2018-1 (<https://facultygov.unc.edu/files/2016/02/Resolution-2018-1-Absence-Policy5.pdf>), passed on February 9, 2018)

This policy applies only to University approved class absences (listed below). For final examination absences see the Policy on Final Examinations.

Regular class attendance is a student obligation. Students are responsible for all of their work, including assessments, tests, and written work, and for all class meetings. If a course instructor chooses to take attendance and sees that a student misses three or more consecutive class meetings or misses more classes than the course instructor thinks advisable, the instructor may report the facts to the student's advisor and/or academic dean.

No right or privilege exists that permits a student to be absent from any class meetings, except for these University Approved Absences:

1. Authorized University activities
2. Disability/religious observance/pregnancy, as required by law and approved by Accessibility Resources and Service (<https://ars.unc.edu/>) and/or the Equal Opportunity and Compliance Office (<https://eoc.unc.edu/what-we-do/accommodations/>) (EOC)
3. Significant health condition and/or personal/family emergency as approved by the Office of the Dean of Students (<https://odos.unc.edu/>), Gender Violence Service Coordinators, (<https://womenscenter.unc.edu/resources/gender-violence-services/>) and/or the Equal Opportunity and Compliance Office (<https://eoc.unc.edu/what-we-do/accommodations/>) (EOC).

Instructors may work with students to meet attendance needs that do not fall within University approved absences. For situations when an absence is not University approved (e.g., a job interview or club activity), instructors determine their own approach to missed classes and make-up assessments and assignments.

The University's policy regarding University approved absences as well as the instructor's course-level policies are communicated to students via the instructor's course syllabus on the first day of class.

Students are encouraged to communicate with their instructors early about potential absences and are reminded that they are bound by the Honor Code (p. 1278) when making a request for a University approved absence.

Notification of University Approved Absences

1. Authorized University Activities: Students acting as official representatives of the University who are participating in University-sanctioned activities (e.g., student government congresses, official athletic competitions, music competitions, academic conferences, etc.) will be granted a University approved absence.

Request for approval of an absence due to participation in a University-sanctioned activity must be sent by the program sponsor or other responsible University official to the University Approved Absence Office (<https://attendance.unc.edu/>) which will verify the validity of the request. The program sponsor, or other responsible University official, is responsible for contacting the University Approved Absence Office (<https://attendance.unc.edu/>) to request a University approved absence for University-sanctioned activity, when possible at least two weeks in advance of the date(s), or as soon as possible if the date(s) occurs within the first two weeks of the semester, or within the first two days of a summer session. This policy applies to fall, spring, and summer terms. The University Approved Absence Office communicates the University approved absence to the course instructor prior to the date(s) of the scheduled absence(s). The request may be for a single activity or a series of activities, but it must include the student name and date of the event, the date and time when the student is expected to be absent, and the date and time that the student is expected to return to class.

2. Accommodations for disability/religious observance/pregnancy, as required by law:

- a. Accessibility Resources and Services verifies University approved absences for students by their office. ARS contacts those students' instructors directly.
- b. Religious Observance: Pursuant to North Carolina General Statute 116-11(3a), students are authorized at least two University approved absence(s) per academic year for religious observance/practices required by their faith. Students who wish to request University approved absences for religious observance required by their faith should review the University's Policy on Religious Accommodation and follow the procedure set out in that policy for requesting such absences. After an absence is approved under that policy, the University Approved Absence Office communicates the University approved absence to the course instructor(s) prior to the date(s) of the schedule absence(s).

Students are responsible for contacting the Religious Accommodations Advisory Committee to request a University approved absence for religious observance at least two weeks in advance of the date(s), or as soon as possible if the date(s) occurs within the first two weeks of the semester. This policy applies to fall, spring, and summer terms.

Primary holy days for religious observance are noted on a Web-based interfaith calendar (<http://www.interfaithcalendar.org>). The Web-based calendar should not be interpreted as an exhaustive list of holy days that the University will recognize for purposes of religious accommodations.

- c. Pregnancy and Related Medical Conditions: Students who wish to request University approved absences for pregnancy and related medical conditions should review the University's Policy on Pregnant and Parenting Students and should contact the Equal Opportunity and Compliance Office (<https://eoc.unc.edu/what-we-do/accommodations/>) for approval. After an absence is approved under that policy, the University Approved Absence Office will communicate the University Approved Absence to the course instructor(s) prior to the date(s) of the schedule absence(s).
3. Significant health condition and/or personal/family emergencies as approved by the Office of the Dean of Students (<https://odos.unc.edu/>), Gender Violence Service Coordinators (<https://womenscenter.unc.edu/resources/gender-violence-services/>), and/or the Equal Opportunity and Compliance Office (<https://eoc.unc.edu/what-we-do/accommodations/>). Once the Office of the Dean of Students, Gender Violence Service Coordinators, and/or the EOC has approved the information, they will then request that the University Approved Absence Office issue a University approved absence notification to the student's instructor(s). The University Approved Absence Office will inform the course instructor in advance if the reason for the University approved absence is planned, or as soon as possible if the reason for the absence was not foreseen.

Instructors will not receive further explanation or clarification of University approved absences beyond notification from the University Approved Absence Office.

Make-up Coursework and Assessment

All students with University approved absences will be treated fairly and equitably, regardless of the reason for the absence.

Instructors will provide reasonable alternatives that permit course objectives and learning outcomes to be met. Alternatives may include a make-up exam, alternative assessment, an additional paper or project of equivalent intellectual effort, an electronically-mediated participation opportunity, a due date extension, or other option that allows students to demonstrate what they have learned without being penalized for the University approved absence. It is a University expectation that instructor be prudent, fair, and equitable when a student misses an assessment due to a University approved absence. Course policies should avoid inequities, including discrepancies in preparation time for in-class versus make-up exams, missed opportunities to take and learn from an assessment, and policies that penalize students who must use their dropped grade option for a University approved absence.

The Undergraduate Testing Center (<http://testingcenter.web.unc.edu/>) provides a secure, proctored environment for administration of makeup assessments, tests, and exams for undergraduate and graduate courses throughout each term. There are regularly scheduled session times each week in addition to the Center's traditional use during final exams time. Please see the center's web site for more information and instructions as well as teaching and learning resources provided by the Center for Faculty Excellence (<https://cfe.unc.edu/>).

Appeals

Given the swift and cumulative nature of a semester, an instructor should contact a student with a preliminary alternative plan within three business days of receiving notification of a University approved absence, or sooner if the absence takes place during a summer term. The student must respond to the instructor within two business days of receiving the alternative plan and discuss details with the instructor. After receiving the final alternative plan from the instructor, if a student feels that a reasonable alternative was not provided, they may submit an appeal within three business days to the instructor's chair or the chair's designee.

At any time, a student may file a report alleging that the University has failed to provide reasonable accommodations for the student's religious beliefs, disability, or pregnancy or related medical condition pursuant to the University's Policy on Prohibited Discrimination, Harassment and Related Misconduct (<https://eoc.unc.edu/our-policies/ppdhrm/>) (PPDHRM). The student may file a report under the PPDHRM following an unsatisfactory appeal determination by the instructor's chair or the chair's designee. Alternatively, the student may bypass the University Approved Absence Office appeals process altogether and proceed directly to filing a report under the PPDHRM. If a student first files a report under the PPDHRM, the University Approved Absence Office's appeals process will be stayed until a determination has been made under the PPDHRM.

Final Examinations

(Maintained by the Education Policy Committee. Resolution 2017-5, passed on April 21, 2017; Resolution 2017-5.1, passed on May 15, 2017)

This policy applies to all undergraduate courses across the University.

Undergraduate courses taught on campus must include a final assessment of students' mastery of course material (i.e., final examination) unless the provost grants an exception. A traditional final examination is administered at a predetermined time as specified in the official final examination schedule (<http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-calendar/>), and takes place at a designated location in Chapel Hill. Any other type of final examination is considered nontraditional.

The final examination schedule, announced prior to the beginning of the semester, sets the day and time for each examination. No examination may start later than 7:00 p.m. Once having been established, the schedule cannot be changed. Traditional final examinations must be held at the day and time shown on the schedule unless an exception is granted as described below.

Only the provost can grant exceptions to the scheduled day or time of a traditional examination, after review and approval by the appropriate department head and the dean. No examination (except for laboratory sections) may be held at a time other than that specified in the general schedule except with the advance approval of the provost.

A course instructor may, due to highly unusual circumstances, petition for a change in the examination schedule. The instructor must submit the request in writing to his or her chair no later than the last day of late registration for that term, and it must be cleared by the chair and the appropriate dean (e.g., Associate Dean, Academic Advising) before consideration by the provost. If the petition is approved, the course instructor assumes responsibility for making special arrangements to give the examination to any student who has a schedule conflict as a result of the change. This process only applies to requests to change a day or time for an individual section.

Requests to combine all sections of a specific course into one final exam day and time (regardless of the number of sections involved), is considered a request for a Common Hour exam and has an earlier deadline for submission. Requests for all common hour exams must be cleared by the chair or appropriate dean and approved by the provost. Requests for common hour exams must be made to the registrar the first week of February for fall semester final examinations and the first week of September for spring semester final examinations. There is no exception to this deadline.

No graded quizzes or exams (excluding in-class presentations) may be given during the last five days of the semester (last two days of the session for summer school) before the beginning of the final examination period.

For a standard three-credit-hour course, the University has a required three-hour final examination period, which includes 180 minutes of instruction in each semester (see UPM #29 – Definition of a Credit Hour (<http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/university-policy-memorandums/upm-29-definition-of-a-credit-hour/>)). Thus, the University requires instructors to provide a full three hours of instruction for final assessment purposes (e.g., written final examination, presentations, portfolio review, performance, review and evaluation, or some combination of these assessments). It is up to the discretion of the instructor of record to determine the form, content, and function of the final examination (e.g., whether it is cumulative; whether it is a three-hour exam or a shorter exam preceded or followed by a period of review; etc.). A traditional final examination should not exceed a period of three hours. Only examinations requiring an exceptional portion of practical work should be longer than three hours (e.g., student teaching).

Chairs (i.e., heads of instructional units) must give permission for faculty members to use nontraditional examinations. Examples of nontraditional examinations include those requiring more than three hours to complete; or other final assessments such as a portfolio of a semester's work, a final project, or a take-home examination. For multidisciplinary and cotaught courses, permission to give a nontraditional examination must be granted solely by the chair of the instructional unit in which the course is based. Even when faculty members have permission to administer nontraditional final examinations, the scheduled examination period must be utilized for instructional hours. The chair should submit to their academic dean's office an annual summary of the exceptions that were granted.

Students who are absent from an examination receive a course grade of AB (absent), which is equivalent to F (zero quality points), or FA (absent and failing regardless of performance on the final examination). When students are unable, for reasons clearly beyond their control, to take a traditional final examination at the scheduled time, they can be excused only by the director of Campus Health Services or their academic dean (who can issue an "examination excuse"). An absence may be excused for severe health problems leading to the student's placement on the Infirmary List by either Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services, for significant personal or family circumstances, for religious observances required by the student's faith, for a scheduling conflict involving multiple examinations at the same time, or when a student has three or more final examinations scheduled in 24 hours. In cases of illness, personal or family emergency, or religious observance, additional documentation may be required by the dean. Primary holy days for religious observances are noted on a Web-based interfaith calendar site (<http://www.interfaith-calendar.org/>). Students are responsible for providing the course instructor and the dean a written request for an excused absence from a final exam for a religious observance or for a scheduling conflict involving multiple examinations no later than the last day of classes. Students must be given the opportunity to make up final exams missed due to an excused absence.

For any University undergraduate courses offered entirely online or via other distance modalities, exams will be offered and must be completed during the scheduled final examination period, but requirements concerning the time of day and place of the exam will be appropriate to the course's mode of delivery. Self-paced courses are exempt from both the time and place requirements of the exam policy and the requirement that exams be held during the scheduled final examination period.

Campus Health Services

Students who are seriously ill during the time of their final examination(s) (including complications related to pregnancy) should consult Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services about having their names entered on the Infirmary List. In some cases, outpatient treatment can also result in a student's name being entered on the Infirmary List. Students on the Infirmary List may obtain an official permit from the Office of the University Registrar to take the final examination to remove a grade of AB. They must make arrangements with their course instructor to take the final examination and provide the instructor with their official permit. If students are treated at Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services but do not appear on the Infirmary List, they should see the dean of their college as soon as possible.

Academic Dean

If students know in advance that they must miss one or more final examinations because of illness, religious observance, or other serious problems, they should notify in writing both the course instructor and the dean of the school in which they are enrolled no later than the last day of classes. If this is not possible, they should see their dean as soon after the fact as possible. For students in the College of Arts and Sciences, only the associate dean for advising (or designee) is authorized to issue examination excuses for reasons other than three exams in 24 hours or two exams at the same time. For other students, only the dean of the school in which the student is enrolled has that authority. The dean may require documentation of a student's religious observance, illness, or problems.

Assuming that a student did not take a final examination for one of the reasons previously cited, the dean will issue an official examination excuse, which the student must present to the course instructor when arrangements are made for a suitable time to take the final examination.

A student who has three final examinations scheduled by the Office of the University Registrar within a 24-hour period or two scheduled at the same time may request to his or her dean's office for permission to have one of the scheduled examinations rescheduled. In the event that one of the scheduled examinations is a common final examination for a multiple-section course, that examination is the one to be rescheduled.

Students who have secured an examination excuse or an official permit and who transmit the document to the instructor or the instructor's chair or dean must be granted permission to take the exam at an alternate time, although students will need to arrange a mutually convenient time with the instructor. Except when the provost has provided an exception in writing, the exam will be taken at a time subsequent to the regularly scheduled exam, though no later than the end of the following semester.

The final examination in any course may be taken only by regularly enrolled members of the class whose registration has been certified and by students certified to be eligible to take a special examination in that course. The certifying authority is the Office of the University Registrar.

Each student is required to sign a full and explicit Honor Code pledge certifying that he or she has neither given nor received aid during the examination.

Grading System
Permanent Letter Grades

A letter-grade and plus/minus system for evaluating academic performance is employed for all undergraduates. Each letter grade corresponds to a number of grade points. Each letter-graded course receives a numerical value of quality points (quality points equal grade points times semester credit hours per course) to use in determining a student's average (per credit hour) in a particular term and to find a student's cumulative grade point average (per credit hour).

A = 4.0	B- = 2.7	D+ = 1.3
A- = 3.7	C+ = 2.3	D = 1.0
B+ = 3.3	C = 2.0	F = 0.0
B = 3.0	C- = 1.7

To determine the grade point average for a term, first determine the total quality points earned in the term by multiplying the number of grade points awarded for each course by the course's assigned number of semester credit hours and adding the resulting quality points earned for each course in the term. Then divide the total quality points earned in the term by the number of semester credit hours attempted (for letter grades) in the term.

Example

Course	Grade	Grade Points	x	Credit Hours	=	Quality Points
Course A	C+	2.3	x	3.0	=	6.90
Course B	B-	2.7	x	3.0	=	8.10
Course C	B	3.0	x	4.0	=	12.00
Course D	C-	1.7	x	3.0	=	5.10
Course E	A-	3.7	x	1.0	=	3.70
Course F	F	0.0	x	1.0	=	0.00
Course G	A	4.0	x	3.0	=	12.00
Total quality points earned:						47.80
Total graded hours:						18.0
Term grade point average:						$47.80 \div 18.0 = 2.656$

Permanent grades are defined as follows:

A	Mastery of course content at the highest level of attainment that can reasonably be expected of students at a given stage of development. The A grade states clearly that the student has shown such outstanding promise in the aspect of the discipline under study that he/she may be strongly encouraged to continue.
B	Strong performance demonstrating a high level of attainment for a student at a given stage of development. The B grade states that the student has shown solid promise in the aspect of the discipline under study.
C	A totally acceptable performance demonstrating an adequate level of attainment for a student at a given stage of development. The C grade states that while not yet showing any unusual promise, the student may continue to study in the discipline with reasonable hope of intellectual development.

D	A marginal performance in the required exercises demonstrating a minimal passing level of attainment for a student at a given stage of development. The D grade states that the student has given no evidence of prospective growth in the discipline; an accumulation of D grades should be taken to mean that the student would be well advised not to continue in the academic field.
F	For whatever reasons, an unacceptable performance. The F grade indicates that the student's performance in the required exercises has revealed almost no understanding of the course content. A grade of F should warrant questioning whether the student may suitably register for further study in the discipline before remedial work is undertaken.

Grades earned and semester hours attempted at other institutions are not included in the calculation of the University grade point average.

Records of progress are kept by this institution on all students. Students can access official semester grades in ConnectCarolina at the end of the term. Questions about access to student official grades or grade reporting should be directed to the Office of the University Registrar.

Temporary Grades (IN and AB) and FA Grades

Any student who ceases to attend a class without officially being dropped or withdrawn may receive a temporary grade of AB or IN or a permanent grade of FA.

Students who do not complete all requirements in a course by the end of the semester, but who could pass the course if they did, receive a temporary grade of IN (incomplete) or AB (absent from the final exam) in place of a permanent letter grade. Grades of IN and AB carry the value of an F grade (zero quality points) and are used in the computation of semester and cumulative grade point averages. Students who do not complete the course requirements within a specified period of time are assigned permanent F* grades on their academic transcripts by the Office of the University Registrar.

The instructor must report the grade of AB for any student who did not take the final examination and who, by taking the final examination, could pass the course. This AB grade carries the value of an F in computing the student's cumulative and semester grade point average, and later converts to an F* unless the student arranges to take the final examination before the last class day of the next scheduled semester (fall or spring). If the student cannot pass the course regardless of a final examination performance, the instructor must report the grade FA. The grade of FA (cannot pass the class) is a permanent failing grade. A grade of F may be assigned instead of a temporary grade or a grade of FA when a final examination is not required in the course.

The grade IN may only be assigned by an instructor to a student who took the final examination in a course but did not complete some other course requirement (including signing the honor pledge) and who, by virtue of completing that missing work, might pass the course. An IN carries the value of an F (zero quality points) in computing a student's cumulative and semester grade point average. Unless removed within eight weeks of the beginning of the regularly scheduled semester (fall or spring) following its assignment, an IN converts to an F*.

When submitting an AB or IN, an instructor must enter the grade on the instructor's grade roster and must also complete a temporary grade assignment form (http://registrar.sites.unc.edu/files/2012/03/CCM3_031444.pdf) available online through the Office of the University Registrar. The purpose of this form is to establish a record of what arrangements, if any, have been made between the student and instructor to clear the AB or IN.

Absence from a final examination may be officially excused only by the student's dean or the director of Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services. Please see "Final Examinations" above for information about final examination excuses.

Important Rules and Procedures Pertaining to AB and IN Grades

The decision to report an IN grade is solely the responsibility of the course instructor; however, a student may present proper justification for the instructor's consideration.

Temporary grades should be cleared by completing the work outstanding, preferably no later than the start of the following semester. The deadline for clearing a temporary grade of AB is the last class day of the next regularly scheduled semester (fall or spring) after the AB grade is awarded. A temporary grade of IN must be cleared within the first eight weeks of the regularly scheduled semester (fall or spring) after the IN grade is awarded.

If students intend to remove IN or excused AB grades, they should not officially enroll in the course(s) during the next semester or summer session. If recommended by the course instructor, a student may attend by officially auditing a part of that instructor's section of the course or another instructor's section of the same course in which the temporary grade was awarded.

If a student enrolls in a course in which a temporary grade has been previously received, the second enrollment is taken as evidence that the student could not or is not permitted to remove the temporary grade. This results in replacing the temporary grade by F* after the deadline for removing the temporary grade. The grade earned during the second enrollment is also reported on the student's academic transcript and is used along with the F* grade in the computation of a cumulative grade point average.

Other Grades and Notations

A notation of BE (By-Examination) is entered in the grade column of academic transcripts if students are awarded credit for a course as a result of evaluation by departmental, Advanced Placement, International Baccalaureate, or SAT II Subject Test examinations. BE credit confers credit hours and can be used to fulfill General Education requirements. For first-time, first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in fall 2009 or thereafter, no more than two courses (six to eight credit hours) of BE credit can be applied to a major and no more than one course (three to four credit hours) of BE credit can be applied to a minor in the College of Arts and Sciences. BE credit may not be used to satisfy the requirement that students earn at least 12 or 18 hours of C or better grades in courses making up the minor or major respectively.

A notation of NG (no grade) is not used by individual instructors but rather is assigned by the Office of the University Registrar when a permanent grade is pending a judicial review by the Honor Court.

A notation of PL (placement) is entered in the grade column of academic transcripts if students are awarded exemption for a course as a result of an evaluation that would ordinarily place them in a succeeding course. PL does not confer credit hours.

There are some courses for which only a grade of PS (pass) or F (fail) can be awarded. For most other courses, students may opt to take a class on a Pass/Fail basis (<http://catalog.unc.edu/policies-procedures/registration-enrollment-withdrawal/>).

A grade of SP (satisfactory progress) may be used in the first course of a departmental undergraduate honors program. The honors program runs through two semesters, and a final grade is not reported until completion of the second course. When the final grade is reported, the previously assigned SP grade must be changed to the appropriate permanent letter grade by an official grade change form. Credit hours are awarded for the first honors course only after a letter grade replaces the SP grade. An SP grade is not computed in the grade point average.

A notation of W (withdrawn) is entered in the grade column of academic transcripts if students are permitted by their school to drop a course after the eighth week of classes or proportional equivalent for summer terms and other nonstandard enrollment periods. This notation is automatically entered unless the student's academic dean specifies otherwise.

When a course is dropped between the second and eighth week of classes, a grade of WC (withdrawal by choice) shall be recorded and used internally for tracking and reporting purposes. For external purposes, a withdrawal by choice is equivalent to the W notation. Once recorded, a WC cannot be rescinded unless it is determined the student withdrawal was due to extenuating circumstances.

A notation of XF is entered to indicate that a student has not passed a course as the result of an Honor Court violation. The grade of XF can be replaced by a final grade of F if the student follows prescribed steps to remediate the violation.

A blank space or a grade of NR (not reported) is shown in the grade column when the instructor has not submitted the official grade for the student.

COVID-19 Grading Accommodations

Effective March 23, 2020, due to the COVID-19 pandemic, UNC expanded the grading options for students in spring 2020, summer I 2020 and summer II 2020 terms:

1. Undergraduate students may opt to declare an enrolled Arts & Sciences course on the pass/fail grading basis. Courses with grades of pass in these terms count toward applicable curricular, major, continuation and graduation requirements but will not factor into a student's grade point average. Students, including undergraduates, enrolled in professional schools (e.g., School of Education) or programs in the Graduate School will follow the decisions of the professional or graduate schools.
2. Instructors have the option to assign the grade of "CV" to students who have incomplete work in the class. The "CV" grade will not factor into a student's grade point average, count towards credits earned, nor satisfy graduation requirements. The grade will not affect a student's academic eligibility status. The "CV" grade grants undergraduate students an additional eight weeks into the following term to complete work; graduate students will be granted an additional three months into the next semester to complete work.

3. Undergraduate students enrolled in the College of Arts & Sciences may drop a spring 2020 course up to May 8, 2020; courses dropped between March 8 and May 8, 2020 will be assigned the grade of "WCV," which will not factor in the student's grade point average, nor affect a student's academic eligibility status. Students must remain enrolled in at least nine credit hours.

4. Graduate and professional students should consult the dean of their school regarding grading accommodations approved by their school.

Repeating Course Enrollments

See Registration, Enrollment, and Withdrawal (p. 1264).

Grades Earned at Other Institutions

With the exception of courses taken via interinstitutional registration (p. 1264), grades earned and semester hours attempted at other institutions are not included in the computation of a grade point average at the University. A grade point average earned at another university may not be used to restore academic eligibility; however, academic hours earned at another university may be used to restore academic eligibility if the student is lacking only credit hours and has a satisfactory grade point average. Special rules regarding transfer courses apply; see Transfer of Credit (p. 19) and Academic Eligibility (p. 1276).

Grade Appeals

The grades of H, HP, P, LP, L, A, A-, B+, B, B-, C+, C, C-, D+, D, PS, F, FA, F*, and numerical grades in the Law School are considered permanent grades. Once reported, the instructor's grade report may not be changed except under certain conditions. For a grade change to be considered, it must be based upon one or more of the following grounds and upon allegation that the ground or grounds cited influenced the grade assignment to the student's detriment:

- Arithmetic or clerical error
- Arbitrariness, possibly including discrimination or harassment based on the race, color, gender, national origin, age, religion, creed, disability, veteran's status, sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression of the student
- Personal malice
- Student conduct cognizable under the Instrument of Student Judicial Governance

A grade appeal must be made no later than the last day of classes for the succeeding fall or spring semester.

Grade Appeals Correcting a Clerical or Arithmetical Error

An instructor who has reported an incorrect grade for a student because of an error in calculating the grade, or in entering it on the official grade roster, may change the grade to one of the other letter grades, provided this change is made no later than the last day of classes of the succeeding fall or spring semester. Grade changes are submitted online using the Grade Change Request process, with electronic approvals required by the instructor, the department chair, and student's dean's office.

Other Grade Appeals

Any student who protests a course grade shall first attempt to resolve this disagreement with the instructor concerned. (As explained in the preceding paragraph, an instructor may change a permanent grade only when a clerical or arithmetical error is involved.) Failing to reach a satisfactory resolution, the student may appeal the grade in accordance with the procedures outlined below. Such appeal must be made no later than the last day of classes of the succeeding fall or spring semester.

Students should present the appeal in writing to the dean of their school (students in the College of Arts and Sciences must submit it in writing to the associate dean for advising). The dean will refer the appeal to the administrative board of his/her school, which will meet to consider whether the student has offered sufficient grounds for referring the appeal to the chair of the department concerned. If the administrative board determines that further review by the academic department is appropriate, the department chair will then appoint a committee to consider the appeal and will make a recommendation to the administrative board based on the committee's findings. The administrative board will make the final decision, and no change of grade will be made except as a result of the decision by the board. The chair will report such decision to change the grade to the Office of the University Registrar.

ACADEMIC STANDING

Academic Eligibility Policy

For students in the undergraduate career, the University's academic eligibility policy specifies the minimum standards of academic performance required for continued enrollment. These standards apply to undergraduate students enrolled in courses during or after the fall 2016 semester.

Degree-Seeking Programs

To guide students toward timely degree completion, the University maintains academic eligibility standards. These standards are reviewed at the end of fall, spring, summer I, and summer II terms. These standards determine academic status for each undergraduate in a degree-seeking program. Academic status indicates eligibility to enroll in any course in any term including summer. Students must check their academic status in ConnectCarolina at the end of each enrolled fall, spring, or summer term.

Academic status is determined through four standards of satisfactory academic progress:

1. Grade Point Average. A cumulative UNC–Chapel Hill grade point average of at least a 2.000 is required.
2. Completion Rate. Students must successfully complete at least 2/3 of cumulative attempted credit hours. By-Exam (BE) and credits transferred in to UNC–Chapel Hill count as both attempted and completed hours. Withdrawals, temporary grades including AB, IN, or SP, and failed courses count as attempted hours but not completed hours. Completed Hours/Attempted Hours=Completion Rate.
3. Cumulative Hours Passed*. To enroll in courses, students must have earned the following:
 - After one full-time semester: 9 academic hours
 - After two full-time semesters: 24 academic hours
 - After three full-time semesters: 36 academic hours
 - After four full-time semesters: 51 academic hours
 - After five full-time semesters: 63 academic hours
 - After six full-time semesters: 78 academic hours
 - After seven full-time semesters: 93 academic hours

Students are expected to complete their degree within a maximum of eight full-time semesters. Transfer students (who transfer in the UNC–Chapel Hill equivalent of two or more semesters, see "Calculation of Transferred Semesters Based on the Number of Transfer Hours (p. 1257)") may enroll in up to 10 total semesters. Students who enter as first years are required to apply for a ninth or tenth semester. For information about the application process, students in professional schools must contact their professional school dean, and students in the College of Arts and Sciences must contact the Academic Advising Program (<http://advising.unc.edu>).

*Part-time students are excluded from this standard.

4. Maximum Time Frame. Students must complete their degree within 180 attempted credit hours.

There are four academic statuses: good standing, warning, suspension, and probation.

Students who meet each of the four standards at the end of an enrolled term will have an academic status of good standing.

Students who begin an enrolled term in good standing but do not meet each of the four standards at the end of that enrolled term will receive an academic status of warning. Students with a status of warning may enroll in courses and must complete an academic intervention plan (<http://studentsuccess.unc.edu/warning/>).

A student who begins an enrolled term with a status of warning and falls short of the standards at the end of that enrolled term will earn an academic status of suspension. Students with an academic status of suspension cannot enroll in any courses in any terms. Students with an academic status of suspension have two options:

- a. Appeal for probation. Students granted academic probation by appeal must complete an academic intervention plan (<http://studentsuccess.unc.edu/academic-probation-3/>). Students denied probation by appeal can pursue option b.
- b. Spend a term engaging in study, work, or wellness activities away from UNC–Chapel Hill. These opportunities could include coursework at another institution, employment, volunteer work, or healthcare or wellness activities. During this time students should reflect on their academic path, development, choices, and actions. Students should also implement strategies that will enhance their effectiveness upon return to the University. After a term away from the University, students who have engaged in study, work, or wellness activities may appeal to return to the University on probation. Students appealing after a term or longer away from the University must include documentation of their experiences while away such as a transcript from another institution, a letter from an employer, or a letter from a healthcare provider. These documents must convey evidence of the student's readiness to return to the University.

A student who begins an enrolled term with a status of probation and falls short of the standards at the end of that enrolled term will earn an academic status of suspension. Students with an academic status of suspension have two options (see above).

Repeats, Withdrawals, and Incompletes

Attempted hours include all those in which a student is enrolled as of the end of the second week of each fall or spring term (the 10th day of the term, generally known as the "census date"). Students may drop a course until the 10th day of the term. Dropped courses do not count in attempted hours.

The summer schedule is similar to fall/spring but is determined according to the summer calendar. Credit hours that are dropped or withdrawn prior to the census date are not considered attempted; credit hours that are dropped or withdrawn after the census date are considered attempted.

Repeated courses affect grade point average and Completion Rate.

Transfer hours do not affect grade point average. Transfer hours are added to both completed hours and attempted hours in the Completion Rate calculation.

Courses with temporary grades of IN or AB affect grade point average. A grade of IN (incomplete) or AB (absent from final exam) is calculated as an F until a permanent grade is assigned. If a grade of IN or AB is converted to a passing grade, grade point average will be recalculated.

accordingly. Grades of IN or AB will adversely affect Completion Rate, counting as attempted hours but not completed hours.

Withdrawn courses do not affect grade point average. Withdrawn courses are NOT considered a successful completion, though, and will adversely affect Completion Rate.

Failed courses influence grade point average. A failed course will also adversely affect Completion Rate, counting as attempted hours but not completed hours.

Overview of Academic Status

Entering Academic Status	Term Performance	New Academic Status
Good	Meets all 4 standards	Good (may enroll)
Good	Does not meet all 4 standards	Warning (may enroll; must complete academic intervention plan)
Warning	Meets all 4 standards	Good (may enroll)
Warning	Does not meet all 4 standards	Suspension (may not enroll; may pursue options a or b for suspension status)
Probation	Meets all 4 standards	Good (may enroll)
Probation	Does not meet all 4 standards	Suspension (may not enroll; may pursue options a or b for suspension status)

Academic Eligibility Policy for Non-Degree-Seeking Programs

For non-degree-seeking students there are three academic statuses: good standing, alert, and ineligible. A non-degree-seeking student with a 2.000 or higher cumulative grade point average will be in good standing and eligible to enroll in courses. If a non-degree-seeking student falls below a 2.000 cumulative grade point average, the student will be assigned a status of alert. A non-degree-seeking student who begins a term with a status of alert and does not raise his or her cumulative grade point average to 2.000 or higher at the end of the term will have an academic status of ineligible and will not be permitted to enroll in courses. Non-degree-seeking students with a status of ineligible may appeal to The Friday Center.

Appeals

Students may, under extraordinary circumstances, present an appeal in writing (or online for students in the College of Arts and Sciences) to the dean of their school (for students in the College of Arts and Sciences, this is the associate dean for advising). The dean will refer the appeal to the administrative board for his/her school.

Calculation of Transferred Semesters Based on the Number of Transferred Credit Hours

See the Credit and Evaluation (p. 1257) section of the catalog.

Additional Information for Students with an Academic Status of Suspension

- If students earn 15 or more transfer semester credit hours for courses taken at other institutions cumulatively over the fall or spring semesters before applying for readmission to the University, a calculation will be made as to how many semesters the student is regarded as having completed, based on the number of hours accepted for transfer credit. The resulting tally of total semesters completed will determine requirements for restoring academic eligibility.

- Students should consult their academic advisor if they are considering taking classes at another institution. Grades do not transfer, and credit hours accumulated through enrollment in fall and spring semesters at other schools can affect the number of remaining semesters that students have left to complete their degree requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill.
- Students who attend another institution (summer, fall, or spring), and who apply for readmission must have at least a 2.000 (C) average in work at the other institution.
- Students who have a housing assignment or contract for the following semester should either cancel their application/contract or notify the University's Department of Housing and Residential Education of their intention to restore academic eligibility before the following semester begins.

Students who are inactive during a semester because of ineligibility (or other reasons) must apply for readmission before registering for a full-time term.

Removing AB or IN Grades

For information about completing courses with grades of AB (absent from the final examination) or IN (incomplete), see the grading system information (p. 1270).

HONOR CODE

The Honor Code

The Honor System forms a bond of trust among students, faculty, and administrators. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill operates under a system of self-governance, as students are responsible for governing themselves. As such, our University is transformed into a powerful community of inquiry and learning. The Honor Code embodies the ideals of academic honesty, integrity, and responsible citizenship, and governs the performance of all academic work a student conducts at the University. Acceptance of an offer of admission to Carolina presupposes a commitment to the principles embodied in our century-old tradition of honor and integrity.

Mutual Responsibilities of the Faculty and Students

Academic work is a joint enterprise involving faculty and students. Both have a fundamental investment in the enterprise and both must share responsibility for ensuring its integrity. In relation to the Honor Code, therefore, specific responsibilities of the faculty which parallel the responsibilities of the students have been formally adopted by the Faculty Council.

Responsibilities of the Faculty

1. Awareness: To assure that community-wide expectations regarding academic integrity are understood and communicated, and that students are held accountable for conforming their conduct to such expectations.
2. Communicating Expectations and Administering Examinations: To assist students in complying with their responsibilities relating to academic integrity, faculty members, teaching assistants, and other instructional personnel should
 - a. Use good judgment in setting and communicating clear ground rules for academic work conducted under their supervision.
 - b. Require students to sign the honor pledge as a condition of submitting academic assignments.
 - c. Take steps to prevent unauthorized access to examinations during development, duplication, and administration.
 - d. Avoid reusing prior examinations in whole or in part to the extent possible.
 - e. Take all reasonable steps consistent with physical classroom conditions to reduce the risk of cheating during the administration of examinations.
 - f. Maintain proper security during the administration of examinations, including as appropriate overseeing distribution and collection of examinations and proctoring the examination session.
3. Oversight: In the event of student misconduct that appears to violate the requirements of the Honor Code, faculty members, teaching assistants, and other instructional personnel should
 - a. Report to the appropriate Student Attorney General any instance in which the instructor has reasonable basis to conclude that a student under the faculty member's supervision has engaged in academic dishonesty or substantially assisted another to do so in connection with academically related work.
 - b. In the instructor's discretion, notify the student of the instructor's intention to report the suspected academic dishonesty and permit the student to provide relevant further information if the student chooses to do so.

- c. Refrain from taking unilateral punitive action as to a student rather than reporting conduct in suspected violation of the Honor Code.
- d. Cooperate with representatives of the Honor System in conducting necessary investigation, providing testimony or other evidence, recommending appropriate sanctions, or otherwise bringing the matter to prompt conclusion.
4. Involvement: To bring to bear requisite faculty judgment regarding the nature and importance of academic integrity, and to nourish a strong campus-wide understanding and commitment to associated intellectual and personal values, faculty members, teaching assistants, and other instructional personnel should
 - a. Explore issues of integrity in connection with instructional activities where relevant and appropriate.
 - b. Encourage their academic units to take matters of academic integrity seriously, become informed regarding related problems and advisable means of preventing problems from arising, and provide requisite training and support to instructional personnel.
 - c. Participate upon request as part of educational initiatives, faculty advisory panels, and University Hearing Boards designed to create, nurture, and enforce high standards of academic integrity within the University community.

Responsibilities of Students

To ensure effective functioning of an Honor System worthy of respect in this institution, students are expected to

1. Conduct all academic work within the letter and spirit of the Honor Code, which prohibits the giving or receiving of unauthorized aid in all academic processes.
2. Consult with faculty and other sources to clarify the meaning of plagiarism, to learn the recognized techniques of proper attribution of sources used in the preparation of written work, and to identify allowable resource materials or aids to be used during examination or in completion of any graded work.
3. Sign a pledge on all graded academic work certifying that no unauthorized assistance has been received or given in the completion of the work.
4. Comply with faculty regulations designed to reduce the possibility of cheating—such as removing unauthorized materials or aids from the room and protecting one's own examination paper from the view of others.
5. Maintain the confidentiality of examinations by divulging no information concerning an examination, directly or indirectly, to another student yet to write that same examination.
6. Treat all members of the University community with respect and fairness.
7. Report any instance in which reasonable grounds exist to believe that a student has given or received unauthorized aid in graded work or in other respects violated the Honor Code. Such report should be made to the Office of the Student Attorney General, the Office of the Dean of Students, or other appropriate officer or official of their college or school.
8. Cooperate with the Office of the Student Attorney General and the defense counsel in the investigation and hearing of any incident of alleged violation, including the giving of testimony when called upon.

Procedure for Reporting

Members of the University community who wish to report possible violations of the Honor Code should contact the Office of Student Conduct at (919) 962-0805 or fill out the online form (<https://studentconduct.unc.edu/report-violation-office-student-conduct/>). The Office of Student Conduct will review the report and refer it to the appropriate Student Attorney General for action.

UNIVERSITY POLICIES

Regulations and Policies

The personal conduct of the University student is subject to the moral and legal restraints found in any law-abiding community. Additionally, the Honor Code is a positive force for good citizenship. University regulations are not specifications for acceptable conduct or detailed lists of offenses subject to penal action. They are intended to provide information about systematic procedures and equitable decisions in many situations involving individual students and officers of the University.

Code of the University of North Carolina

Section 502D(3)—Subject to any policies or regulations of the Board of Governors or of the Board of Trustees, it shall be the duty of the chancellor to exercise full authority in the regulation of student affairs and student conduct and discipline. In the discharge of this duty, delegation of such authority may be made by the chancellor to faculty committees and to administrative or other officers of the institution, or to agencies of student government, in such manner and to such extent as may by the chancellor be deemed necessary and expedient. In the discharge of the chancellor's duty with respect to matters of student discipline, it shall be the duty of the chancellor to secure to every student the right to due process. Appeals from these disciplinary decisions are allowable only on the following grounds:

1. a violation of due process, or
2. a material deviation from the Minimum Substantive and Procedural Standards for Student Disciplinary Procedures, Section 700.4.1 of the UNC Policy Manual.

Where the sanction is suspension or expulsion, an appeal may be made to the Board of Trustees. No appeal to the president or Board of Governors is permitted.

Whistleblower Policy

The purpose of this policy is to encourage individuals to report possible wrongful conduct to an appropriate authority so that prompt, corrective action can be taken by the University and to protect reporting individuals from any retaliation for reporting wrongful conduct. Please see the full text of the Whistleblower Policy on the Web (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/5092510/latest/>).

Religious Accommodation Policy

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is committed to providing a welcoming and inclusive environment that is respectful of the religious beliefs and practices of all members of the University community. As part of this commitment, the University will make good faith efforts to provide reasonable religious accommodations to individuals covered by this policy whose sincerely held religious beliefs and practices conflict with a University policy, procedure, or other academic or employment requirement unless such an accommodation would create an undue hardship.

The University is committed to diversity and nondiscrimination and supports the employment of all qualified individuals, regardless of religious affiliation or beliefs. This commitment is in accordance with state and federal laws and regulations, including Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and its accompanying regulations, as well as the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's Guidelines on Discrimination Because of Religion, and North Carolina General Statute

§ 116-11(3a). Please see the full text of the Religious Accommodation Policy on the Web. (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/5647667/latest/>)

Alcoholic Beverages

Possession and use of alcoholic beverages is substantially regulated by federal, state, and local laws and ordinances. Within this legal framework, the University's Alcohol Policy (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/5425325/latest/>) sets out the conditions under which alcoholic beverages may be used on University property.

According to North Carolina law

- Generally, persons 21 or older may purchase or consume alcoholic beverages and may possess alcoholic beverages at their homes or temporary residences.
- It is against the law for any person under 21 to purchase or possess any alcoholic beverage. (General Statute 18B-302)
- It is against the law for anyone to sell or give any alcoholic beverage to a person under 21 or to aid or abet such a person in selling, purchasing, or possessing any alcoholic beverage. (General Statute 18B-302)
- No alcoholic beverages may be sold by any person, organization, or corporation on a college campus except as permitted by North Carolina General Statutes, Sect. 18B-1006 (a).

According to Chapel Hill ordinance 3-3 (https://library.municode.com/nc/chapel_hill/codes/code_of_ordinances/?nodeId=CO_CH3ALBE), it is against the law for anyone to possess any open container of alcohol on streets, sidewalks, alleys, or any other property owned or controlled by the Town of Chapel Hill.

In addition to following the law, the Alcohol Policy of The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill sets out special rules about alcohol for students and student organizations. The Office of the Dean of Students will provide copies of the policy and assistance in understanding its full implications. The text of the policy (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/5425325/latest/>) can be accessed on the Web.

Policy on Illegal Drugs

The Board of Trustees of The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, in conformity with the direction of the Board of Governors of The University of North Carolina, hereby adopts this Policy on Illegal Drugs, effective August 24, 1988. It is applicable to all students, faculty members, administrators, and other employees. This policy addresses education, counseling, and rehabilitation; enforcement and penalties; and implementation and reporting. Please see the full text of the Illegal Drugs policy on the Web. (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/5073657/latest/>)

Commercial Activities

Commercial exchanges, including selling or soliciting for the sale of goods or services by any person on the campus of the University is prohibited except as provided for in the Facilities Use Policy (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/4487860/latest/>).

Emergency Evaluation and Action Committee Policy and Procedures

In keeping with the long tradition of student self-governance at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the chancellors of the University have delegated a portion of their authority in matters of student discipline to a student judicial system that functions in accordance with The Instrument of Student Judicial Governance. From time to time, however, the University is faced with situations involving behavior of applicants for admission, who are not yet within the jurisdiction of the student judicial system, and situations involving students that require a University response because they pose some danger to the University and/or its processes but that are not cognizable under the Instrument. Occasionally emergency situations arise in connection with student behaviors, which require a faster response than the student judicial system's procedures can provide. To address all of these situations and to fulfill the University's obligation to provide a safe campus, the Emergency Evaluation and Action Committee has been established. The full text of the committee's policies and procedures is on the Web (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/4639588/latest/>).

Equity in Athletics Disclosure Act

Information compiled under the federal Equity in Athletics Disclosure Act is available on request from the Department of Athletics Business Office.

Expulsion

Per UNC System Policy 700.4.3[G], a student who has been expelled from one constituent institution may not be admitted to another constituent institution of the University, unless and until the sanction of expulsion has been rescinded by the institution that imposed the sanction.

Fireworks, Firearms, and Other Weapons

Per N.C. General Statute 14.269.2(b) and (b1), it is a felony, punishable by fine and/or imprisonment, to possess or carry, openly or concealed, any gun, rifle, pistol, or other firearm of any kind, or any dynamite cartridge, bomb, grenade, mine, or powerful explosive on any University campus, in any University-owned or operated facility, or at a curricular or extracurricular activity sponsored by the University. Such conduct also may constitute a violation of the Honor Code. (See North Carolina General Statute 14-269.2 (http://www.ncga.state.nc.us/EnactedLegislation/Statutes/PDF/BySection/Chapter_14/GS_14-269.2.pdf).)

Per N.C. General Statute 14.269.2(k1) and (k2), a person who has a concealed handgun permit that is valid under North Carolina law, or who is exempt from obtaining a permit pursuant to North Carolina law, may have a handgun in a closed compartment or container within the person's locked vehicle or in a locked container securely affixed to the person's vehicle. A person may unlock the vehicle to enter or exit the vehicle provided the firearm remains in the closed compartment at all times and the vehicle is locked immediately following the entrance or exit.

Per N.C. General Statute 14.269.2(e), it is a Class 1 misdemeanor, punishable by fine and/or imprisonment, to possess or carry, whether openly or concealed, any BB gun, stun gun, air rifle, air pistol, bowie knife, dirk, dagger, slingshot, leaded cane, switchblade knife, blackjack, metallic knuckles, razors and razor blades (except for personal shaving), fireworks, or any sharp-pointed or edged instrument (except instructional supplies, unaltered nail files, and clips and tools used solely for preparation of food, instruction, and maintenance) upon any University campus or in any University-owned or operated facility. Such conduct may also constitute a violation of the Honor Code.

Housing and Residential Education

For policies and procedures related to living on campus, visit the Housing and Residential Education (<https://housing.unc.edu/about-us/policies/>) Web site.

Immunization Requirement

Effective July 1, 1986, N.C. General Statute 130A-155.1 requires that no person shall attend a college or university in North Carolina unless a certificate of immunization indicating that the person has received the immunizations required by N.C. General Statute 130A-152 is presented to the college or university on or before the first day of matriculation.

If a student's Medical History Form containing the certificate of immunization is not in the possession of Campus Health Services 10 days prior to the registration date, the University shall present a notice of deficiency to the student in question. Per N.C. General Statute 130A-155.1(a), the student shall have 30 calendar days from the first day of attendance to obtain the required immunizations, or present evidence of exemption. Those persons who have not complied with the immunization requirements by the end of 30 calendar days will be administratively withdrawn from the University.

Improper Relationships between Students and Employees

On March 15, 1996 (updated July 1, 2007), The University of North Carolina Board of Governors adopted a system-wide policy (300.4.1) that prohibits amorous or sexual relationships between faculty or staff employees and

1. students they evaluate or supervise by virtue of their teaching, research, administrative, or other employment responsibility and
2. students who are minors below the age of 18.

The policy also states that faculty or staff employees may not supervise or evaluate students to whom they are related by blood, law, or marriage. The full UNC-Chapel Hill policy based on the board's policy is available on the Web (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/5219879/latest/>).

Veterans' Educational Benefits

Students who expect to use their veterans' educational benefits must contact the Veterans' Services Assistant in the Office of the University Registrar, located in the Student and Academic Services Building North. Students must maintain satisfactory academic progress to be eligible for VA educational benefits. Students who are not eligible at the end of the term will not be eligible for veterans' educational benefits in subsequent terms until they regain their eligibility. For further information, please visit the Web site (<http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/veteran-affairs/>) or call (919) 962-9864.

Military Tuition Benefit

As a member of the armed services, the North Carolina National Guard or a military dependent, if you do not qualify as a North Carolina resident for tuition purposes, you may still be eligible to pay a reduced tuition rate if you meet the eligibility requirements for the Military Tuition Benefit (N.C. General Statute 116-143.3).

Note: The benefit only determines the amount of tuition you pay. You must still qualify academically for admission.

For additional information about the UNC-Chapel Hill military tuition benefits, please see the UNC-Chapel Hill Registrar's Web site (<https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/residency/special-residency-provisions/military-benefits/>).

Policies on Prohibited Harassment and Nondiscrimination

The University is committed to providing an inclusive and welcoming environment for all members of our community. The University values safety, diversity, education, and equity and is firmly committed to maintaining a campus environment free from discrimination, harassment, and related misconduct. In accordance with its Policy Statement on Nondiscrimination, the University does not unlawfully discriminate in offering equal access to its educational programs and activities or with respect to employment terms and conditions on the basis of an individual's age, color, disability, gender, gender expression, gender identity, genetic information, race, national origin, religion, sex, sexual orientation, or veteran status (collectively referred to as "protected status"). The University's protection of these statuses is grounded in federal law. Federal law also governs the University's response to sexual assault, sexual violence, interpersonal violence (including domestic and dating violence), and stalking. Such acts violate the essential dignity of our community member(s) and are contrary to our institutional values. Please visit these links to see the full text of the Policy on Prohibited Discrimination, Harassment and Related Misconduct (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/4514917/latest/>) and the Policy Statement on Nondiscrimination (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/4467906/latest/>).

Policy Statement on Gender Inclusive Language

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is committed to providing an inclusive and welcoming environment for all members of our community. Consistent with that commitment, gender-inclusive terms (chair; first-year student; upper-level student, etc.) should be used on University documents, Web sites and policies.

A guidance handout ("Gender-Inclusive Language") may be found on the UNC Writing Center Web site (<https://writingcenter.unc.edu/tips-and-tools/gender-inclusive-language/>). Please see the full text of the Policy Statement on Gender-Inclusive Language here (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/4745272/latest/>).

Posthumous Degree

In the unfortunate event of an enrolled student death, the University may award a degree posthumously if at least 90% of academic requirements for earning the degree are already completed. This is typically in the last two semesters or year of study for undergraduate degrees but varies for graduate and professional degrees. In cases where requirements for awarding the degree posthumously are not met, the University may issue a certificate denoting a degree of achievement. The Office of the Dean of Students, in conjunction with the college or school of the student, issues this memorial degree of achievement to honor the memory of the deceased student's contributions to the UNC–Chapel Hill academic community.

Residence Status for Tuition Purposes

Under state law, North Carolina residents are eligible for a lower tuition rate to state universities, including the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (the University).

In order to qualify as a resident for tuition purposes, a person must have established legal residence (or domicile) in North Carolina and maintained that legal residence for at least twelve (12) months prior to his or her classification as a resident for tuition purposes. Each student is classified as an in-state or out-of-state resident upon admission.

If you believe that you qualify as a North Carolina resident for tuition purposes, you may apply for in-state resident status by following the instructions provided by your admissions office. Continuing students who believe they may now qualify as a resident for tuition purposes may apply through the North Carolina Residency Determination Service (RDS). For additional information about the UNC–Chapel Hill residency requirements and procedures, please see the UNC–Chapel Hill Registrar's Web site (<https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/residency/>).

Tuition Waiver for Family Members of Deceased or Disabled Emergency Workers

Certain family members of emergency workers killed or permanently disabled in the line of duty may become eligible for tuition-free enrollment.

For additional information about the UNC–Chapel Hill emergency worker tuition benefits, please see the UNC–Chapel Hill Registrar's Web site (<https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/residency/emergency-worker-tuition-benefits/>).

Policies and Guidelines for a Cooperative Learning Environment

Teaching and learning occur simultaneously through a partnership between instructor and student. Instructors share knowledge, experience, and ideas with their students. Students process these thoughts, generate new ones, and share them with their teachers and classmates. In most cases, students and instructors communicate clearly and effectively. However, misunderstandings do occur. In an attempt to foster a positive academic environment, the Faculty Council, upon recommendation of the Educational Policy Committee, establishes the following policies and guidelines.

The Faculty Council resolves:

Part I. Policies

Section 1.

The Faculty Council recognizes and affirms the following policies. This recognition is not to be interpreted as precluding modification of any policy by the appropriate authority.

- The Honor Code. The faculty should inform students of the provisions of the honor code and be aware of their own responsibilities specified in the honor code. Faculty responsibilities are stated in the Instrument of Student Judicial Governance.
- Student Grievance Policy and Procedures (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/4469271/latest/>). According to UNC–Chapel Hill Student Grievance Committee procedures, students may file a grievance against a UNC–Chapel Hill employee, including faculty, EHRA non-faculty, staff, and student employee (when acting in the role of employee) when there is a violation of one of the following:
 - a. The UNC–Chapel Hill Policy on Prohibited Discrimination, Harassment and Related Misconduct, Including Sexual and Gender-Based Harassment, Sexual Violence, Interpersonal Violence and Stalking (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/4514917/latest/>);
 - b. The Americans with Disabilities Act (<https://www.ada.gov/>);
 - c. Title IX (<http://eoc.unc.edu/our-policies/state-and-federal-laws/title-ix-and-vawa/>), which prohibits exclusion from participation on the basis of sex;
 - d. Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (<https://accessibility.unc.edu/policies/>), which outlaws discrimination on the basis of a handicap; or
 - e. The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, which allows students to challenge the content of their educational records.

Copies of these policies can be obtained from the Office of the Dean of Students (<https://odos.unc.edu/>). They contain information about how to file a grievance. A grievance based on incidents that occurred more than six months before the complaint was filed will not be considered.

- Student Access to Academic Records—Protection against Improper Disclosure. As stated in The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, students may have access to their full academic records. Individuals who are, or have been, in attendance at UNC–Chapel Hill may inspect and review their education records. Otherwise, education records are subject to confidentiality requirements as specified by law and may not be disclosed improperly. Requests for recommendations imply that the student has given consent to the disclosure of information related to ability and performance. Judgments of ability and character may be provided under appropriate circumstances, normally with the knowledge or consent of the student. “Education records” are those records directly related to a student that are maintained by an educational institution. Particular University policy provisions are found in the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill’s Policies and Procedures under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974.
- Appealing a Grade. The University has systems for appealing a grade. The exact procedures vary among the academic units. Students should consult with their dean or department chairperson to obtain information about grade appeal procedures. See the section on “Grade Appeals” (p. 1275) in this catalog.

Part II. Guidelines

Section 2.

The Faculty Council endorses the following guidelines for the faculty-student relationship. This endorsement shall not be construed as faculty legislation, is not intended to establish a contractual undertaking by the University or any individual, and shall not constitute the basis for civil action in a court or a claim in any administrative or judicial body of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

- Clear Definition of Potential Honor Code Violations. In an attempt to avoid unintended misunderstanding, instructors should clearly state what is acceptable in their classes. When study aids such as computers are allowed, the instructor is responsible for explaining what constitutes proper use of these items. These rules should be established at the beginning of the course and should not be changed without giving students proper notice.
- Assignment of Graded Work during the Last Week of the Semester. Instructors may not assign graded work during the last week of classes unless the course syllabus clearly states that such an assignment will be given.
- Suggested Classroom Procedures. In general, instructors are strongly encouraged to follow the guidelines for course design and classroom procedures recommended by the Center for Faculty Excellence. When students enter into a learning relationship, they have certain needs and expectations. They are entitled to information about course procedures, attendance policy, content, and goals. Instructors should provide a syllabus that describes the course and methods of evaluation. Particular attention should be paid to several areas of special concern to students, including provision of reserve readings and grading policy. Evaluated assignments should be returned to the students within a reasonable amount of time. Since part of the purpose of such assignments is to provide feedback, students should be given time to assess and to learn from their mistakes. Ideally, such assessment would take place while the relevant topics are still fresh in their minds. Extra credit, if offered, should be announced publicly and made available to the entire class.

- Students Should Have Freedom of Expression. Students should be free to take reasoned exception to the data or views offered in any course of study. They are responsible, however, for learning the content of any course of study in which they are enrolled. Incorrect facts and poorly supported arguments or opinions inevitably have an impact on grades. Nothing herein shall be construed to limit the freedom of the faculty to assign grades according to appropriate academic standards.
- Responsibilities of Students and Teachers. Just as students ought to expect instructors who are knowledgeable and well-prepared, so should teachers expect their students to be motivated, eager to learn, and actively engaged in class. It is the responsibility of teachers to make their courses serious intellectual experiences for themselves and for their students. It is the responsibility of students to take seriously the courses in which they enroll. Good teachers need good learners.

Students should understand that they are members of a community of scholars, and membership in such a community is not a passive activity. To be full participants in the educational community and to maximize the educational value of a class, preparation before class is necessary. Proper class preparation involves obtaining course materials as they are needed and completing assignments as they are due. Full participation in a class requires regular attendance, arriving on time and remaining until class conclusion, and active involvement in the work of the class. Students should also consider the extent of their own involvement in a class in assessing the educational value of the class.

Recording Classes Best Practices

The following information was posted to the Catalog on 8/18/2020 and distributed to faculty, instructors, and teaching assistants. The recommendations were developed by the Office of the Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost.

1. Indicate on syllabi and on the departmental learning management system or Web site that classes may be recorded, noting that recordings will only be made available to students enrolled in the classes recorded.
2. When practicable, notify students and any guest speaker when a class is actually recorded. This notification may be provided verbally by the instructor or electronically through the online learning management system or telecommunication service used. It is advisable to make a more substantial notice during one of the initial classes, and then simply have a way to note that the class is being recorded during other classes in a more routinized way.
3. Ensure recordings are only made available to the students enrolled in the classes recorded. A recorded classroom lecture should not be used for any purpose except to meet the educational objectives of that particular class. Should the department or instructor wish to use recordings for any other purpose, the department should contact the Office of University Counsel.
4. Prohibit students from making individual recordings of the class in any format without prior consent from the instructor and the school or department.
5. Prohibit students from sharing or distributing recordings obtained from the University or elsewhere.
6. Develop processes for how your department will record, store, and distribute such recordings.

- a. Consider whether to encourage or require all faculty to record all classes routinely.
- b. Consider whether certain classes include student discussion of sensitive or personal topics that may require further controls on recording.
- c. Consider recording options that best protect students' privacy (e.g., if practicable depending on the mode of instruction, audio-only recording or video that only displays the instructor and class materials without showing students' faces).
- d. Consider IT security practices and ways of providing recordings to students that minimize the risk of further disclosure (e.g., providing a non-downloadable version on the learning management system rather than sending it as an attachment in an email).
- e. Consider the process and specific circumstances by which enrolled students may make requests to record the class privately. Consider limiting student recordings to audio-only recordings.

Example Language for Syllabus or Other Communication to Students

The University may record meetings of this class for educational purposes. These recordings will be shared only with students enrolled in the course for purposes of academic instruction only. Your instructor will communicate to you how you may access any available recordings.

Unauthorized student recording of classes on personal devices or on any other format is prohibited.

Students requesting the use of assistive technology as an accommodation should contact Accessibility Resources & Service (<https://ars.unc.edu/>). Other students must obtain express permission from the department to record the class, and the University will only grant such permission in extraordinary circumstances in which the student otherwise lacks access to a recording made by the University or instructor. Students shall not copy, reproduce, or distribute any recordings of their classes, and students shall delete any recordings at the conclusion of the course.

Any violation of these prohibitions or restriction on the making, use, copying, or distribution of recording of classes shall constitute an honor code violation.

Example Language for Instructor

This class is being recorded for educational purposes only, and the recordings may only be made available to students enrolled in this class. Any use of a recording of this class by a student shall be for educational purposes only. Students may not record this class on their own, in any format, without prior express authorization from the University and may not copy, reproduce, or distribute any recording that they access.

Out-of-State Disclosures for Distance Education Programs

Disclosure for Indiana Residents Enrolled in UNC–Chapel Hill Distance Education Programs

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is authorized by The Indiana Board for Proprietary Education, 101 W. Ohio St., Suite 670, Indianapolis, IN 46204.

Disclosure for Louisiana Residents Enrolled in UNC–Chapel Hill Distance Education Programs

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is currently licensed by the Board of Regents of the State of Louisiana. Licenses are renewed by the State Board of Regents every two years. Licensed institutions have met minimal operational standards set forth by the state, but licensure does not constitute accreditation, guarantee the transferability of credit, nor signify that programs are certifiable by any professional agency or organization.

Disclosure for Minnesota Residents Enrolled in UNC–Chapel Hill Distance Education Programs

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is registered as a private institution with the Minnesota Office of Higher Education pursuant to sections 136A.61 and 136A.71. Registration is not an endorsement of the institution. Credits earned at the institution may not transfer to all other institutions.

Disclosure for Washington Residents Enrolled in UNC–Chapel Hill Distance Education Programs

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is authorized by the Washington Student Achievement Council and meets the requirements and minimum educational standards established for degree-granting institutions under the Degree-Granting Institutions Act. This authorization is subject to periodic review and authorizes The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill to advertise, recruit, and offer field placements for specific degree programs. The council may be contacted for a list of currently authorized programs. Authorization by the Council does not carry with it an endorsement by the Council of the institution or its programs. Any person desiring information about the requirements of the act or the applicability of those requirements to the institution may contact the Council at P.O. Box 43430, Olympia, WA 98504-3430.

Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act

As a general rule, under the federal Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA), personally identifiable information may not be released from a student's education records without his or her prior written consent.

To learn more about FERPA, please visit these links:

UNC–Chapel Hill FERPA Policy (<https://unc.policystat.com/policy/4852661/latest/>)

UNC–Chapel Hill Registrar's Web site (<https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/uncferpa/>)

TRANSCRIPTS

Transcripts of Record

A statement of official academic record includes all significant recorded information concerning the student's admission, classification, and scholarship. No partial or incomplete scholastic record will be given.

The student's transcript notes his or her academic eligibility status. A statement of honorable dismissal will not be granted to students whose conduct and character would not entitle them to remain enrolled at the University or whose transcripts contain a notation of any probation, suspension, or other temporary restriction imposed for unsatisfactory conduct and still in force when the statement is made.

The University does not release an official transcript unless tuition, fees, and other obligations due the University have been paid. Students may order a transcript electronically through the link in their ConnectCarolina Student Center. This process provides an electronic authorization that allows the Office of the University Registrar to release the transcript at the student's request. Students may inspect their academic records at the Office of the University Registrar, Student and Academic Services Building North. For more information on how to request a transcript, please visit the Office of the University Registrar's Web site (<http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/transcripts-certifications/order-a-transcript/>).

Policy on Awarding of Undergraduate Degrees and Transcript Notations

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will award only one bachelor's degree to a student, regardless of a possible second-major declaration, and will not admit or award a degree to a student who has already earned a bachelor's degree through another school of the University or at another college. Undergraduates in the professional schools in the Divisions of Academic Affairs and Health Affairs may earn a second major (not a second degree) in the College of Arts and Sciences or another professional school, but the first major must be in the professional school. Exception: a student may earn a second bachelor's degree in one of several health profession schools of the University after receiving a bachelor's degree if the student is admitted to the professional school.

Students pursuing two major fields of study for the bachelor of arts or bachelor of science degree earn only one degree and receive only one diploma. Both the diploma and the official transcript will indicate the degree and the two majors.

Students completing the requirements for both a bachelor of science degree and a bachelor of arts degree earn only the bachelor of science degree and receive only that diploma. Students completing the requirements for both a bachelor of arts degree and a bachelor of fine arts or bachelor of music degree earn only the bachelor of fine arts or bachelor of music degree and receive only that diploma. Note that these students must complete General Education requirements pertinent to the bachelor of arts as well as all requirements for the bachelor of fine arts or bachelor of music degree. Both the diploma and the official transcript will indicate the degree (with its major) and the second major.

Related Policies

Under no circumstances can a second undergraduate degree be awarded in Academic Affairs after one has been earned in Health Affairs. In the rare instance that an undergraduate student completes the requirements for an undergraduate degree and a graduate degree at the same time, the two degrees cannot be awarded at the same graduation. The undergraduate degree must be awarded first, and the graduate degree awarded at a subsequent degree award date.

Students who apply to graduate on a given degree award date, but who must complete requirements (such as courses with grades of IN or AB) after that degree award date, must reapply to graduate on a degree award date that follows the actual completion of requirements. Coursework taken after the degree award date cannot be used to change a degree already awarded, or to complete retroactively a degree, or to add retroactively an additional major or minor.

Adjustments may be made to a transcript only for one year following the date of graduation. Grade appeals, for instance, can be initiated after graduation. Courses with temporary grades not affecting graduation (AB or IN) can be completed after the date of graduation and the grade point average changed accordingly; however, the student's status at the time of graduation is not affected. Graduation with distinction or highest distinction is based only on the grade point average at the time that the degree is officially conferred and posted on the academic transcript, and may not be awarded retroactively. Students who neglect to declare a second major or a minor at the time of graduation may request that the dean's office verify that the requirements had been satisfied at the time of graduation. In such cases, indication of the second major or minor can be added to the transcript within one year after the graduation date.

Loan Deferments and Certification/Verification of Enrollment Status

The Office of the University Registrar provides confirmation of student enrollment data to financial institutions, organizations, or agencies requiring proof of registration. Students can order an enrollment certification online through their ConnectCarolina Student Center. Additional information about ordering a certification (<http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/transcripts-certifications/enrollment-certification/>) is available online or by calling (919) 962-3954.

TUITION AND FINANCIAL AID

Student Finances

Billing Policies

Charges for tuition and fees, on-campus housing, and meals are assessed on a semester basis. Billing statements will only be available online through the ConnectCarolina Student Center. Students are responsible for accessing their statements online and insuring they are paid on time.

Any past due charges will result in a hold on registration and transcripts. Students must pay past due balances from prior terms before they will be allowed to register for future semesters. Students registering after the first tuition bill of the semester must either prepay tuition and fees or provide documented eligibility of financial aid to the Office of the University Cashier.

Students who are receiving financial aid are eligible to request a student aid deferment to extend their payment due date until after the initial financial aid disbursement of the semester. Deferments (<https://cashier.unc.edu/forms/>) can only be requested in ConnectCarolina by the student before the due date on the first bill of each semester.

It is extremely important for students to refer to the Office of the University Cashier Web site (<http://cashier.unc.edu/>) prior to each term for announcements and up-to-date information, and to follow instructions concerning payment/deferment due dates to avoid registration cancellation.

Tuition and Fees

Tuition and fees (<http://cashier.unc.edu/tuition-fees/>) for each academic year, including detailed information about the mandatory student fees, (<http://cashier.unc.edu/tuition-fees/student-fees/>) are published on the Office of the University Cashier Web site. Additional fees such as incoming student, special laboratory, and other designated program and course fees also may be charged.

A late registration fee of $20 is charged for registration on or after the first day of class for a term.

Proxy and Authorized User Access

Federal law (FERPA (<http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/uncferpa/#details-0-0>)) restricts access to student information. Proxy and/or Authorized User Access (<https://ccinfo.unc.edu/give-proxyauthorized-users-access-information-2-2/>) is for anyone the student authorizes to access and/or discuss the student account. Only authorized users have access to view the billing statements and make payments online.

Payment Options

Payments can be made in person at the Office of the University Cashier, through the mail, or by check or credit card online. For up-to-date information on payment options, please visit the payments section (<http://cashier.unc.edu/payment-options/>) of our Web site. Our returned check fee is $25.

Each student is responsible for payment of his or her University charges. If a third party sponsor will be paying the charges, the Office of the University Cashier must receive a written authorization from the third party well in advance so that a separate invoice can be sent to the proper agency or organization in order to ensure timely payment.

Financial Aid Refunds

The Office of the University Cashier encourages students who are receiving financial aid in excess of tuition, fees, housing, and meal plan costs to sign up for direct deposit (<http://cashier.unc.edu/student-account-policies/refunds/>) as soon as possible. Excess funds from the account will be deposited to either a checking or savings account at the student's bank. Students should also promptly update their direct deposit information if there are any changes to their banking information.

Drop/Withdrawal Policies for Tuition and Fees

The last day to reduce a course load for credit on a student's financial account is the tenth day of the semester, commonly referred to as the "census date." Dropping the only course a student is registered for requires an official withdrawal.

In case of withdrawal from the University, tuition and fees will be prorated according to the withdrawal refund calendar posted on the Important Dates (<http://cashier.unc.edu/tuition-fees/important-dates/>) section of our Web site for that semester. The last date for credit on a student's financial account for withdrawal is nine weeks after the first day of classes for the fall and spring semesters. If a student drops the only course he or she is taking, this constitutes a withdrawal from the University.

Tuition Guarantee Program

Under a North Carolina state law effective fall 2016, students classified as North Carolina residents for tuition purposes in undergraduate degree programs at UNC system schools are eligible for fixed (or guaranteed) tuition for up to eight consecutive semesters (or ten semesters, if enrolled in an approved five-year program). Further information about the Tuition Guarantee Program can be found on the Web site for the Office of the University Registrar (<http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/student-rights/guaranteed-tuition/>).

Scholarships and Financial Aid For Undergraduates

The University works to keep Carolina affordable for all students. Scholarships, grants, loans, and work-study funds are offered to help eligible students who cannot afford the full cost of attendance.

Detailed information on scholarships and student aid can be found at the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid (<http://studentaid.unc.edu>). Students and parents are also welcome to email aidinfo@unc.edu. We are here to help!

Applying for Financial Aid

The deadline for financial aid applications is March 1. Late applications are accepted, but earlier is better.

To apply for financial aid:

1. Complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) (<http://fafsa.ed.gov>)
UNC school code 002974
2. Complete the CSS Profile (<http://student.collegeboard.org/profile/>) (new students only, for University grants and scholarships)
UNC school code 5816
3. Monitor UNC email and regularly check ConnectCarolina (<http://connectcarolina.unc.edu>) for updates.

If we need more information, we will notify you by email. The sooner you complete the application process, the more likely funding is available.

Aid is an annual process, so returning students should complete the FAFSA each year. The application is available by October 1 of the prior year.

Priority Deadline

Complete the FAFSA (<http://fafsa.ed.gov>) and CSS PROFILE (<http://student.collegeboard.org/profile/>) by March 1. Late forms are accepted, but some sources of aid may be limited for later applicants.

Students should apply as early as possible, even before admission to Carolina in the case of new students. You must reapply with FAFSA by March 1 each year. You only need to complete the CSS Profile as an incoming new student one time.

Award Decisions

Financial aid offers generally begin in February, after admissions decisions are released. Students who apply after March 1 are notified as soon as we are able.

Types of Need-Based Financial Aid

Scholarships, grants, and work-study do not have to be repaid; loans require repayment. Aid awards will include as much scholarship and grant aid as possible, with remaining need met through loans, a work-study job, or both. Graduate and professional students will receive loans and/or work to meet any eligibility remaining after awards from schools or departments.

Students always have the opportunity to reduce or decline loans before accepting an aid offer, so budget carefully before borrowing. See our budgeting and borrowing guide (<https://studentaid.unc.edu/types-of-aid/loans/budgeting/>) for details.

Eligibility for Need-Based Financial Aid

To be eligible for financial aid, a student must be enrolled and making satisfactory academic progress in a degree or eligible certificate program. Information about the Satisfactory Academic Progress Policy can be found at studentaid.unc.edu/sap.

Aid is restricted if a student is in default on a loan previously received for college expenses or owes a refund on a grant or loan from an earlier enrollment period. Both resident and nonresident students are eligible for financial aid, though different University policies may apply.

The Carolina Covenant

Covenant Scholars have the opportunity to graduate debt-free through a combination of scholarships, grants, and work-study. Covenant Scholars also have access to faculty and staff mentors, enrichment activities, and other personal support services.

The Carolina Covenant is offered to eligible undergraduates who have a family income at or below 200 percent of the federal poverty level and limited assets. No special application is necessary; eligible students will be notified after applying for financial aid. Details are on the Carolina Covenant site (<http://carolinacovenant.unc.edu>).

Federal Aid Programs

Rules for federal student aid are set by Congress. Eligibility is set by a federal formula that examines the income and assets of the student and family, household size, the number of people in college, taxes paid, and other factors. Scholarships and awards from private sources are also factored into the eligibility formula.

The Federal Pell Grant Program provides assistance to undergraduate students with demonstrated financial need. A Pell Grant will automatically be included as part of an eligible student's financial aid package.

More detailed information is available at the Federal Student Aid site (<https://studentaid.ed.gov/sa/>).

University Scholarships and Grants

Undergraduate students are considered for UNC-funded scholarships and grants, which do not have to be repaid, based on a detailed analysis of family financial circumstances. This may include home equity, other income, and family assets that may not have been considered in the calculation of federal aid. Institutional scholarship and grant funds are often combined with federal aid to provide a total package of financial aid.

The University also offers scholarship funding to enroll certain students with exceptional financial need who are likely to contribute to the intellectual experience and diversity of the undergraduate student body, as well as funds to assist eligible students who are residents of North Carolina and members of an Indian tribe recognized by the state or the federal government. No separate application is required; students will be considered based on their aid application and UNC admissions application.

Merit Scholarships

Each year, the University offers a limited number of merit scholarships to entering first-year students. These highly competitive programs recognize academic achievement, leadership, commitment to service, and potential for success at the University. Some of these awards consider a combination of financial need and academic merit.

Because Carolina is a highly selective university, competition for merit scholarships is strong. Very few merit scholarships are awarded each year.

There is no separate application for UNC merit scholarships. Selection is based on the information provided in a student's admission application. Merit scholarship finalists will be notified in early February (for early admissions applicants) and late March (for regular deadline applicants).

The Morehead-Cain (<http://moreheadcain.org>) and the Robertson Scholars (<http://robertsonscholars.org>) programs are administered by private foundations and do require separate applications. Visit their Web sites for details.

More information about the University's merit scholarships — including the Johnston, Pogue, Carolina, and Colonel Robinson programs — can be found at the Scholars Program site (<http://scholarsprogram.unc.edu>).

Work-Study Employment

A limited number of work-study jobs are available to help students earn a portion of their University expenses. Most of these jobs are on campus, with a small number in community service agencies. Undergraduate work-study jobs require an average of 10 to 12 hours per week, with wages that depend on the job.

Graduate students may be assigned work-study assistantships, with teaching and research responsibilities in their departments or schools. Eligible students can apply for a variety of work-study jobs to match their skills and interests. There is no separate application for undergraduate students; simply apply for financial aid by March 1.

Need-Based Loans

The University administers a number of student loan programs, both federal and institutional, which provide low-interest, long-term loans to undergraduate, graduate, and professional students who are eligible for aid. Most financial aid to undergraduate students includes loan offers, and the majority of aid to graduate and professional students is in the form of loans. Repayment of most loans begins six months after the student ceases to be enrolled at least half time.

After a student applies for aid, the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid determines which type of loan is most appropriate based on student need and available funds. More information on loan programs can be found at the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid site (<http://studentaid.unc.edu/types-of-aid/loans/>).

Students always have the opportunity to reduce or decline loans when accepting a financial aid offer, so budget carefully (<http://studentaid.unc.edu/budgeting/>) before borrowing. Contact aidinfo@unc.edu with any questions.

Non-Need-Based Loans

Students not eligible for need-based aid, or who require funds beyond available need-based aid, may apply for unsubsidized federal loans. Unlike need-based loans, these programs have higher interest rates, and interest is generally not deferred. Visit the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid loan site (<https://studentaid.unc.edu/types-of-aid/loans/budgeting/>) for information about applying.

Federal Direct Unsubsidized Loans are available upon request, subject to borrowing limits. Overall loan limits and information about interest rates can be found through the Federal student aid website (<https://studentaid.ed.gov/sa/types/loans/subsidized-unsubsidized/#how-much>).

Parents of undergraduate students who do not receive need-based aid, or who need additional assistance, may apply for Federal Direct Parent PLUS Loans. More information about Parent PLUS Loans is available on the Federal Student Aid Web site (<https://studentloans.gov/myDirectLoan/index.action/>).

Laptop Grants

All Carolina students are required to have a laptop computer. The University offers grants — in the form of a credit at Student Stores, which sells a variety of laptops — to cover the cost for qualifying first-year students who apply for financial aid.

You are welcome to combine the grant with your own money to purchase a more expensive laptop. But if you leave Carolina without completing a degree, the University keeps the computer.

Questions and Assistance

Financial aid counselors are eager to help. Visit the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid or email aidinfo@unc.edu to get in touch.

For Graduate Students

The Graduate School offers a variety of funding opportunities to assist graduate students. The Graduate School provides information and support to students applying for external fellowships, as well as providing fellowships and other direct financial support to graduate students, which supplements what the individual school or department provides. For updated information, please see The Graduate School's funding resources Web site (<http://gradschool.unc.edu/funding/>).

Graduate Tuition Incentive Scholarship (<http://gradschool.unc.edu/funding/gradschool/gtis.html>): Helps cover the remaining cost of in-state tuition for graduate students who are receiving external funding awards in support of their thesis or dissertation research

Graduate Student Opportunity Fund (<http://gradschool.unc.edu/funding/gradschool/opportunityfund.html>): Assists students with small, nonrecurring, unusual and unexpected academic expenses

Graduate Student Transportation Grant (<http://gradschool.unc.edu/funding/gradschool/transportationgrant.html>): Assists students with some of the transportation costs necessary for travel to a regional, national, or international academic conference or professional society meeting to present their dissertation research

The Graduate Funding Information Center (<http://gradfunding.web.unc.edu/>) is a resource for graduate students seeking information on funding sources for independent research, collaborative projects, fellowships, program development, and other scholarly activities.

You are welcome to contact the Fellowships Office at gradfunding@unc.edu.

To receive alerts when funding opportunities are posted, subscribe to The Graduate School funding listserv (<http://gradfunding.web.unc.edu/>).

Departmental Awards

Teaching and Research Assistantships

The majority of assistantships available to graduate students are awarded by academic schools and departments. Approximately 2,500 graduate, research, and teaching assistantships are available through specific departments. Graduate assistantships are also available through the University's various research institutes and centers. Stipends, responsibilities, selection criteria, and application and notification procedures vary from department to department. Applicants should discuss with the program to which they are applying the specific funding opportunities available to graduate students.

Federal/State Fellowships and Traineeships

A number of state and federally funded fellowships and traineeships are also available in some departments. Students must be pursuing graduate training in specified fields of study to be eligible for these awards. Interested students should request additional information from their academic departments.

Application Deadline

Prospective graduate students may indicate when applying for admission their interest in an assistantship and should discuss application deadlines with their prospective departments.

If you have questions about departmental awards, please contact the department to which you are applying (<https://gradschool.unc.edu/academics/degreeprograms/>).

Financial Aid Regulations

To be eligible for financial aid programs administered by the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid (<http://studentaid.unc.edu/>), a student must be enrolled in a degree program on at least a half-time basis, a United States citizen or permanent resident, making satisfactory progress toward completion of the academic program, and, if applicable, registered for Selective Service. The student may not be in default on a loan previously received for college expenses nor owe a refund on a scholarship, grant, or loan from a previous enrollment period.

Graduate students who wish to apply for financial aid to meet the costs of attending the University must complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). The application should be completed online (<http://www.fafsa.ed.gov/>). In completing the FAFSA, the student must list UNC–Chapel Hill (code number 002974) as one of the schools to receive the FAFSA information. The information on the FAFSA will be analyzed by an agency contracted by the federal government. The agency will send information and an analysis of the student's eligibility for financial aid funds to both the student and to the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid.

A student should not wait for admission to a graduate program before applying for aid. An applicant should submit the FAFSA by March 1. If additional documentation is needed to complete a student's application for financial assistance, the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid will notify the student. A student who completes the file promptly can expect to receive notice of an award decision early in June.
