Students can search for FY-Launch sections in ConnectCarolina using the FY-LAUNCH attribute.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

In the first two years, students are required to complete the standard calculus sequence, discrete mathematics, linear algebra, and first course in differential equations as well as introductory courses in computer science and physics. At the beginning of their third year, students take advanced courses in mathematics.

1 A current or former major in statistics and analytics may substitute STOR 215 (https://catalog.unc.edu/search/?P=STOR%20215) for MATH 381 (https://catalog.unc.edu/search/?P=MATH%20381).

2 MATH 381 is a key course to prepare for MATH 521. Students with double majors should take MATH 381 over similar courses offered in other departments.

3 These courses may be completed at any point in the major. However, we recommend starting early especially for sequential courses in another department. STOR 555 can be counted for this requirement and is strongly recommended.

4 MATH 381 is a key course to prepare for MATH 521. Students with double majors should take MATH 381 over similar courses offered in other departments.

Special Opportunities in Mathematics

Special activities for qualified students include an undergraduate Mathematics Club, problem-solving seminars, and the Putnam
Mathematical Competition. Qualified students may pursue opportunities as undergraduate learning assistants or tutors in the Math Help Center. Students interested in these activities should consult the undergraduate student services manager for additional information.

Qualified students can conduct original research with the guidance of a faculty member, usually in conjunction with the preparation of an honors project. Study Abroad opportunities include department or yearlong programs in a variety of countries. The Archibald Henderson Medal and the Alfred Brauer Prize recognize outstanding performance and promise in mathematics.

Undergraduate honors research projects as well as some internships or study abroad programs might qualify for research and discovery or experiential education credit in the General Education curriculum. MATH 296 satisfies this requirement.

Honors in Mathematics
Special honors (H) sections are given in some mathematics courses when student demand is sufficient (for example, MATH 62H, MATH 231H, MATH 232H, MATH 233H, MATH 381H, MATH 383H).

Promising students are encouraged to work toward a bachelor’s degree with honors in mathematics. This program consists of nine or more courses approved by the departmental honors advisor and satisfactory completion of an honors project completed over the two semesters. The honors project is conducted in association with a departmental faculty member on a topic approved by the departmental honors advisor, and spans two semesters of independent research, during which time the honors candidate must be enrolled in MATH 691H and MATH 692H. The final report on the project includes both a written description and an oral presentation before a committee of three faculty (including the project advisor) approved by the departmental honors advisor. The committee will then report to the departmental honors advisor, who, in conjunction with a subcommittee of the undergraduate committee, will make the final recommendation on awarding a degree with honors or highest honors. The candidate must have a 3.5 grade point average in mathematics courses to begin an honors project and must maintain the 3.5 average through the completion of the senior year.

UNC–BEST
The UNC Baccalaureate Education in Science and Teaching (UNC–BEST) Program is a collaboration between the School of Education and the College of Arts and Sciences and is designed to allow undergraduate mathematics (and science) majors interested in teaching high school mathematics for their degree and obtain licensure as a North Carolina high school mathematics teacher in four years. For more details, see the School of Education (p. 89) section of the Catalog.

Mathematics Minor
Mathematics has always been a fundamental component of human thought and culture, and the growth of technology in recent times has further increased its importance.

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

• take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
• earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Department of Microbiology and Immunology

The Department of Microbiology and Immunology is one of the basic science departments of the UNC School of Medicine. Although the department participates actively in the undergraduate curriculum in biology and several of its courses are open to undergraduate students, the department does not offer an undergraduate major in microbiology.

MCRO 251 Introduction to Medical Microbiology is an undergraduate course, including both lecture and laboratory sessions, which is specifically designed to serve as the required prerequisite for students applying to physician assistant, pharmacy, or nursing programs, although other students with the required science background may take the course. Most of the other courses offered by the department are available to highly motivated undergraduate students with the necessary preparation, although it is important for such students to consult the course instructor before registering.

Graduate Programs

- Ph.D. in Microbiology and Immunology (https://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/microbiology-immunology/)

MCRO—Microbiology

Undergraduate-level Courses

MCRO 251. Introductory Medical Microbiology. 4 Credits.

Required preparation, one semester of a basic undergraduate science class. An introductory course in microbiology that focuses on the structure, biology, and genetics of microbes in relation to human disease and the immune system. For students planning careers in pharmacy, nursing, dental hygiene, and related fields. A laboratory is required.

Rules & Requirements

Grading Status: Letter grade.

MCRO 291. Undergraduate Learning Apprentice. 1 Credits.

Permission required. Experience includes preparations, demonstrations, assistance, and attendance at weekly meetings. Apprentices will not be involved in any aspects of grading.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-LEARNTA.

Making Connections Gen Ed: EE - Undergraduate Learning Assistant, ULA.

Requisites: Prerequisite, MCRO 251; a grade of B or better in MCRO 251 is required.

Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 3 total credits. 3 total completions.

Grading Status: Pass/Fail.

MCRO 292. Undergraduate Learning Assistant. 2 Credits.

Permission required. Experience includes preparations, demonstrations, assistance, and attendance in weekly meetings.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-LEARNTA.

Making Connections Gen Ed: EE - Undergraduate Learning Assistant, ULA.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level Courses

MCRO 449. Introduction to Immunology. 3 Credits.
This course provides a general overview of the evolution, organization, and function of the immune system. Instruction will be inquiry-based with extensive use of informational and instructional technology tools.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, BIOL 103, BIOL 104, and BIOL 240; or permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: BIOL 449.

MCRO 631. Advanced Molecular Biology I. 4 Credits.
This course explores cutting edge research in molecular biology -- the investigation at molecule-scale of the mechanisms behind life. We briefly review core-principles in molecular biology, then investigate more recent research that extends or overturns these core principles.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, BIOL 202, or BIOL 220, or CHEM 430, and permission of the course director.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: GNET 631, BIOC 631, BIOL 631.

MCRO 632. Advanced Molecular Biology II. 3 Credits.
Required preparation for undergraduates, at least one undergraduate course in both biochemistry and genetics. The purpose of this course is to provide historical, basic, and current information about the flow and regulation of genetic information from DNA to RNA in a variety of biological systems. Three lecture hours a week.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: GNET 632, BIOC 632, BIOL 632.

MCRO 635. Microbial Pathogenesis I. 3 Credits.
Permission of the instructor. Required preparation, coursework in molecular biology and genetics. Topics will include aspects of basic bacteriology as well as bacterial and fungal pathogens and mechanisms of disease.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

MCRO 640. Microbial Pathogenesis II. 3 Credits.
Permission of the instructor or a fundamental understanding of molecular virology and immunology. Molecular pathogenesis, with a primary focus on viral pathogens. Additional topics include vaccines and genetics of host-pathogen interactions.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

MCRO 690. Special Topics in Microbiology or Immunology. 1-15 Credits.
Permission of the department except for department majors. Designed to introduce the student to research methods. Minor investigative problems are conducted with advice and guidance of the staff. Hours and credit to be arranged, any term. May be repeated for credit two or more semesters.

Rules & Requirements
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 15 total credits. 5 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Department of Military Science

Introduction
The United States Army Reserve Officers’ Training Corps (AROTC) provides unrivaled leadership training for success in any career field. AROTC offers students the opportunity to study, develop, and demonstrate leadership and mission command. Those who successfully complete the program are commissioned as second lieutenants in the United States Army. Army ROTC offers a variety of leadership experiences, academic challenges, and unique learning opportunities — unlike any other University program or department.

The Army ROTC Program

Four-Year Program
Students enrolled in the four-year program take courses during each semester. The first two years include the ROTC basic course and concentrate on leadership development, ethics and values, the profession of arms, and basic military skills. Starting the junior year, cadets enter the ROTC advanced course. The advanced course curriculum focuses on the study and application of leadership skills, mission command, advanced land navigation, and military history. Qualified cadets will have the opportunity to attend multiple iterations of Cadet Summer Training at Fort Knox, Kentucky. In their senior year, cadets submit accessions packets—including component (Active, Reserve, National Guard) and branch preferences—to compete for the opportunity to serve the nation as commissioned officers.

Two-Year Program
The two-year program provides an opportunity for students to meet the requirements for the advanced course program and potential commissioning as officers in the United States Army. To be eligible for consideration, a student must have previously served in the armed services or attended Cadet Initial Entry Training at Fort Knox, Kentucky.

Interested Students

Students seeking to learn more about themselves, leadership, and the United States Army can take ARMY 101, ARMY 102, ARMY 201, and ARMY 202 without incurring a service obligation.

Advising

Cadets are required to complete an additional academic tracking form and receive guidance from their military science instructor to ensure military and graduation requirements are met.

Minor

- Military Science and Leadership Minor (p. 861)

Professor

Daniel Hurd, Lieutenant Colonel, U.S. Army

Assistant Professors

Jerald Romine, Captain, U.S. Army
Oren Rosen, Captain, U.S. Army

Primary Trainer

Eduardo Ceniceros-Rodriguez, Staff Sergeant, U.S. Army

ARMY—Army

Undergraduate-level Courses

ARMY 100. Leadership Laboratory. 0 Credits.

This course is designed to enhance the military science curriculum while providing the opportunity for hands-on practice of leadership fundamentals and the education received during ARMY 101, 102, 201, 202, 301, 302, 401, and 402. Requirement for cadets.

Rules & Requirements

Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ARMY 101. Introduction to the Army and Critical Thinking. 1 Credits.

This course introduces students to the personal challenges and competencies that are critical for effective leadership. Students learn how the personal development of life skills such as critical thinking, time management, goal setting, stress management, and comprehensive fitness relate to leadership and the Army profession. Required for cadets.

Rules & Requirements

Grading Status: Letter grade.

ARMY 102. Adaptive Leadership and Professional Competence. 1 Credits.

Builds on ARMY 101 by offering an introduction to the personal challenges and competencies that are critical for adaptive leadership. Students learn the basics of the communication process and the importance for leaders to develop the essential skills to communicate effectively in the Army. Required for cadets.

Rules & Requirements

Grading Status: Letter grade.

ARMY 190. Seminar in Selected Topics of Military Science. 1-3 Credits.

Permission of the department. A detailed examination of current topics regarding the U.S. Army. Provides a course for Army ROTC cadets who require additional coursework to meet commissioning and/or scholarship requirements due to extenuating circumstances.

Rules & Requirements

Grading Status: Letter grade.

ARMY 196. Independent Study. 1-3 Credits.

Permission of the department and the instructor. A course learning contract is required. Any student wishing to further their Army Leadership study or unable to schedule military science courses during their allotted time frames to maintain Army enrollment requirements may enroll.

Rules & Requirements

Grading Status: Letter grade.

ARMY 201. Leadership and Decision Making. 2 Credits.

This course explores the dimensions of creative and innovative tactical leadership strategies and styles by examining team dynamics and two historical leadership theories that form the basis of the Army leadership framework. Aspects of personal motivation and team building are practiced by planning, executing, and assessing team exercises. Required for cadets.

Rules & Requirements

Grading Status: Letter grade.

ARMY 202. Army Doctrine and Team Development. 2 Credits.

This course examines the challenges of leading teams in the complex operational environment. Highlights dimensions of terrain analysis, patrolling, and operation orders. Further study of the theoretical basis of the Army leadership requirements model explores the dynamics of adaptive leadership in the context of military operations. Required for cadets.

Rules & Requirements

ARMY 203. Army Training Management. 3 Credits.

Students will study, practice, and apply the fundamentals of Army leadership, values, and ethics; personal development; and small unit tactics at the platoon level. At the conclusion of this course, students will be capable of planning, coordinating, navigating, motivating, and leading a squad and platoon in the execution of a mission. Required for cadets.

Rules & Requirements

Grading Status: Letter grade.

ARMY 301. Applied Leadership in Platoon Operations. 3 Credits.

Students will study, practice, and apply the fundamentals of Army leadership, values, and ethics; personal development; and small unit tactics at the platoon level. At the conclusion of this course, students will be capable of planning, coordinating, navigating, motivating, and leading a squad and platoon in the execution of a mission. Required for cadets.

Rules & Requirements

Grading Status: Letter grade.
Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level Courses

ARMY 401. The Army Officer. 3 Credits.
This advanced course places primary emphasis on officer training with MS IV cadets. ARMY 401 and 402 together refine and ultimately complete the cadet-to-commissioned-officer transition. This course focuses on mission command philosophy and ethical leadership. Required for cadets.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, ARMY 301 and 302; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ARMY 402. Company Grade Leadership. 3 Credits.
In this final semester of a four-year developmental leadership experience, cadets are undergoing preparation for the duties and responsibilities of a commissioned officer along with their integration into the Army. Emphasis is on critical knowledge, skills, abilities, and competencies new officers will need to succeed in their first unit of assignment. Required for cadets.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, ARMY 301, 302, and 401; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ARMY 493. Army Leadership Expeditionary Training. 1 Credits.
Provides leadership training in a military environment. Professional development through academics, team building events, physical fitness, marksmanship, and leadership exercises. Course culminates in a simulated expeditionary deployment to a combat zone.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Military Science and Leadership Minor

The military science and leadership minor is for students who wish to augment their college experience with the study and application of military leadership. Military science courses are open to all UNC–Chapel Hill students who meet prerequisites.

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

The minor in military science and leadership is a 15 semester-hour course of study selected from the list below.

1 ARMY 101, ARMY 102, ARMY 201, and ARMY 202 are prerequisite courses to ARMY 301.

Special Opportunities in Military Science Extracurricular Activities

Army ROTC offers an array of extracurricular activities. Students looking for excitement and action can volunteer to compete for the opportunity to attend the basic airborne course, Air Assault, or mountain warfare training. Other opportunities include participation as a member of the Ranger Challenge Team or color guard, travel for culture and language immersion programs, and leadership opportunities in Army units in the United States and around the world.
Scholarships
Four-year scholarships are available for high school seniors. Three-and-a-half, three, and two-and-a-half, and two-year, merit-based scholarships are available to full-time students. Successful candidates will need to meet eligibility requirements and have at least a 2.5 GPA. Scholarships pay full tuition and fees, $600 per semester book allowance, and a monthly stipend between $300 and $500. The North Carolina Army National Guard and the United States Army Reserve also have programs that can pay costs associated with attending the University.

Service Obligations
Upon contracting, cadets incur an obligation to serve in the United States Army; that service can be active or reserve duty. Service obligations range from three to eight years.

Department of Music
Introduction
The Department of Music provides many opportunities to students who wish to study music within a strong liberal arts curriculum. We foster creative endeavor and critical inquiry through courses, ensembles, and lessons on instruments or voice that explore music from a variety of perspectives. The department offers both the bachelor of arts (B.A.) and the bachelor of music (B.Mus.) degrees for students majoring in music, and two minors. The department also offers many courses and performance opportunities to undergraduates majoring in fields other than music.

Admission
Students are admitted to the B.A. or B.Mus. programs through the regular admissions process established by the University. Prospective students intending to major in music are urged to contact the Department of Music for an audition during the year prior to their anticipated enrollment in order to strengthen their application credentials and to compete for scholarships offered by the department, including the prestigious William R. Kenan Jr. Music Scholarship.

Individual and Group Lessons
Instruction for academic credit in keyboard, woodwind, brass, percussion, string instruments, and in voice is available to all University students. All lessons are normally offered each semester and are subject to admission and other requirements being met. Group lessons may also be available on selected instruments and in voice.

Studio assignments are based on instructor availability with preference given to music majors (B.A. and B.Mus.). Fees are charged for lessons based on an annual schedule published by the department. Music lesson fees are to be paid during the registration period; if fees remain unpaid, lessons will be discontinued.

All students wishing to enroll for lessons must first gain the permission of the appropriate area head to register (see the Department of Music’s website (http://music.unc.edu/undergraduate/lessons/) for current information); this will involve an audition. Once permission has been granted, the registration process is handled by the Department of Music’s registrar, who is also responsible for procedures leading to billing and the formal assignment to a teacher.

B.Mus. students whose primary focus is composition (and whether or not choosing an emphasis in composition) will fulfill the Individual Lessons core requirement by taking MUSC 166, three semesters of MUSC 266, and two hours of MUSC 100–MUSC 107 or MUSC 200–MUSC 207.

MUSC 100–MUSC 107 may be repeated for credit to a maximum of eight hours; MUSC 200–MUSC 207 may be repeated for credit to a maximum of 16 hours; MUSC 266 may be repeated for credit to a maximum of 18 hours; MUSC 300–MUSC 306 may be repeated for credit for a degree to a maximum of six hours. In all these cases, repetition is subject to a grade of C or better in the immediately prior enrollment in the course.

Ensembles
A variety of department ensembles under MUSC 211–MUSC 214 are open to all students by audition. Each carries one credit hour per semester and may be repeated for credit.

B.A. candidates majoring in music must accrue four credit hours in ensembles drawn from MUSC 211, MUSC 212, MUSC 213 (https://catalog.unc.edu/search/?P=MUSC%20213), and/or MUSC 214 (https://catalog.unc.edu/search/?P=MUSC%20214). B.Mus. candidates must accrue eight credit hours chosen from MUSC 211 and/or MUSC 212. MUSC 214 (https://catalog.unc.edu/search/?P=MUSC%20214) may also be selected pursuant to area needs and preferences, or by approval of the director of undergraduate studies.

B.A. candidates majoring in music may count no more than three additional hours from MUSC 211–MUSC 214 towards their degree for music. They may count as credit hours for graduation, subject to the overall limit on music hours. Candidates for the B.Mus. may count no more than six additional hours from MUSC 211–MUSC 214 towards their degree for music. They may count as credit hours for graduation, subject to the overall limit on music hours.

B.A. students whose primary instrument is piano will normally fulfill the ensemble requirement by taking one semester of large ensemble (MUSC 211) in addition to the three-semester piano ensemble sequence (Piano Ensemble I: Piano Duet; Piano Ensemble II: Vocal Accompanying; Piano Ensemble II: Instrumental Accompanying).

B.Mus. students whose primary instrument is piano will normally take at least one semester of large ensemble (MUSC 211) and the three-semester piano ensemble sequence (Piano Ensemble I: Piano Duet; Piano Ensemble II: Vocal Accompanying; Piano Ensemble II: Instrumental Accompanying). The rest of the ensemble requirement will be fulfilled by way of additional semesters of MUSC 211 (which may include Collaborative Piano) or MUSC 214.

Students should check with the appropriate ensemble director for more information concerning requirements and procedures for the auditions, which are typically held during the first week of each semester. Ensemble directors are listed on the department’s website (http://music.unc.edu/Undergraduate/ensembles/). The department offers the following ensembles, most of which meet the ensemble or elective requirements for the music major:

- Baroque Ensemble/Viol Consort
- Bluegrass Band
- Brass Chamber Music Ensembles
- Carolina Choir
- Chamber Singers
- Charanga Carolina
- Gamelan
- Glee Club (soprano/alto voices)
- Glee Club (tenor/bass voices)

Advising

All majors and minors have an academic advisor assigned in ConnectCarolina. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their academic advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. In addition, the department's advisory team and the director of undergraduate studies work with current and prospective music majors individually by appointment (see contact information above). Further information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be obtained from the department's website (http://music.unc.edu/).

Professors Emeriti

The Department of Music provides the opportunity for any student to engage broadly with music. An ability to read standard musical notation is not normally required to complete the following courses: MUSC 51 – MUSC 65, MUSC 89, MUSC 121, MUSC 141 – MUSC 148, MUSC 155 – MUSC 158, MUSC 164, MUSC 188, MUSC 240, MUSC 248, MUSC 280 – MUSC 294. Numerous courses in music also fulfill Approaches and Connections requirements; see General Education requirements or ConnectCarolina for more information.

MUSC—Music

Undergraduate-level Courses

MUSC 51. First-Year Seminar: The Interplay of Music and Physics. 3 Credits.

How sound is produced in instruments, and how those sounds are used in music making. Wave motion, resonance, sound perception, scales, harmony, and music theory. Collaborative laboratory exercises to investigate the acoustics of string, woodwind, and brass instruments as well as study of the physics of keyboard and percussion instruments. Students will make instruments from found objects and perform compositions on them, and can pursue their areas of special interest in a research paper.

Associate Chair for Academic Studies
The Department of Music provides many opportunities to students who wish to study music within a strong liberal arts curriculum. We foster creative endeavor and critical inquiry through courses, ensembles, and lessons on instruments or voice that explore music from a variety of perspectives.

The B.A. requires at least 35 credit hours in music and at least 75 outside the major, with 120 total credit hours in the degree. Given the ample opportunity to explore the breadth of the University's course offerings, many B.A. candidates seek minors in other fields or take on a second major.

Student Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of the music program (B.A.), students should be able to:

- Acquire sufficient technical capabilities to be able to perform expressively — on an instrument or the voice — appropriate repertoire for the area in which they are studying
- Show proficiency in the materials and language of music for purposes of analysis and evaluation
- Be aware of the connection between general culture and history and the musical works that come from composers of particular times and places
- Demonstrate the ability to perform successfully in individual, small-, and large-ensemble performance and have a working familiarity with repertoire for solo or ensemble performance

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements, students must

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Ensemble performance (four hours) chosen from:

- MUSC 211 Ensemble I
- MUSC 212 Ensemble II
- MUSC 213 Ensemble III
- MUSC 214 Chamber Music

Music electives (nine hours) chosen from MUSC courses: students may count no more than three additional hours from MUSC 211 - MUSC 214 towards their music major. They may count as credit hours for graduation, subject to the overall limit on music hours.

Total Hours: 35-39

H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

F FY-Launch class sections may be available. A FY-Launch section fulfills the same requirements as a standard section of that course, but also fulfills the FY-SEMINAR/FY-LAUNCH First-Year Foundations requirement. Students can search for FY-Launch sections in ConnectCarolina using the FY-LAUNCH attribute.

1 30-minute lessons count for .5 credit hours. Students choosing to take 30-minute lessons to satisfy this requirement must take lessons for four semesters to accumulate the requirement's 2-credit hour minimum.

2 Pursuant to area needs and preferences, or by DUS approval.

Music (MUSC) course descriptions (p. 863).

Students may receive no more than 45 credit hours in music and must complete a minimum of 75 hours of coursework outside music, including all General Education requirements.

Optional Pathways within the Bachelor of Arts in Music Degree

Students working toward the bachelor of arts degree have the option to pursue one or more pathways in their musical studies. These pathways identify recommended course selections for students who have interests in one or more areas. We suggest nine credit hours of study; students are free to take additional credits. Some of these courses also satisfy core requirements. Please note that enrollment in individual lessons (MUSC 100–MUSC 107 and MUSC 200–MUSC 207) requires an audition.

Special Opportunities

Honors in Music

Students interested in becoming candidates for a degree with honors in music should read the regulations governing departmental honors in the College of Arts and Sciences, found in the Degree Requirements (p. 1275) section of this catalog, and should consult the honors advisor of the department toward the end of the sophomore year.

Study Abroad

The department actively encourages students to participate in study abroad programs to pursue their musical and other interests in an international context. The department maintains a strong relationship with institutions in Hong Kong, London, and Vienna, and can facilitate connections with programs around the world.

Music Major, Bachelor of Music (B.Mus.)

The Bachelor of Music program is designed for those seeking a degree that offers a more extensive component in performance, history, ethnomusicology, theory, composition, or music education. Students must complete 64 credit hours in music and at least 54 credit hours outside the major.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the music program (B.Mus.), students should be able to:

• Acquire sufficient technical capabilities to be able to perform expressively — on an instrument or the voice — appropriate repertoire for the area in which they are studying
• Show proficiency in the materials and language of music for purposes of analysis and evaluation
• Be aware of the connection between general culture and history and the musical works that come from composers of particular times and places
• Demonstrate the ability to perform successfully in individual, small-, and large-ensemble performance and have a working familiarity with repertoire for solo or ensemble performance

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

• earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
• complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
• take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
• earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

$^H$ Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

$^F$ FY-Launch class sections may be available. A FY-Launch section fulfills the same requirements as a standard section of that course, but also fulfills the FY-SEMINAR/FY-LAUNCH First-Year Foundations requirement. Students can search for FY-Launch sections in ConnectCarolina using the FY-LAUNCH attribute.

1 Students are strongly encouraged to complete their FY-LAUNCH requirement with MUSC 120. If not, students will need to take another FY-SEMINAR or FY-LAUNCH course to fulfill the IDEAs in Action requirement.

Special Opportunities

Honors in Music

Students interested in becoming candidates for a degree with honors in music should read the regulations governing departmental honors in the College of Arts and Sciences, found in the Degree Requirements (p. 1275) section of this catalog, and should consult the honors advisor of the department toward the end of the sophomore year.

Study Abroad

The department actively encourages students to participate in study abroad programs to pursue their musical and other interests in an international context. The department maintains a strong relationship with institutions in Hong Kong, London, and Vienna, and can facilitate connections with programs around the world.

Music Minor

The Department of Music provides many opportunities to students who wish to study music within a strong liberal arts curriculum. We foster creative endeavor and critical inquiry through courses, ensembles, and lessons on instruments or voice that explore music from a variety of perspectives.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Musical Theatre Performance Minor

The minor in musical theatre performance, a joint program in the Department of Music and the Department of Dramatic Art, provides students with opportunities to improve their abilities in musical theatre performance. The minor has three components including acting literacy, music literacy, and movement literacy.

Students will have ample opportunity for performance experience through the department’s and student group productions.

The minor has three tracks, depending on the student’s major status:

1. Music track (taken by students pursuing the dramatic art major or music majors in instruments other than voice)
2. Dramatic track (taken by students pursuing the music major)
3. Hybrid track (taken by students pursuing a double major in dramatic art and music, or by students majoring in other disciplines)

Departmental advising is available for students with questions about course and program expectation and opportunities, both on campus and in the professional world.

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor “core” requirements at UNC-Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

The minor requires 15 credit hours. Students can pursue one of three tracks.

Department of Naval Science

Introduction
The purpose of the NROTC is to provide a source of highly qualified officers to serve on United States Navy ships, submarines, and aircraft, or in the United States Marine Corps. Students (midshipmen) who obtain a baccalaureate degree and who satisfy academic and physical requirements are commissioned as either ensigns in the Navy or second lieutenants in the Marine Corps. Students may participate in NROTC in one of two programs: the NROTC Scholarship Program or the NROTC College Program. NROTC scholarships provide tuition, books, fees, uniforms, and a monthly allowance of $250 to $400. Students participating in the college program receive their NROTC books, uniforms, and a monthly allowance of $350 to $400 during their junior and senior years. A major advantage of the college program is the excellent opportunity it offers to win two- and three-year NROTC scholarships.

Regardless of enrollment category, many features are common to both programs:

- Naval science courses carry academic credit.
- All students are welcome to join the program and “test the waters” without incurring a military obligation.
- All midshipmen who successfully complete the program and university graduation requirements will receive a commission as an officer in the United States Navy or Marine Corps.
- Applicants are considered without regard to race, sex, creed, sexual orientation, or religion.

Midshipman Life
We are dedicated to ensuring that each midshipman leads a full and productive University life. Midshipmen are encouraged to participate on University athletic teams as well as in campus politics, fraternities, sororities, intramurals, and other organizations. Additionally, midshipmen are provided an outstanding opportunity to examine and experience many alternative career paths, social events, and experiences through field trips, summer cruises, and the midshipman military organization.

NROTC Program
Courses offered by the Department of Naval Science, in conjunction with courses offered in the Curriculum in Peace, War, and Defense, are designed to equip an individual with the necessary tools to succeed as an officer in the naval service.

Information about applications and admissions in the UNC–Chapel Hill Naval ROTC may be obtained by visiting the Naval Armory on campus; by addressing an inquiry to Professor of Naval Science, CB# 3325, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Chapel Hill, NC 27599-3325; by calling (919) 962-1198; or by email at reyesm@email.unc.edu.

Advising
All students pursuing minors have an academic advisor from the Academic Advising Program (https://advising.unc.edu/). Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor. Departmental academic advising appointments can be made through their respective NROTC instructor or by contacting the department's director of undergraduate studies, Lieutenant Michael Reyes (see contact information above). Further information on courses and careers may be obtained from the department’s website (https://nrotc.sites.unc.edu/).

NAVS—Naval Science

Undergraduate-level Courses

NAVS 101. Introduction to Naval Science. 1 Credits.
Fundamental orientation to the Naval service emphasizing the mission, organization, regulations, customs and traditions, broad warfare components, and major challenges facing Navy/Marine Corps officers.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NAVS 190. Seminar in Topics of Naval Science. 1-12 Credits.
Permission of the department. Seminar of topics regarding the United States Navy.

Rules & Requirements
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

Grading Status: Letter grade.

NAVS 196. Independent Study in Naval Science. 1-12 Credits.
Permission of the department. Readings and research by an individual student on a subject related to the United States Navy.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NAVS 201. Naval Leadership and Management. 3 Credits.
A study of organizational principles, management theory, and leadership styles, with emphasis on applications in the Navy and Department of Defense.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-KNOWING or FC-POWER.
NAVS 202. Navigation. 3 Credits.
A comprehensive study of the theory, principles, and procedures of ship navigation, movements, and employment. Course includes spherical trigonometry, mathematics, analysis, study and practices of navigation, sextants, navigation publications, and report logs. Covers rules of the road, lights, signals, navigational aids, and electronic and mechanical positioning devices.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Corequisite, NAVS 202L.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NAVS 202L. Navigation Laboratory. 1 Credits.
Practical application of the theories and principles of navigation as presented in the lecture series.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Corequisite, NAVS 202.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NAVS 211. Marine Option Naval Science Laboratory. 0 Credits.
One laboratory hour per week designed to introduce topics and activities relevant to the professional development of the prospective Marine Corps officer. Required for Marine Option 2/C.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NAVS 301. Naval Ships Engineering Systems. 3 Credits.
An introductory course and survey of ship design, characteristics, propulsion (including nuclear power) and control systems, and the principles of ship stability.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-QUANT.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NAVS 302. Naval Weapons Systems. 3 Credits.
A descriptive survey course in engineering aspects of ships’ weapons guidance, control, and propulsion systems and characteristics of ships’ weapons systems.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-QUANT.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NAVS 311. Evolution of Warfare. 3 Credits.
Survey of the evolution of warfare through the study of selected campaigns and classic battles, with special emphasis on the principles of war, the military impact of leadership, and the evolution of tactics and weaponry.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-GLOBAL or FC-PAST.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level Courses

NAVS 401. Naval Operations. 4 Credits.
A study of the maneuvering of ships in formation, and the operations in which naval vessels engage daily.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-GLOBAL.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NAVS 402. Naval Leadership and Ethics. 3 Credits.
Capstone leadership course in NROTC curriculum, emphasizing leadership skills and their ethical implications for the competent commissioned officer in areas of human resources and material management.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-KNOWING or FC-VALUES.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PH.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NAVS 411. Amphibious Warfare. 3 Credits.
A survey of the projection of sea power ashore, with special emphasis on the evolution of amphibious warfare in the 20th century, through the study of historical amphibious landings and campaigns.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-CREATE or FC-POWER.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NAVS 500. Naval Science Laboratory. 0 Credits.
Required of all NROTC students. Meets once a week to provide supplemental military training, including close order drill, physical fitness, inspections, guest lectures, and leadership training.

Rules & Requirements
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 0 total credits. 8 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NAVS 501. Operational Leadership Enhancement Course. 1 Credits.
Provides leadership training in a military environment. Professional development is achieved through academics, physical fitness, marksmanship, and leadership experiences. Course reviews leadership lessons in an at-sea or training environment. Restricted to ROTC members who participate in summer cruise, training, or OCS.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Naval Science Minor

The minor in naval science equips graduates with hands-on experience from all facets of the Navy and Marine Corps team. Together, alongside NROTC midshipmen, students will understand the core principles of each service, master nautical skills in navigation, weapons, and engineering, and build leadership and followership skills. The minor in naval science is open to all UNC–Chapel Hill undergraduate students.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Whether you are a Navy Scholarship, Marine Corps Scholarship, College Programmer, or are pursuing a naval science minor, there is a plan for your success. Below are sample plans of study for students. All elective courses outside of the Department of Naval Science are ROTC scholarship requirements and do not count toward a naval science minor.

Department of Nutrition

Introduction

The Department of Nutrition is one of the top-ranked nutrition departments in the country. The curriculum offers a wide range of courses on the nutritional, epidemiological, intervention, and policy aspects of human diseases.

Advising

All majors have a primary academic advisor in the department. Undergraduate students are encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. Advisors, the program director, and the Office of Student Affairs staff work with current and prospective majors by appointment (see the "Contacts" tab at the top of this page). Departmental academic advising is particularly important for those majors who are considering going on to graduate school. Further information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be obtained from the department’s website (https://sph.unc.edu/nutr/unc-nutrition/).

NUTR 240. Introduction to Human Nutrition. 3 Credits.
Relationships of human nutrition to health and disease. Integration of biology, chemistry, and social sciences as related to human function. Nutrient composition of foods and safety of the food supply.

Rules & Requirements

Requisites: Prerequisites, BIOL 101/101L and CHEM 102/102L.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NUTR 245. Sustainable Local Food Systems: Intersection of Local Foods and Public Health. 3 Credits.
Examines the intersection of local foods and public health with respect to nutrition and environmental, economic, and community issues. Students explore impacts and potential solutions of the increasingly industrialized and centralized food system, while assisting community partners to increase opportunities for farmers, local food marketers, distributors, and entrepreneurs.

Rules & Requirements

Grading Status: Letter grade.
NUTR 250. Global Sustainable Food Systems. 3 Credits.
This course will provide an overview of global food systems drivers, elements, and activities; key players; key problems, and potential solutions. Students will learn about challenges facing food systems across the globe, and learn to critically evaluate the design, measurement, and impact of programs, policies, and interventions addressing these challenges. Students will also learn about methods to assess food systems activities and impacts.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NUTR 295. Undergraduate Research Experience in Nutrition. 3 Credits.
Permission of the instructor. For undergraduates enrolled in the department's baccalaureate degree program. Directed readings or laboratory study on a selected topic. May be taken more than once for credit.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level

NUTR 400. Introduction to Nutritional Biochemistry. 3 Credits.
Function of the human body focusing on chemical properties, function, and metabolism of nutrients. Biochemistry of nutrients with a limited focus on medical aspects of nutrient metabolism. For advanced undergraduates and graduate students needing to enhance background prior to NUTR 600.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, BIOL 101, CHEM 101 and 102, and NUTR 240; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NUTR 405. Fundamentals of Food and Nutrition Policy in Public Health. 3 Credits.
This course focuses on food and nutrition policy on a federal, state, and local level. Topics covered include policy formation, interest/consumer advocacy groups, key legislation, how research informs policy, equity and diversity, global food policy issues, sustainability and health, advocacy, and current public health nutrition policy hot topics and examples.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, BIOL 101, CHEM 101 and 102, and NUTR 240; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NUTR 470. Foundations of Nutrition Interventions. 3 Credits.
This course is designed to introduce students to clinical trials in nutrition, including experimental designs, nutrition intervention methods, and skills necessary to critically analyze, describe, and evaluate feeding and behavioral nutrition interventions. The course covers concepts, skills and methods related to nutrition interventions, with an emphasis on theory-based interventions at the individual, community, or environmental levels to improve health and nutrition outcomes.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NUTR 600. Human Metabolism: Macronutrients. 3 Credits.
Cell biochemistry and physiology emphasizing integration of proteins, carbohydrates, and lipids in whole-body metabolism; regulation of energy expenditure, food intake, metabolic adaptations, and gene expression; and macronutrient-related diseases (atherosclerosis, obesity).

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, NUTR 400; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NUTR 611. Food And Your Life Stages. 3 Credits.
This course covers nutrition during the life cycle. Units include women during preconception, pregnancy, and lactation; infancy; childhood; adolescence; and older adults (65+). Nutrient and energy needs, assessment of nutritional status, and cultural and socioeconomic barriers are discussed for each phase.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, NUTR 240.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NUTR 620. Human Metabolism: Micronutrients. 3 Credits.
Cell biochemistry and physiology emphasizing metabolism of vitamins and minerals including antioxidant protection, immune function, nutrient control of gene expression, and disease states induced by deficiencies (e.g., iron-deficient anemia).

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, NUTR 400 and 600; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NUTR 630. Nutrition Communication and Culture. 3 Credits.
Course teaches the future nutrition professional the art and science of communicating with individuals, groups, and the public. Students will enhance cultural awareness and frame nutrition messages for mass media including social media.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, NUTR 400 and 600; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NUTR 646. Mouse Models of Human Disease. 1 Credits.
This course will focus on the laboratory mouse as a model organism to learn fundamental genetic concepts and understand how state-of-the-art experimental approaches are being used to elucidate gene function and the genetic architecture of biological traits.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Co-requisite, NUTR 660.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Nutrition Major, B.S.P.H.

The bachelor of science in public health (B.S.P.H.) program in nutrition introduces the undergraduate student to the science of nutrition in health and disease and to social and behavioral aspects of eating in the context of public and individual health. The Department of Nutrition is one of the top-ranked nutrition departments in the country. The curriculum offers a range of courses on nutritional, epidemiological, intervention, and policy aspects of human diseases.

Students may apply to one of two tracks of study:

- Nutrition Science and Research Track – An excellent preparation for medical and other health professional graduate programs, this track provides students in-depth exposure to the science of nutrition and metabolism while incorporating required research under the supervision of a faculty member.

- Nutrition Health and Society Track – Recognizing the truly interdisciplinary nature of nutrition, this track provides students an opportunity to study nutrition through the lenses of policy, sustainable food systems, and interventions. Students are required to take 18 credits (taken during the junior and senior years of the program) in a field of their choice that complement the nutrition major. The 18 credits could also be used to obtain a second major or minor in the field of their choice.*

Students who are admitted to the B.S.P.H. program in nutrition can apply for a B.S.P.H./M.S. dual degree, which can be completed within one year after completion of the B.S.P.H. program.

*Classes taken prior to admission to the nutrition major can contribute towards the second minor or major; however, 18 elective credits must still be taken during the junior and senior year of the nutrition major.

Admission (p. 896) to the program is required.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the nutrition program, students should be able to:

- Describe the nutritional needs of individuals across the life cycle; the psychological, behavioral and social factors that affect food consumption and nutritional status, and the programs and services available to help individuals meet their nutritional needs.

- Communicate public health information, in both oral and written forms and through a variety of media, to diverse audiences.

- Locate, use, evaluate, and synthesize public health information.

- Describe health inequalities, identify their root causes at multiple levels of the social ecological framework, and discuss approaches to advancing health equity.

Students who complete the Nutrition Science and Research Track should be able to:

- Demonstrate knowledge of nutritional biochemistry, the metabolism and function of nutrients, and the nutritional components of diseases through advanced courses in nutrition.

- Apply the scientific method in the areas of nutritional biochemistry, nutritional epidemiology, and intervention and policy.

Students who complete the Nutrition Health and Society Track should be able to:
• Understand the role of food and nutrition as an essential element of life — from cell, to an individual, to society.
• Demonstrate effective communication of nutrition information within social, multi-ethnic, and environmental dimensions.
• Demonstrate knowledge of the roles of the individual, society, government, and business in providing accessible, healthy food supplies, and in promoting healthy eating.

Admission

The Gillings School of Global Public Health offers four undergraduate majors: biostatistics, environmental health sciences, health policy and management, and nutrition. The undergraduate degree offered is the bachelor of science in public health (B.S.P.H.). Enrollment in the B.S.P.H. degree programs is limited, and students must apply for admission. Students typically apply in January of their sophomore year for admission beginning in the fall of their junior year.

For current UNC-Chapel Hill students, the initial step of B.S.P.H. application is available in ConnectCarolina under the “Apply for Majors Change” tab. For additional information on application deadlines and how to apply, please visit the Public Health Undergraduate Majors (https://sph.unc.edu/resource-pages/undergraduate-programs/) website.

Transfer students interested in any of the B.S.P.H. degree programs must apply through the Office of Undergraduate Admissions (https://admissions.unc.edu/apply/types-of-applications/transfer/) using the Transfer Common application.

For high school seniors, our four majors participate in the Assured Enrollment program through Undergraduate Admissions. Assured enrollment programs guarantee students a spot in an accelerated undergraduate/graduate program. For additional information, please visit Undergraduate Admissions: Special Opportunities (https://admissions.unc.edu/explore/enrich-your-education/excelcarolina/).

Students are subject to the requirements in place when they are admitted to the Gillings School of Global Public Health; consequently, the requirements described in this catalog particularly apply to students admitted to Gillings during the 2024–2025 academic year.

Requirements

The nutrition program provides two options:

• Nutrition Major, B.S.P.H.—Nutrition, Health, and Society (p. 896)
• Nutrition Major, B.S.P.H.—Nutrition Science and Research (p. 897)

Nutrition Major, B.S.P.H.—Nutrition, Health, and Society

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must

• attain a final cumulative GPA of at least 2.0
• complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC-Chapel Hill courses
• earn a C (not C-) or better in all prerequisite, core, and additional courses required for the major
• take at least half of their major course requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC-Chapel Hill

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Nutrition Major, B.S.P.H–Nutrition Science and Research

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must

- Must receive a C (not C-) or better.
- All other courses for the nutrition major, including science required courses, must receive a C (not C-) or better.
- Possible options include coursework from minors in anthropology; coaching education; cognitive science; composition, rhetoric, and digital literacy; education; exercise and sport science; food studies; global american studies; health and society; medicine, literature and culture; neuroscience; social and economic justice. Other options may be approved by the Director of Undergraduate Studies.
- May be taken multiple times during the program for credit but must be done in the final semester as a capstone experience. May be substituted with NUTR 691H or NUTR 692H for students completing a Senior Honors Thesis.
- Students who pursue the food studies minor along with the NUTR major will use the core requirement NUTR 175 towards both degrees. Students should be aware that at least 51% of credits of the degree must belong only to the food studies minor. Generally, in a 5-class minor, 1 or 2 classes can overlap with the major, depending on how many credits are in each course.
- Any additional 18 hours (not including gen ed, core courses for the major, and additional requirements for the major).

B.S.P.H.–M.S Dual Degree Nutrition Handbook

Eligibility and an appropriate plan of study. For more information see the undergraduate studies in nutrition during their junior year to discuss eligibility and an appropriate plan of study. For more information see the B.S.P.H.–M.S Dual Degree Nutrition Handbook.

Strongly advised to consult their research advisor and the director of Nutrition B.S.P.H. students interested in the dual-degree program are uncertain about whether they wish to enter the department’s doctoral program, the B.S.P.H.–M.S program offers an excellent opportunity to perform research for at least one semester (final semester as capstone), either as part of the honors thesis or as independent research.

Dual Bachelor’s–Master’s Degree Program

The Department of Nutrition offers a B.S.P.H.–M.S. dual degree for students who wish to increase their knowledge in nutrition and acquire additional skills in nutrition-based research. This dual degree will be useful for students interested in becoming researchers in industry, program officers for nongovernmental and governmental organizations, project or laboratory managers in academic or nonacademic settings, international workers in nutrition-related programs, and graduate students pursuing a doctoral degree or eventually attending medical or another professional school. B.S.P.H.–M.S students will perform advanced research in nutrition and take graduate nutrition and other courses that will provide the information and experience needed to help them choose their career path. Additionally, for those students who are uncertain about whether they wish to enter the department’s doctoral program, the B.S.P.H.–M.S program offers an excellent opportunity to determine whether a more advanced degree would be appropriate. The B.S.P.H.–M.S degree is not specific to any of the department divisions; rather, it builds on the work (both classroom-based and research) begun in the B.S.P.H. program. In summary, the B.S.P.H.–M.S program in nutrition allows students the opportunity to explore nutritional research at an advanced level. The program can be completed in one calendar year (summer, fall, spring) following completion of the B.S.P.H. in nutrition program.

Nutrition B.S.P.H. students interested in the dual-degree program are strongly advised to consult their research advisor and the director of undergraduate studies in nutrition during their junior year to discuss eligibility and an appropriate plan of study. For more information see the B.S.P.H.–M.S Dual Degree Nutrition Handbook.

Special Opportunities in Nutrition

Honors in Nutrition

The Department of Nutrition provides an opportunity for honors study for qualified students. To be eligible for admission to the honors program students must have, at a minimum, a cumulative grade point average of 3.3 at the beginning of their senior year and must maintain the grade point average throughout the major if they intend to pursue honors. Students register for NUTR 295 (three credits) in the fall and/or spring semester of the first year and then enroll in NUTR 691H and NUTR 692H (six credits) in their final two semesters while completing an honors thesis in nutrition.

Departmental Involvement

The Nutrition Coalition (http://studentlife.unc.edu/organization/nutritioncoalition/) meets several times each semester to address student concerns and to plan service and social activities. Open to the entire University, the coalition strives to broaden the scope of understanding of the various fields and environments in which nutrition is making advances.

Experiential Education

Two courses in nutrition include experiential components (NUTR 245 and NUTR 295). However, NUTR 295, available only to nutrition majors, fulfills the General Education experiential education requirement.

Undergraduate Awards

Nutrition honors research students may apply for the honors undergraduate research awards. The application is available on the Honors Carolina (http://honorscarolina.unc.edu) Web site. Students also may be considered for any of the following awards: Chancellor’s Awards for Excellence in Student Activities and Leadership, The Order of the Golden Fleece, The Order of the Grill-Valkyries, The Order of the Old Well, Frank Porter Graham Honor Society, Phi Beta Kappa, and the Joseph Edozien Outstanding Undergraduate Award in Nutrition.

Undergraduate Research

To enhance students’ general education and help them decide whether a research career is something they might pursue, all B.S.P.H. nutrition students are required to complete nutrition research for at least one semester (final semester as capstone), either as part of the honors thesis or as independent research.

General Student Inquiries
Department of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine

Introduction
Pathology is the study of disease, its causes, development, and consequences. It is concerned with basic mechanisms of disease processes (pathobiology) and their structural/functional manifestations. Pathology combines the tools and the basic knowledge from many disciplines, such as molecular biology, cell biology, biochemistry, genetics, immunology, anatomy, and clinical sciences, to clarify the cause (etiopathogenesis), natural course (pathogenesis), and diagnosis of disease. The department offers several pathology courses appropriate for graduate study.

In addition to formal courses, faculty members in the Department of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine of the UNC School of Medicine maintain active research programs and engage in training predoctoral and postdoctoral fellows in a range of research endeavors. Undergraduate students interested in participating in a hands-on research experience should contact the director of graduate studies in pathology or the specific research lab they are interested in for more information. Contact information is available on the department's website (https://www.med.unc.edu/pathology/).

Graduate Programs
- Ph.D. in Pathology (https://catalog.unc.edu/graduate/schools-departments/pathology-laboratory-medicine/)

PATH—Pathology

Undergraduate-level Courses
PATH 128. Biology of Human Disease. 3 Credits.
Open to all undergraduates. An overview of basic human molecular and cellular biology in the setting of common human diseases. The course emphasizes how an understanding of disease mechanisms provides the knowledge base for informed use of modern health care. Does not count as a course in the major.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level Courses
PATH 426. Biology of Blood Diseases. 3 Credits.
An introduction to the biology and pathophysiology of blood and the molecular mechanisms of some human diseases: anemias; leukemias; hemorrhagic, thrombotic, and vascular disorders; and HIV disease/AIDS. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, BIOL 205; or BIOL 103 and BIOL 104 and BIOL 240; or permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: BIOL 426.

PATH 462. Experimental Pathology. 1-9 Credits.
Hands-on research experience in a predetermined instructor’s laboratory. Students learn and apply specific techniques and participate in investigations of molecular mechanisms responsible for disease processes (pathobiology). Contact the director of graduate studies in pathology for information. May be repeated.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PATH 464. Light Microscopy. 3 Credits.
Permission of the instructor. Course focuses on practical fundamentals of light microscopy including optics, contrast mechanisms, fluorescence, laser scanning confocal microscopy, photography, and digital imaging.

Curriculum in Peace, War, and Defense

Introduction
Peace and war are among the oldest dreams and most difficult challenges of human experience. The curriculum brings together faculty and courses from many disciplines to provide undergraduates with a range of approaches to the fundamental issues of human conflict and national and global security and defense. The curriculum prepares majors for graduate work in several of the humanities and social sciences, for a variety of professional schools, and for a range of employment. Graduates have found employment with federal agencies, state and local governments, banks, and other businesses. Others have attended graduate and professional schools in government, history, international relations, and law. The strength of the curriculum is its broad interdisciplinary perspective combined with its depth of focus on topics that span the range of human experience across time and national boundaries, from science and technology to ethics and public policy. In addition to coursework, the curriculum sponsors guest speakers and field trips, and provides majors with help and advice on internships and career planning.

Advising
All majors have a primary academic advisor from the Academic Advising Program (https://advising.unc.edu/). Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. The curriculum’s student services manager and the chair work with current and prospective majors by appointment (see contacts tab above). Further information on courses, internships, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be obtained from the curriculum's website (https://pwad.unc.edu/).

Peace, War, and Defense Major, B.A.

Peace and war are among the oldest dreams and most difficult challenges of human experience. The curriculum brings together faculty and courses from many disciplines to provide undergraduates with a range of approaches to the fundamental issues of human conflict and national and global security and defense.

Student Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of the peace, war, and defense program, students should be able to:

- Express themselves effectively in written and oral communication
- Use appropriate research methodology
- Demonstrate knowledge of major concepts, theoretical perspectives, and history of peace and war
- Think critically and analytically in approaches to the concepts, perspectives, and history of peace and war
- Demonstrate knowledge of the interrelationships between the various disciplinary approaches to the study of peace and war

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements, students must:

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Supervisors, setting out expectations and course requirements.

Students must sign an internship contract with their agency and faculty at least eight hours per week and at least 100 hours per semester. Credit. All internships require prior approval, and all must consist of agency and that tasks will be of a nature to justify awarding academic credit. All internships are limited to three hours required in any professional setting, the expectation is that a majority of the intern's work will be directed toward the substantive mission of the Special Operations Command, and many more. Students are limited to one internship for credit, and all internships are limited to three hours academic credit while obtaining practical work experience in agencies and organizations clearly related to national and international security.

In recent years students have served in these and other agencies: The Central Intelligence Agency, Durham Police Department, Office of Naval Intelligence, Defense Intelligence Agency, Carolina for Kibera, Center for Strategic and International Studies, Peace Action, United States Army Special Operations Command, and many more. Students are limited to one internship for credit, and all internships are limited to three hours of academic credit. Although some routine administrative tasks are required in any professional setting, the expectation is that a majority of the intern's work will be directed toward the substantive mission of the agency and that tasks will be of a nature to justify awarding academic credit. All internships require prior approval, and all must consist of at least eight hours per week and at least 100 hours per semester. Students must sign an internship contract with their agency and faculty supervisors, setting out expectations and course requirements. Interns are required to keep a daily work journal. Once approved for an internship, students enroll in PWAD 393, which is offered on a Pass/Fail basis only and therefore does not count toward the nine courses required for the major. Students wishing credit towards the major derived from their internship work should pursue an independent study with a faculty supervisor either while taking the internship or in the next semester. That independent study should produce a major written product, would be graded normally, and receives credit in the major.

Study Abroad

The curriculum encourages all undergraduates to study abroad either for a summer, a semester, or an entire year. Students should consult the study abroad (http://studyabroad.unc.edu) website and visit the Study Abroad Office as early as possible in their course of study to meet with a study abroad advisor. A number of foreign programs contain courses that qualify for major credit. Of particular usefulness is study at the King's College, University of London War Studies Department, the closest analogue to the Curriculum in Peace, War, and Defense in the English-speaking world and a program with a renowned faculty. Students with at least a 3.3 grade point average are eligible to apply to King's College. While supervision arrangements need to be negotiated and agreed with relevant faculty members, students writing honors theses in their senior year may also apply to spend the year at King's College.

Undergraduate Research

Students who qualify are encouraged to experience original research by writing a senior honors thesis described in the honors section above.

Conflict Management Minor

The study of conflict management is the study of human behavior during disputes, including the causes of conflict, techniques for dealing with disputes, and strategies for achieving a resolution that satisfy one's interests and preserve relationships. People often assume that these skills are acquired during a lifetime by simply experiencing conflict, but that is not necessarily the case. We can spend our entire lives moving from one conflict to another — at home, at school, or at work — simply repeating the same ineffective responses without realizing opportunities for, and methods to achieve, successful outcomes.
The minor in conflict management aspires to provide students with a theoretical framework, habits of mind and tangible skills, in areas such as negotiation, mediation, voice training, language, ethics, psychology, and neuroscience, among other fields. In addition, the minor aims to provide a better understanding of the world we live in and the conflicts that surround us by studying domestic and international conflicts, both past and current. The minor’s goal is to allow students to become better conflict managers and thus better citizens of the world.

The minor is open to all undergraduate students.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Students who choose two of these courses (for a total of 3 hours) will need to select two additional courses (for a total of 9 hours) to fulfill this requirement. Conflict management minors will not receive priority registration for these courses. Minors will need to apply for these courses by completing the "Non-major Request Form.”

2  PSYC 101 is a required prerequisite. Some PSYC courses may have additional prerequisites (see course description).

3  Students may select only one PHIL course from the list.

4  Registration priority will be given to education majors and minors. Conflict management students can register after School of Education majors and minors.

5  Registration priority will be given to exercise and sport science majors and minors. Conflict management students can register after exercise and sport science majors and minors.

See the program page here (p. 915) for special opportunities.

Department of Philosophy

Introduction

The principal goal of the study of philosophy is to enable students to think more clearly, deeply, and appreciatively about themselves and their world. Study of philosophy enhances analytical, critical, and interpretive capacities that are applicable to any subject matter in almost any context. It provides many opportunities for expressing oneself, for reflecting on questions that human beings have pondered for millennia, for exchanging reasoned beliefs and engaging in focused debate, and for learning how to come to terms with problems for which there are no easy answers. A good philosophical education also helps to prepare students for responsible and intelligent participation in political and community affairs.

The most important outcome of philosophical study is the ability to engage in thinking that is at once disciplined and imaginatively creative. While such thinking lies at the heart of the philosophical enterprise, it is also needed for success in any complex intellectual or practical endeavor. Philosophy's attention to critical thought, rigorous argument, and articulate expression makes the philosophical curriculum absolutely central to a liberal education and valuable as a basis for further training in a variety of pursuits.

Examples of philosophical questions are:

- How should we understand truth, existence, validity, fact, value, and free will?
- What are the principles or presuppositions of science, language, political systems, and religious and moral views?
- What is the nature of a person, of space and time, of a work of art?
- What is the wisdom of the past on these enduring questions? How do Western traditions differ from Eastern ones on these questions? And how do these historical approaches relate to our own, contemporary ones?

Students are encouraged to view philosophy not as a specialized, esoteric discipline, but instead as an activity integral to a liberal arts education, helping students to think more cogently and appreciatively about themselves and their world.

PHIL 101, PHIL 110, or PHIL 112 is recommended as a first course for those interested in philosophical issues and their cultural significance and for those who wish to examine a broad range of philosophical topics, problems, or historical figures. Other good starting points are PHIL 155, which deals with logic and the analysis of argument; PHIL 160, which deals with moral thought and experience; and PHIL 150, which deals with the concepts, methods, and foundations of the biological and physical sciences.

PHIL 155 is recommended for all students who major or minor in philosophy.

Advising

All majors and minors have a primary academic advisor from the Academic Advising Program (https://advising.unc.edu/). Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. The department's director of undergraduate studies works with current and prospective majors by appointment (see contact information above). Departmental academic advising is particularly important for those majors who are considering going on to graduate school. Further information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be obtained from the department's website (https://philosophy.unc.edu/). A brief video with information about the philosophy major is available here (https://philosophy.unc.edu/undergraduate/the-major/why-major-in-philosophy/).

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

A major in philosophy offers excellent preparation for many careers in which clear thinking and analytical ability are valued. Some majors choose to pursue graduate work in philosophy in preparation for college or university teaching (Ph.D. normally required), but the philosophy major also provides the form of rigorous and systematic intellectual training that is of crucial importance in law, medicine, business, and other fields.

PHIL—Philosophy

Courses numbered below 199 have no prerequisites. These serve as suitable first courses in philosophy for many students, as do some courses below 299, in particular PHIL 210, PHIL 213, PHIL 230, PHIL 266, and PHIL 280. Courses numbered 101 to 120 are general survey courses. (Non-majors, please note that PHIL 155 satisfies the quantitative reasoning General Education requirement.) Courses numbered 130 to 290 are oriented toward particular problems or topics. For instance, courses numbered 210 to 229 concern the history of philosophy. Courses numbered 300 to 399 are designed for advanced undergraduates and majors and carry a prerequisite of one course in philosophy. Some may carry additional prerequisites. Courses numbered between 400 and 699 are for advanced undergraduates as well as graduate students. Detailed information on upcoming courses is available on the department's website (https://philosophy.unc.edu/undergraduate/undergraduate-courses/).

Please note that not all courses are offered on a regular basis. For information on which courses are most likely to be offered in a given year...

Philosophy Major, B.A.

The principal goal of the study of philosophy is to enable students to think more clearly, deeply, and appreciatively about themselves and their world. Study of philosophy enhances analytical, critical, and interpretive capacities that are applicable to any subject matter in almost any context. It provides many opportunities for expressing oneself, for reflecting on questions that human beings have pondered for millennia, for exchanging reasoned beliefs and engaging in focused debate, and for learning how to come to terms with problems for which there are no easy answers. A good philosophical education also helps to prepare students for responsible and intelligent participation in political and community affairs. A brief video with information about the philosophy major is available here (https://philosophy.unc.edu/undergraduate/the-major/why-major-in-philosophy/).
Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the philosophy program, students should be able to:

- Deploy philosophical concepts and terminology correctly, in either a historical or contemporary setting
- Represent clearly and accurately the views or argument of a particular philosopher, in either a historical or contemporary setting
- Identify the premises and conclusion(s) of a philosophical argument and assess both its validity and soundness
- Apply a philosophical theory or argument to a new topic, and to draw and defend reasonable conclusions about that topic
- Develop an argument for a particular solution to a philosophical problem in either a historical or contemporary setting

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

PHIL 155 (http://catalog.unc.edu/search/?search=PHIL+155) is recommended for all students who major or minor in philosophy.

Please note that First Year Seminars (http://fys.unc.edu/) (all numbered below 100) and courses with a second digit of nine (PHIL 390 (http://catalog.unc.edu/search/?search=PHIL+390), PHIL 691H (http://catalog.unc.edu/search/?search=PHIL+691H), PHIL 692H (http://catalog.unc.edu/search/?search=PHIL+692H), etc.) automatically count toward the major core as electives. However, with approval of the department’s director of undergraduate studies, PHIL 390 (http://catalog.unc.edu/search/?search=PHIL+390) may count toward one of the four distribution areas.

Within the framework of the major, students may elect to take philosophy courses geared toward prelaw. Inquiries about prelaw advising may be sent to the department’s director of undergraduate studies. Although we are not in a position to offer law career (including career prep) or LSAT advice, the director of undergraduate studies is available to provide academic advising and discuss prelaw course information. Further details may be found on the Department of Philosophy’s Web site (https://philosophy.unc.edu/undergraduate/advising/pre-law/).

Special opportunities in philosophy include, but are not limited to, the Philosophy Outreach Program (https://philosophy.unc.edu/outreach/), the Lesher Opportunity Fund (https://philosophy.unc.edu/undergraduate/lesher-opportunity-fund/), Take a Philosopher to Lunch (https://philosophy.unc.edu/undergraduate/take-a-philosopher-to-lunch/), Intercollegiate Ethics Bowl (https://parcenter.unc.edu/ieb/), and an active Speaker Series (https://philosophy.unc.edu/events/category/department-talk/). See the Department of Philosophy’s website (https://philosophy.unc.edu/) for details.

Philosophy Minor

The principal goal of the study of philosophy is to enable students to think more clearly, deeply, and appreciatively about themselves and their world. Study of philosophy enhances analytical, critical, and interpretive capacities that are applicable to any subject matter in almost any context. It provides many opportunities for expressing oneself, for reflecting on questions that human beings have pondered for millennia, for exchanging reasoned beliefs and engaging in focused debate, and for learning how to come to terms with problems for which there are no easy answers. A good philosophical education also helps to prepare students for responsible and intelligent participation in political and community affairs. A brief video with information about the philosophy minor is available here (https://philosophy.unc.edu/undergraduate/the-major/why-major-in-philosophy/).

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor “core” requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Philosophy, Politics, and Economics (PPE) Minor

Social and political institutions have a profound impact on our lives. Understanding how they work, appreciating their interactions, seeing their impact, and being able to assess their value are all crucial to understanding the world in which we live. With this in mind, the philosophy, politics, and economics (PPE) minor trains students to look beyond the borders of academic disciplines by offering them an integrated study of these fields.

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor “core” requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Total Hours: 15

- H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

- F FY-Launch class sections may be available. A FY-Launch section fulfills the same requirements as a standard section of that course, but also fulfills the FY-SEMINAR/FY-LAUNCH First-Year Foundations requirement. Students can search for FY-Launch sections in ConnectCarolina using the FY-LAUNCH attribute.

Please note that, although it is not listed above in the political science course section, HNRS 354 (Elements of Politics) may count toward the politics core discipline of the PPE minor. A Tar Heel Tracker adjustment is required.

Detailed information is available on the program's website (http://ppe.unc.edu).

The Philosophy, Politics, and Economics (PPE) program offers extensive extracurricular programming, including an active speakers series, intensive weekend seminars, and semester-long reading groups that meet once a week for eight weeks over dinner. See the PPE program website (https://ppe.unc.edu/) for details.

Department of Physics and Astronomy

Introduction

Everything around you is influenced or governed by physics. Physics seeks to understand the fundamental workings of the universe, from the smallest particles like neutrinos to the vast structure of the cosmos. It unveils the underlying principles governing the world around us and serves as the cornerstone of all natural sciences, including chemistry, biology, oceanography, and geography.

The Department of Physics and Astronomy offers a range of degree tracks tailored to various interests and career paths:

- B.A. Tracks
  - Physics
  - Astronomy
  - Computational Physics
  - Energy
  - Engineering Physics
  - Medical and Biological Physics
  - Quantitative Finance

- B.S. Tracks
  - Physics
  - Astrophysics

These tracks align with diverse employment opportunities (https://www.aps.org/careers/physicists/prospects.cfm) for physics graduates, spanning high schools, government laboratories, financial institutions, medical facilities, data science, and high-tech industries.

Upon graduation, approximately 50 percent of physics bachelors transition directly into the workforce, while others pursue advanced degrees in physics, medical physics, business, law, or computer science.

Opt for a B.A. degree if you seek to blend your passion for physics with complementary disciplines such as computer science, environmental science, biophysics, medicine, engineering, or finance.

Consider a B.S. degree if you intend to pursue graduate study in physics, astronomy, or a related field, or a career practicing physics.

Advising

All majors and minors have a primary academic advisor from the Academic Advising Program (https://advising.unc.edu/). Students are encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. The department’s director of undergraduate studies and faculty advisors work with current and prospective majors by appointment (see contact information above). Faculty advisors are assigned to all physics majors and minors, and they assist students in a variety of physics related areas, including physics course planning, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, internships, career opportunities, and graduate school and fellowship applications. Physics majors are required to meet with their departmental advisor by appointment prior to registering for any semester beyond the fourth term in residence. Further information may be obtained from the department’s website under the Undergraduate Program (http://physics.unc.edu/undergraduate-program/).

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

Employers know that physicists understand how to think and reason effectively about the world, which equips them to solve unconventional challenging problems. Over 90 percent of physics majors do something other than teach or conduct research at a university. Physics will prepare you to pursue anything from medicine to energy to business. The American Institute of Physics’ Career Resources (http://aip.org/career-resources/) site and our Department site (https://physics.unc.edu/career-info/) provides useful information about the different career paths of physics bachelor’s degree recipients, including who is hiring them (https://www.aip.org/statistics/multiple/).

Common job titles for our physics bachelor’s degree recipients include:

- Applications Engineer
- Data Analyst
- Analyst
- Data Scientist
- Staff Engineer
- System Engineer
- Software Engineer
- Design Engineer
- High School Physics Teacher
- IT Consultant
- Lab Technician
- Research Associate
- Systems Analyst
- IT Analyst

Those who are considering going on to graduate school in physics, astronomy, and other physical science and engineering fields, should contact one of the physics advisors. Those who plan careers in health sciences, including dentistry, medicine, and veterinary medicine, should consult advisors in the Health Professions Advising Office in Hanes Hall.

Undergraduate-level Courses

ASTR 63. First-Year Seminar: Catastrophe and Chaos: Unpredictable Physics. 3 Credits.
Physics is often seen as the most precise and deterministic of sciences. Determinism can break down, however. This seminar explores the rich and diverse areas of modern physics in which "unpredictability" is the norm. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements

- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
- Making Connections Gen Ed: PL, QI.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.
- Same as: PHYS 63.

ASTR 89. First-Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.
Special topics course content will vary each semester.

Rules & Requirements

- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 100L. Astronomy with Skynet: Our Place in Space. 1 Credits.
Students will use UNC’s global network of "Skynet" telescopes to observe planets, moons, and other solar-system objects, star-forming regions and clusters, supernova remnants, and galaxies. Through these observations and others, we will reach a better understanding of our place in the universe, and resolve common misconceptions. Topics include: seasons, the Galilean revolution, the cosmic distance ladder, the Great Debate of 1920, dark matter in our galaxy, Hubble’s law, dark energy. Previously offered as ASTR 101L.

Rules & Requirements

- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 100. Understanding the Universe. 3 Credits.
Learn how astronomers study and understand the cosmos. Topics include motions of the Sun, Moon, and planets; planetary surfaces, interiors, and atmospheres; telescopes and spectroscopy; prospects for detecting and visiting life elsewhere; how stars are born, age, and die; black holes, dark matter, and gravitational radiation; the Milky Way Galaxy and galaxies beyond; the birth and fate of the expanding Universe. Optional laboratory: ASTR 100L. Optional field experience: ASTR 111.

Rules & Requirements

- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-LAB.
- Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, ASTR 100, 101, 102, or 103.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 100L. Understanding the Universe. 3 Credits.
Learn how astronomers study and understand the cosmos. Topics include motions of the Sun, Moon, and planets; planetary surfaces, interiors, and atmospheres; telescopes and spectroscopy; prospects for detecting and visiting life elsewhere; how stars are born, age, and die; black holes, dark matter, and gravitational radiation; the Milky Way Galaxy and galaxies beyond; the birth and fate of the expanding Universe. Optional laboratory: ASTR 100L. Optional field experience: ASTR 111.

Rules & Requirements

- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-NATSCI or FC-QUANT.
- Making Connections Gen Ed: PX.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.
ASTR 101. Introduction to Astronomy: The Solar System. 3 Credits.
Celestial motions of the earth, sun, moon, and planets; nature of light; ground and space-based telescopes; comparative planetology; the earth and the moon; terrestrial and gas planets and their moons; dwarf planets, asteroids, and comets; planetary system formation; extrasolar planets; the search for extraterrestrial intelligence (SETI). Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-NATSCI or FC-QUANT.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PX.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 102. Introduction to Astronomy: Stars, Galaxies & Cosmology. 3 Credits.
The sun, stellar observables, star birth, evolution, and death, novae and supernovae, white dwarfs, neutron stars, black holes, the Milky Way galaxy, normal galaxies, active galaxies and quasars, dark matter, dark energy, cosmology, early universe. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-NATSCI or FC-QUANT.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, ASTR 101; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 103. Alien Life in the Universe. 3 Credits.
Humans have always wondered “are we alone?” From discovering life in extreme conditions on Earth, to finding thousands of exoplanets, we now know far more about this question than our ancestors. This class explores our recent understanding of planets, solar systems, where life might be, and how to find it. Optional laboratory: ASTR 100L. Optional field experience: ASTR 111.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-NATSCI or FC-QUANT.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PX.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 105. Time, Tides, and the Measurement of the Cosmos. 3 Credits.
This course is focused on medieval foundations of modern cosmology and is designed to take advantage of the opportunities available for enriched learning in England. The course is problem-based, e.g. How did people reckon calendars, time, and tides, both for navigation and daily life, before clocks and the printed word? Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-KNOWING or FC-PAST.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL, WB.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 110. Astrophotography of the Multi-Wavelength Universe. 3 Credits.
Students will use UNC’s global network of Skynet telescopes to make color images of the moon, planets, star clusters, star-forming regions, star-death regions, and galaxies. They will also use Skynet’s radio telescopes to explore the invisible universe, including pulsars, supernova remnants, and supermassive black holes. Astrophotography will be our entry point to deeper explorations of the solar system; star birth, evolution, and death; galaxy formation and evolution; and black holes and Einstein’s theory of relativity.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-CREATE or FC-NATSCI.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 111. Educational Research in Radio Astronomy. 1-3 Credits.
One-week field experience at Green Bank Observatory in West Virginia. Students observe the invisible universe using manually controlled and fully automated radio telescopes, and carry out a variety of observing projects. These target the sun, moon, Jupiter, star-forming regions, supernova remnants, pulsars, the Milky Way and Andromeda galaxies, and more distant, active galaxies and quasars. Students receive training in radio astronomy, attend research and specialty talks, and tour the observatory. Formerly offered as ASTR 111L. Permission of the instructor.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-INTERN.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 202. Introduction to Astrophysics. 3 Credits.
This introductory astrophysics course will focus on the use of classical mechanics, gravitational physics, and the physics of radiation to interpret and explain astronomical observations. Course covers stellar structure, stellar formation and evolution, galaxies, and cosmology with an emphasis on quantitative problem solving.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, PHYS 119.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 205. The Medieval Foundations of Modern Cosmology. 3 Credits.
This course will examine science as it emerged and developed in the West starting in the 13th century. We will use example problems from cosmology that are relevant today.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-KNOWING or FC-PAST.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL, WB.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
ASTR 301. Stars, Galaxies, and Cosmology. 1 Credits.
Stellar observables; galaxies; novae; cosmology; the early universe. This one-credit course can be taken with ASTR 102 for students who wish to major or minor in astrophysics.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, ASTR 202 or ASTR 301, MATH 383, and PHYS 331; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 390. Research and Special Topics for Juniors and Seniors. 1-12 Credits.
Permission of the instructor. To be taken by honors candidates and other qualified juniors and seniors.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research. May be repeated for credit. 12 total credits. 4 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level Courses
ASTR 501. Stellar Astrophysics. 3 Credits.
An introduction to the study of stellar structure and evolution. Topics covered include observational techniques, stellar structure and energy transport, nuclear energy sources, evolution off the main-sequence, and supernovae.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, ASTR 202 or ASTR 301, MATH 383, and PHYS 331; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 502. Modern Research in Astrophysics. 3 Credits.
A capstone research experience introducing modern data-analysis techniques for large astronomical surveys. Students undertake guided research projects with a different theme each semester. The course focuses on real astrophysical discovery of new objects, events and phenomena.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, ASTR 202; Pre- or corequisite, PHYS 412.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 503. Structure and Evolution of Galaxies. 3 Credits.
Overview of the structure and evolution of galaxies, with emphasis on learning and applying modern research methods such as scientific literature review and computational astrostastics. Includes galaxy morphology and dynamics, star formation, active galactic nuclei, galaxy interactions, large-scale clustering, environment-dependent physical processes, and the evolution of the galaxy population over cosmic time.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, ASTR 202 or ASTR 301, MATH 383, and PHYS 331.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 504. Cosmology. 3 Credits.
An introduction to modern cosmology; the study of the contents and evolution of the universe. Covers expanding spacetime, the thermal history of the early universe, including nucleosynthesis and the cosmic microwave background, the inflationary model for the origins of cosmic structure, and the growth of that structure through time.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, ASTR 202 or ASTR 301, and PHYS 401; pre- or corequisite, PHYS 421.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 505. Physics of Interstellar Gas. 3 Credits.
Surveys the physical processes governing the interstellar medium (ISM), which takes up the "refuse" of old stars while providing fuel for young stars forming. Covers the processes regulating the galactic gas budget and the corresponding observational diagnostics. Topics: radiative transfer, line formation mechanisms, continuum radiation, gas dynamics, star formation.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, ASTR 202 or ASTR 301, and PHYS 331.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 511. Atomic and Radiative Processes in Astrophysics. 3 Credits.
This course covers key topics in electromagnetism, radiative transport, and thermal and statistical mechanics in the context of astrophysics, such as stellar and planetary interiors and atmospheres, stellar evolution (including star formation and death), stellar populations, and the early universe.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, ASTR 202; Pre- or corequisite, PHYS 412.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 512. Astrophysical Dynamics. 3 Credits.
This course provides a broad overview of astrophysical principles underlying stellar and planetary dynamics; N-body dynamics of star clusters, galaxies, and dark matter; fluid dynamics of astrophysical plasmas; and dynamics of the Universe and spacetime.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, ASTR 202 and PHYS 201 or PHYS 401.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

ASTR 519. Observational Astronomy. 4 Credits.
An introduction to modern techniques in observational astronomy with an emphasis on optical and near-infrared wavelengths. Topics covered include practical python for astronomy, telescopes and CCDs, spectroscopy, astrostastics, and mining large astronomical surveys. Three lecture and three laboratory hours a week.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, ASTR 102 or 202; Pre- or corequisite, PHYS 331; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
PHYS—Physics

Undergraduate-level Courses

PHYS 50. First-Year Seminar: Time and the Medieval Cosmos. 3 Credits.
This course introduces first-year students to the basic motions of the solar system as viewed from the Earth along with the mechanical and mathematical models used to reproduce them, while exploring the history of medieval and early modern education, theology, and natural philosophy.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: HS.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: HIST 50.

PHYS 51. First-Year Seminar: The Interplay of Music and Physics. 3 Credits.
How sound is produced in instruments, and how those sounds are used in music making. Wave motion, resonance, sound perception, scales, harmony, and music theory. Collaborative laboratory exercises to investigate the acoustics of string, woodwind, and brass instruments as well as study of the physics of keyboard and percussion instruments. Students will make instruments from found objects and perform compositions on them, and can pursue their areas of special interest in a research paper.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR, FC-AESTH or FC-NATSCI.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: MUSC 51.

PHYS 53. First-Year Seminar: Handcrafting in the Nanoworld: Building Models and Manipulating Molecules. 3 Credits.
This seminar provides a general introduction to nanoscience and nanotechnology, focusing on recent advances in molecular electronics, nanomaterials, and biomedical research. Course activities include group model-building projects, presentations, and discussions of reading material.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 54. First-Year Seminar: Physics of Movies. 3 Credits.
Students watch and analyze short movie clips that demonstrate interesting, unusual, or impossible physics. Group analysis emphasized.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 55. First-Year Seminar: Introduction to Mechatronics. 4 Credits.
Introduction to important skills and knowledge required in the STEM fields of today and tomorrow, from academic, employment, and social perspectives. All students, regardless of their educational goals, will achieve critical introductory skills in numerical reasoning and analysis, engineering design and prototyping, computer programming and electronics, and will demonstrate proficiency and knowledge about topics that increasingly impact society, including Artificial Intelligence, Machine Learning, and Quantum Computing.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR, FC-NATSCI or FC-QUANT, FC-LAB.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PX, QI.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 63. First-Year Seminar: Catastrophe and Chaos: Unpredictable Physics. 3 Credits.
Physics is often seen as the most precise and deterministic of sciences. Determinism can break down, however. This seminar explores the rich and diverse areas of modern physics in which "unpredictability" is the norm. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: FC-QUANT, FC-LAB.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 100. How Things Work. 4 Credits.
Demystifying the working of objects such as CD players, microwave ovens, lasers, computers, roller coasters, rockets, light bulbs, automobiles, clocks, copy machines, X-ray and CAT-scan machines, and nuclear reactors.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-CREATE or FC-NATSCI, FC-LAB.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PX.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 101. Basic Concepts of Physics. 4 Credits.
This is an introductory physics course for non-science majors. This course focuses on basic physics concepts and connections to everyday life. Course topics include Newtonian mechanics, fluids, heat, vibrations, electricity and magnetism, light and sound, quantum phenomenon, nuclear radiation, relativity, and cosmology. Connections to everyday life and society include energy conservation, global warming, nuclear energy, the origin of the universe, pseudoscience, and the search for extraterrestrial life.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-NATSCI or FC-QUANT, FC-LAB.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PX.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
PHYS 108. Climate and Energy Transitions: Understanding the Forecasts. 4 Credits.
This course examines uncertainties in projecting future fossil fuel consumption and impact on global climate by quantifying how effectively alternative power-generation and energy-storage technologies can scale to meet needs in developing and developed nations, and by understanding past and present climates. Course previously offered as GEOL 108/MASC 108.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PX, GL.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: EMES 108.

PHYS 114. General Physics I: For Students of the Life Sciences. 4 Credits.
Basic principles of physics, including forces, energy, oscillations, sound, diffusion, and heat transfer, and applications to biological systems. Intended to meet the needs of, but not restricted to, students majoring in the life sciences. Students may not receive credit for PHYS 114 in addition to PHYS 104, 116, or 118.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY- LAUNCH (only designated sections), FC-NATSCI or FC-QUANT, FC-LAB.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PX, QI.
Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 129P or 130 or 231.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 115. General Physics II: For Students of the Life Sciences. 4 Credits.
Basic principles of physics, including fluids, electricity, magnetism, optics, quantum physics, and nuclear physics, and applications to biological systems. Intended to meet the needs of, but not restricted to, students majoring in the life sciences. Students may not receive credit for PHYS 115 in addition to PHYS 105, 117, or 119.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY- LAUNCH (only designated sections), FC-NATSCI or FC-QUANT, FC-LAB.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PX, QI.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 104, 114, 116, or 118.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 118. Introductory Calculus-based Mechanics and Relativity. 4 Credits.
Mechanics of particles and rigid bodies. Newton's laws; mechanical and potential energy; mechanical conservation laws; frame-dependence of physical laws; Einstein's Theory of Relativity. Students may not receive credit for PHYS 118 in addition to PHYS 104, 114, or 116. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY- LAUNCH (only designated sections), FC-NATSCI or FC-QUANT, FC-LAB.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PX, QI.
Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 231; Pre- or corequisite, MATH 232; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 119. Introductory Calculus-based Electromagnetism and Quanta. 4 Credits.
Unification of the laws of electricity and magnetism; electromagnetic waves; the particle-wave duality; fundamental principles and applications of quantum mechanics. Students may not receive credit for PHYS 119 in addition to PHYS 105, 115, or 117. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY- LAUNCH (only designated sections), FC-NATSCI or FC-QUANT, FC-LAB.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PX, QI.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 118 or PHYS 118H; Pre- or corequisite, MATH 233; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 128. Modern Physics. 3 Credits.
Special relativity theory, black body radiation, photons and electrons; wave particle duality. Elements of atomic theory, nuclei and fundamental particles. Three lecture hours a week.

Rules & Requirements

Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 117 (or PHYS 105 by permission of the instructor); co-requisite, PHYS 128L.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 128L. Modern Physics Laboratory. 1 Credits.
Selected modern physics experiments. Written research reports and oral presentations. Three laboratory hours a week.

Rules & Requirements

Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, PHYS 128.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 131. Energy: Physical Principles and the Quest for Alternatives to Dwindling Oil and Gas. 3 Credits.
A quantitative exploration of the physical principles behind energy development and use within modern civilization, the stark impact of depleted fossil fuel reserves, and alternative sources.

Rules & Requirements

Making Connections Gen Ed: PX, QI.
Requisites: Corequisite, PHYS 131L.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 131L. Energy: Physical Principles and the Quest for Alternatives to Dwindling Oil and Gas. 1 Credits.
Explore renewable and nonrenewable energy sources. Three laboratory hours per week.

Rules & Requirements

Requisites: Corequisite, PHYS 131.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 201. Basic Mechanics. 3 Credits.
A one-semester course in statics, kinematics, simple harmonic motion, central forces, and applications from modern physics.

Rules & Requirements

Requisites: Pre- or corequisites, MATH 383 and PHYS 281L; permission of the instructor for students lacking the pre- or co-requisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
PHYS 211. Intermediate Electromagnetism. 3 Credits.
Electric fields and potentials, dielectrics, steady currents, magnetic flux and magnetic materials, electromagnetic induction. Emphasis on Maxwell's equations and their application to electromagnetic waves in bounded and unbounded media.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 233 and PHYS 117 or 119; Pre- or corequisite, MATH 383.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 231. Physical Computing. 4 Credits.
Physical Computing is an introduction to the interaction between a computing unit and the outside world, using measurement and control. The tools for this implementation of physical computing are microcontrollers, software, sensors, a variety of analog and digital electronic components, and algorithms that anticipate and respond in ways that humans perceive as NOT inherently computerized. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-CREATE or FC-QUANT, FC-LAB, RESEARCH.
Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, PHYS 114 or 118; permission of the instructor for students lacking the pre- or corequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 281L. Experimental Techniques in Physics. 3 Credits.
An introductory course centered around 8 lab experiments that include Compton scattering, interferometry, e/m, and photoelectric effect. Students use data analysis tools including MATLAB or Python, uncertainty analysis based on the GUM, and LaTeX for written reports. In this communication-intensive course, students collaborate like physicists through written and oral communication and peer review exercises aimed at general, peer, and expert audiences. They also engage with themes of diversity, equity, and inclusion in the field.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-NATSCI, FC-LAB, COMMBEYOND.
Making Connections Gen Ed: CI.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 117 or 119; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 290. Special Topics in Physics. 1-3 Credits.
Elective topics in the field of Physics. This course has variable content and may be taken multiple times for credit.

Rules & Requirements
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 6 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 293. Internship In Physics and Astronomy. 3 Credits.
The sponsored, off-campus work must involve at least 140 hours. Does not fulfill any requirement in the physics major or minor. Physics majors only. Permission of instructor/department.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-INTERN.
Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, PHYS 331.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 295. Research with Faculty Mentor I. 1-12 Credits.
Students undertake independent research with a faculty mentor. Approved learning contract required. Mentored research courses (PHYS 295 or PHYS 395) may be used to satisfy degree requirements only for a maximum of 3 credit hours.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 12 total credits. 12 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 311. Electromagnetism I. 3 Credits.
First semester of a two-semester sequence on electromagnetic theory and applications. This first semester is focused on electrostatic fields and potentials, magnetic fields and potentials, dielectrics, and magnetic fields in matter.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 331 and one of PHYS 117 or 119; permission of the instructor for students lacking the requisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 331. Numerical Techniques for the Sciences I. 4 Credits.
Applications of calculus, vector analysis, differential equations, complex numbers, and computer programming to realistic physical systems. Three lecture and two computational laboratory hours per week.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 104, 114, 116, or 118; Pre- or corequisite, MATH 383.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 332. Numerical Techniques for the Sciences II. 4 Credits.
Modeling of celestial dynamics, nuclear physics problems, electrostatics; Monte Carlo integration in particle and theoretical physics; data modeling for physics and astronomy; gravitation, electromagnetism, fluid dynamics and quantum mechanics. Three lecture and two computational laboratory hours per week. Previously offered as PHYS 358.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 331.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 354. Quantum Mechanics, Weirdness, and Reality. 3 Credits.
An interdisciplinary course on the weirdness of quantum mechanics and the problem of interpreting it. Nonlocality, the measurement problem, superpositions, Bohm's theory, collapse theories, and the many-worlds interpretation.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PH.
Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 231 and any PHYS course numbered 100 or greater; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: PHIL 354.
PHYS 381. Renewable Electric Power Systems. 3 Credits.
Broad and quantitative study of renewable electric power systems: wind systems, photovoltaic cells, distributed generation (concentrating solar power, microhydro, biomass), and the economics of these technologies. Course previously offered as PHYS 581.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 119 or PHYS 115 and MATH 233.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 390. Special Topics in Physics and Astronomy. 1-3 Credits.
E elective topics in the field of Physics and Astronomy. This course has variable content and may be taken multiple times for credit.

Rules & Requirements
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 6 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 391. Senior Seminar. 1-15 Credits.
To be taken by seniors with permission of the department.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 395. Research with Faculty Mentor II. 1-12 Credits.
Students undertake independent research with a faculty mentor. Approved learning contract required. A research proposal and/or summary research report is required. Although not mandatory, a submission of a research proposal to an internal or external competition for funding is encouraged. Students must also present their research at an appropriate symposium, conference, or seminar. Mentor research courses (295 or 395) may be used to satisfy degree requirements only for a maximum of 3 credit hours.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 281L.
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 12 total credits. 12 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level Courses

PHYS 401. Mechanics I. 3 Credits.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Pre- or corequisites, MATH 383 and PHYS 281L and 331; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 405. Biological Physics. 3 Credits.
How diffusion, entropy, electrostatics, and hydrophobicity generate order and force in biology. Topics include DNA manipulation, intracellular transport, cell division, molecular motors, single molecule biophysics techniques, nerve impulses, neuroscience.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 116 and 117, or PHYS 118 and 119.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: BIOL 431, BMME 435.

PHYS 410. Teaching and Learning Physics. 4 Credits.
Learning how to teach physics using current research-based methods. Includes extensive fieldwork in high school environments.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-LEARNTA.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 117 or 119; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 411. Electromagnetism II. 3 Credits.
Electrodynamics: Maxwell's equations and their application to electromagnetic waves, radiation, and relativity.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 281L, 311 and 332; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 412. Introduction to Quantum Mechanics. 3 Credits.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 383, either MATH 347 or PHYS 331, and one of PHYS 117, or 119; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 421. Physics of the Earth's Interior. 3 Credits.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 383, and either PHYS 201 and 211 or 311 and 401.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: EMES 422.

PHYS 441. Thermal Physics. 3 Credits.
Equilibrium statistical mechanics; the laws of thermodynamics, internal energy, enthalpy, entropy, thermodynamic potentials, Maxwell's relations.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 233, and PHYS 117 or 119; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: BMME 441.

PHYS 447. Quantum Computing. 3 Credits.
Recommended preparation, some knowledge of basic linear algebra. An introduction to quantum computing. Basic math and quantum mechanics necessary to understand the operation of quantum bits. Quantum gates, circuits, and algorithms, including Shor’s algorithm for factoring and Grover’s search algorithm. Entanglement and error correction. Quantum encryption, annealing, and simulation. Brief discussion of technologies.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 232, and PHYS 116 or 118.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: COMP 447.
PHYS 451. Electronics I. 4 Credits.
DC and AC circuit analysis and design, construction, test, and measurements. Semiconductors physics and semiconductor devices (diodes and transistors). Signal conditioning and introduction to digital electronics and automated data acquisition and analysis. Previously offered as PHYS 351.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 115 or 119; Pre- or corequisites, MATH 383 and PHYS 331; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 452. Electronics II. 4 Credits.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 451 or BMME 207 and BMME 365; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 461. Introduction to Medical Physics. 3 Credits.
This class will introduce how physics principles and techniques have been applied to medical imaging and radiation therapy. Topics will include ionizing radiation and radiation safety, x-ray and computed tomography, ultrasound, magnetic resonance imaging, positron emission tomography, and radiation therapy. Topics such as the career path to become a medical physicist will also be discussed. The class will have lectures given by the instructor and guest lectures by experts and practitioners in this field.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 119 or PHYS 115 and MATH 233.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 471. Physics of Solid State Electronic Devices. 3 Credits.
Properties of crystal lattices, electrons in energy bands, behavior of majority and minority charge carriers, PN junctions related to the structure and function of semiconductor diodes, transistors, display devices.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 117 or 119; pre- or corequisite, PHYS 211 or 311.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 472. Chemistry and Physics of Electronic Materials Processing. 3 Credits.
A survey of materials processing and characterization used in fabricating microelectronic devices. Crystal growth, thin film deposition and etching, and microlithography. Previously offered as APPL 472. Permission of the instructor.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, CHEM 482 or PHYS 117 or 119.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: CHEM 472.

PHYS 481L. Advanced Laboratory I. 2 Credits.
Selected physical problems to be addressed with the use of materials development, device fabrication and experiment design for evaluation.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-LEARNTA.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 510. Seminar for Physics and Astronomy Teaching Assistants. 1 Credits.
A seminar on how students learn and understand physics and astronomy and how to teach using current research-based methods.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-LEARNTA.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 510L. Practicum for Physics and Astronomy Undergraduate Teaching and Learning Assistants. 1 Credits.
This course is designed to accompany, or subsequently follow, the Seminar for New Physics and Astronomy Teaching and Learning Assistants (PHYS 510) and is for undergraduates serving as Undergraduate Teaching Assistants (UTAs) for the Physics and Astronomy Department. UTAs who receive course credit cannot also be paid.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-LEARNTA.
Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, PHYS 510.
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 6 total completions.
Grading Status: Pass/Fail.

PHYS 515. Optics. 3 Credits.
Broad coverage including ray, wave, Gaussian, and Fourier optics. Interference, diffraction, polarization, and coherence. Optical properties of materials, absorption, scattering. Fiber optics, lasers, semiconductors, imaging, and special topics. Previously offered as PHYS 415.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 211 or PHYS 412; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
PHYS 521. Applications of Quantum Mechanics. 3 Credits.
Emphasizes atomic physics but includes topics from nuclear, solid state, and particle physics, such as energy levels, the periodic system, selection rules, and fundamentals of spectroscopy.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 421.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 529. Introduction to Magnetic Resonance. 3 Credits.
This course will provide a broad coverage of important physics principles behind nuclear magnetic resonance (NMR) spectroscopy, especially the applications of quantum mechanics. Theoretical approaches and tools for grasping the design principles of various important NMR spectroscopic techniques will be discussed. It will show, for instance, how to use NMR spectroscopy to determine molecular structures and dynamics, and how to obtain images and functional information using magnetic resonance imaging (MRI).

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 421 or CHEM 486; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 543. Nuclear Physics. 3 Credits.
Structure of nucleons and nuclei, nuclear models, forces and interactions, nuclear reactions.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 421; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 545. Introductory Elementary Particle Physics. 3 Credits.
Relativistic kinematics, symmetries and conservation laws, elementary particles and bound states, gauge theories, quantum electrodynamics, chromodynamics, electroweak unification, standard model and beyond.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 412 and 421.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 573. Introductory Solid State Physics. 3 Credits.
Crystal symmetry, types of crystalline solids; electron and mechanical waves in crystals, electrical and magnetic properties of solids, semiconductors; low temperature phenomena; imperfections in nearly perfect crystals. Previously offered as APPL 573.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 421; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 586. Introduction to Biomedical Imaging Science. 3 Credits.
This course offers an introduction to the most common biomedical imaging modalities, including Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI), Computed-Tomography (CT), Positron Emission Tomography (PET), Single-Photon Emission Computed Tomography (SPECT), Ultrasound, and Optical Imaging. Lectures include discussions of imaging hardware, and relevant physics, as well as pre-clinical and clinical applications.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 119.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 594. Nonlinear Dynamics. 3 Credits.
Interdisciplinary introduction to nonlinear dynamics and chaos. Fixed points, bifurcations, strange attractors, with applications to physics, biology, chemistry, finance.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 383; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 631. Mathematical Methods of Theoretical Physics. 3 Credits.
Linear vector spaces and matrices, curvilinear coordinates, functions of complex variables, ordinary and partial differential equations, Fourier series, integral transforms, special functions, differential forms.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 281L and 332.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 632. Advanced Research Analytics. 3 Credits.
Required preparation, ability to program in a high-level computer language. Permission of the instructor for students lacking the required preparation. Methods required for the analysis, interpretation, and evaluation of physics measurements and theory. Error analysis, statistical tests, model fitting, parameter estimation, Monte Carlo methods, Bayesian inference, noise mitigation, experimental design, big data, selected numerical techniques including differential equations and Fourier techniques.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 401 and 412; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 660. Fluid Dynamics. 3 Credits.
The physical properties of fluids, kinematics, governing equations, viscous incompressible flow, vorticity dynamics, boundary layers, irrotational incompressible flow. Course previously offered as GEOL 560/ MASC 560.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 528 or 529, or PHYS 631 or 632.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 671L. Independent Laboratory I. 3 Credits.
Six laboratory hours a week.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 401 and 412; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
PHYS 672L. Independent Laboratory II. 3 Credits.
Six laboratory hours a week.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PHYS 401 and 412; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisites.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 691H. Senior Honor Thesis Research I. 3 Credits.
Permission of the instructor. Readings in physics and directed research for a senior honor thesis project. Required of all candidates for graduation with honors in physics.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PHYS 692H. Senior Honor Thesis Research II. 3 Credits.
Readings in physics and directed research for a senior honor thesis project. Required of all candidates for graduation with honors in physics.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PHYS 691H.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Physics Major, B.A.

Everything around you is influenced or governed by physics. Physics seeks to understand the fundamental workings of the universe, from the smallest particles like neutrinos to the vast structure of the cosmos. It unveils the underlying principles governing the world around us and serves as the cornerstone of all natural sciences, including chemistry, biology, oceanography, and geography.

The Department of Physics and Astronomy offers a range of degree tracks tailored to various interests and career paths:

• B.A. Tracks
  • Physics
  • Astronomy
  • Computational Physics
  • Energy
  • Engineering Physics
  • Medical and Biological Physics
  • Quantitative Finance

• B.S. Tracks
  • Physics
  • Astrophysics

These tracks align with diverse employment opportunities (https://www.aps.org/careers/physicists/prospects.cfm) for physics graduates, spanning high schools, government laboratories, financial institutions, medical facilities, data science, and high-tech industries.

Upon graduation, approximately 50 percent of physics bachelors transition directly into the workforce, while others pursue advanced degrees in physics, medical physics, business, law, or computer science.

Opt for a B.A. degree if you seek to blend your passion for physics with complementary disciplines such as computer science, environmental science, biophysics, medicine, engineering, or finance.

Consider a B.S. degree if you intend to pursue graduate study in physics, astronomy, or a related field, or a career practicing physics.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the physics program, students should be able to:

• Demonstrate knowledge of major concepts, theoretical reasoning, and empirical findings in physics and/or astronomy – Knowledge Base in Physics
• Use physics and mathematics knowledge to solve problems – Critical Thinking and Problem Solving
• Effectively conduct research under faculty guidance – Research and the Advancement of Physics and Astronomy
• Gain entry to top graduate programs, employment as physicists in industry, teaching positions in high school physics and astronomy, or leverage their skills in other rewarding careers – Preparation for Future Career

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

• earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
• complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
• take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
• earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Total Hours 52

H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

F FY-Launch class sections may be available. A FY-Launch section fulfills the same requirements as a standard section of that course, but also fulfills the FY-SEMINAR/FY-LAUNCH First-Year Foundations requirement. Students can search for FY-Launch sections in ConnectCarolina using the FY-LAUNCH attribute.

1 Fall course.
2 Spring course.
3 Mentored research courses (PHYS 295, PHYS 395, and PHYS 293) may only fulfill a maximum of 3 credit hours towards this requirement.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Special Opportunities in Physics and Astronomy

Honors in Physics and Astronomy

The honors program offers exceptionally well-qualified students an opportunity to perform original research with a faculty member and graduate with honors or highest honors. It requires an overall grade point average of at least 3.3 and a grade point average of at least 3.4 for physics courses at the end of the junior year.

Students who wish to enter the honors program should consult with the departmental coordinator (http://physics.unc.edu/undergraduate-program/undergraduate-research/) for the program no later than the preregistration period in the spring semester of their junior year.

Undergraduate Research

More than half of our B.A. majors, alongside all B.S. majors, engage in at least one semester of research under the guidance of a faculty member. Many students find the experience so rewarding that they choose to continue for several semesters. PHYS 395 Research with Faculty Mentor II is a required course for all of our B.S. majors. In addition to PHYS 395, students have the option to enroll in PHYS 295 Research with Faculty Mentor I as many times as desired. These courses provide students with the opportunity to participate in cutting-edge research and acquire hands-on experience with various experimental tools and techniques, which can significantly enhance their resumes. Students may also earn course credit while pursuing internship opportunities in a physics-related industry by enrolling in PHYS 293. An approved learning contract is required prior to registering for PHYS 295, PHYS 395, and PHYS 293. Learning contracts and registration must be completed within the first week of classes.

Departmental Involvement

Within our department, two student-led organizations have their dedicated physical spaces. Both of these student organizations organize events throughout the year aimed at fostering social interaction within our student body, as well as facilitating connections between students and faculty.

The Society of Physics Students (https://uncsps.com/) is open to anyone interested in physics and is meant to build connections between undergraduates, graduate students, faculty, and alumni. Each year the society invites visitors to give talks and sponsors a number of events for students.

The Visibility in Physics (https://physics.unc.edu/undergraduate/student-organizations/visibility-in-physics/) is a student organization that aims to provide resources, advice, and a welcoming and encouraging social atmosphere for underrepresented minorities and allies in the field of physics.

Department Awards

The Physics and Astronomy department grants two annual awards to acknowledge academic excellence: the Shearin Award, for the most outstanding senior, and the Johnson Award, for the most outstanding junior. In addition, the Robert Sheldon Award for Undergraduate Research is presented to the student who demonstrates the most remarkable research accomplishments in the major.

Department Advising Program

Within the Physics and Astronomy Department, all majors, alongside their primary academic advisor from the Academic Advising Program (https://advising.unc.edu/), are assigned a department advisor. A list of department advisors can be found on the Physics Department Undergraduate webpage (https://physics.unc.edu/undergrad/).

These advisors, who are faculty members of the Physics and Astronomy Department, provide guidance to students on physics course planning, facilitate undergraduate research opportunities, offer support through the honors program, assist with internships, explore career prospects, and provide guidance with graduate school and fellowship applications.

All physics majors are required to meet with their department advisor by appointment prior to registering for any semester beyond the fourth term in residence. Further information may be obtained from the department’s website under the Undergraduate Program (http://physics.unc.edu/undergraduate-program/).

If you are interested in physics or astronomy and you are considering majoring in this field, you should contact one of our department advisors.

Physics Major, B.S.

Everything around you is influenced or governed by physics. Physics seeks to understand the fundamental workings of the universe, from the smallest particles like neutrinos to the vast structure of the cosmos. It unveils the underlying principles governing the world around us and serves as the cornerstone of all natural sciences, including chemistry, biology, oceanography, and geography.

The Department of Physics and Astronomy offers a range of degree tracks tailored to various interests and career paths:

• B.A. Tracks
  • Physics
  • Astronomy
  • Computational Physics
  • Energy
  • Engineering Physics
  • Medical and Biological Physics
  • Quantitative Finance
• B.S. Tracks
  • Physics
  • Astrophysics

These tracks align with diverse employment opportunities (https://www.aps.org/careers/physicists/prospects.cfm) for physics graduates, spanning high schools, government laboratories, financial institutions, medical facilities, data science, and high-tech industries.

Upon graduation, approximately 50 percent of physics bachelors transition directly into the workforce, while others pursue advanced degrees in physics, medical physics, business, law, or computer science.

Opt for a B.A. degree if you seek to blend your passion for physics with complementary disciplines such as computer science, environmental science, biophysics, medicine, engineering, or finance.

Consider a B.S. degree if you intend to pursue graduate study in physics, astronomy, or a related field, or a career practicing physics.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the physics program, students should be able to:

• Demonstrate knowledge of major concepts, theoretical reasoning, and empirical findings in physics and/or astronomy — Knowledge Base in Physics
• Use physics and mathematics knowledge to solve problems — Critical Thinking and Problem Solving
• Effectively conduct research under faculty guidance — Research and the Advancement of Physics and Astronomy
Physics Major, B.S.–Standard Option

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements, students must:

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Astronomy (ASTR) and Physics (PHYS) course descriptions (p. 937).

It is strongly recommended that students planning to major in physics fulfill the Foundations requirement in English composition and rhetoric by enrolling in ENGL 105I.

Most students will find it advantageous to defer some of the General Education requirements to the junior and/or senior year(s).

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Special Opportunities in Physics and Astronomy

Honors in Physics and Astronomy

The honors program offers exceptionally well-qualified students an opportunity to perform original research with a faculty member and graduate with honors or highest honors. It requires an overall grade point average of at least 3.3 and a grade point average of at least 3.4 for physics courses at the end of the junior year.

Students who wish to enter the honors program should consult with the departmental coordinator (http://physics.unc.edu/undergraduate-program/undergraduate-research/) for the program no later than the preregistration period in the spring semester of their junior year.

Undergraduate Research

More than half of our B.A. majors, alongside all B.S. majors, engage in at least one semester of research under the guidance of a faculty member. Many students find the experience so rewarding that they choose to continue for several semesters. PHYS 395 Research with Faculty Mentor II is a required course for all of our B.S. majors. In addition to PHYS 395, students have the option to enroll in PHYS 295 Research with Faculty Mentor I as many times as desired. These courses provide students with the opportunity to participate in cutting-edge research and acquire hands-on experience with various experimental tools and techniques, which can significantly enhance their resumes. Students may also earn course credit while pursuing internship opportunities in a physics-related industry by enrolling in PHYS 293. An approved learning contract is required prior to registering for PHYS 295, PHYS 395, and PHYS 293. Learning contracts and registration must be completed within the first week of classes.

Departmental Involvement

Within our department, two student-led organizations have their dedicated physical spaces. Both of these student organizations organize events throughout the year aimed at fostering social interaction within our student body, as well as facilitating connections between students and faculty.

The Society of Physics Students (https://uncsps.com/) is open to anyone interested in physics and is meant to build connections between undergraduates, graduate students, faculty, and alumni. Each year the society invites visitors to give talks and sponsors a number of events for students.

The Visibility in Physics (https://physics.unc.edu/undergraduate/student-organizations/visibility-in-physics/) is a student organization that aims to provide resources, advice, and a welcoming and encouraging social atmosphere for underrepresented minorities and allies in the field of physics.

Department Awards

The Physics and Astronomy department grants two annual awards to acknowledge academic excellence: the Shearin Award, for the most outstanding senior, and the Johnson Award, for the most outstanding junior. In addition, the Robert Sheldon Award for Undergraduate Research is presented to the student who demonstrates the most remarkable research accomplishments in the major.

Department Advising Program

Within the Physics and Astronomy Department, all majors, alongside their primary academic advisor from the Academic Advising Program (https://advising.unc.edu/), are assigned a department advisor. A list of department advisors can be found on the Physics Department Undergraduate webpage (https://physics.unc.edu/undergrad/).

These advisors, who are faculty members of the Physics and Astronomy Department, provide guidance to students on physics course planning, facilitate undergraduate research opportunities, offer support through the honors program, assist with internships, explore career prospects, and provide guidance with graduate school and fellowship applications.

All physics majors are required to meet with their department advisor by appointment prior to registering for any semester beyond the fourth term in residence. Further information may be obtained from the department's website under the Undergraduate Program (http://physics.unc.edu/undergraduate-program/).

If you are interested in physics or astronomy and you are considering majoring in this field, you should contact one of our department advisors.

Astronomy Minor

Everything around you is influenced or governed by physics. Physics seeks to understand the fundamental workings of the universe, from the smallest particles like neutrinos to the vast structure of the cosmos. It unveils the underlying principles governing the world around us and serves as the cornerstone of all natural sciences, including chemistry, biology, oceanography, and geography.

The Department of Physics and Astronomy offers a range of degree tracks tailored to various interests and career paths:

• B.A. Tracks
  • Physics
  • Astronomy
  • Computational Physics
  • Energy
  • Engineering Physics
  • Medical and Biological Physics
  • Quantitative Finance

• B.S. Tracks
  • Physics
  • Astrophysics

These tracks align with diverse employment opportunities (https://www.apls.org/careers/physicists/prospects.cfm) for physics graduates, spanning high schools, government laboratories, financial institutions, medical facilities, data science, and high-tech industries.

Upon graduation, approximately 50 percent of physics bachelors transition directly into the workforce, while others pursue advanced degrees in physics, medical physics, business, law, or computer science.

Opt for a B.A. degree if you seek to blend your passion for physics with complementary disciplines such as computer science, environmental science, biophysics, medicine, engineering, or finance.

Consider a B.S. degree if you intend to pursue graduate study in physics, astronomy, or a related field, or a career practicing physics.

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

• take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
• earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2,000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Department of Political Science

Introduction

As Harold Laswell famously noted, politics is “who gets what, when, and how.” As a discipline, political science focuses on the study of political ideas, institutions, processes, policies, and behavior in the United States and around the world. The Department of Political Science offers a broad range of courses across five subfields: American politics, comparative politics, international relations, political theory, and political methodology.

Political science majors gain a versatile set of analytical and organizational skills that can be applied in a wide range of exciting careers in government, law, business, international organizations, nonprofit organizations, survey research, journalism, and teaching.

Advising

All majors have a primary academic advisor assigned in ConnectCarolina. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. Students seeking advice about the political science major are encouraged to meet with the department’s undergraduate advisor or the director of undergraduate studies during their office hours (see contact information above). Further information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be obtained from the department’s website (http://politicalscience.unc.edu).

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

Students with a major in political science may choose to continue their studies in a number of professional areas, including law, business administration, public administration, public policy analysis, international relations, and area studies. Students seeking to become professional political scientists should pursue graduate study in a Ph.D. program in political science.

The following is a brief listing of careers for which a major in political science is valuable preparation:

- positions with government agencies, such as the Foreign Service
- positions with international organizations, such the United Nations
- positions with nongovernmental and nonprofit organizations
- law-related professions
- business professions, including data analysis and survey research
- media and journalism
- governmental research in universities, libraries, and think tanks
- secondary- and university-level teaching and administration
- federal and state government employment
- municipal management and public administration
Major

POLI-Political Science

Undergraduate-level Courses

POLI 50. First-Year Seminar: Movies and Politics. 3 Credits.
Movies often reflect important social and political issues. In this course students will see a set of movies, discuss them, and put them into social and political contexts.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR, FC-POWER.
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS, CI.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

POLI 52. First-Year Seminar: Friendship in Political Thought. 3 Credits.
This seminar will explore what relationships have been designated "friendship" in the past, and why they are of such concern to political and ethical philosophers like Plato, Aristotle, Cicero, Montaigne, and Emerson. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR, FC-VALUES.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PH, CI.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

POLI 57. First-Year Seminar: Democratic Governance in Contemporary Latin America. 3 Credits.
This seminar explores challenges in democratic governance in contemporary Latin America. With important regional variations, the exercise of state power reflects historical continuities of corruption, patronage politics, and other abuses of state resources. There are also demands for accountability and transparency across the region and more independent judiciaries.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR, FC-GLOBAL.
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS, BN.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

POLI 59. First-Year Seminar: Revolution, America in 1776 and France in 1789. 3 Credits.
We examine the political theory of revolution at two dramatic moments in history: The American Revolution and The French Revolution. This course is throws students into New York City in 1775 and Paris in 1791 by recreating and engaging with the ideas and arguments of these times through two, role-immersive simulations.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS, NA.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

POLI 63. First-Year Seminar: Social Movements and Political Protest and Violence. 3 Credits.
Unconventional collective political behavior: mass movements, riots, demonstrations, revolts, and revolution.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR, FC-POWER.
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS, NA.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Political Science Major, B.A.

Are you interested in politics in the U.S. and globally? Questions concerning how we ought to govern ourselves? Critical issues such as health, the environment, migration, and civil rights? Theories about how power and resources are allocated in society? Do you want to study these subjects and pursue a career based on your interests? If so, you should consider studying political science.

As Harold Laswell famously noted, politics is "who gets what, when, and how." Political science focuses on the study of politics in the United States and around the world. As a political science major, you will take a broad range of courses across five subfields: American politics, comparative politics, international relations, political theory, and political methodology. The flexible major requirements also allow you to focus your coursework on the areas of political science that draw your interest.

Political science majors gain a versatile set of analytical and organizational skills that can be applied in a wide range of exciting careers in government, law, business, international organizations, nonprofit organizations, survey research, journalism, and teaching.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the political science program, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate a command of at least one of the following areas of substantive knowledge:
  - Themes and concepts that have shaped the Western political tradition, as well as core contemporary political theoretical issues
  - Principles and processes of American political institutions, political behavior, and civic culture
  - Principles and processes of political institutions, political behavior, and civic culture in societies other than the United States
  - Fundamental structures and forces that shape relations between states
- Demonstrate competence in the identification, use, and development of theoretical explanations appropriate for the study of their respective areas of substantive focus. These skills may include:
  - Evaluating competing theories of political explanation
  - Reconstructing the logic of political theories
  - Constructing theoretical models intended to address specific questions in political analysis
- Demonstrate a working understanding of the methods appropriate for developing rigorous description and explanation of political phenomena. These may include one or more of the following, depending on the student's area of substantive interest:
  - Principles of textual interpretation and critical evaluation
  - Identification, collection, and organization of empirical data
  - Use of qualitative, quantitative, and other analytical techniques for analyzing data

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Four political science (POLI) electives at the 100 level or above

Total Hours: 27

H: Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

F: FYLaunch class sections may be available. A FY-Launch section fulfills the same requirements as a standard section of that course, but also fulfills the FY-SEMINAR/FY-LAUNCH First-Year Foundations requirement. Students can search for FY-Launch sections in ConnectCarolina using the FY-LAUNCH attribute.

1. Whenever possible, students are encouraged to take a research methods course in political science. However, students with a second major in a related discipline may find it beneficial to fulfill this requirement with one of the alternative courses.

2. First-year seminars, POLI 193, and POLI 291 may not count as electives for the political science major.

3. Whenever possible, students should take an introductory course in a subfield (American politics, comparative politics, international relations, political theory) before taking more advanced courses in the subfield.

Data in Politics

The Data in Politics track provides political science majors an opportunity to develop valuable data analysis skills and engage in cutting-edge political science research. As part of this track, students can take a two-course core sequence and additional applied data analysis courses. The Data in Politics core sequence teaches students how to work with and analyze social science data. Applied data analysis courses build on this foundation by providing students opportunities to actively use data skills as part of a research paper or other class project.

Global Politics
Global politics courses explore politics beyond the United States through the study of comparative politics and international relations. Comparative politics courses examine domestic political institutions and processes in countries around the world, while international relations courses explore political and economic relations in the international system.

Political Theory

Political theory courses examine political ideas and values like justice, power, and democracy that we use to describe, understand, and assess political practices and institutions. These courses analyze the writings and ideas of political thinkers in the classical and modern worlds.

Research Methods

Courses in political methodology examine the methods that political scientists use to conduct research. Empirical methods courses teach students how to collect and analyze data and evidence to understand political phenomena, while formal theory courses introduce students to the use of mathematical models to analyze political decision making.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan... may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC-Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Special Opportunities in Political Science

Political Science Major, NUS Joint Degree

Political science majors may wish to consider applying for the Joint Degree Program, an innovative joint undergraduate degree program joining the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the National University of Singapore. UNC-Chapel Hill undergraduates spend anywhere from two to four semesters at the National University of Singapore and receive a joint bachelor of arts degree from both institutions. For further information, contact the Study Abroad Office.

Honors in Political Science

The honors program provides political science majors the opportunity to pursue an independent research project over a two-semester period. Students begin the program by taking POLI 691H in the spring semester of their junior year. During this course they complete a thesis proposal.

If the proposal is acceptable, students continue their thesis research in the senior year under the supervision of the honors director and a faculty advisor in POLI 692H and POLI 693H. A maximum of two honors thesis courses can count as elective credit in the major. Upon successful completion of the program, which includes an oral defense of the thesis, students are awarded a degree with honors or with highest honors in political science.

To be admitted to the honors program, students must have at least a 3.3 overall grade point average and a 3.5 in political science courses. They should have completed at least four courses in the major. Students interested in participating in the honors program apply in the fall of their junior year when applications are requested. For further information on the honors program, please consult the department’s website (http://politicalscience.unc.edu/undergraduate/honors-program/).

High-Impact/Experiential Education

Internship courses provide students with the opportunity to earn academic credit while obtaining practical work experience in agencies and organizations clearly related to the study of political science. Political science majors who would like to obtain credit for internship work in government or public service must enroll in POLI 193. While this course satisfies the high-impact/experiential education General Education requirement, POLI 193 is offered on a Pass/Fail basis only and does not count towards the nine courses required for the major. For specific information about the procedures and requirements for POLI 193, please consult the department’s website (http://politicalscience.unc.edu/undergraduate/internships/).

Study Abroad

Because we live in an increasingly globalized society, students are encouraged to study abroad as they are able. Students interested in the fields of comparative politics and international relations are strongly urged to participate in a study abroad program; indeed, all students may find the experience to be transformational and helpful in choosing a career path. Students are advised to work with the Study Abroad Office and to contact the undergraduate advisor when planning their study abroad experience. For information about applying study abroad credit toward the political science major, please consult the department’s website (http://politicalscience.unc.edu/undergraduate-programs/current-students/study-abroad/).

Undergraduate Research

Courses in political science often include a research component, and students may engage in directed research under the supervision of a faculty advisor. The honors program provides political science majors the opportunity to pursue an independent research project over a two-semester period, culminating in a senior thesis. See the section above for more information on the honors program.
POLI 395 Mentored Research in Political Science provides an opportunity for students to pursue a special research interest under the direction of a faculty member of the Department of Political Science. The research and writing entailed in a mentored research course must be equivalent to the workload of a regular course. For specific information about the procedures and requirements for POLI 395, please consult the department's website (http://politicscience.unc.edu/undergraduate/independent-study/).

Undergraduate Awards

Pi Sigma Alpha is the national political science honorary society. Membership is restricted to those political science majors who have completed 15 hours of political science with an overall grade average of 3.3 or better and a political science grade average of 3.5 or better.

The Thad L. Beyle Research Award is given to undergraduate political science majors, with priority given to students writing a senior honors thesis.

The William Scott Bryant Award funds research and travel for undergraduate majors in the Department of Political Science, with priority given to seniors.

The D'Amico Endowment Fund for Honors Students funds academic research and activities for honors students in the Department of Political Science.

The Shepard Jones Undergraduate Award in International Relations is given to an undergraduate student for the best essay in political science, with priority given to students in the Department of Political Science.

The L. Richardson Preyer Award for Excellence in Political Science is given to a senior judged by a committee of the faculty to have the most distinguished record of scholarship in political science and service to the community.

The Terry Sanford Award for Excellence is given to the undergraduate student judged to have written the best political science honors thesis.

Department of Psychology and Neuroscience

Introduction

In the undergraduate study of psychology, the emphasis is on a broad acquaintance with the behavioral sciences, not specialization. The subject matter is preparatory to a career in psychology either in basic research and teaching, or in any number of professional applications to various human problems. A psychology major may prove valuable to those planning other professional careers such as medicine, law, education, or business, as well as to those who seek a broad cultural background in the behavioral sciences.

The undergraduate study of neuroscience embodies the liberal arts experience as it draws on techniques and findings from several academic disciplines including biology, chemistry, computer science, mathematics, physics, and psychology. The neuroscience major provides students with the fundamental knowledge and exposure needed to pursue careers and post-graduate studies in fields related to neuroscience, human development and aging, health and disease, rehabilitation, biomedical research, human-machine interactions, and other emerging disciplines.

Follow us on Twitter (@uncCHpsych) and Facebook (http://facebook.com/uncCHpsychology/).

Advising

All psychology and neuroscience majors have a primary university academic advisor assigned in Connect Carolina. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their university academic advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. It is also strongly advised that students prioritize enrolling in one or more core major requirements every semester. Department advisors are also available and students can see who department academic advisors are, how to contact and/or make appointments with them, and see what types of advising are offered here (https://psychology.unc.edu/academic-advising/). Especially note that there are different departmental advisors for psychology and neuroscience majors. Students who are considering graduate studies in psychology or neuroscience are particularly encouraged to contact departmental advisors. Students interested in medical and/or health careers are strongly encouraged to connect with Pre-professional and Pre-graduate Advising (https://careers.unc.edu/students/pre-professional-pre-graduate-advising/) and Health Professions Advising (https://hpa.unc.edu/explore/explore-health-careers/medicine/). Particularly note that medical and/or health professional schools may recommend, though not require, psychology courses. Additional information about courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, and various clubs and organizations may be obtained from the department’s website (https://psychology.unc.edu/). (Please see all options under the "Undergraduate Studies" tab.)

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

The psychology B.A. and B.S. degree programs, and the neuroscience B.S. degree program, prepare students for entry into graduate programs in psychology, neuroscience, and a large number of related areas. All degrees, augmented by courses dictated by various graduate and professional schools, also provide training that has proved beneficial for those applying to business, law, and medical schools.

Undergraduate psychology and neuroscience majors seek and find employment in a wide range of occupations, and many continue their education and training in graduate school. Students should understand that many of the occupations traditionally associated with psychology (e.g., clinical psychologist) are licensed specialties that require graduate training.

Courses

NSCI-Neuroscience

Undergraduate-level Courses

NSCI 61. First-Year Seminar: Drug Addiction: Fact and Fiction. 3 Credits.
The course will tackle questions through classroom discussions, lectures, movies, writing assignments, and a visit to a research laboratory and a treatment facility. Students will be introduced to fundamental concepts in addiction research. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL, CI.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 71. First Year Seminar: Plasticity and the Brain. 3 Credits.
This course will introduce students to the recent research and debate regarding neural plasticity and the ability of the healthy adult brain to change. Exciting new research suggests that the ability of the adult brain to change goes well beyond simply acquiring new knowledge and memories. Previously offered as PSYC 71.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 89. First Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.
Content varies by semester. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 175. Introduction to Neuroscience. 3 Credits.
Provides an introduction to the structure and function of the nervous system. Fundamental principles will be introduced including nervous system anatomy; molecular and cellular properties of the nervous system; sensory and motor systems; current methods used in neuroscience; and how the nervous system produces behavior and cognition. This course provides greater breadth and depth of neuroscience topics, as compared to Biopsychology (PSYC 220). Previously offered as PSYC 175 and 315. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
NSCI 190. Special Topics in Neuroscience. 3 Credits.
An undergraduate seminar course that is designed to be a participatory intellectual adventure on an advanced, emergent, and stimulating topic within a selected discipline of neuroscience. This course does not count as credit toward the neuroscience major or minor.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 221. Neuropsychopharmacology. 3 Credits.
This course provides an introduction to the scientific study of psychopharmacology, with emphasis on drugs of abuse and psychotherapeutic drugs. Previously offered as NSCI/PSYC 320.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and PSYC 220.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 222. Learning. 3 Credits.
Topics in Pavlovian and operant (instrumental) conditioning, learning theory, higher order cognitive learning, and application of those principles to mental-health related situations. Previously offered as PSYC 222. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 225. Sensation and Perception. 3 Credits.
Topics in vision, audition, and the lower senses. Receptor mechanisms, psychophysical methods, and selected perceptual phenomena will be discussed. Previously offered as PSYC 225. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 271. Cellular Mechanisms in Addiction Lab. 3 Credits.
Cellular Mechanisms in Addiction is a laboratory and research-based course aimed at investigating the cellular underpinnings of drug addiction. Students will gain hands-on experience in cutting-edge approaches utilized in addiction research. Utilizing rodent brain tissue and immunohistochemistry techniques, students will delve into the cellular and molecular changes associated with addiction. Majors only.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175; Pre- or corequisite, PSYC 210 or STOR 155.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 273. Brainwaves: Human Electroencephalography Lab. 3 Credits.
This research-based course is focused on understanding the neural underpinnings of electroencephalography (EEG) data. By synchronizing EEG recorded on the scalp with experimental events, Event-Related Potentials (ERPs) link human brain activity to specific mental processes. Students will gain technical skills, through hands-on experience, in processing, analyzing, and interpreting electrophysiological data. Majors only.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 274. Neurophysiology Data Science Lab. 3 Credits.
In this research-based course, students will design novel experiments to examine sex differences in large neurophysiology datasets. Students will use Python to access and analyze data. Students will also learn research literature analysis, experimental design, data analysis, collaboration, and presentation skills by developing a research proposal, paper, and poster. Students may only receive credit for one of: NSCI 274, 276, 277, 278 and 279. Restricted to Neuroscience Majors only.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 277. Addiction Neuroscience qPCR Laboratory. 3 Credits.
Addiction Neuroscience qPCR Laboratory is a laboratory and research-based course that will expose students to the fundamental and emerging approaches used in RT-qPCR addiction neuroscience research. In this course students will learn to handle rodent brains, perform cryostat sectioning, conduct reverse transcription, create a cDNA library, and utilize R programming to analyze qPCR results by studying genes of interest in the context of a drug exposed rodent. Majors only.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.
NSCI 278. Molecular Brain Imaging Lab. 3 Credits.
Students will design novel experiments to examine and visualize sex differences in the nervous system. Students will learn how to handle brain slices, neuroanatomy, microscopy, immunohistochemistry and imaging analysis techniques by studying neuronal diversity in the norepinephrine system of mice. Students will have the opportunity to develop and test hypotheses, write a research proposal, and present their work in poster form. Students may only receive credit for one: NSCI 274, 276, 277 and 279. Majors only.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175 and one of the following: PSYC 210 or STOR 155.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 279. Microglia Laboratory. 3 Credits.
In this laboratory course, students will utilize molecular biology techniques (e.g., immunohistochemistry and immunoassays) while developing and testing hypotheses regarding how environmental or experimental conditions alter microglia. Students will work in teams to design an experiment, and then collect, analyze, and report data. Students may only receive credit for one of: NSCI 274, 276, 277 and 279. Neuroscience majors only.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175 and one of the following: PSYC 210 or STOR 155.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 290. Current Topics In Neuroscience. 3 Credits.
Various special areas of neuroscience study, offered as needed. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175.
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 294. Service Learning in Neuroscience: APPLES. 1-3 Credits.
Permission of the instructor. Service learning component for students enrolled in Neuroscience APPLES courses. May not count toward the major or minor.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-SERVICE.
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 326. Neuroscience Career Development, Networking & Applications in the Working World. 3 Credits.
This course provides students interested in the neuroscience field an opportunity to gain valuable networking, job application and interviewing skills. Over the course of the semester students will meet with neuroscience professionals and create application packages. Students will learn from individuals in neuroscience related jobs about the diverse careers options available and strategies for navigating the job market successfully. Students will explore advances in neuroscience research and how they relate to industry, research, etc. Majors only.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 390. Current Topics In Neuroscience. 3 Credits.
Various special areas of neuroscience study, offered as needed.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175.
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 395. Independent Research. 1-3 Credits.
Supervised research resulting in a written report for declared NSCI majors. May be repeated for credit up to six hours. Up to three hours may count as a neuroscience methods elective. Permission of the instructor.

Rules & Requirements
 IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175 and two additional STEM courses one of which must be at the 200 level or above; a minimum of a 3.0 cumulative grade point average.
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 6 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level Courses

NSCI 405. Advanced Molecular Neuropharmacology. 3 Credits.
This course will examine the molecular basis of drug action in the brain. Students will learn about ligand-receptor interactions and modulation of receptor number, structure, and function by drugs. Detailed examples will examine the molecular details of both ligand-gated ion channels and G-protein coupled receptors. The course will use analysis of primary literature and a semester-long makerspace project to delve into research where central themes will include developing critical thinking, design thinking, and communication skills.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-CREATE, RESEARCH.
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175 or both PSYC 101 and PSYC 220; and NSCI 221.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
NSCI 415. History of Neuroscience. 3 Credits.
In this class, we will consider how neuroscience emerged as a multidisciplinary field. The class will cover key research findings that propelled the field forward. We will also delve into the autobiographies of some of the pioneering researchers who made these important discoveries. Previously offered as PSYC 415.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and 220.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 418. Gial Neuroscience. 3 Credits.
The purpose of this course is to provide an in-depth investigation into glia cells in the brain, and their roles in health and disease. We will focus particularly on astrocytes, microglia, and oligodendrocytes, but we will also cover and discuss other glial cell types as well. A general overview will be provided for each topic, followed by study and discussion of primary literature.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and 220.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 419. Behavioral Endocrinology. 3 Credits.
The endocrine and nervous systems interact with each other in complex ways to influence behavioral processes. In this course, we will discuss the ways by which hormones regulate homeostatic and social behaviors, learning, stress responses, and affective disorders, among others. Additionally, we will read scientific articles to learn about advances in the field of neuroendocrinology.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-NATSCI or FC-QUANT.
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 220.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 420. Functional Neuroanatomy. 3 Credits.
For advanced undergraduate and graduate students. An introduction to human neuroanatomy, covering function of the neuroanatomy of each major system and relation to neurobehavioral disorders associated with damage to the neuroanatomy of the system. Previously offered as PSYC 420.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175, or PSYC 101 and 220; recommended preparation, EXSS 175.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 421. Principles of Brain Circuits. 3 Credits.
This course is designed for upper-level undergraduates who are interested in how brain circuits control behavior. A major focus will be the new technique of optogenetics that is revolutionizing our approach to systems neuroscience. Circuits that control movement, sensation, sleep, memory, and fear will be explored in detail. Points of emphasis will be circuits mediating pain as related to actions of opiates and circuits mediating feeding behavior as related to obesity.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and PSYC 220; BIOL 101 recommended.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 422. Genetics of Brain Diseases. 3 Credits.
This course will explore the manifestations and causes of important neurological and psychiatric diseases. A particular focus will be the impact of advances in genetics on our understanding of these disorders. Disorders that affect large numbers of patients including Alzheimer's disease, autism, and schizophrenia will be studied in detail.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and PSYC 220.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 423. Cellular and Molecular Neurotechnology. 3 Credits.
This course addresses fundamental challenges inherent in studying the brain and explores the theory, applications, and limitations of new and traditional neurotechnology. The unique ethical issues and significance of interdisciplinary approaches in neuroscience will also be highlighted. Students will analyze research literature and focus on cellular, molecular, and genetic techniques that are essential staples in the neuroscientist's toolkit. Students will also design experiments, utilize publicly available resources, and analyze big data generated by high-throughput approaches.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and PSYC 220.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 424. Neural Connections: Hands on Neuroscience. 3 Credits.
This class will explore links between the brain and behavior through neuroscience outreach activities. Students will also reflect on the meaning of community engagement. By the end of the semester, each student must complete a minimum of 30 hours of service within the community. Previously offered as PSYC 424.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-SERVICE.
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and 220.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 427. Neurobiology of Aging. 3 Credits.
This course will survey clinical and experimental literature regarding the neurobiology of aging, considering different theories of aging, how aging is studied in the laboratory, and recent findings. Biochemical, molecular, physiological, and behavioral changes associated with both "normal" and pathological aging will be considered. Previously offered as PSYC 427.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and 220.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 428. Neuroscience, Society, and the Media. 3 Credits.
Neuroscience is a "hot" topic in popular media. We will consider media coverage of neuroscientific research by reading the popular press versions of studies alongside the findings from primary sources and what kinds of topics are most often covered by the media and why. Previously offered as PSYC 428.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175, or both PSYC 101 and 220.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
NSCI 434. Cognitive Neuroscience. 3 Credits.
Introduction to cognitive neuroscience. Higher mental processes including attention, memory, language, and consciousness will be covered, with an emphasis on the neural mechanisms that form the substrates of human cognition. Previously offered as PSYC 434.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, One of the following: NSCI 175, NSCI 222, NSCI 225, PSYC 220, or PSYC 230.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 439. Neuroimmunology. 3 Credits.
The nervous and immune systems interact with each other in complex ways to influence behavior, health and well-being. In this course, we will examine the mechanisms by which these two systems interact. Further, we will cover how the nervous and immune systems function together to serve homeostasis, behavior and disease.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 220.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 440. Behavioral Neuroscience and Experimental Methods in Rodents. 3 Credits.
This is to survey the wide variety of experimental methods used in rodent studies to assess behavioral outcomes, including memory, anxiety, depression, and drug seeking. This will be combined with readings on how changes in brain circuitry can affect behavioral outcomes, such as drugs of abuse or other disease states.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 220.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 490. Current Topics in Neuroscience. 3 Credits.
Various special areas of neuroscience study, offered as needed. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 220.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 493. Internship in Neuroscience. 3 Credits.
Required preparation, minimum of two other neuroscience courses and junior/senior standing. Designed for highly motivated neuroscience majors interested in exploring professional opportunities in neuroscience-related areas. Juniors and seniors only.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-INTERN.
Requisites: Prerequisites, NSCI 175 and two additional NSCI courses.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 507. Autism. 3 Credits.
Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) is characterized by difficulty in communication and social interaction. This course will examine scientific advancements in diagnosis, causes, and interventions for ASD. Additional topics include neurodiversity and inclusion.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 568. Emotion. 3 Credits.
This course will provide a comprehensive overview of the scientific study of emotion. Topics will include theoretical models of emotion process and structure. A range of perspectives, including social, cultural, developmental, clinical, and cognitive psychology, as well as behavioral neuroscience, will be considered. Previously offered as PSYC 568.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-NATSCI.
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisite, NSCI 175 or PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 573. Neuropsychobiology of Stress. 3 Credits.
Stress is a common experience in modern life that impacts psychological and physical health. In this course, we will delve into the scientific literature in psychology and neuroscience that explores how the brain and the body respond to stress, and how we can intervene to prevent stress from negatively impacting physical and mental health.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 210 and 270, and NSCI 175 or both PSYC 101 and PSYC 220.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

NSCI 693H. Honors in Neuroscience I. 3 Credits.
This course comprises the first semester in the two-semester sequence of Senior Honors in Psychology/Neuroscience. There are two components to the course: research that you will conduct under the direction of your faculty thesis advisor, and this class, which you will attend with the other senior honors students to learn about research-related topics and receive consultations with the instructor and your classmates.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Requisites: Prerequisites, A cumulative GPA of 3.3, at least one semester of PSYC/NSCI 395 or the approved equivalent, and acceptance into the Psychology or Neuroscience Senior Honors Program; PSYC/NSCI 693H must be taken in the first semester of the last year of studies.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
This course comprises the second semester in the two-semester sequence of Senior Honors in Psychology/Neuroscience. There are two components to the course: research that you will conduct under the direction of your faculty thesis advisor, and this class, which you will attend with the other senior honors students to learn about research-related topics and receive consultations with the instructor and your classmates. Admission to the neuroscience honors program required.

Rules & Requirements

- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
- Making Connections Gen Ed: SS, CI.

PSYC—Psychology

The courses available to undergraduate students are listed below. No courses numbered 700 or above may be taken by undergraduate students. Consult the current directory of classes for each semester’s offerings. PSYC 101 is prerequisite to ALL courses offered in the department except for first-year seminars, which are numbered below 100. Students and their advisors should take careful note of the specified prerequisites for advanced offerings in this listing.

Undergraduate-level Courses

- PSYC 54. First-Year Seminar: Families and Children. 3 Credits.
  - This course will consider family from a life-course perspective and family influences on child development. Research and theory concerning divorced and step families, single parents, gay and lesbian parents, and family processes that shape children's development will be examined.
  - Rules & Requirements
  - IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
  - Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
  - Grading Status: Letter grade.

- PSYC 58. First-Year Seminar: The Psychology of Mental States and Language Use. 3 Credits.
  - Examines how language use is affected by one's reasoning about the mental activities of others. We will examine the development of language, adult language use, and the language of autistic individuals, who are known to have difficulty reasoning about others' minds. This seminar will follow a discussion format. Honors version available.
  - Rules & Requirements
  - IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR, RESEARCH.
  - Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
  - Grading Status: Letter grade.

- PSYC 62. First-Year Seminar: Positive Psychology: The Science of Optimal Human Functioning. 3 Credits.
  - This course invites students to explore the opportunities presented by the vibrant and emerging field of positive psychology.
  - Rules & Requirements
  - IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
  - Making Connections Gen Ed: SS, CI.
  - Grading Status: Letter grade.

- PSYC 63. First-Year Seminar: Use, Misuse, and Addiction to Drugs in the 21st Century. 3 Credits.
  - This is a first-year seminar on the use of drugs in the U.S. Its purpose is to understand the effects of drug use on pain management, overdose prevention, substance use disorder, overdoses, diversion, legal consequences, public health policy, harm reduction, and treatment. Activities include lectures from technical experts, post-lecture discussions, readings and student-lead discussions, written summaries of class material, formal debates, and a final class project on an effective evidence-based overdose prevention program.
  - Rules & Requirements
  - IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
  - Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
  - Grading Status: Letter grade.

- PSYC 66. First-Year Seminar: Eating Disorders and Body Image. 3 Credits.
  - Students will learn about anorexia and bulimia nervosa, as well as prevention and treatment efforts. The course explores factors related to these disorders and body image from a psychosocial perspective. Learning will occur through discussions, readings, videos, guest speakers, experimental assignments, writing assignments, and research projects.
  - Rules & Requirements
  - IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
  - Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
  - Grading Status: Letter grade.

- PSYC 67. First-Year Seminar: The Senses of Animals. 3 Credits.
  - This course deals with the sensory systems of animals. A description of the human senses is included, but senses that differ from our own are emphasized. Some treatment of research methods is also included. Classes will be a mixture of lecture, discussion, and student reports.
  - Rules & Requirements
  - IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
  - Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
  - Grading Status: Letter grade.

- PSYC 68. First-Year Seminar: Psychology of Emotion. 3 Credits.
  - This first-year seminar is designed for students interested in exploring the psychological study of emotion. Topics include theoretical models of emotion process and structure, as well as a review of research questions about emotional expressions, autonomic physiology, affective neuroscience, emotion and reasoning, and emotion and health.
  - Rules & Requirements
  - IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
  - Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
  - Grading Status: Letter grade.
PSYC 89. First Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.
Special topics course. Content will vary each semester. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 101. General Psychology. 3 Credits.
PSYC 101 is a prerequisite for all psychology courses. This course will give an overview of the many different scientific perspectives from which to understand behavior, including the biological, cognitive, developmental, social and psychopathological perspectives. This course is offered in two formats: a large-course format and as a First-Year Launch.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-LAUNCH (only designated sections).
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 115. Reasoning with Data: Navigating a Quantitative World. 3 Credits.
Students will use mathematical and statistical methods to address societal problems, make personal decisions, and reason critically about the world. Authentic contexts may include voting, health and risk, digital humanities, finance, and human behavior. This course does not count as credit towards the psychology or neuroscience majors.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-KNOWING or FC-QUANT.
Making Connections Gen Ed: QI.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 180. Social Media, Technology, and the Adolescent Brain. 3 Credits.
In this course, we will learn about current evidence, theory, and controversies with regards to how technology use may affect adolescent development. Questions such as how technology is changing adolescents’ social relationships, impacting their mental health, and interacting with the developing brain to influence social, emotional, and cognitive development will be explored.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-QUANT.
Making Connections Gen Ed: QR.
Same as: MATH 115, BIOL 115, STOR 115.

PSYC 210. Statistical Principles of Psychological Research. 3 Credits.
Consideration of the methodological principles underlying psychological research, descriptive and inferential techniques, and the manner by which they may be employed to design psychological experiments and analyze behavioral data. Three lecture hours. Students may not receive credit for both PSYC 210/PSYC 210H and PSYC 215/PSYC 215H. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-KNOWING or FC-QUANT.
Making Connections Gen Ed: QI.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 220. Biopsychology. 3 Credits.
Introductory course which surveys the biological bases of behavior. Topics may include nerve cells and nerve impulses, sensory systems, wakefulness and sleep, reproductive behaviors, and cognitive functions. This course would be an appropriate foundational course for Advanced Biopsychology (PSYC 402). Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 230. Cognitive Psychology. 3 Credits.
Topics in attention; memory; visual, auditory, and other forms of information processing; decision making; and thinking. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 242. Introduction to Clinical Psychology. 3 Credits.
Overview of clinical psychology: history, scientific basis, and major activities and concerns, including assessment, psychotherapy and other psychological interventions, community psychology, ethics, and professional practice. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 245. Psychopathology. 3 Credits.
Major forms of behavior disorders in children and adults, with an emphasis on description, causation, and treatment. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 250. Child Development. 3 Credits.
Study of the development of social and intellectual behavior in normal children and the processes that underlie this development. Emphasis is typically on theory and research. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
PSYC 260. Social Psychology. 3 Credits.
Introductory survey of experimental social psychology covering attitudes, interpersonal processes, and small groups. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 270. Research Methods in Psychology. 3 Credits.
Students in this course will be exposed to a survey of methodology (i.e., experimental, quasi-experimental, non-experimental) used across various disciplines in psychology (i.e., social, clinical, development, cognitive, and neuroscience). In addition, students will work as a class to conduct research projects on a common theme. Students will spend class time planning, conducting, and writing up the results of this project. Class time will also be used to discuss methodological considerations in psychological research more broadly.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 290. Current Topics in Psychology. 1-3 Credits.
Various special areas of psychological study, offered as needed. Course may be repeated for credit. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.
Grading Status: Pass/Fail.

PSYC 294. Service Learning in Psychology: APPLES. 1-3 Credits.
Permission of the instructor. Service learning component for students enrolled in psychology APPLES courses. May not count toward the major.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-SERVICE.
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 6 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 310. Applied Statistical Methods in the Psychological Sciences. 3 Credits.
This course extends statistical and data analytic concepts covered in PSYC 210 with direct applications to empirical data commonly encountered in psychological research. Topics include measurement, group comparisons, linear associations, and prediction. An equal balance is placed on statistical concepts, computer-based data analysis, and interpretation of findings.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS, QI.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 210, PSYC 215, SOCI 252, or STOR 155.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 330. Introduction to Cognitive Science. 3 Credits.
Recommended preparation, PSYC 210 or another quantitative reasoning course. An introduction to the interdisciplinary study of the mind, intelligent behavior, information processing, and communication in living organisms and computers.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 390. Current Topics in Psychology. 1-3 Credits.
Various special areas of psychological study, offered as needed. Course may be repeated for credit.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 2 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 391. Pedagogy Course for Psychology & Neuroscience Undergraduate Learning Assistants. 3 Credits.
This course gives an overview of teaching methods that facilitate the acquisition of knowledge and understanding as well as entails hands-on experience in the classroom. Common misconceptions of learning as well as legal and ethical considerations related to working closely with an undergraduate population will also be covered. Departmental application and approval required.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-LEARNTA.
Making Connections Gen Ed: EE - Undergraduate Learning Assistant, ULA.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 395. Independent Research. 1-3 Credits.
A minimum of a 3.0 cumulative grade point average. Supervised research resulting in a written report for declared PSYC majors. May be repeated for credit up to eight hours. Up to three hours may count as a psychology elective. Permission of the instructor.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and two additional psychology courses, at least one of which must be numbered 200 or greater.
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 8 total credits. 8 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level Courses
PSYC 404. Clinical Psychopharmacology. 3 Credits.
This course will investigate the pharmacological effects and the clinical efficacy of drugs used to treat behavior disorders.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
PSYC 430. Human Memory. 3 Credits.
This course explores classic and current issues in the study of human memory. Topics include working memory, encoding and retrieval processes, implicit memory, reconstructive processes in memory, eyewitness memory, developmental changes in memory, neuropsychology and neuroscience of memory and memory disorders, memory improvement, and the repressed/recovered memory controversy.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, and 222 or 230.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 432. Psychology of Language. 3 Credits.
Recommended preparation, PSYC 230 or LING 101 or LING 400. This course examines the mental representations and cognitive processes that underlie the human ability to use language. Covers what people know about language, how they process it, and how people make inferences about the speaker’s meaning based on context. Recent work in experimental psycholinguistics is discussed.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 433. Behavioral Decision Theory. 3 Credits.
Simple mathematical and psychological models of judgment and choice, and related experiments, are treated, as are applications to real world problems in medical, environmental, policy, business, and related domains.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 435. Gender and Pronouns. 3 Credits.
This course offers an inside look at pronouns from an interdisciplinary perspective. From a cognitive perspective, we examine major models of the role that pronouns play, and the mental processes involved in using them. From a social perspective, we examine the role pronouns play in marking gender identity, and how both language usage and gender concepts are currently in flux. Students also learn about research methods and conduct a novel empirical study.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 438. Research Topics in the Psychology of Language. 3 Credits.
Examines the cognitive mechanisms behind language comprehension, focusing on how we make predictions about the speaker’s meaning, based on context, background, gestures, and other cues. In this course-based undergraduate research experience (CURE), groups of students generate novel research questions, perform their own research experiments, and present the results in spoken and written format.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: FC-LAB, RESEARCH.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101; Recommended: PSYC 270 and any course in linguistics (PSYC 432, any LING course, or any course with a substantial linguistics component).
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 453. Development of Social Behavior and Personality. 3 Credits.
Developmental processes during early childhood as these relate to social behavior and personality.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and either PSYC 210 or 215.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 467. The Development of Black Children. 3 Credits.
PSYC 210 or 215 recommended. A survey of the literature on the development of black children. Topics include peer and social relations, self-esteem, identity development, cognitive development, school achievement, parenting, family management, and neighborhood influences.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 250.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 468. Family as a Context for Development. 3 Credits.
Explores how the family influences children’s development. Topics include family theories, genetics, family structure (e.g., single parents, working mothers, divorce), discipline, parent behavior and values and beliefs, fathers and ethnic diversity.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 250, and either PSYC 210 or 215.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 469. Evolution and Development of Biobehavioral Systems. 3 Credits.
Examines the evolution and development of behavior patterns and their physiological substrates.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisites, BIOL 101 and PSYC 101, 210, or 215.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
PSYC 471. The Study of Adolescent Issues and Development. 3 Credits.
The developmental period of adolescence is studied from a multidisciplinary perspective. The course will distinguish among early, middle, and late adolescence and will cover several theoretical perspectives.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 250, and either PSYC 210 or 215.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 474. Digital Mental Health. 3 Credits.
This course will provide an overview of the use of digital technologies to increase opportunities for training in, access to, and use of evidence-based mental health services. Coverage will include the current status of and future directions in research, innovations in service delivery, and policy implications. Special attention will be given to the evolution of the field, the potential costs and benefits, and the promise to address health disparities in particular.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 490. Current Topics in Psychology. 3 Credits.
Various special areas of psychological study, offered as needed. Course may be repeated for credit. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 12 total credits. 2 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 493. Internship in Psychology. 3 Credits.
Required preparation, minimum of two other psychology courses and junior/senior standing. Designed for highly motivated psychology majors interested in exploring professional opportunities in psychology-related areas. Students complete hands-on internships at community sites for approximately 120 hours across the semester. Students also attend a weekly one-hour class with other interns.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-INTERN.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 500. Developmental Psychopathology. 3 Credits.
A survey of theories bearing on atypical development and disordered behavior, and an examination of major child and adolescent behavior problems and clinical syndromes.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 245, and 250.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 501. Theoretical, Empirical Perspectives on Personality. 3 Credits.
An in-depth coverage of the traditional clinically based personality theories of the early 20th century contrasted with more recent empirically based perspectives.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 502. Psychology of Adulthood and Aging. 3 Credits.
A developmental approach to the study of adulthood, from young adulthood through death. Topics include adult issues in personality, family dynamics, work, leisure and retirement, biological and intellectual aspects of aging, dying, and bereavement.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 250.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 503. African American Psychology. 3 Credits.
This course examines race and culture in the psychological processes and behavior of African Americans.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS, US.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 504. Health Psychology. 3 Credits.
An in-depth coverage of psychological, biological, and social factors that may be involved with health.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 245.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 505. Sports and Performance Psychology. 3 Credits.
This course examines the mental health and psychological factors that impact the performance of athletes. Furthermore, the mental health of sports fans, along with the physiological and psychological impact of being a spectator will be examined.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101, 242 or 245.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 514. Mania and Depression. 3 Credits.
The social, developmental, and biological contributions to mania and depression are examined, as well as the impact of these moods on the brain, creativity, relationships, quality of life, and health.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 245.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
PSYC 517. Addiction. 3 Credits.
PSYC 245 and 270 recommended but not required. This course will provide students with a comprehensive overview of the etiology and treatment of addiction, along with exposure to real-life stories of addiction.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 518H. Creating Digital Tools for Positive Youth Development. 3 Credits.
In this upper-level course, students will learn about the interdisciplinary field of Positive Youth Development and create a digital tool to improve health, well-being, or developmental outcomes for youth through an intensive semester-long project.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-CREATE.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 250.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 525. Psychological Archival Data Science. 3 Credits.
This course addresses techniques in answering new questions with existing data. Students will learn about data from multiple perspectives: different data source and types, intended audiences, and visualization, analysis, and presentation formats. This will make students more savvy consumers as well as producers of data.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: CI, EE- Mentored Research, QI.
Requisites: Pre- or corequisites, PSYC 270 and 245.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 528. Clinical Research: Design, Analyze, Disseminate. 3 Credits.
Students work with a community partner to identify a research question related to our understanding and treatment of psychological health. Using an iterative scientific method, students collaborate to develop hypotheses, to prepare and analyze data, to propose interpretations of data, and to present their results to the public.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Making Connections Gen Ed: EE- Mentored Research, QI.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and either PSYC 210 or 215; Pre- or corequisite, PSYC 270.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 530. Design and Interpretation of Psychological Research. 3 Credits.
Emphasis on the methodological principles underlying experimental and correlational research. Interaction of theory and practice in the design and interpretation of psychological studies. This is a course-based undergraduate research experience (CURE).

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL, CI, EE- Mentored Research, QI.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 270.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 531. Tests and Measurement. 3 Credits.
Basic psychometric theory underlying test construction and utilization. Detailed study of issues and instruments used in assessing intellectual functioning, educational progress, personality, and personnel selection.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS, QI.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, and either PSYC 210 or 215.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 532. Quantitative Psychology. 3 Credits.
This course examines the science of quantitative psychology. Topics include the analysis of data, the design of questionnaires, and the assessment of psychological attributes, among others. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 210, 215, SOCI 252, or STOR 155.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 533. The General Linear Model in Psychology. 3 Credits.
Consideration of multiple regression and the general linear model in psychological research, including hypothesis testing, model formulation, and the analysis of observational and experimental data. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, ECON 400, PSYC 210, PSYC 215, SOCI 252 or STOR 155.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 534. Introduction to Computational Statistics. 3 Credits.
Introduction to programming and the implementation of statistical techniques. Topics include data manipulation, graphical procedures, writing loops and functions, data simulation, use of regular expressions, and scraping data from the web.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL, QI.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 210, 215, SOCI 252, or STOR 155.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 535. Programming for Psychologists: Computational Tools for Psychological Research. 3 Credits.
In this course, we will cover fundamental coding practices and computational tools used frequently in psychology research. We will go over the basics of coding, how to present computer-based experiments, how to keep a digital lab notebook, univariate data analyses, and visualization through programming. Through this process, students will have the opportunity to develop and run a simple experiment from start to finish.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-QUANT, FC-LAB, RESEARCH.
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS, QI.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101; Pre- or corequisite, PSYC 210.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
PSYC 559. Applied Machine Learning in Psychology. 3 Credits.
As opposed to hypothesis-driven data analysis, machine learning takes an exploratory and predictive approach to data analysis. This course introduces machine learning approaches in psychology to identify important variables for prediction and uncover complex patterns in datasets, such as nonlinearity, interactions, or clusters. Classes include theoretical lectures and hands-on examples.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, and either PSYC 210 or 215.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 562. Psychology of Race and Racism. 3 Credits.
This course offers an overview of research investigating the psychological underpinnings and impacts of racialization, racism, and racial inequality. It will center research in social psychology, but will also feature work from other areas of psychology (e.g., developmental), as well as other social science disciplines (e.g., sociology, political science).

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, and either PSYC 210 or 215.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 564. Interpersonal Relationships. 3 Credits.
PSYC 270 Recommended. This advanced course will comprehensively cover the social psychological literature on normally-developing interpersonal relationships, with implications for relationships with family, friends, co-workers, and romantic partners. This is a research-intensive course with a major aspect involving an independent research project to facilitate learning by doing.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 260, and either PSYC 210 or 215.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 565. Stereotyping, Prejudice, and Discrimination. 3 Credits.
PSYC 270 recommended. Examines the determinants, functions, processes, and consequences of stereotyping, prejudice, and discrimination. Prospects for change are considered. Class presentations and participation required.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 260, and either PSYC 210 or 215.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 566. Attitude Change. 3 Credits.
A detailed consideration of the theoretical issues in attitude and belief change.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 260, and either 210 or 215.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 569. Practical Wisdom from Advanced Social Psychology. 3 Credits.
Surveys cutting-edge research across the field of social psychology and how it matters for everyday life. Topics include morality, mind perception, judgment and decision making, happiness, affective forecasting, emotion, relationships, negotiation, and religion. Clear communication of research also emphasized through figures, presentations, and papers.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 260, and 270.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 570. The Social Psychology of Self-Regulation. 3 Credits.
PSYC 270 recommended. An intensive review of self-regulation theory and research, focusing on the cognitive, motivational, and affective processes involved in goal commitment, monitoring, and overriding behavioral responses.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, 260, and either PSYC 210 or 215.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 571. Social Neuroscience. 3 Credits.
Social neuroscience is the study of how social processes and experiences are represented and influence the structure and function of the brain. This course will focus primarily on functional magnetic resonance imaging (fMRI) studies of humans, though we will also discuss other brain imaging techniques and patient studies. Previously offered as NSCI 571.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PL.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 220 or NSCI 175, PSYC 260 recommended.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 572. Theoretical and Empirical Perspectives on Sex and Gender Differences. 3 Credits.
An in-depth examination of psychological research and theory pertaining to the influence of gender on the lives of men and women. In general, emphasis will be placed on understanding gender as a social psychological construct.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101 and 260.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 573. Psychology of Women and Gender. 3 Credits.
This course will discuss theories, methods, and empirical research findings on the physical, cognitive, emotional, and social aspects of the psychology of women, as well as topics such as feminist psychology, intersectionality, bias in psychological research, sexual orientation, sexuality, lifespan development, work, and health. Men and masculinity, the psychology of transgender persons, and a critique of the gender binary are also discussed.

Rules & Requirements
Ideas in Action Gen Ed: FC-POWER.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101 or WGST 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: WGST 573.
PSYC 574. Science of Moral Understanding. 3 Credits.
Each of us is committed to our moral values and often struggle to understand those who with different beliefs. This course will focus on difficult moral disagreements (e.g., abortion, euthanasia), using social psychology and related disciplines to reveal the basis of our moral judgments, the drivers of moral divides, and how best to bridge them. We will cover both theory and application, and practice having constructive dialogue and civil disagreement to forge moral understanding.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: PH.
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, and 260.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 575. Positive Psychology. 3 Credits.
This course examines positive psychology, also called the science of thriving. One basic premise of positive psychology is that thriving individuals and thriving communities require the presence and interplay of positive emotions, positive relationships, and positive meaning. A second basic premise is that thriving does not result simply by curing pathology and eliminating problems. Rather, thriving requires building and capitalizing on human strengths and capacities. Students will apply course concepts in their everyday lives.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: SS.
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 601. Psychology and Law. 3 Credits.
Examines the legal system from the perspective of psychology methods and research, with a focus on criminal law. Discusses dilemmas within the law and between the legal system and psychology.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, PSYC 101, and either PSYC 210 or PSYC 215.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 602. Evolutionary Psychology. 3 Credits.
Major topics of general psychology are examined from an evolutionary perspective with an emphasis on empirical studies asking why much current human behavior and experience would have been adaptive for our early ancestors.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, PSYC 101.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 693H. Honors in Psychology I. 3 Credits.
To be taken in the fall of the last year of studies as the first course in the two-semester honors sequence. Students conduct research under the direction of a faculty advisor and receive classroom instruction in research-related topics.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Requisites: Prerequisites, A cumulative GPA of 3.3, completion of PSYC/NSCI 693H, at least one semester of PSYC/NSCI 395 or the approved equivalent, and acceptance into the Psychology or Neuroscience Senior Honors Program; PSYC/NSCI 694H must be taken in the second semester of the last year of studies.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

PSYC 694H. Honors in Psychology II. 3 Credits.
This course comprises the second semester in the two-semester sequence of Senior Honors in Psychology/Neuroscience. There are two components to the course: research that you will conduct under the direction of your faculty thesis advisor, and this class, which you will attend with the other senior honors students to learn about research-related topics and receive consultations with the instructor and your classmates. Admission to the psychology honors program required.

Neuroscience Major, B.S.

Neuroscience embodies the liberal arts experience as it draws on techniques and findings from several academic disciplines including biology, chemistry, computer science, mathematics, physics, and psychology. This program provides students with the fundamental knowledge and exposure needed to pursue careers and post-graduate studies in fields related to psychology, human development and aging, health and disease, rehabilitation, biomedical research, biotechnology, human-machine interactions, and other emerging disciplines.

The neuroscience major is open to all undergraduate students.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the neuroscience program, students should be able to:

- Knowledge Base: Demonstrate familiarity with the major concepts, theoretical perspectives, empirical findings, and trends in neuroscience including its links to other science disciplines
- Scientific Inquiry and Critical Thinking Skills: Apply basic research methods in neuroscience, including research design, data analysis, and interpretation. Demonstrate scientific reasoning, problem solving, and critical thinking
- Ethics and Responsible Conduct of Research: Demonstrate use of empirical evidence, tolerate ambiguity, act ethically, and reflect other values that are the underpinning of neuroscience as a science
- Communication: Demonstrate competence in writing and in oral communication skills. Be able to produce a research study or other neuroscience project, explain its scientific results, and present information
- Individual and Professional Development: Develop the ability to apply neuroscience content, skills, project management, and teamwork skills to career preparation. Awareness of career opportunities and paths toward career goals

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must:

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

1 Course requires a prerequisite(s) not otherwise counting in the major. Please review prerequisite information carefully when planning your course selection.

2 Students may take one of COMP 283, MATH 381, or STOR 215.

3 Students may only count NSCI 395 for three (3) hours of credit in the MMS elective.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

---

1. Students are strongly encouraged to fulfill the FY-Seminar or FY-Launch First-Year Foundation requirement with a FY-Launch course in the major. Several FY-Launch course options are available. If done, then students can take an additional Gen Ed course in the fall semester.

2. Students planning to apply to medical schools are advised to include BIOL 252 and BIOL 252L as a general elective in their course plan.

3. Students planning to apply to medical schools are advised to include CHEM 430 as a knowledge elective in their course plan.

4. Students are strongly encouraged to prioritize NSCI 27* neuroscience research methods labs. However, PSYC 270 will still fulfill the research methods requirement.

Special Opportunities in Psychology and Neuroscience

Honors in Psychology and Neuroscience

Any major in the program with an overall grade point average of 3.3 or higher and prior research experience in a faculty lab (e.g., PSYC 395 or NSCI 395) is eligible for enrollment in the departmental senior honors thesis program. Each candidate for honors participates in a two-semester course sequence (PSYC 693H and PSYC 694H or NSCI 693H and NSCI 694H) and carries out independent research in an area of the student’s choice under the guidance of a psychology and neuroscience faculty member. Please see the department website for the application requirements.
form (https://psychology.unc.edu/honors-program/) and additional information.

Departmental Involvement

The Carolina Psychology and Neuroscience Ambassadors Program (https://tarheels.live/psychology-and-neuroscience-ambassadors/) is a peer mentoring program which connects relative new or inexperienced psychology and/or neuroscience majors with more advanced and experienced students, in order to create stronger networking and provide greater access to support and resources.

The Carolina Neuroscience Club (http://carolinaneuroscience.web.unc.edu) brings together students who have an interest in the brain and nervous system. Club members meet regularly to discuss courses, research articles, and post-college neuroscience opportunities. Membership is open to anyone interested in neuroscience.

Psi Chi (https://heellife.unc.edu/organization/psi-chi--psychology-national-honor-society--unch/) is the National Honor Society for psychology. UNC’s chapter strives to increase awareness of career options as well as the role of psychology in the community, among exemplary psychology students.

Nu Rho Psi (https://nurhopsi.org/) is the National Honor Society for neuroscience. The Nu Rho Psi chapter at Carolina aims to build connections among neuroscience students on campus, celebrate brain awareness week in our community, provide mentorship to underclassmen interested in the field, and much more.

Helping Give Away Psychological Science (https://www.hgaps.org/) is a student-based nonprofit organization to improve information about psychology on Wikipedia, on other online sites, and in the community.

High-Impact/Experiential Education

Several opportunities for experiential education are available. The Karen M. Gil Internship Program (http://psychology.unc.edu/undergraduate-studies/gil-internship/) offers both course credit and a monthly stipend to selected psychology and neuroscience majors who are placed in approved internship sites in the community. Interns are selected through a competitive process (minimum grade point average is 3.4). Other experiential education opportunities include PSYC 395; NSCI 395; PSYC 693H; PSYC 694H; NSCI 693H; NSCI 694H; course-based research courses (such as NSCI 27* lab-based research courses); or courses where service learning is a central focus, such as a psychology or neuroscience course with an APPLES (https://ccps.unc.edu/apples/) program component.

Undergraduate Awards

The Department of Psychology and Neuroscience administers several undergraduate awards: the Dashiell-Thurstone Prize; the David Bray Peele Undergraduate Award; the Donald T. Lysle Service Award; the Lindquist Undergraduate Research Award; the J. Steven Reznick Award for Diversity Enhancement in Psychological Research; the J. Steven Reznick Diversity and Psychological Research Grant; and the Susan M. McHale Award for Outstanding Research by a Student Who Enhances Diversity, as well as several fellowships and grants administered through the UNC Office for Undergraduate Research (https://our.unc.edu/) or the UNC Honors Carolina Office (https://honorcarolina.unc.edu/). Additional honors include election to Psi Chi, the national honor society for psychology undergraduates, and/or election to Nu Rho Psi, the national honor society for neuroscience undergraduates. Each year, the Lindquist Undergraduate Research Award is given to several undergraduate students to support their research; the Dashiell-Thurstone Prize is awarded to one student for the best undergraduate research project; the David Bray Peel Undergraduate Award is given for the best honors project; and the Donald T. Lysle Service Award is given to a psychology or neuroscience major who has made exemplary service contributions. The Donald T. Lysle Service Award is presented at the Chancellor’s Award Ceremony, the only campus-wide recognition at Carolina. The department also supports awards that support diversity. The J. Steven Reznick Award for Outstanding Research That Enhances Diversity is for a graduating senior who has conducted excellent research that contributes to psychological knowledge about diversity and the J. Steven Reznick Diversity and Psychological Research Grant as well as the Susan M. McHale Award for Outstanding Research by a Student Who Enhances Diversity are awarded to student researchers who identify as being from an underrepresented population. For each of these awards, diversity is broadly defined, including but not limited to diversity based on race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, gender, disability, religious affiliation, and socioeconomic status. For additional details on these awards, please visit the Psychology and Neuroscience page on undergraduate awards (https://psychology.unc.edu/departmental-awards/#undergraduateawards).

Undergraduate Research

Qualified students interested in doing independent research under the direction of a faculty member may enroll for independent research credit (PSYC 395 or NSCI 395). Students interested in this option should speak directly with psychology faculty members regarding opportunities in their laboratories. Additional information is available on the department’s website (https://psychology.unc.edu/undergraduate-studies/undergraduate-research/). Many other psychology and neuroscience courses also include heavy research components and/or meet the general education research and discovery requirement (NSCI 27* labs). See the research methods, research intensive, and research exposure courses at the Office for Undergraduate Research (https://our.unc.edu/find-research-courses/).

Psychology Major, B.A.

In the undergraduate study of psychology, the emphasis is on a broad acquaintance with the behavioral sciences, not specialization. The subject matter is preparatory to a career in psychology either in basic research and teaching, or in any number of professional applications to various human problems. A psychology major may prove valuable to those planning other professional careers such as medicine, law, education, or business, as well as to those who seek a broad cultural background in the behavioral sciences.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the psychology (B.A., B.S.) and/or neuroscience (B.S.) programs, students will attain the following:

- Knowledge Base: Demonstrate knowledge of the major concepts, theoretical perspectives, empirical findings, and historical trends in psychology and/or neuroscience, including its links to other disciplines.
- Scientific Inquiry and Critical Thinking Skills: Apply basic research methods in psychology and/or neuroscience, including research design, data analysis, and interpretation. Demonstrate scientific reasoning and problem solving.
- Ethics, Social Responsibility and Responsible Conduct of Research: Demonstrate use of empirical evidence, tolerate ambiguity, act ethically, be mindful of diversity and reflect other values that are the underpinnings of psychology and/or neuroscience as a science.
- Communication: Demonstrate competence in writing and in oral communication skills. Ability to produce a research study or other neuroscience and/or psychology project, explain its scientific results and present information.
- Individual and Professional Development: Develop the ability to apply psychology and/or neuroscience content, skills, project management and teamwork skills to career preparation. Apply psychological and/or neuroscience principles to personal, social, and organizational issues. Become aware of career opportunities and paths towards career goals.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

One additional non-Psychology and Neuroscience Department quantitative reasoning course (FC-QUANT) not used to fulfill the FC-QUANT Gen Ed requirement or any other requirement in the psychology major.

Total Hours 40-41

H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

F FY-Launch class sections may be available. A FY-Launch section fulfills the same requirements as a standard section of that course, but also fulfills the FY-SEMINAR/FY-LAUNCH First-Year Foundations requirement. Students can search for FY-Launch sections in ConnectCarolina using the FY-LAUNCH attribute.

1 Psychology and Neuroscience double majors may also use any NSCI 27* course to fulfill this requirement.

2 Psychology and Human Development Family Studies double majors may also use EDUC 408 to fulfill this requirement.

3 NSCI 225 can meet either the behavioral neuroscience or cognitive requirement, but not both.

4 Up to 3-credit hours of the following may be used to fulfill one core major requirement: PSYC 395/NSCI 395, PSYC 693H/NSCI 693H or PSYC 694H/NSCI 694H.

A student may submit a maximum of 45 credit hours from the department (this includes both PSYC and NSCI courses) towards the completion of the B.A. degree.

Students planning to enter graduate programs in psychology are urged to include a research-intensive course such as PSYC 395, NSCI 395, PSYC 530, or PSYC 693H and PSYC 694H in their program as well as a course in software programming/coding.

Students interested in medical and/or health careers are strongly encouraged to connect with Pre-professional & Pre-graduate Advising (https://careers.unc.edu/students/pre-professional-pre-graduate-advising/) and Health Professions Advising (https://hpa.unc.edu/explore/explore-health-careers/medicine/). Particularly note that medical and/or health professional schools may recommend, though not require, psychology courses.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Special Opportunities in Psychology and Neuroscience

Honors in Psychology and Neuroscience

Any major in the program with an overall grade point average of 3.3 or higher and prior research experience in a faculty lab (e.g., PSYC 395 or NSCI 395) is eligible for enrollment in the departmental senior honors thesis program. Each candidate for honors participates in a two-semester course sequence (PSYC 693H and PSYC 694H or NSCI 693H and NSCI 694H) and carries out independent research in an area of the student’s choice under the guidance of a psychology and neuroscience faculty member. Please see the department website for the application form (https://psychology.unc.edu/honors-program/) and additional information.

Up to 3-credit hours of the following may be used to fulfill one core major requirement: PSYC 395/NSCI 395, PSYC 693H/NSCI 693H or PSYC 694H/NSCI 694H.
Departmental Involvement

The Carolina Psychology and Neuroscience Ambassadors Program (https://tarheels.live/psychologyandneuroscienceambassadors/) is a peer mentoring program which connects relative new or inexperienced psychology and/or neuroscience majors with more advanced and experienced students, in order to create stronger networking and provide greater access to support and resources.

The Carolina Neuroscience Club (http://carolinaneuroscience.web.unc.edu) brings together students who have an interest in the brain and nervous system. Club members meet regularly to discuss courses, research articles, and post-college neuroscience opportunities. Membership is open to anyone interested in neuroscience.

Psi Chi (https://heellife.unc.edu/organization/psi-chi--psychology-national-honor-society--unch/) is the National Honor Society for psychology. UNC’s chapter strives to increase awareness of career opportunities as well as the role of psychology in the community, among exemplary psychology students.

Nu Rho Psi (https://nurhopsi.org/) is the National Honor Society for neuroscience. The Nu Rho Psi chapter at Carolina aims to build connections among neuroscience students on campus, celebrate brain awareness week in our community, provide mentorship to underclassmen interested in the field, and much more.

Helping Give Away Psychological Science (https://www.hgaps.org/) is a student-based nonprofit organization to improve information about psychology on Wikipedia, on other online sites, and in the community.

High-Impact/Experiential Education

Several opportunities for experiential education are available. The Karen M. Gil Internship Program (http://psychology.unc.edu/undergraduate-studies/gil-internship/) offers both course credit and a monthly stipend to selected psychology and neuroscience majors who are placed in approved internship sites in the community. Interns are selected through a competitive process (minimum grade point average is 3.4). Other experiential education opportunities include PSYC 395, NSCI 395; PSYC 693H; PSYC 694H; NSCI 693H; NSCI 694H; course-based research courses (such as NSCI 27* lab-based research courses); or courses where service learning is a central focus, such as a psychology or neuroscience course with an APPLES (https://ccps.unc.edu/apples/) program component.

Undergraduate Awards

The Department of Psychology and Neuroscience administers several undergraduate awards: the Dashiell-Thurstone Prize; the David Bray Peele Undergraduate Award; the Donald T. Lysle Service Award; the Lindquist Undergraduate Research Award; the J. Steven Reznick Award for Diversity Enhancement in Psychological Research; the J. Steven Reznick Diversity and Psychological Research Grant; and the Susan M. McHale Award for outstanding research presented at the Chancellor’s Award Ceremony, the only campus-wide recognition at Carolina. The department also supports awards that support diversity. The J. Steven Reznick Award for Outstanding Research That Enhances Diversity is for a graduating senior who has conducted excellent research that contributes to psychological knowledge about diversity and the J. Steven Reznick Diversity and Psychological Research Grant as well as the Susan M. McHale Award for Outstanding Research by a Student Who Enhances Diversity are awarded to student researchers who identify as being from an underrepresented population. For each of these awards, diversity is broadly defined, including but not limited to diversity based on race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, gender, disability, religious affiliation, and socioeconomic status. For additional details on these awards, please visit the Psychology and Neuroscience page on undergraduate awards (https://psychology.unc.edu/departmental-awards/#undergraduateawards).

Undergraduate Research

Qualified students interested in doing independent research under the direction of a faculty member may enroll for independent research credit (PSYC 395 or NSCI 395). Students interested in this option should speak directly with psychology faculty members regarding opportunities in their laboratories. Additional information is available on the department’s website (http://psychology.unc.edu/undergraduate-studies/undergraduate-research/). Many other psychology and neuroscience courses also include heavy research components and/or meet the general education research and discovery requirement (NSCI 27* labs). See the research methods, research intensive, and research exposure courses at the Office for Undergraduate Research (https://our.unc.edu/find-research-courses/).

Psychology Major, B.S.

In the undergraduate study of psychology, the emphasis is on a broad acquaintance with the behavioral sciences, not specialization. The subject matter is preparatory to a career in psychology either in basic research and teaching, or in any number of professional applications to various human problems. A psychology major may prove valuable to those planning other professional careers such as medicine, law, education, or business, as well as to those who seek a broad cultural background in the behavioral sciences.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the psychology (B.A., B.S.) and/or neuroscience (B.S.) programs, students will attain the following:

- Knowledge Base: Demonstrate knowledge of the major concepts, theoretical perspectives, empirical findings, and historical trends in psychology and/or neuroscience, including its links to other disciplines.
- Scientific Inquiry and Critical Thinking Skills: Apply basic research methods in psychology and/or neuroscience, including research design, data analysis, and interpretation. Demonstrate scientific reasoning and problem solving.
- Ethics, Social Responsibility and Responsible Conduct of Research: Demonstrate use of empirical evidence, tolerate ambiguity, act ethically, be mindful of diversity and reflect other values that are the underpinnings of psychology and/or neuroscience as a science.
- Communication: Demonstrate competence in writing and in oral communication skills. Ability to produce a research study or other neuroscience and/or psychology project, explain its scientific results and present information.
- Individual and Professional Development: Develop the ability to apply psychology and/or neuroscience content, skills, project management and teamwork skills to career preparation. Apply psychological and/or neuroscience principles to personal, social, and organizational issues. Become aware of career opportunities and paths towards career goals.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

One additional non-Psychology and Neuroscience Department quantitative reasoning course (FC-QUANT) not used to fulfill the FC-QUANT Gen Ed requirement or any other requirement in the psychology major.

At least 3 additional three-credit hour non-Psychology and Neuroscience Department courses which must come from the Allied Science list (see below). Additionally, 1 four-credit hour non-Psychology and Neuroscience Department course from the Allied Science list (see below) or one of the following combinations:

CHEM 241 + 241L, CHEM 241H + 245L, CHEM 252 + 262L or CHEM 262H + 263L or EMES 101 + EMES 101L.

Remaining General Education requirements and enough additional hours to accumulate 120 academic hours

Total Hours 120

H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

F FY-Launch class sections may be available. A FY-Launch section fulfills the same requirements as a standard section of that course, but also fulfills the FY-SEMINAR/FY-LAUNCH First-Year Foundations requirement. Students can search for FY-Launch sections in Connect Carolina using the FY-LAUNCH attribute.

1 Psychology and Neuroscience double majors may also use any NSCI 27* course to fulfill this requirement.

2 Psychology and Human Development Family Studies double majors may also use EDUC 408 to fulfill this requirement.

3 NSCI 225 can meet either the behavioral neuroscience or cognitive requirement, but not both.

4 Up to 3-credit hours of the following may be used to fulfill one core major requirement: PSYC 395/NSCI 395, PSYC 693H/NSCI 693H or PSYC 694H/NSCI 694H.

5 A 3-credit hour Allied Science course may be combined with a 1-credit hour lab with the same course number to fulfill the 4-credit hour Allied Science course requirement.

Students interested in medical and/or health careers are encouraged to connect with Pre-professional & Pre-graduate Advising (https://careers.unc.edu/students/pre-professional-pre-graduate-advising/) and Health Professions Advising (https://hpa.unc.edu/explore/explore-health-careers/medicine/). Particularly note that medical and/or health professional schools may recommend, though not require, psychology courses.

A student may submit a maximum of 45 credit hours from the department (this includes both PSYC and NSCI courses) towards the completion of the B.S. degree.

Details of the student's program may be worked out in consultation with college and departmental advisors.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

\( \text{H} \) Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

\( \text{F} \) FY-Launch class sections may be available. A FY-Launch section fulfills the same requirements as a standard section of that course, but also fulfills the FY-SEMINAR/FY-LAUNCH First-Year Foundations requirement. Students can search for FY-Launch sections in ConnectCarolina using the FY-LAUNCH attribute.

1 Up to 3-credit hours of the following may be used to fulfill one core major requirement: PSYC 395/NSCI 395, PSYC 693H/NSCI 693H or PSYC 694H/NSCI 694H.

Special Opportunities in Psychology and Neuroscience

Honors in Psychology and Neuroscience

Any major in the program with an overall grade point average of 3.3 or higher and prior research experience in a faculty lab (e.g., PSYC 395 or NSCI 395) is eligible for enrollment in the departmental senior honors thesis program. Each candidate for honors participates in a two-semester course sequence (PSYC 693H and PSYC 694H or NSCI 693H and NSCI 694H) and carries out independent research in an area of the student's choice under the guidance of a psychology and neuroscience faculty member. Please see the department website for the application form (https://psychology.unc.edu/honors-program/) and additional information.

Departmental Involvement

The Carolina Psychology and Neuroscience Ambassadors Program (https://tarheelslive/psychologyandneuroscienceambassadors/) is a peer mentoring program which connects relative new or inexperienced psychology and/or neuroscience majors with more advanced and experienced students, in order to create stronger networking and provide greater access to support and resources.

The Carolina Neuroscience Club (http://carolinaneuroscience.web.unc.edu/) brings together students who have an interest in the brain and nervous system. Club members meet regularly to discuss courses, research articles, and post-college neuroscience opportunities. Membership is open to anyone interested in neuroscience.

Psi Chi (https://heellife.unc.edu/organization/psi-chi--psychology-national-honor-society--uncc/) is the National Honor Society for psychology. UNC's chapter strives to increase awareness of career options as well as the role of psychology in the community, among exemplary psychology students.

Nu Rho Psi (https://nurhopsi.org/) is the National Honor Society for neuroscience. Nu Rho Psi chapter at Carolina aims to build connections among neuroscience students on campus, celebrate brain awareness week in our community, provide mentorship to underclassmen interested in the field, and much more.

Helping Give Away Psychological Science (https://www.hgaps.org/) is a student-based nonprofit organization to improve information about psychology on Wikipedia, on other online sites, and in the community.

High-Impact/Experiential Education

Several opportunities for experiential education are available. The Karen M. Gil Internship Program (http://psychology.unc.edu/undergraduate-studies/gil-internship/) offers both course credit and a monthly stipend to selected psychology and neuroscience majors who are placed in approved internship sites in the community. Interns are selected through a competitive process (minimum grade point average is 3.4). Other experiential education opportunities include PSYC 395, NSCI 395; PSYC 693H; PSYC 694H; NSCI 693H; NSCI 694H; course-based research courses (such as NSCI 27* lab-based research courses); or courses where service learning is a central focus, such as a psychology or neuroscience course with an APPLES (https://ccps.unc.edu/apples/) program component.

Undergraduate Awards

The Department of Psychology and Neuroscience administers several undergraduate awards: the Dashiel-Thurstone Prize; the David Bray Peele Undergraduate Award; the Donald T. Lysle Service Award; the Lindquist Undergraduate Research Award; the J. Steven Reznick Award for Diversity Enhancement in Psychological Research; the J. Steven Reznick Diversity and Psychological Research Grant; and the Susan M. McHale Award for Outstanding Psychological Research by a Student Who Enhances Diversity, as well as several fellowships and grants administered through the UNC Office for Undergraduate Research (https://our.unc.edu/) or the UNC Honors Carolina Office (https://honorscarolina.unc.edu/). Additional honors include election to Psi Chi, the national honor society for psychology undergraduates, and/or election to Nu Rho Psi, the national honor society for neuroscience.
undergraduates. Each year, the Lindquist Undergraduate Research Award is given to several undergraduate students to support their research; the Dashiel-Thurstone Prize is awarded to one student for the best undergraduate research project; the David Bray Peel Undergraduate Award is given for the best honors project; and the Donald T. Lysle Service Award is given to a psychology or neuroscience major who has made exemplary service contributions. The Donald T. Lysle Service Award is presented at the Chancellor's Award Ceremony, the only campus-wide recognition at Carolina. The department also supports awards that support diversity. The J. Steven Reznick Award for Outstanding Research That Enhances Diversity is for a graduating senior who has conducted excellent research that contributes to psychological knowledge about diversity and the J. Steven Reznick Diversity and Psychological Research Grant as well as the Susan M. McHale Award for Outstanding Research by a Student Who Enhances Diversity are awarded to student researchers who identify as being from an underrepresented population. For each of these awards, diversity is broadly defined, including but not limited to diversity based on race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, gender, disability, religious affiliation, and socioeconomic status. For additional details on these awards, please visit the Psychology and Neuroscience page on undergraduate awards (https://psychology.unc.edu/departmental-awards/#undergraduateawards).

Undergraduate Research
Qualified students interested in doing independent research under the direction of a faculty member may enroll for independent research credit (PSYC 395 or NSCI 395). Students interested in this option should speak directly with psychology faculty members regarding opportunities in their laboratories. Additional information is available on the department’s website (http://psychology.unc.edu/undergraduate-studies/undergraduate-research/). Many other psychology and neuroscience courses also include heavy research components and/or meet the general education research and discovery requirement (NSCI 27* labs). See the research methods, research intensive, and research exposure courses at the Office for Undergraduate Research (https://our.unc.edu/find-research-courses/).

Neuroscience Minor

Neuroscience embodies the liberal arts experience because it draws on techniques and findings from several academic disciplines including biology, chemistry, computer science, exercise and sports science, mathematics, physics, and psychology. The neuroscience minor provides undergraduate students the opportunity to obtain fundamental knowledge and exposure needed to pursue careers and post-graduate studies in fields related to psychology, human development and aging, health and disease, rehabilitation, biotechnology, biomedical research, human-machine interactions, and other emerging disciplines. The minor is open to all students, including psychology majors. However, students should note that they are limited to no more than 45 credit hours within a specific department. Students must earn a grade of C or better in at least four of the five courses.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:
- take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
• earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Department of Public Policy

Introduction

UNC Public Policy is an interdisciplinary social science major designed to provide students with the theoretical perspective, analytical skill, and substantive knowledge needed to respond to domestic and global policy challenges. Our mission is to empower students with the knowledge, skills, and experiences to improve the lives of others.

Our faculty have expertise in a wide range of global and domestic policy including education and labor markets, environment and human welfare, innovation and entrepreneurship, science and technology policy, social policy and inequality, health policy, bioethics, and human rights, international development policy, and global conflict and cooperation.

The undergraduate curriculum emphasizes research and experiential learning and includes exposure to multiple disciplinary fields including policy analysis, economics, history, political science, applied philosophy, research design, and statistics.

Advising

All majors and minors have a primary academic advisor in the Academic Advising Program (https://advising.unc.edu/). Students are encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. UNC Public Policy's director of undergraduate studies and student services officer meet with current and prospective students by appointment (see contact information above). For additional information on courses and undergraduate opportunities, see UNC Public Policy's website (https://publicpolicy.unc.edu).

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

The undergraduate major in public policy provides students with conceptual and analytical skills that prepare them for the labor market and graduate school. The integration of a liberal arts education, writing and analytical abilities, and knowledge in a domestic or global policy field prepares students for many career paths. The public policy major can be a foundation for graduate work in a range of social science and professional disciplines, including law, business, education, social work, public health, public policy, public and international affairs, and city and regional planning. Alumni pursue careers in law, education, business, public policy, and global affairs, working in public, private, and nonprofit sectors.

Public Policy offers a dual bachelor's-graduate (M.P.P) degree. The M.P.P degree requires 48 credits. It is possible to complete the requirements for the bachelor's degree and graduate degree within eight semesters and two additional semesters of study (and one summer), respectively. The M.P.P includes a summer seminar/internship experience. New UNC Graduate School's dual degree policies allow 12 credit hours of double counting/crossover of bachelor's credits and master's credits. Most of the double counting of credits will take place during the second semester of the senior year.

- Same as: HPM 565.

PLCY 570. Global Health and Human Rights. 3 Credits.
Course focuses on rights-based approaches to health, applying a human rights perspective to selected public health policies, programs, and interventions. Students will apply a formalistic human rights framework to critical public health issues, exploring human rights as both a safeguard against harm and a catalyst for health promotion.

Rules & Requirements
- Making Connections Gen Ed: PH, GL.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.
- Same as: HPM 571.

PLCY 575. Innovation, Science, and Public Policy. 3 Credits.
Introduction to analysis of science policy. Course explores how events transformed science's role in American life and how science relates to industry and economic development. Topics include the mechanisms of allocating scientific resources, the commercialization of academic discoveries, regulating emerging technology, and achieving consensus on controversial scientific issues.

Rules & Requirements
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

PLCY 581. Research Design for Public Policy. 3 Credits.
Students will explore the scientific method as applied to policy research. They will formulate testable policy research questions, become familiar with methods for conducting policy research, and learn to think critically about causal inference. Honors version available.

Rules & Requirements
- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-KNOWING, RESEARCH.
- Requisites: Pre- or corequisite, PLCY 460.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

PLCY 590. Special Topics in Public Policy. 3 Credits.
Special topics for undergraduate and graduate students.

Rules & Requirements
- Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 9 total credits. 3 total completions.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

PLCY 596. Independent Study/Reading in Public Policy. 1-6 Credits.
Permission of the instructor. Independent reading in public policy.

Rules & Requirements
- Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

PLCY 690. Special Topics in Public Policy. 3 Credits.
Special topics for graduate or undergraduate students.

Rules & Requirements
- Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 9 total credits. 3 total completions.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.
PLCY 691H. Honors in Public Policy. 3 Credits.
Permission of the instructor. In preparing their honors theses, students will formulate a testable policy research question, design a study to answer this research question, and learn to think critically about causal inference.

Rules & Requirements
- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
- Requisites: Prerequisites, PLCY 460 and 581.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

PLCY 692H. Honors in Public Policy. 3 Credits.
Permission of the instructor. For senior public policy majors. Directed research for the honors thesis. Students may only receive credit for one semester of this course. An application for enrollment must be completed by the student and approved by the director of the public policy honors program.

Rules & Requirements
- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
- Requisites: Prerequisite, PLCY 691H.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

PLCY 696. Independent Study/Reading in Public Policy. 1-6 Credits.
Permission of the instructor. Independent reading in public policy.

Rules & Requirements
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

PLCY 698. Senior Capstone in Public Policy. 4 Credits.
Students apply knowledge and skills gained in the major to a real-world policy problem. In small teams, students produce actionable, client-centered, public policy analysis for a government agency or nonprofit organization. Students also develop skills in team work, leadership, communication, professional etiquette, and time management.

Rules & Requirements
- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-SERVICE, COMMBEYOND.
- Making Connections Gen Ed: CI, EE- Mentored Research, NA.
- Requisites: Prerequisite, PLCY 460; Pre- or corequisite, PLCY 581.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

Public Policy Major, B.A.
The core curriculum in public policy includes courses on policy innovation and analysis, politics of public policy, applied philosophy, applied economics, research design, and statistics. Our experiential education (EE) courses develop students’ teamwork, leadership, and communication skills as they produce actionable, client-centered research. UNC Public Policy offers multiple courses on global and domestic policy including courses on education, immigration, the environment, health and human rights, and history and public policy.

The mission of UNC Public Policy is to empower students with the knowledge, skills, and experience to improve the lives of others.

Knowledge
Students think and learn across academic disciplines with a diverse faculty with degrees in business, economics, history, law, philosophy, political science, public policy, sociology, and sociomedical sciences.

Skills
Students gain an ability to think critically and independently; to write, reason, and communicate clearly; and to develop research methods and quantitative analysis skills.

Experience
Students apply knowledge and skills in real world environments beyond the classroom. Students in UNC Public Policy’s clinic, internship, and capstone courses address contemporary policy challenges by providing innovative analysis to clients in the nonprofit and public sector.

Student Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of the public policy program, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate knowledge of economic, normative, and political perspectives for defining the public interest and evaluating policy choices
- Demonstrate written, oral, and analytical skills in evaluating public policy alternatives
- Demonstrate knowledge of a particular policy subfield and apply it in an experience in policy analysis in that field
- Demonstrate skills in developing approaches to solving current public policy problems as a result of participation in experiential education opportunities
- Work effectively in teams

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements, students must

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.
For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

First-year and sophomore students considering a major in public policy are encouraged to complete PLCY 101 or PLCY 110.

At least six credit hours of approved public policy electives. ¹

2 Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

F FY-Launch class sections may be available. A FY-Launch section fulfills the same requirements as a standard section of that course, but also fulfills the FY-SEMINAR/FY-LAUNCH First-Year Foundations requirement. Students can search for FY-Launch sections in ConnectCarolina using the FY-LAUNCH attribute.

¹ Three credit hours may be for a 100- or 200-level PLCY course. The remaining three credit hours must be for an elective course at the 300 level or above. PLCY 130, PLCY 291, PLCY 293, PLCY 393, and PLCY 394 may not count as electives for the public policy major.

² ECON 101 is a prerequisite for PLCY 310 and ECON 410. PLCY 460 is a prerequisite for PLCY 698 and PLCY 691H and a pre- or co-requisite for PLCY 581. PLCY 581 is a prerequisite for PLCY 691H and a pre- or co-requisite for PLCY 698.

³ Alternatively, students may use a combination of either of the following pairs of courses to fulfill this requirement: (a) ECON 400 and ECON 470 or (b) ECON 400 and ECON 570.

Policy Field (Optional)

Students who complete three approved electives (nine credit hours) in a specific policy field may elect to graduate with a concentration. Six of these credit hours must be for field courses at the 300 level or above. PLCY 393 and PLCY 394 may not count toward the field concentration. For students completing an honors thesis, PLCY 691H can count toward the policy field concentration. Policy field concentrations include education and labor markets; environment and human welfare; innovation and entrepreneurship/science and technology policy; social policy and inequality; health policy; bioethics and human rights; international development policy; and global conflict and cooperation.

Additionally, students may select courses across subfields and design their own field. For information about declaring a policy field concentration see the department’s Web site (https://publicpolicy.unc.edu/academics/undergraduate-program/faq/). The specific policy field is not listed on students’ diplomas or transcripts. UNC–Chapel Hill public policy majors are encouraged to list their policy field on their résumés.

Program Restrictions

A maximum of one three-credit independent study course (PLCY 395, PLCY 396, PLCY 496, PLCY 596, or PLCY 696) may be counted as an elective for the policy major. For credit toward the major, an independent study proposal form must be completed by the student, approved by the independent study instructor, submitted to the student services officer, and approved by the director of undergraduate studies before the independent study begins. A maximum of one three-credit transfer or study abroad course or two Honors Seminar on Public Policy and Global Affairs courses (PLCY 352H; PLCY 353H) may be counted as electives toward the public policy major.

Public Policy Elective Course List

Public Policy Elective Course List

The following courses satisfy the electives requirement and optional policy field concentration. Please note that some of these courses may have enrollment restrictions, including being restricted to students enrolled in certain majors or minors. Please check for enrollment restrictions before trying to enroll:

Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

Special Opportunities in Public Policy

Undergraduate Research

Most courses in public policy include a research component. The Office for Undergraduate Research maintains a database of courses that qualify as research intensive, research exposure, and research methods courses. Earning a grade of C or better in any of these courses partially fulfills the requirements for the Carolina Research Scholar designation. In addition, the department offers opportunities for students to work directly with a faculty member on a research project through independent study. The honors thesis process enables students to undertake a major independent policy research project. The Duncan MacRae Jr. Public Policy Fund provides grants on a competitive basis to public policy majors engaged in mentored research with a public policy faculty member, in policy-relevant independent research, and in honors thesis research in public policy.

High-Impact/Experiential Education

UNC Public Policy's experiential education programs offer students structured, active-learning opportunities that invite them to integrate and apply their academic knowledge and skills in a real-world policy environment. Opportunities include internships, the Honors Seminar on Public Policy and Global Affairs in Washington D.C. (PLCY 352H and PLCY 353H), the public policy clinic (PLCY 393), the intersection (PLCY 394), and the public policy capstone course (PLCY 698). PLCY 130, PLCY 293, PLCY 393, PLCY 691H, PLCY 692H, and PLCY 698 are all approved as experiential education courses.

For more information, see the department's website (http://publicpolicy.unc.edu/academics/experiential-education/).

Capstone Course

The capstone course (PLCY 698) is the culminating experience of the public policy undergraduate major and is required for all seniors except those who complete an honors thesis. Students should register for the course in the fall or spring of their senior year. The course provides a bridge between policy analysis as it is studied in an academic setting and policy analysis as it is practiced in the workplace. Students work in small teams to produce actionable, client-centered, public policy analysis for a government agency or nonprofit organization.

Honors Seminar on Public Policy and Global Affairs in Washington, D.C.

The Honors Seminar on Public Policy and Global Affairs offers Carolina undergraduates a unique learning, living, and internship opportunity in our nation's capital. The seminar offers students first-hand engagement with the actors and organizations that influence domestic and global affairs in Washington, D.C. It aims to expose students to a range of public policies that influence U.S. economic prosperity, national security, and its role in the broader global community. Internship placements provide opportunities for students to apply academic learning, to derive new insights and questions for seminar discussion, and to work directly with substantive policy experts.

Internships and Public Service

Students may receive academic credit for an approved internship if it provides an academically relevant experience in policy analysis or research. Students who wish to complete an internship with an external organization can do so through PLCY 293 (available to public policy majors and minors). PLCY 293 is a Pass/Fail course. The Duncan MacRae Jr. Public Policy Internship Grant aims to support internship opportunities for public policy majors and to defer some of the costs associated with enrolling in unpaid summer internships. The Hodding Carter III Public Service Fellowship supports opportunities for UNC–Chapel Hill public policy majors to engage in public service opportunities in our communities, the American south, the nation, and around the globe. The Thomas W. Ross North Carolina Leaders Fellows Program supports public policy undergraduates pursuing public service opportunities in the State of North Carolina during the summer. The Richard ("Pete") Andrews Fellowship in Environmental Policy supports a student interested in working on environmental policy during the summer or a policy research-related project during the academic year. The Ruth C. Samuelson Legacy Fund provides students an interactive training experience on trust and supports undergraduates or graduate students to participate in a "listening tour" policy research project over the summer. Read more about these opportunities on the department's website (https://publicpolicy.unc.edu/academics/undergraduate/unc-public-policy-funding-and-awards/).

Undergraduate Funding and Awards

Each year UNC Public Policy holds a graduation ceremony to honor students' achievements. The Kathy Taft Education Policy Award recognizes a rising senior majoring in public policy with an interest in and dedication to education policy. The Michael A. Stegman Award for Policy Research and Advocacy is awarded to a graduating public policy major who has demonstrated an ability to use policy research and analysis to advocate for social change and a commitment to play a future role in policy research and advocacy.

Honors in Public Policy

Public policy majors who have at least a 3.3 overall grade point and a 3.5 in the core public policy courses are eligible to apply to the department's honors program in the spring of their junior year. The honors thesis offers an opportunity for motivated students to move beyond traditional coursework and apply critical thinking skills to an academic public policy thesis. This program is organized as an original, independent research project under the direction of a faculty advisor. Students considering writing an honors thesis must complete PLCY 581 before enrolling in PLCY 691H.

Completion of an honors thesis provides a total of six credit hours toward the major, including three credits toward a policy field concentration. Students who complete an honors thesis and maintain all other eligibility criteria may be recommended by their thesis advisor and the Undergraduate Affairs Committee for graduation with honors or highest honors in public policy. The department's website (https://publicpolicy.unc.edu/academics/undergraduate/honors/) provides more information.

Policy Students Association

Founded as the Public Policy Majors’ Union in 1988, the Policy Students Association (PSA) brings together public policy-interested undergraduates to catalyze student collaboration, learning opportunities, skill development, and exposure to new experiences and ideas to further enrich their experience as public policy students at UNC–Chapel Hill. PSA is an organic voice of the undergraduate population and works with the department to maximize the short- and long-term potential of the Public Policy Department to help students achieve their academic and career goals.
Public Policy Minor

The core curriculum in public policy includes courses on policy innovation and analysis, politics of public policy, applied philosophy, applied economics, research design and statistics. Our experiential education (EE) courses develop students’ teamwork, leadership, and communication skills as they produce actionable, client-centered research. UNC Public Policy offers multiple courses on both global and domestic policy issues including courses on education, immigration, the environment, health and human rights, and history and public policy.

The undergraduate minor in public policy consists of five courses. Students gain knowledge, skills, and experience to improve the lives of others.

Knowledge
Students think and learn across academic disciplines with a diverse faculty with degrees in business, economics, history, law, philosophy, political science, public policy, sociology, and sociomedical sciences.

Skills
Students gain an ability to think critically and independently; to write, reason, and communicate clearly; and to develop research methods and quantitative analysis skills.

Experience
Students apply knowledge and skills in real world environments beyond the classroom. Students in our clinic, intersector, and internship courses address contemporary policy challenges by providing innovative analysis to clients in the nonprofit and public sector.

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

• take at least nine hours of their minor “core” requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
• earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

First-year and sophomore students considering a minor in public policy are encouraged to complete PLCY 101 or PLCY 110.

Director of Undergraduate Studies
William Goldsmith
Department of Religious Studies

Introduction

The Department of Religious Studies is dedicated to the study of religions as historical and cultural phenomena. It examines the history, texts, objects, beliefs, practices, and rituals of a variety of religious traditions across the globe. Inherently interdisciplinary in its approach, religious studies explores religions in light of related fields in the humanities and social sciences such as anthropology, archaeology, classics, geography, history, philosophy, political science, and sociology.

Advising

The director of undergraduate studies advises majors and minors in religious studies. Please contact the Department of Religious Studies for updated contact information.

The director of Jewish studies advises majors and minors in Jewish studies. Please contact the Carolina Center for Jewish Studies for updated contact information.

The director of Christianity and culture advises minors in the study of Christianity and culture. Please contact the Department of Religious Studies for updated contact information.

The director of the Carolina Center for the Study of the Middle East and Muslim Civilizations advises minors in Islamic and Middle Eastern studies. Please consult the Carolina Center for the Study of the Middle East and Muslim Civilizations for updated contact information.

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

Those wishing to proceed to graduate work in religious studies can consult the director of undergraduate studies. We encourage students to pursue the study of two or more languages used by specific religious communities, as well as the modern languages of scholarship. In addition to the language courses offered by this department, UNC—Chapel Hill offers courses in German, French, Spanish, Greek, Modern Hebrew, Chinese, Japanese, Hindi-Urdu, Latin, Arabic, Sanskrit, Persian, Bengali, and Tamil.

Students majoring in religious studies often choose to pursue an M.A. or Ph.D. in religious studies or other related fields in the humanities and social sciences. Some of the graduates of the program go on to professional schools in law, medicine, divinity, or journalism. Each year the department awards the Bernard Boyd Fellowship to a graduating religious studies major who is planning to pursue graduate study in religion.

Professors Emeriti

The department offers a variety of courses ranging from large lecture to advanced seminars, as well as independent studies, an honors thesis program, and a capstone course for all majors (RELI 697). Introductory courses, which are numbered below 200, orient students to the field of religious studies or to major approaches, topics, or issues within that broader field. Intermediate courses are numbered between 200 and 399, and they provide more in-depth analysis. Advanced courses, which are numbered 400 and above, often build on knowledge or skills derived from lower-level courses, and they provide opportunities for research-intensive study in particular areas of concentration in the study of religion.
RELI—Religious Studies

Undergraduate-level Courses

RELI 60. First-Year Seminar: Religion and Racism. 3 Credits.
How does religion become a source of ethnic or racial prejudice among religious practitioners? When does prejudice against religious persons constitute a form of racism? This class explores answers to these questions by examining the connections between religion and racism in modern societies like the United States and South Africa.

Rules & Requirements
- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
- Making Connections Gen Ed: SS, CI, US.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

RELI 61. First-Year Seminar: Religion, Magic, and Science. 3 Credits.

Religious Studies Major, B.A.
The Department of Religious Studies is dedicated to the study of religions as historical and cultural phenomena. It examines the history, texts, objects, beliefs, practices, and rituals of a variety of local and global religious traditions. Inherently interdisciplinary in its approach, religious studies explores religions in light of related fields in the humanities and social sciences such as anthropology, archaeology, classics, geography, history, philosophy, political science, and sociology.

Student Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of the religious studies program, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate knowledge of influential terms, approaches, and theories in religious studies
- Effectively conduct research on a specific topic using the discipline-based methods
- Communicate research clearly and effectively
- Demonstrate effective writing skills (clear focus, relevant evidence, coherent organization)

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements, students must

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Special Opportunities in Religious Studies

Honors in Religious Studies

Students majoring in religious studies (including double majors) with a grade point average of 3.5 or above in department courses and 3.3 grade point average overall and who will have successfully completed at least one course numbered 400 or above on a topic in religious studies that is related to the proposed thesis may choose to write an honors thesis. Candidates for graduation with honors in religious studies are to be enrolled in RELI 691H in the fall and RELI 692H in the spring semester of their senior year. RELI 691H and RELI 692H count toward the major as courses fulfilling subfield requirements. Students should submit applications for the honors program to the department’s director of undergraduate studies by the end of February during their junior year. Consult the department’s director of undergraduate studies for details.

Study Abroad

Some courses through the Study Abroad Office can count towards the major and minor in religious studies as well.

Undergraduate Awards and Honors

The department presents three awards at the end of each academic year: the Bernard Boyd Fellowship, the Bernard Boyd Memorial Prize, and the Halperin-Schütz Undergraduate Essay Award.

The department also inducts qualified majors into the Religious Studies National Honor Society, Theta Alpha Kappa.

Religious Studies Major, B.A.–Jewish Studies Concentration

The undergraduate major in religious studies — Jewish studies concentration is an interdisciplinary curriculum that explores the history, literature, culture, and religious life of Jews in their interaction with other peoples from ancient times to the present. It also offers students an opportunity to become more knowledgeable about selected areas of the Jewish experience.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the religious studies major — Jewish studies concentration, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate knowledge of Hebrew and of the history, literature, culture, and religious life of Jews across at least three historical periods
- Demonstrate knowledge of influential terms, approaches, and theories in Jewish studies
- Conduct research in Jewish studies, including interpreting primary sources, assessing scholarly literature, and constructing original arguments
- Clearly and effectively communicate the results of research

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Islamic and Middle Eastern Studies Minor

The undergraduate minor in Islamic and Middle Eastern studies (ISME) is intended to offer students access to two complementary perspectives, the transregional study of Islam and Muslim societies in interaction with surrounding cultures, and the Middle East as a complex region seen through multiple disciplinary perspectives.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:
- take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

The minor consists of five courses, which must be taken in at least two different departments; at least one course must be from the Department of Religious Studies, and at least one course must be at an advanced level (400 and above).

Additional Requirements

Three of the five courses in the minor (including the required courses listed above) must be selected from one of two subject categories—either Islamic studies or Middle Eastern studies—as indicated by the two lists of approved courses below.

The other two courses must come from the other category.

Total Hours 15

¹ Both courses cover material from the seventh century to 1500

One language course at level 5 or higher in Arabic, Hebrew, Hindi-Urdu, Persian, or Turkish can count as a course toward the minor. Up to two courses in Islamic and Middle East studies at Duke University may count toward the minor if approved by the director of the minor.

The minor is housed in the Department of Religious Studies and directed by Dr. Juliane Hammer, a member of the department, who is responsible for advising all students who minor in Islamic and Middle Eastern studies (as necessary beyond general academic advising).

Jewish Studies Minor

The undergraduate minor in Jewish studies is an interdisciplinary curriculum that explores the history, literature, culture, and religious life of Jews in their interaction with other peoples from ancient times to the present. It also offers students an opportunity to become more knowledgeable about selected areas of the Jewish experience.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

The minor consists of five courses, which must be taken in at least two different departments.

<sup>H</sup> Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

Additions to this list must be approved by the director of the Carolina Center for Jewish Studies. Only courses in modern Hebrew at the fifth-semester level or higher can count toward the minor. For students minoring in both Jewish studies and religious studies, only two courses can overlap between the two minors.

Although this minor is housed in the Department of Religious Studies, the director of Jewish studies is responsible for advising all students who minor in Jewish studies.
Religious Studies Minor

The Department of Religious Studies is dedicated to the study of religions as historical and cultural phenomena. It examines the history, texts, objects, beliefs, practices, and rituals of a variety of local and global religious traditions. Inherently interdisciplinary in its approach, religious studies explores religions in light of related fields in the humanities and social sciences such as anthropology, archaeology, classics, geography, history, philosophy, political science, and sociology.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC—Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

The undergraduate minor in the study of Christianity and culture is an interdisciplinary curriculum in the humanities, arts, and social sciences that aims to refine students’ understanding of the cultural, social, and political influence of Christianity.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor “core” requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Department of Romance Studies

Introduction
The Department of Romance Studies is a diverse, multicultural, and plurilingual academic unit that engages in interdisciplinary research and instruction in French, Italian, Portuguese, Spanish, as well as Indigenous and other languages of Europe and the Americas such as Romanian, Catalan, Basque, Galician, Yucatec Maya, and Guaraní. The principal aims of the department are to preserve, increase, and transmit knowledge and understanding of the Romance languages, literatures, and cultures within the global and regional contexts in which they have developed.

Our course offerings present a diversity of approaches — historical, literary, linguistic, sociopolitical, cultural, and theoretical — to the study of literary and nonliterary works and of the cultures of places where Romance languages are spoken. Students acquire competence in the practice and analysis of Romance languages together with a critical knowledge of the written, oral, and visual traditions of their origin and diaspora. Our faculty promotes interdisciplinary connections and incorporates the study of literature, culture, linguistics, theory, and history across the curriculum. Through coursework that emphasizes rhetoric, language analysis, and written and oral expression, our majors receive sustained personalized training in critical thinking and close reading.

Advising
The Department of Romance Studies offers a major with five concentrations and six minors. All students can find their primary academic advisor in Dey Hall. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. Each of the department’s language advisors will meet with current and prospective majors by appointment. Departmental academic advising is particularly important for those majors who are considering going on to graduate school. Further information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be obtained from the department’s website (http://romancestudies.unc.edu).

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

A major or minor in Romance studies provides excellent preparation for a variety of careers. Recent graduates have gone on to work in international business, law, publishing, education, journalism, and public policy, among other fields. A bachelor of arts in Romance studies qualifies graduates for employment in private-sector firms, foundations, educational institutions, and government agencies. A second major or minor in Romance studies can be an asset for students seeking careers in any field requiring foreign language proficiency and intercultural communication skills, including the health professions and the sciences. The department offers several courses dedicated to the practical application of Romance languages for specific careers (business, law, health professions, translation) alongside courses that contribute to a well-rounded liberal arts education.

Romance studies majors often pursue post-graduate education. M.A. and Ph.D. programs in Romance studies are oriented towards literary, linguistic, and cultural studies, and the undergraduate student should prepare accordingly. Useful allied disciplines are English, comparative literature, history, classics, philosophy, linguistics, and art history. Faculty members can advise students on choices of graduate schools.

Romance Languages Major, B.A.—French and Francophone Studies

The French major provides students with a more thorough command of the language, as well as a comprehensive knowledge of the literatures, cultures, and civilization of the francophone world. French majors are also trained in research methodology in French, francophone, and European studies.

French majors have gone on to careers in education, international business, law, journalism, publishing, social work, and health, as well as graduate study in French. The diverse offerings of the program include courses such as French civilization, business French, advanced oral and written French, introduction to French and francophone literatures, the role of France in Europe today, and identities in European cinema.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students will acquire competence in the practice and analysis of Romance languages together with a critical knowledge of the written, oral, and visual traditions of their origin and diaspora. Our faculty promotes interdisciplinary connections and incorporates the study of literature, culture, theory, and history across the curriculum. Through coursework that emphasizes language acquisition, rhetoric, composition, and written and oral expression, our majors receive sustained personalized training in critical thinking and close reading. Upon completion of the program in Romance languages, students should be able to:

- Participate in conversations on concrete, social, academic, and professional topics
- Speak in detail about experiences and events in a variety of time frames and moods
- Represent points of view in discussions, both oral and written
- Deliver well-organized presentations on concrete, academic and professional topics
- Write on a wide variety of general interest, professional, and academic topics
- Follow narrative, informational, and descriptive speech on concrete, academic and professional topics
- Understand and discuss texts representing a variety of topics and genres

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must:

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

FREN 262 Cultural and Linguistic Diversity in the French-Speaking World
FREN 300 French Composition and Grammar Review
Seven additional courses above 204, which must include: 2
At least one course focused on French and Francophone contexts up to 1789 (see course list below) 3
At least one course focused on French and Francophone contexts since 1789 (see course list below) 3
At least four courses taught in French (see course lists below)

Total Hours 27

1 Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.
2 Students may not take more than two courses from FREN 255, FREN 260, and FREN 262. If a second course is taken, it may be used as one of the seven electives.
3 Excluding FREN 401, FREN 402, FREN 501, FREN 601, and FREN 692H. One course may be taken outside the Department of Romance Studies, if applicable and with prior approval by the undergraduate advisor in French. This rule does not affect Study Abroad.

Special topics and independent study courses may fulfill historical distribution requirements, depending on topic, with approval of the undergraduate advisor in French. Taught in French and focused on French and Francophone contexts up to 1789. Taught in French and focused on French and Francophone contexts since 1789. Taught in English.

French (FREN) course descriptions (p. 1081).

We offer a strong emphasis on European and francophone studies as well as the Languages across the Curriculum Program (LAC) (p. 1193), which allows students to participate in one-hour, one-credit discussion sections in French on an array of courses across the College of Arts and Sciences.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Sample Plan One

This plan assumes a placement of FREN 105 on the Foreign Language placement test. Student placement (and plans) may vary. Although it is possible to complete the French and Francophone studies major if a student begins with FREN 101, summer school, study abroad, or doubling-up on courses in the final year may be necessary in order to complete it in a timely manner.

Special Opportunities in Romance Studies

Undergraduate Research

The Department of Romance Studies offers a gateway for research in the humanities, including the various fields that make up Romance studies. Research activities include the honors thesis, summer research fellowships, or engaging in mentoring projects with professors which lead to opportunities to present papers at conferences or for publication in the University’s undergraduate research journal.

Annual Research Opportunities:

- Office for Undergraduate Research (https://our.unc.edu/)
- Celebration of Undergraduate Research (https://our.unc.edu/celebration-of-undergraduate-research/)
- UNC JOURney (http://unjourney.unc.edu/)
- Summer Undergraduate Research Fellowship (https://our.unc.edu/surf/)
- Burch Fellowship (https://honorscarolina.unc.edu/fellowships/burch-fellowship/)

Honors

The departmental honors program is open to any qualified major with a cumulative grade point average of 3.3 or higher and 3.5 or higher in their major courses. Eligible honors candidates will formulate a topic and select an appropriate faculty member to supervise the writing of an honors thesis. Specific coursework for the major with honors consists of enrollment in the honors thesis courses in the language of the major emphasis.

691H is taken in the fall semester of the senior year and 692H is taken in the spring semester. FREN 390, ITAL 398, PORT 398, SPAN 397 and SPAN 398 may be substituted for the 691H research course if the subject of the seminar is central to the research project chosen. In the 692H course, the thesis will be completed and the student will participate in an oral defense with the thesis director and two additional readers, to be agreed upon by the student and director. The thesis director, in consultation with the readers, will recommend that the student who has defended the thesis graduate with honors, highest honors, or with course credit. FREN 390, FREN 691H, ITAL 398, ITAL 691H, PORT 398, SPAN 397 and SPAN 398 may count toward the eight courses for the major, but FREN 692H, ITAL 692H, PORT 692H, and SPAN 692H may not. Students who intend to graduate in December should adjust the scheduling of these courses in order to allow for completion of the honors project in December. Students meeting the required grade point averages should contact the undergraduate advisor for their language. For detailed information on the B.A. with honors, visit the department’s website (http://romancestudies.unc.edu/undergraduate/overview/).

Collaborative Online International Learning

The department works in partnership with the COIL program and offers select courses that involve shared learning between students in a course at UNC–Chapel Hill and peer students at a global partner university. Faculty members at both institutions design collaborative activities for their students, such as completing small group projects, engaging in dialogue drawing on their different societal or disciplinary perspectives, or exchanging scholarly or creative work.

Out-of-Class Language Experience

The department offers credit-bearing internship opportunities through ROML 293 and service-learning opportunities (http://ccps.unc.edu/apps/) through ROML 194. Both courses satisfy the High-Impact General Education requirement (in the IDEAs in Action curriculum) and the experiential education (EE) General Education requirement (in the Making Connections curriculum). While ROML 293 is a standalone course, ROML 194 is always connected to a specific course.

Each semester the department offers a film series where all students are invited to attend screenings of films in French, Italian, Portuguese, and Spanish. All films have subtitles. It is a great opportunity to meet people in different courses and language sections that share an interest in film.

Students also find opportunities to speak Spanish and meet native Spanish speakers in an informal weekly tertulia (gathering). Additional activities involving Spanish include attending lectures, receptions, and films organized by the department and student organizations such as ChispA (Carolina Hispanic Association); and serving the community through a variety of volunteer opportunities.

Students studying French are encouraged to become members of the French club, les Francophiles, and participate in the weekly conversation hour and other French Club activities. Departmental lectures and film series are also offered.

Students interested in Italian language and culture may attend film series, guest lectures, and a series of other extracurricular events including movies and conversation hours. They may also wish to join the undergraduate Italian Club.

Students who wish to practice Portuguese can meet weekly for the bate-papo (chat). Students of Portuguese also engage in editorial work and publish in the student journal Revistinha.

Study Abroad

The Study Abroad Office sponsors many year-long, semester-long, and summer programs appropriate for students of the Romance languages and has special arrangements with the Department of Romance Studies for the UNC in Montpellier, UNC in Seville, and Florence programs. Students from UNC–Chapel Hill and from other institutions may earn up to 30 semester hours of undergraduate credit in these programs, which are open to qualified undergraduates regardless of academic major. While, in general, students may satisfy up to 50 percent of major or minor coursework abroad, courses that are taught by Romance studies faculty may count differently. For example, students completing the Spanish minor for the professions in health and business may complete all or most of the minor in faculty-led programs abroad.

Students who participate in Study Abroad during the semester have the opportunity to work as course correspondents for a course in Romance studies. Course correspondents report back to the class they serve throughout the semester via online tools and may receive one hour of credit for their informative work.

General inquiries concerning any of these programs should be addressed to the Study Abroad Office, CB# 3130, FedEx Global Education Center; (919) 962-7002.

Undergraduate Awards

French

Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Pi Delta Phi, the national French honor society. Those with outstanding records in French are recommended as candidates for the Jacques Hardré Award, which is given to the best graduating senior in French; it includes a cash award.

Italian

Students are nominated for membership in Gamma Kappa Alpha, the Italian honor society, by undergraduate instructors. The society recognizes “outstanding scholastic performance in the fields of Italian language and literature” and encourages students “to acquire a greater interest in, and a deeper understanding of, Italian culture.” The Kimberly Kyser Award for Excellence in Italian is awarded to the most outstanding student in Italian and includes a cash prize.

Portuguese

Each year the department awards the Camões Prize to the outstanding student in Portuguese during that year. The prize carries a monetary award made possible by a donation from the Gulbenkian Foundation.

Spanish

Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Sigma Delta Pi, the national Spanish honor society. Those with outstanding performance in the Hispanic literatures and cultures or the Hispanic linguistics majors are eligible for several prizes including the Chancellor’s Award, given to the top graduating senior, the Stoudemire Awards, and the Larry D. King Fellowship.

Romance Languages Major, B.A.–Italian

UNC–Chapel Hill has a rich tradition of Italian studies, including courses that develop linguistic proficiency and many others dedicated to studies of literature, film, food, environmental humanities, politics, history, philosophy, and theater. Many students study abroad and increasingly seek opportunities for research and internship projects with an Italian focus.

This concentration is a popular choice for those interested in global studies or careers in journalism, diplomacy, international business or education, or for those seeking a well-rounded education in preparation for medical or law school. Many students who graduate from this program will also pursue graduate school in this or a related field.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students will acquire competence in the practice and analysis of Romance languages together with a critical knowledge of the written, oral, and visual traditions of their origin and diaspora. Our faculty promotes interdisciplinary connections and incorporates the study of literature, culture, theory, and history across the curriculum. Through coursework that emphasizes language acquisition, rhetoric, composition, and written and oral expression, our majors receive sustained personalized training in critical thinking and close reading.
Upon completion of the program in Romance languages, students should be able to:

- Participate in conversations on concrete, social, academic, and professional topics
- Speak in detail about experiences and events in a variety of time frames and moods
- Represent points of view in discussions, both oral and written
- Deliver well-organized presentations on concrete, academic and professional topics
- Write on a wide variety of general interest, professional, and academic topics
- Follow narrative, informational, and descriptive speech on concrete, academic and professional topics
- Understand and discuss texts representing a variety of topics and genres

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements, students must

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

A prerequisite for entering the program is knowledge of the Italian language, demonstrated by successfully completing ITAL 204 or ITAL 402 or the equivalent.

1 Courses taught in English may involve some extra writing in Italian, appropriate to the student’s level of Italian at the time of the course and to be worked out with the individual instructor.

With the approval of the undergraduate advisor in Italian, three of the seven elective courses may be substituted with courses in such allied fields as art history, classics, history, geography, music, political science, global studies, or any field in which the course(s) include(s) discussion of any aspect of Italian history, politics or culture.

Special Opportunities in Romance Studies
Undergraduate Research
The Department of Romance Studies offers a gateway for research in the humanities, including the various fields that make up Romance studies. Research activities include the honors thesis, summer research fellowships, or engaging in mentoring projects with professors which lead to opportunities to present papers at conferences or for publication in the University’s undergraduate research journal.

Annual Research Opportunities:

- Office for Undergraduate Research (https://our.unc.edu/)
- Celebration of Undergraduate Research (https://our.unc.edu/celebration-of-undergraduate-research/)
- UNC JOURney (http://uncjourney.unc.edu/)
- Summer Undergraduate Research Fellowship (https://our.unc.edu/surf/)
Honors
The departmental honors program is open to any qualified major with a cumulative grade point average of 3.3 or higher and 3.5 or higher in their major courses. Eligible honors candidates will formulate a topic and select an appropriate faculty member to supervise the writing of an honors thesis. Specific coursework for the major with honors consists of enrollment in the honors thesis courses in the language of the major emphasis.

Each semester the department offers a film series where all students are invited to attend screenings of films in French, Italian, Portuguese, and Spanish. All films have subtitles. It is a great opportunity to meet people in different courses and language sections that share an interest in film.

Students also find opportunities to speak Spanish and meet native Spanish speakers in an informal weekly tertulia (gathering). Additional activities involving Spanish include attending lectures, receptions, and films organized by the department and student organizations such as ChisPa (Carolina Hispanic Association), and serving the community through a variety of volunteer opportunities.

Students studying French are encouraged to become members of the French club, les Francophiles, and participate in the weekly conversation hour and other French Club activities. Departmental lectures and film series are also offered.

Study Abroad
The Study Abroad Office sponsors many year-long, semester-long, and summer programs appropriate for students of the Romance languages and has special arrangements with the Department of Romance Studies for the UNC in Montpellier, UNC in Seville, and Florence programs.

Students from UNC—Chapel Hill and from other institutions may earn up to 30 semester hours of undergraduate credit in these programs, which are open to qualified undergraduates regardless of academic major. While, in general, students may satisfy up to 50 percent of major or minor coursework abroad, courses that are taught by Romance studies faculty may count differently. For example, students completing the Spanish minor for the professions in health and business may complete all or most of the minor in faculty-led programs abroad.

Students who participate in Study Abroad during the semester have the opportunity to work as course correspondents for a course in Romance studies. Course correspondents report back to the class they serve throughout the semester via online tools and may receive one hour of credit for their informative work.

Undergraduate Awards
French
Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Pi Delta Phi, the national French honor society. Those with outstanding records in French are recommended as candidates for the Jacques Hardré Award, which is given to the best graduating senior in French; it includes a cash award.

Italian
Students are nominated for membership in Gamma Kappa Alpha, the Italian honor society, by undergraduate instructors. The society recognizes “outstanding scholastic performance in the fields of Italian language and literature” and encourages students “to acquire a greater interest in, and a deeper understanding of, Italian culture.” The Kimberly
Romance Languages Major, B.A.–Portuguese

Kyser Award for Excellence in Italian is awarded to the most outstanding student in Italian and includes a cash prize.

Portuguese
Each year the department awards the Camões Prize to the outstanding student in Portuguese during that year. The prize carries a monetary award made possible by a donation from the Gulbenkian Foundation.

Spanish
Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Sigma Delta Pi, the national Spanish honor society. Those with outstanding performance in the Hispanic literatures and cultures or the Hispanic linguistics majors are eligible for several prizes including the Chancellor’s Award, given to the top graduating senior, the Stoudemire Awards, and the Larry D. King Fellowship.

Romance Languages Major, B.A.–Portuguese

Portuguese is the seventh most spoken language in the world, with over 265 million speakers. It is the language of Portugal, Brazil, and parts of Africa and Asia. Brazil, with a population of more than 200 million, is the largest country in South America and has the ninth largest economy in the world.

The program in Portuguese combines the study of the language, culture, and literatures of Brazil, Portugal, and Lusophone Africa. Emphasis is placed on the language as it is currently spoken and its historical development. Students study the literatures of the Lusophone world in terms of their historical development and analyze specific texts from different genres and literary periods. Students interested in Portuguese should consult the Portuguese language advisor.

Portuguese as a second language will open multiple job opportunities in various countries with expanding economies and a promising future. It will also provide a vehicle to the vibrant cultural traditions of Portugal, Brazil, and the Lusophone nations of Africa and Asia, including literature, film, art, and music.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students will acquire competence in the practice and analysis of Romance languages together with a critical knowledge of the written, oral, and visual traditions of their origin and diaspora. Our faculty promotes interdisciplinary connections and incorporates the study of literature, culture, theory, and history across the curriculum. Through coursework that emphasizes language acquisition, rhetoric, composition, and written and oral expression, our majors receive sustained personalized training in critical thinking and close reading. Upon completion of the program in Romance languages, students should be able to:

- Participate in conversations on concrete, social, academic, and professional topics
- Speak in detail about experiences and events in a variety of time frames and moods
- Represent points of view in discussions, both oral and written
- Deliver well-organized presentations on concrete, academic and professional topics
- Write on a wide variety of general interest, professional, and academic topics
- Follow narrative, informational, and descriptive speech on concrete, academic and professional topics
- Understand and discuss texts representing a variety of topics and genres

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

1 Taught in English, available for credit for major/minor in Portuguese only if readings and written work are done in Portuguese.

2 This is a one-credit hour, once-a-week course. Students may repeat for credit since this is a rotating topics course.

With the approval of the undergraduate advisor for Portuguese, students majoring in Romance languages with an emphasis in Portuguese may count up to nine hours in related areas in such departments, programs, and curricula as history, art, music, cultural studies, and women’s and gender studies.

Because few entering students have completed coursework in Portuguese prior to enrolling in the University, it is essential that interested students start the language as early as the first year.

Completion of PORT 204 or PORT 402 is considered a prerequisite for the major.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

691H is taken in the fall semester of the senior year and 692H is taken in the spring semester. FREN 390, ITAL 398, PORT 398, SPAN 397 and SPAN 398 may be substituted for the 691H research course if the subject of the seminar is central to the research project chosen. In the 692H course, the thesis will be completed and the student will participate in an oral defense with the thesis director and two additional readers, to be agreed upon by the student and director. The thesis director, in consultation with the readers, will recommend that the student who has defended the thesis graduate with honors, highest honors, or with course credit. FREN 390, FREN 691H, ITAL 398, ITAL 691H, PORT 398, SPAN 397 and SPAN 398 may count toward the eight courses for the major, but FREN 692H, ITAL 692H, PORT 692H, and SPAN 692H may not. Students who intend to graduate in December should adjust the scheduling of these courses in order to allow for completion of the honors project in December. Students meeting the required grade point averages should contact the undergraduate advisor for their language. For detailed information on the B.A. with honors, visit the department's website (http://romancestudies.unc.edu/undergraduate/overview/).

Collaborative Online International Learning

The department works in partnership with the COIL program and offers select courses that involve shared learning between students in a course at UNC–Chapel Hill and peer students at a global partner university. Faculty members at both institutions design collaborative activities for their students, such as completing small group projects, engaging in dialogue drawing on their different societal or disciplinary perspectives, or exchanging scholarly or creative work.

Out-of-Class Language Experience

The department offers credit-bearing internship opportunities through ROML 293 and service-learning opportunities (http://ccps.unc.edu/apples/) through ROML 194. Both courses satisfy the High-Impact General Education requirement (in the IDEAs in Action curriculum) and the experiential education (EE) General Education requirement (in the Making Connections curriculum). While ROML 293 is a standalone course, ROML 194 is always connected to a specific course.

Each semester the department offers a film series where all students are invited to attend screenings of films in French, Italian, Portuguese, and Spanish. All films have subtitles. It is a great opportunity to meet people in different courses and language sections that share an interest in film.

Students also find opportunities to speak Spanish and meet native Spanish speakers in an informal weekly tertulia (gathering). Additional activities involving Spanish include attending lectures, receptions, and films organized by the department and student organizations such as ChispA (Carolina Hispanic Association); and serving the community through a variety of volunteer opportunities.

Students studying French are encouraged to become members of the French club, les Francophiles, and participate in the weekly conversation hour and other French Club activities. Departmental lectures and film series are also offered.

Students interested in Italian language and culture may attend film series, guest lectures, and a series of other extracurricular events including games and conversation hours. They may also wish to join the undergraduate Italian Club.

Students who wish to practice Portuguese can meet weekly for the bate-papo (chat). Students of Portuguese also engage in editorial work and publish in the student journal Revistinha.

Study Abroad

The Study Abroad Office sponsors many year-long, semester-long, and summer programs appropriate for students of the Romance languages and has special arrangements with the Department of Romance Studies for the UNC in Montpellier, UNC in Seville, and Florence programs. Students from UNC–Chapel Hill and from other institutions may earn up to 30 semester hours of undergraduate credit in these programs, which are open to qualified undergraduates regardless of academic major. Romance Languages Major, B.A.–Hispanic Studies

Spanish, the world’s third largest language and second in terms of native speakers, is spoken by nearly 500 million people across the globe. The over 50 million Hispanics in the United States have become the fastest-growing social and political segment in North America. Because of its prominence, learning to communicate in Spanish can be essential for those entering the global economic market and numerous professions.

Spanish studies at UNC–Chapel Hill thrives on innovative literary, linguistic, and theoretical approaches to the Spanish-speaking world, and includes the study of indigenous, Afro-descendant, Asian, and other cultures. The Hispanic studies curriculum is designed to allow students to concentrate in one field of study (Hispanic literatures and cultures, Spanish for the professions, Hispanic linguistics, and translation and interpreting) while also exploring other areas of interest. As a result, students obtain well-grounded and comprehensive critical knowledge of the literatures, languages, and cultures of Spain and the Americas, as well as an appreciation of the language applied to a professional field. In addition to their course work, students in the major may choose to work on collaborative research, enter an Honors contract, and/or pursue an Honors thesis with one of our faculty members.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students will acquire competence in the practice and analysis of Romance languages together with a critical knowledge of the written, oral, and visual traditions of their origin and diaspora. Our faculty promotes interdisciplinary connections and incorporates the study of literature, culture, theory, and history across the curriculum. Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC-Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Sample Plan One

This plan assumes a placement of SPAN 105 on the Foreign Language placement test. Student placement (and plans) may vary. Although it is possible to complete the Hispanic Studies major if a student begins with SPAN 101, summer school, study abroad, or doubling up on courses in the final year may be necessary in order to complete it in a timely manner.

Special Opportunities in Romance Studies

Undergraduate Research

The Department of Romance Studies offers a gateway for research in the humanities, including the various fields that make up Romance studies. Research activities include the honors thesis, summer research fellowships, or engaging in mentoring projects with professors which lead to opportunities to present papers at conferences or for publication in the University’s undergraduate research journal.

Annual Research Opportunities:
• Office for Undergraduate Research (https://our.unc.edu/)
• Celebration of Undergraduate Research (https://our.unc.edu/celebration-of-undergraduate-research/)
• UNC JOURney (https://uncjourney.unc.edu/)
• Summer Undergraduate Research Fellowship (https://our.unc.edu/surf/)
• Burch Fellowship (https://honorscarolina.unc.edu/fellowships/burch-fellowship/)

Honors
The departmental honors program is open to any qualified major with a cumulative grade point average of 3.3 or higher and 3.5 or higher in their major courses. Eligible honors candidates will formulate a topic and select an appropriate faculty member to supervise the writing of an honors thesis. Specific coursework for the major with honors consists of enrollment in the honors thesis courses in the language of the major emphasis.

691H is taken in the fall semester of the senior year and 692H is taken in the spring semester. FREN 390, ITAL 398, PORT 398, SPAN 397 and SPAN 398 may be substituted for the 691H research course if the subject of the seminar is central to the research project chosen. In the 692H course, the thesis will be completed and the student will participate in an oral defense with the thesis director and two additional readers, to be agreed upon by the student and director. The thesis director, in consultation with the readers, will recommend that the student who has defended the thesis graduate with honors, highest honors, or with course credit. FREN 390, FREN 691H, ITAL 398, ITAL 691H, PORT 398, SPAN 397 and SPAN 398 may count toward the eight courses for the major, but FREN 692H, ITAL 692H, PORT 692H, and SPAN 692H may not. Students who intend to graduate in December should adjust the scheduling of these courses in order to allow for completion of the honors project in December. Students meeting the required grade point averages should contact the undergraduate advisor for their language. For detailed information on the B.A. with honors, visit the department’s website (http://romancestudies.unc.edu/undergraduate/overview/).

Collaborative Online International Learning
The department works in partnership with the COIL program and offers select courses that involve shared learning between students in a course at UNC—Chapel Hill and peer students at a global partner university. Faculty members at both institutions design collaborative activities for their students, such as completing small group projects, engaging in dialogue drawing on their different societial or disciplinary perspectives, or exchanging scholarly or creative work.

Out-of-Class Language Experience
The department offers credit-bearing internship opportunities through ROML 293 and service-learning opportunities (http://ccps.unc.edu/apples/) through ROML 194. Both courses satisfy the High-Impact General Education requirement (in the IDEAs in Action curriculum) and the experiential education (EE) General Education requirement (in the Making Connections curriculum). While ROML 293 is a standalone course, ROML 194 is always connected to a specific course.

Each semester the department offers a film series where all students are invited to attend screenings of films in French, Italian, Portuguese, and Spanish. All films have subtitles. It is a great opportunity to meet people in different courses and language sections that share an interest in film.

Students also find opportunities to speak Spanish and meet native Spanish speakers in an informal weekly tertulia (gathering). Additional activities involving Spanish include attending lectures, receptions, and films organized by the department and student organizations such as ChispA (Carolina Hispanic Association); and serving the community through a variety of volunteer opportunities.

Students studying French are encouraged to become members of the French club, les Francophiles, and participate in the weekly conversation hour and other French Club activities. Departmental lectures and film series are also offered.

Students interested in Italian language and culture may attend film series, guest lectures, and a series of other extracurricular events including games and conversation hours. They may also wish to join the undergraduate Italian Club.

Students who wish to practice Portuguese can meet weekly for the bate-papo (chat). Students of Portuguese also engage in editorial work and publish in the student journal Revistinha.

Study Abroad
The Study Abroad Office sponsors many year-long, semester-long, and summer programs appropriate for students of the Romance languages and has special arrangements with the Department of Romance Studies for the UNC in Montpellier, UNC in Seville, and Florence programs.

Students from UNC—Chapel Hill and from other institutions may earn up to 30 semester hours of undergraduate credit in these programs, which are open to qualified undergraduates regardless of academic major. While, in general, students may satisfy up to 50 percent of major or minor coursework abroad, courses that are taught by Romance studies faculty may count differently. For example, students completing the Spanish minor for the professions in health and business may complete all or most of the minor in faculty-led programs abroad.

Students who participate in Study Abroad during the semester have the opportunity to work as course correspondents for a course in Romance studies. Course correspondents report back to the class they serve throughout the semester via online tools and may receive one hour of credit for their informative work.

General inquiries concerning any of these programs should be addressed to the Study Abroad Office, CB# 3130, FedEx Global Education Center, (919) 962-7002.

Undergraduate Awards
French
Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Pi Delta Phi, the national French honor society. Those with outstanding records in French are recommended as candidates for the Jacques Hardré Award, which is given to the best graduating senior in French; it includes a cash award.

Italian

Students are nominated for membership in Gamma Kappa Alpha, the Italian honor society, by undergraduate instructors. The society recognizes "outstanding scholastic performance in the fields of Italian language and literature" and encourages students "to acquire a greater interest in, and a deeper understanding of, Italian culture." The Kimberly Kyser Award for Excellence in Italian is awarded to the most outstanding student in Italian and includes a cash prize.

Portuguese

Each year the department awards the Camões Prize to the outstanding student in Portuguese during that year. The prize carries a monetary award made possible by a donation from the Gulbenkian Foundation.

Spanish

Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Sigma Delta Pi, the national Spanish honor society. Those with outstanding performance in the Hispanic literatures and cultures or the Hispanic linguistics majors are eligible for several prizes including the Chancellor's Award, given to the top graduating senior, the Stoudemire Awards, and the Larry D. King Fellowship.

Romance Languages Major, B.A.–Hispanic Linguistics

Spanish, the world's third largest language and second in terms of native speakers, is spoken by nearly 500 million people across the globe. The over 50 million Hispanics in the United States have become the fastest-growing social and political segment in North America. Because of its prominence, learning to communicate in Spanish can be essential for those entering the global economic market and numerous professions.

Spanish studies at UNC–Chapel Hill thrives on innovative literary, linguistic, and theoretical approaches to the Spanish-speaking world, and includes the study of indigenous, Afro-descendant, Asian, and other cultures. Students obtain well-grounded and comprehensive critical knowledge of the literatures, languages, and cultures of Spain and the Americas, often through collaborative research with a faculty member. Qualifying students have the opportunity to pursue an honor’s thesis with one of our faculty members.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students will acquire competence in the practice and analysis of Romance languages together with a critical knowledge of the written, oral, and visual traditions of their origin and diaspora. Our faculty promotes interdisciplinary connections and incorporates the study of literature, culture, theory, and history across the curriculum. Through coursework that emphasizes language acquisition, rhetoric, composition, and written and oral expression, our majors receive sustained personalized training in critical thinking and close reading. Upon completion of the program in Romance languages, students should be able to:

- Participate in conversations on concrete, social, academic, and professional topics
- Speak in detail about experiences and events in a variety of time frames and moods
- Represent points of view in discussions, both oral and written
- Deliver well-organized presentations on concrete, academic and professional topics
- Write on a wide variety of general interest, professional, and academic topics
- Follow narrative, informational, and descriptive speech on concrete, academic and professional topics
- Understand and discuss texts representing a variety of topics and genres

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
• earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

\(^H\) Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

\(^1\) SPAN 360 should be taken as early as possible because it is a prerequisite for most other courses in the major.

\(^2\) Two of which must be from the 500-level or above. Only one of PORT 402, SPAN 415, and SPAN 417 can be taken to satisfy this requirement of four additional courses.

The requirements consist of eight courses between SPAN 300 and SPAN 699. Completion of SPAN 261 or SPAN 267 is a prerequisite for the Hispanic linguistics major.

Prospective majors should complete the global language requirement by the end of their sophomore year. Students majoring in Hispanic linguistics may wish to complement the major with the Spanish minor in translation and interpreting (p. 1132).

LING courses that are crosslisted with the same numbering and title count equally to satisfy the requisites for this major.

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Sample Plan One

This plan assumes a placement of SPAN 105 on the Foreign Language placement test. Student placement (and plans) may vary. Although it is possible to complete the Hispanic linguistics concentration if a student begins with SPAN 101, summer school, study abroad, or doubling up on courses in the final year may be necessary in order to complete it in a timely manner.

Students who wish to practice Portuguese can meet weekly for the bate-papo (chat). Students of Portuguese also engage in editorial work and publish in the student journal Revistinha.

Study Abroad
The Study Abroad Office sponsors many year-long, semester-long, and summer programs appropriate for students of the Romance languages and has special arrangements with the Department of Romance Studies for the UNC in Montpellier, UNC in Seville, and Florence programs. Students from UNC–Chapel Hill and from other institutions may earn up to 30 semester hours of undergraduate credit in these programs, which are open to qualified undergraduates regardless of academic major.

While, in general, students may satisfy up to 50 percent of major or minor coursework abroad, courses that are taught by Romance studies faculty may count differently. For example, students completing the Spanish minor for the professions in health and business may complete all or most of the minor in faculty-led programs abroad.

Students who participate in Study Abroad during the semester have the opportunity to work as course correspondents for a course in Romance studies. Course correspondents report back to the class they serve throughout the semester via online tools and may receive one hour of credit for their informative work.

General inquiries concerning any of these programs should be addressed to the Study Abroad Office, CB# 3130, FedEx Global Education Center, (919) 962-7002.

Undergraduate Awards
French
Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Pi Delta Phi, the national French honor society. Those with outstanding records in French are recommended as candidates for the Jacques Hardré Award, which is given to the best graduating senior in French; it includes a cash award.

Italian
Students are nominated for membership in Gamma Kappa Alpha, the Italian honor society, by undergraduate instructors. The society recognizes “outstanding scholastic performance in the fields of Italian language and literature” and encourages students “to acquire a greater interest in, and a deeper understanding of, Italian culture.” The Kimberly Kyser Award for Excellence in Italian is awarded to the most outstanding student in Italian and includes a cash prize.

Portuguese
Each year the department awards the Camões Prize to the outstanding student in Portuguese during that year. The prize carries a monetary award made possible by a donation from the Gulbenkian Foundation.

Spanish
Students have the opportunity to be inducted into Sigma Delta Pi, the national Spanish honor society. Those with outstanding performance in the Hispanic literatures and cultures or the Hispanic linguistics majors are eligible for several prizes including the Chancellor’s Award, given to the top graduating senior, the Stoudemire Awards, and the Larry D. King Fellowship.

French Minor

The Department of Romance Studies is a diverse, multicultural, and plurilingual academic unit that engages in research and instruction in French, Italian, Portuguese, Spanish, and the historical minority languages of Europe and the Americas.

Students unable to undertake a full eight-course French program may register for the French minor. This option also is available to students in some professional schools.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Italian Minor

The minor in Italian is designed for those who wish to continue their study of the Italian language and acquire a more in-depth knowledge of Italian history, society, literature, and culture. Many use it to support their majors in related fields such as global studies, business, history, art history, and anthropology, and to round out their major in the STEM fields as well. It requires three fewer courses than the Italian major.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.
Portuguese Minor

The minor in Portuguese is designed for those who wish to continue their study of Portuguese and acquire a more in-depth knowledge of Lusophone cultural production, such as film, literature, and the performing arts. Qualifying courses include courses in Portuguese, courses on Lusophone topics taught in English, and certain courses outside the department with a significant amount of content related to the Lusophone world. Many students see it as essential or complementary to their major in fields such as public health, global studies, music, anthropology, or political science.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

• take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
• earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

Hispanic Studies Minor

The minor in Hispanic studies is designed for students who wish to continue their study of the Spanish language and acquire a more in-depth knowledge of Spanish and/or Spanish American culture, literature, or linguistics. Through the selection of courses, students may concentrate on a single region of the Hispanic world (Spain or Spanish America), a specific content area (literature, culture, or linguistics), or a combination of regions and/or content areas.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor “core” requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill

Translation and Interpreting Minor

Developments in globalization, international trade, worldwide communication and technology have dramatically increased the demand for qualified translators and interpreters in all realms, especially in business, technology, communication, marketing, advertisement, government, healthcare, social services, national security, international trade, and law. The current demand for translation and interpreting professionals outweighs the supply available. This program will provide students the background in theory, technical resources, research skills, and literary and cultural competency that are necessary to communicate in more than one language and in written and oral form.

Successful translators and interpreters work for an agency, as independent contractors, or as part of a larger team in national or international organizations, institutions, or associations. Upon completion of the minor, students will be ready to use their inter-cultural and inter-linguistic skills for professional purposes in institutional, academic, or other professional contexts.

Admission

Students who wish to declare this minor should be majoring in either Hispanic Literatures and Cultures or Hispanic Linguistics and should not have declared a different minor in the department. Approval by the department is required. Students can declare the minor after completing SPAN 300 with a grade of C or better by scheduling an appointment to meet with the program coordinator.
Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC-Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

Department of Sociology

Introduction
The Department of Sociology is the primary home for two majors (sociology major and management and society major) and two minors (health and society minor and social and economic justice minor).

The undergraduate major in sociology (p. 1143) provides students with theoretical and methodological tools, and substantive insights for understanding human social life and institutions. The department’s faculty is particularly strong in the areas of social inequality, marriage and family, health and medical sociology, work and the economy, religion, formal organizations, sex and gender, social movements, population and human ecology, social networks, education, and political sociology. Course themes range widely from the theoretical to the applied and incorporate a broad array of methodological approaches including comparative/historical, participant observation and interviewing, survey data collection, and statistical analysis.

The undergraduate major in management and society (p. 1146) is an interdisciplinary program that focuses on the institutional context and inner workings of organizations and the economic system, with both a historical and contemporary perspective. Students take relevant topical courses from a diverse range of departments (including Sociology, Communication Studies, Economics, Psychology, Business Management, and History), in addition to some statistics courses. It prepares students for a variety of positions in private or public-sector organizations. Additionally, many students find the curriculum to be excellent preparation for a variety of business-oriented graduate and professional degree programs.

The undergraduate minor in health and society (p. 1148) provides students with an opportunity to examine contemporary health patterns and trends characterizing U.S. society and societies around the world, as well as sociologically based explanations for those patterns and trends. It also provides students with an understanding of the social construction of health and illness in modern societies. The minor brings together courses focused specifically on linkages between health and society, along with courses focused on social organization and stratification, to provide students with insights into the ways that societies define health and illness and how social organization and stratification influence population health.

The undergraduate minor in social and economic justice (p. 1149) is designed for students who want to understand how to think analytically about issues of justice and how perspectives on justice can be joined with the pursuit of it. An overarching objective is fostering attitudes and knowledge about human rights; racial, ethnic, and gender equality; economic justice; democratic participation; sustainable development; diversity; and peace. It is especially appropriate for students who anticipate working in advocacy roles in nonprofit organizations, in local communities, or in governmental organizations. In these inquiries about justice, students engage scholarship in a variety of disciplines and traditions of practice.

Advising
All majors and minors have a primary academic advisor assigned in ConnectCarolina. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly

Department of Sociology

Introduction
The Department of Sociology is the primary home for two majors (sociology major and management and society major) and two minors (health and society minor and social and economic justice minor).

The undergraduate major in sociology (p. 1143) provides students with theoretical and methodological tools, and substantive insights for understanding human social life and institutions. The department’s faculty is particularly strong in the areas of social inequality, marriage and family, health and medical sociology, work and the economy, religion, formal organizations, sex and gender, social movements, population and human ecology, social networks, education, and political sociology. Course themes range widely from the theoretical to the applied and incorporate a broad array of methodological approaches including comparative/historical, participant observation and interviewing, survey data collection, and statistical analysis.

The undergraduate major in management and society (p. 1146) is an interdisciplinary program that focuses on the institutional context and inner workings of organizations and the economic system, with both a historical and contemporary perspective. Students take relevant topical courses from a diverse range of departments (including Sociology, Communication Studies, Economics, Psychology, Business Management, and History), in addition to some statistics courses. It prepares students for a variety of positions in private or public-sector organizations. Additionally, many students find the curriculum to be excellent preparation for a variety of business-oriented graduate and professional degree programs.

The undergraduate minor in health and society (p. 1148) provides students with an opportunity to examine contemporary health patterns and trends characterizing U.S. society and societies around the world, as well as sociologically based explanations for those patterns and trends. It also provides students with an understanding of the social construction of health and illness in modern societies. The minor brings together courses focused specifically on linkages between health and society, along with courses focused on social organization and stratification, to provide students with insights into the ways that societies define health and illness and how social organization and stratification influence population health.

The undergraduate minor in social and economic justice (p. 1149) is designed for students who want to understand how to think analytically about issues of justice and how perspectives on justice can be joined with the pursuit of it. An overarching objective is fostering attitudes and knowledge about human rights; racial, ethnic, and gender equality; economic justice; democratic participation; sustainable development; diversity; and peace. It is especially appropriate for students who anticipate working in advocacy roles in nonprofit organizations, in local communities, or in governmental organizations. In these inquiries about justice, students engage scholarship in a variety of disciplines and traditions of practice.

Advising
All majors and minors have a primary academic advisor assigned in ConnectCarolina. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. The department’s director of undergraduate studies and assistant director engage with current, transfer, and prospective majors/minors by email or appointment (see contact information on the program page of the catalog). Departmental academic advising is particularly important for those students who are double majors and those who may be considering going on to graduate school. Further information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, writing an honors thesis, careers, and graduate schools is available on the department’s website (https://sociology.unc.edu/).

Opportunities for Career and Further Education

Graduates from our department’s programs are employed by research institutes, public health and welfare organizations, social work agencies, private businesses, law firms, international agencies, medical centers, educational institutions, advertising firms, survey and polling organizations, and the criminal justice system. Others work in politics and government and in community and social justice organizing.

A major in sociology also prepares students for law, medical, or business school and for graduate degree programs in social work, education, public policy, religious ministry, mass communications, public health, nonprofit administration, and international affairs. The sociology major also prepares interested undergraduates for graduate studies in sociology, should they choose to continue in the field to become researchers or teachers in educational or research institutions. Students interested in pursuing graduate studies after college may, with the instructor’s permission, enroll in graduate-level courses at UNC–Chapel Hill.

A major in management and society prepares students for virtually any aspect of a business or management career that does not involve highly specialized training and certification (such as finance and accounting). Employers are interested in students who can think on their feet, communicate effectively, write well, and make sense of the social and economic changes occurring in their industry. Management and society majors are educated in each of these skills, and are especially suited for entry-level positions in any aspect of human resource management, industry, or public-sector organizations. Among recent graduates who responded to a placement office survey, the largest number were employed in sales; management or management training positions with at least some supervisory or personnel-related responsibilities ranked second. Other graduates are working in customer service, purchasing, and marketing research, and several hold positions in the public sector.

Sociology Major, B.A.
The undergraduate major in sociology at UNC–Chapel Hill provides students with theoretical and methodological tools, and substantive insights for understanding human social life and institutions. The major is designed to offer its students training in critical thinking, analytical problem solving, reasoned judgment, and effective communication as well as broad knowledge of human relations and social systems, providing useful tools for a variety of careers. The curriculum and requirements are flexible enough to permit students to tailor their program to fit individual needs and interests. The undergraduate sociology program includes opportunities to put sociological ideas into practice through research by means of independent studies, theses, and internships.

Student Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of the sociology program, students should be able to:

- Make links between human action/consciousness and social forces/social contexts. This will include identifying how human behavior and consciousness are shaped by the social and, in turn, how the social can be changed by individual behavior and collective action
- Identify and define major sociological concepts and apply these concepts to social reality. Examples of concepts include norms, roles, social institutions, social stratification, power, authority, class, gender, race, social capital, life course, social networks, and social control
- Propose an appropriate research design for studying a social phenomenon, including assessing the data and methods that would be appropriate for any given study of social phenomena
- Describe and compare several major theoretical perspectives used by sociologists (examples include functionalism, conflict theory, institutional theory, feminist theory, and symbolic interactionism), and be able to apply these perspectives to social phenomena (poverty, human capital, inequality, inter-group conflict, etc.)

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements, students must

Sample Plan of Study
Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

Special Opportunities in Sociology

Honors in Sociology

The department attempts to identify and invite all qualified students to participate in the senior honors program. Students who are not contacted, especially double majors, transfer students, and students who declare their major in sociology relatively late in their college careers, are encouraged to speak with their major advisor or the department’s honors advisor no later than the preregistration period during the second semester of their junior year.

To graduate with honors in sociology, a major must meet the following requirements:

- At least a 3.3 cumulative grade point average in major courses and all courses taken at the University
- Completion of an honors thesis based on independent study, which may involve collection of data by the student, under the supervision of a faculty thesis advisor
- Participation in an honors seminar program during the fall and spring semesters of the senior year.

Students may receive credit for one or both senior honors research and seminar courses (SOCI 691H and SOCI 692H) depending on the extent of their thesis work.

For more information on honors, contact the Sociology director of undergraduate studies and/or the assistant director, or visit the relevant page (https://sociology.unc.edu/undergraduate-program/sociology-major/honors/) on the department’s website (https://sociology.unc.edu/).

Student Clubs

The Sociology Club (https://heellife.unc.edu/organization/sociology_club/) is a student-run, student-driven organization that may provide relevant presentations, discussions, guidance, and/or service opportunities in sociology.

Independent Study and Reading

SOCI 396 may be taken for one to three hours of course credit depending on the amount of academic work planned by the student. It is usually taken by juniors and seniors who have completed at least two or three courses in sociology. Students may use independent study to
• Do reading and research in an area in which no course is offered
• Take advanced or more specialized coursework in a specific area of sociology

After an area of study has been selected, the student contacts a faculty member in the department whose interests are in or related to the topic area. If the faculty member agrees to direct the student’s independent study, the student needs final approval by the department’s director of undergraduate studies. It is the student’s and faculty supervisor’s responsibility to determine the amount of reading and/or outside work to be done, the frequency with which the student’s progress will be assessed, and the papers or examinations that will constitute the course requirements. An approved learning contract is necessary, and some written work involving sociological analysis is required to receive credit for SOCI 396. Students must sign up for SOCI 396 before the end of the first week of classes. For more information, visit the relevant page (https://sociology.unc.edu/undergraduate-program/sociology-major/independent-study-and-internships/) on the department’s website (https://sociology.unc.edu/).

Independent Experiential Internship
Students may combine employment and study in the form of an internship program for which they receive one to three academic credits through SOCI 393. The student must assume responsibility for employment arrangements. Students may not receive credit for paid employment. The student contacts a faculty member in the department whose interests are in or related to the area of the internship. If the faculty member agrees to direct the internship, the student needs final approval by the department’s director of undergraduate studies. Credit is not provided for the internship alone; some written work involving sociological analysis is required to receive credit for SOCI 393. Because of the expectation that students doing an internship for academic credit will conduct substantive sociological analysis, it is very important that planning begin early. Students must secure all approvals for the contract before the first day of the internship. For more information, visit the relevant page (https://sociology.unc.edu/undergraduate-program/sociology-major/independent-study-and-internships/) on the department’s website (https://sociology.unc.edu/).

Undergraduate Research
Students interested in working with faculty on their research projects should contact the Office for Undergraduate Research (http://our.unc.edu/) for more information and also speak with the director of undergraduate studies for more direction.

Undergraduate Howard W. Odum Award
The Undergraduate Howard W. Odum Award is presented yearly to a graduating senior who has displayed excellence in undergraduate sociological achievement. This award was established in 1967 in honor of Professor Howard Odum, who founded and first chaired the UNC–Chapel Hill Department of Sociology. Odum was a pioneer in American sociology and a major influence on the discipline. The department faculty selects the recipient of the annual award on the basis of grade records and other demonstrations of academic talent and accomplishment as an undergraduate.

Management and Society Major, B.A.

Management and society is an interdisciplinary major designed to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of the relationship between organizations and their social context. Drawing on multiple social science perspectives, this major is designed for students interested in social and organizational dynamics in the private, non-profit, and public sectors.

Students have combined management and society with majors in such academic disciplines as economics, sociology, psychology, public policy, history, and political science. The curriculum prepares students to either directly enter the workforce or as preparation for business-oriented graduate and professional degree programs.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the management and society program, students should be able to:

• Understand economic and sociological theories and apply them to understand the dynamics of labor markets, public policy, and organizational behavior.
• Analyze the role of social, historical, and economic forces in shaping organizational processes.
• Demonstrate effective communication and leadership skills, essential for managing interpersonal and organizational dynamics in a global context.
• Effectively utilize quantitative and qualitative data analysis techniques to inform decision-making processes in organizational and policy contexts.

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements, students must
• earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
• complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
• take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
• earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Students can search for FY-Launch sections in ConnectCarolina using the FY-LAUNCH attribute.

1 Double majors in economics and management and society should take economics courses at the 400 level.

Some of the core courses are cross-listed.

Special Opportunities in Management and Society
Honors in Management and Society
A student may, as a result of distinguished work (3.3 grade point average or higher), be awarded a degree with honors or highest honors. This requires completion of a senior honors thesis. Interested students should contact the Sociology director of undergraduate studies and/or assistant director for more information. Honors students should enroll in MNGT 691H and MNGT 692H (or the SOCI equivalent of these courses) during the fall and spring semesters of their senior year. MNGT 692H will fulfill one of the course requirements from the social context of business group listed above. For more information, visit the relevant page (https://sociology.unc.edu/undergraduate-program/sociology-major/honors/) on the department’s website (https://sociology.unc.edu/).

Health and Society Minor

The minor in health and society provides students with an opportunity to examine contemporary health patterns and trends characterizing U.S. society and societies around the world, as well as sociologically based explanations for those patterns and trends. It also provides students with an understanding of the social construction of health and illness in modern societies. The minor brings together courses focused specifically on linkages between health and society, along with courses focused on social organization and social stratification, to provide students with insights into the ways that societies define health and illness and how social organization and stratification influence population health.

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Social and Economic Justice Minor

The minor in social and economic justice is designed for students who want to understand how to think analytically about issues of justice and how perspectives on justice can be joined with the pursuit of it. An overarching objective is fostering attitudes and knowledge about human rights; racial, ethnic, and gender equality; economic justice; democratic participation; sustainable development; diversity; and peace. It is especially appropriate for students who anticipate working in advocacy roles in nonprofit organizations, in local communities, or in governmental organizations. In these inquiries about justice, students engage scholarship in a variety of disciplines and traditions of practice.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Department of Sociology
A student may major in sociology and minor in social and economic justice; however, a student cannot count toward graduation more than 45 hours in SOCI courses. All college requirements about minors apply.

Service Learning Component

Students are required to complete one service-learning experience, a requirement that can be met in one of three ways.

1. A student may take a course that includes a service-learning (APPLES) component.
2. After seeking and receiving the approval of the director of the minor, a student may take a one- to three-credit independent studies or special topics course (summer or academic term) with a faculty member.
3. A student may participate in the two-credit spring break course, HBEH 610, which meets the service-learning requirement but not a course requirement.

Note that core courses do not necessarily contain a service-learning component; check ConnectCarolina each semester to confirm that courses are listed as APPLES courses.

Thus, the minor is fulfilled with 12 to 13 credits, depending on whether the service-learning requirement is part of a three-credit course or is fulfilled in another way.

Department of Statistics and Operations Research

Introduction

The major in statistics and analytics (STAN) is an excellent program for students interested in statistical data science, operations research, and actuarial science, as well as in fields such as business, economics, public policy and health, psychology, and biomedicine, where the decision and statistical sciences play an increasingly important role.

Particular areas in which graduates can obtain employment or continue with graduate study include:

Statistics

Students in this area study the mathematical theories of probability and statistics and their application to mathematical models that contain an element of uncertainty or randomness. Opportunities for employment are manifold in businesses and government agencies, and include a broad range of areas from the natural sciences, social sciences, and technology. Concrete examples include pharmacology, genomics, medicine, environmental sciences, social network analysis, and information technology.

Operations Research

In this area, students study mathematical, statistical, and computational techniques related to decision making. Operations research is crucial in business, government, and other management areas where decisions are made by solving large, complex problems (for example, crew scheduling for airlines, and the design of online recommendation systems). In addition to their major courses, students interested in this field are encouraged to take courses in business and economics.

Actuarial Science

Actuaries work primarily in businesses that involve financial risk, including the insurance industry. Students interested in this field take advanced courses in statistics, stochastic processes, and the mathematical theory of risk.

Advising

All majors and minors have a primary academic advisor in Steele Building. Students are strongly encouraged to meet regularly with their advisor and review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. STAN majors and minors are also encouraged to meet with departmental advisors to discuss course planning before registration each semester. The director of undergraduate studies works with prospective majors and minors by appointment. Additional information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be

H Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

F FY-Launch class sections may be available. A FY-Launch section fulfills the same requirements as a standard section of that course, but also fulfills the FY-SEMINAR/FY-LAUNCH First-Year Foundations requirement. Students can search for FY-Launch sections in ConnectCarolina using the FY-LAUNCH attribute.

1 Have departmental requirements that may or may not be waived. Students should consult course descriptions and discuss requirements with the instructor.

See the program page here (p. 1143) for special opportunities.

Courses for Students from Other Departments

The Department of Statistics and Operations Research offers a variety of courses of potential value to students majoring in other disciplines. Introductory courses include STOR 113 and STOR 215, which are foundation courses in decision models, and the basic statistical courses, STOR 120 and STOR 155. At the intermediate level, STOR 305 provides an introduction to business decision models, while STOR 320 is an introductory course to data science. Substantial coverage of applied statistical methods is provided in STOR 455 and STOR 556. At more advanced mathematical levels, an introduction to probability theory is provided by STOR 435 (or STOR 535), an introduction to proof techniques and discrete mathematics is given in STOR 315, and the basic theory of statistical inference is given by STOR 555. More advanced deterministic and stochastic models of operations research are provided in STOR 415 and STOR 445. Machine learning is covered in STOR 565 and STOR 566.

Graduate School and Career Opportunities

Regardless of the electives chosen, the statistics and analytics degree program provides excellent preparation for graduate study. Graduates with concentrations in operations research or statistics often continue work at the graduate level in those fields or related areas such as industrial engineering, biostatistics, and environmental science, or enter business school to pursue a master's in business administration (M.B.A.) degree.

A five-year B.S.–M.S. degree program in statistics, operations research and data science is also an option. Interested students should consult the director of graduate study for the operations research program.

Graduates of the statistics and analytics program will find numerous opportunities for well-paid, challenging jobs.

STOR—Statistics and Operations Research

Undergraduate-level Courses

STOR 52. First-Year Seminar: Decisions, Decisions, Decisions. 3 Credits.
In this course, we will investigate the structure of these decision problems, show how they can be solved (at least in principle), and solve some simple problems.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: QI.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 53. FYS: Networks: Degrees of Separation and Other Phenomena Relating to Connected Systems. 3 Credits.
Networks, mathematical structures that are composed of nodes and a set of lines joining the nodes, are used to model a wide variety of familiar systems.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: QI.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 54. First-Year Seminar: Adventures in Statistics. 3 Credits.
This seminar aims to show that contrary to common belief, statistics can be exciting and fun. The seminar will consist of three modules: statistics in our lives, randomness, and principles of statistical reasoning.

Rules & Requirements

IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: QI.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
STOR 55. First-Year Seminar: Risk and Uncertainty in the Real World. 3 Credits.
The aim of this class is to study the role of uncertainty in our daily lives, to explore the cognitive biases that impair us, and to understand how one uses quantitative models to make decisions under uncertainty in a wide array of fields including medicine, law, finance, and the sciences.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: QI.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 56. First-Year Seminar: The Art and Science of Decision Making in War and Peace. 3 Credits.
This seminar will use recently assembled historical material to tell the exciting story of the origins and development of operations research during and after World War II.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 60. First-Year Seminar: Statistical Decision-Making Concepts. 3 Credits.
We will study some basic statistical decision-making procedures and the errors and losses they lead to. We will analyze the effects of randomness on decision making using computer experimentation and physical experiments with real random mechanisms like dice, cards, and so on.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 61. First-Year Seminar: Statistics for Environmental Change. 3 Credits.
Studies the Environmental Protection Agency’s Criteria Document, mandated by the Clean Air Act; this document reviews current scientific evidence concerning airborne particulate matter. Students learn some of the statistical methods used to assess the connections between air pollution and mortality, and prepare reports on studies covered in the Criteria Document.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 62. First-Year Seminar: Probability and Paradoxes. 3 Credits.
The theory of probability, which can be used to model the uncertainty and chance that exist in the real world, often leads to surprising conclusions and seeming paradoxes. We survey and study these, along with other paradoxes and puzzling situations arising in logic, mathematics, and human behavior.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 63. FYS: Statistics, Biostatistics, and Bioinformatics: An Introduction to the Ongoing Evolution. 3 Credits.
This course is designed to emphasize the motivation, philosophy, and cultivation of statistical reasoning in the interdisciplinary areas of statistical science and bioinformatics.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: QI.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 64. First-Year Seminar: A Random Walk down Wall Street. 3 Credits.
Introduces basic concepts in finance and economics, useful tools for collecting and summarizing financial data, and simple probability models for quantification of market uncertainty.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: QI.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 66. First-Year Seminar: Visualizing Data. 3 Credits.
This seminar looks at a variety of ways in which modern computational tools allow easy and informative viewing of data. Students will also study the kinds of choices that have to be made in data presentation and viewing.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: QI.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 72. First-Year Seminar: Unlocking the Genetic Code. 3 Credits.
Introduces students to the world of genetics and DNA and to the use of computers to organize and understand the complex systems associated with the structure and dynamics of DNA and heredity.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Making Connections Gen Ed: QI.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 89. First-Year Seminar: Special Topics. 3 Credits.
Special Topics Course. Contents will vary each semester.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-SEMINAR.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 113. Decision Models for Business and Economics. 3 Credits.
An introduction to multivariable quantitative models in economics. Mathematical techniques for formulating and solving optimization and equilibrium problems will be developed, including elementary models under uncertainty.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-QUANT.
Making Connections Gen Ed: QI.
Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 110.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
STOR 115. Reasoning with Data: Navigating a Quantitative World. 3 Credits.
Students will use mathematical and statistical methods to address societal problems, make personal decisions, and reason critically about the world. Authentic contexts may include voting, health and risk, digital humanities, finance, and human behavior. This course does not count as credit towards the psychology or neuroscience majors.

Rules & Requirements
- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-QUANT.
- Making Connections Gen Ed: QR.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.
- Same as: MATH 115, BIOL 115, PSYC 115.

STOR 120. Foundations of Statistics and Data Science. 4 Credits.
The course teaches critical concepts and skills in computer programming and statistical inference, in conjunction with hands-on analysis of real-world datasets, including economic data, document collections, geographical data, and social networks. It delves into social issues surrounding data analysis such as privacy and design.

Rules & Requirements
- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-LAUNCH (only designated sections), FC-QUANT.
- Making Connections Gen Ed: QR.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 151. Introduction to Data Analysis. 3 Credits.
Elementary introduction to statistical reasoning, including sampling, elementary probability, statistical inference, and data analysis. STOR 151 may not be taken for credit by students who have credit for ECON 400 or PSYC 210.

Rules & Requirements
- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-QUANT.
- Making Connections Gen Ed: QR.
- Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 110.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 155. Introduction to Data Models and Inference. 3 Credits.
Data analysis; correlation and regression; sampling and experimental design; basic probability (random variables, expected values, normal and binomial distributions); hypothesis testing and confidence intervals for means, proportions, and regression parameters; use of spreadsheet software.

Rules & Requirements
- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FY-LAUNCH (only designated sections), FC-QUANT.
- Making Connections Gen Ed: QR.
- Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 110.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 215. Foundations of Decision Sciences. 3 Credits.
Introduction to basic concepts and techniques of discrete mathematics with applications to business and social and physical sciences. Topics include logic, sets, functions, combinatorics, discrete probability, graphs, and networks.

Rules & Requirements
- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-QUANT.
- Making Connections Gen Ed: QR.
- Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 110.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 235. Mathematics for Data Science. 4 Credits.
This course introduces students to some of the key mathematical tools underlying algorithmic data science. The primary focus of the course is matrix algebra and multivariable calculus. The mathematical topics covered in the course will be motivated and connected by concrete applications in data science, with an emphasis on machine learning and optimization.

Rules & Requirements
- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-QUANT.
- Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 231 and MATH 232.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 290. Special Topics. 3 Credits.
Examines selected topics from statistics and operations research. Course description is available from the department office.

Rules & Requirements
- Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 12 total credits. 4 total completions.
- Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 291. Undergraduate Learning Assistantship. 1 Credits.
Experience includes preparations, demonstrations, assistance, and attendance at weekly meetings and lab sections. This course will enable you to deepen your understanding of topics in statistics and data science by learning the material with an eye toward explaining it to other less-experienced students, and; develop pedagogical skills, such as developing a rapport with learners, engaging in clear oral and written communication, and taking the perspective of less experienced students.

Rules & Requirements
- IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-LEARNTA.
- Making Connections Gen Ed: EE - Undergraduate Learning Assistant, ULA.
- Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 120 grade of A- or higher.
- Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 7 total credits. 7 total completions.
- Grading Status: Pass/Fail.
STOR 305. Introduction to Decision Analytics. 3 Credits.
The use of mathematics to describe and analyze large-scale decision problems. Situations involving the allocation of resources, making decisions in a competitive environment, and dealing with uncertainty are modeled and solved using suitable software packages. Students cannot enroll in STOR 305 if they have already taken STOR 415.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-QUANT.
Making Connections Gen Ed: EE.
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 120, 155, or MATH 152.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 315. Discrete Mathematics for Data Science. 4 Credits.
The course gives a solid introduction to rigorous mathematical thinking and problem solving, all of which are fundamental in data science. It covers proofs, mathematical induction, counting, and the basics of graph theory.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-QUANT.
Requisites: Prerequisite, MATH 232.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 320. Introduction to Data Science. 4 Credits.
Development of basic skill set for data analysis from obtaining data to data carpentry, exploration, modeling, and communication. Topics covered include regression, clustering, classification, algorithmic thinking, and non-standard data objects (networks and text data). Students may not receive credit for both STOR 320 and STOR 520.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: FC-QUANT, FC-LAB.
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 120 or 155.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 358. Sample Survey Methodology. 4 Credits.
Fundamental principles and methods of sampling populations, with emphasis on simple, random, stratified, and cluster sampling. Sample weights, nonsampling error, and analysis of data from complex designs are covered. Practical experience through participation in the design, execution, and analysis of a sampling project.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, BIOS 650; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: BIOS 664.

STOR 390. Special Topics in Statistics and Operations Research. 3 Credits.
Examines selected topics from statistics and operations research. Course description is available from the department office.

Rules & Requirements
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 12 total credits. 4 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Advanced Undergraduate and Graduate-level Courses
STOR 415. Introduction to Optimization. 3 Credits.
Linear, integer, nonlinear, and dynamic programming, classical optimization problems, network theory.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH 347 and STOR 315, 215 or MATH 381.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 435. Introduction to Probability. 3 Credits.
Introduction to mathematical theory of probability covering random variables; moments; binomial, Poisson, normal and related distributions; generating functions; sums and sequences of random variables; and statistical applications. Students may not receive credit for both STOR 435 and STOR 535.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: QI.
Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH/STOR 235 or MATH 233; and STOR 215 or MATH 381 or COMP 283.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: MATH 535.

STOR 445. Stochastic Modeling. 3 Credits.
Introduction to Markov chains, Poisson process, continuous-time Markov chains, renewal theory. Applications to queueing systems, inventory, and reliability, with emphasis on systems modeling, design, and control.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, BIOS 660, STOR 435 or 535.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 455. Methods of Data Analysis. 3 Credits.
Review of basic inference; two-sample comparisons; correlation; introduction to matrices; simple and multiple regression (including significance tests, diagnostics, variable selection); analysis of variance; use of statistical software.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 120, or 155.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 471. Long-Term Actuarial Models. 3 Credits.
Probability models for long-term insurance and pension systems that involve future contingent payments and failure-time random variables. Introduction to survival distributions and measures of interest and annuities-certain.

Rules & Requirements
Making Connections Gen Ed: QI.
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 435, or 535.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 472. Short Term Actuarial Models. 3 Credits.
Short term probability models for potential losses and their applications to both traditional insurance systems and conventional business decisions. Introduction to stochastic process models of solvency requirements.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 435, or 535.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
STOR 475. Healthcare Risk Analytics. 3 Credits.
This course will introduce students to the healthcare industry and provide hands-on experience with key actuarial and analytical concepts that apply across the actuarial field. Using real-world situations, the course will focus on how mathematics and the principles of risk management are used to help insurance companies and employers make better decisions regarding employee benefit insurance products and programs.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 435, or 535.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 490. Special Topics. 3 Credits.
Examines selected topics from statistics and operations research. Course description is available from the department office.

Rules & Requirements
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 12 total credits. 4 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 493. Internship in Statistics and Operations Research. 3 Credits.
Requires permission of the department. Statistics and analytics majors only. An opportunity to obtain credit for an internship related to statistics, operations research, or actuarial science. Pass/Fail only. Does not count toward the statistics and analytics major or minor.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: HI-INTERN.
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 6 total credits. 2 total completions.
Grading Status: Pass/Fail.

STOR 496. Undergraduate Reading and Research in Statistics and Operations Research. 1-3 Credits.
Permission of the director of undergraduate studies. This course is intended mainly for students working on honors projects. May be repeated for credit.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 6 total credits. 6 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 512. Optimization for Machine Learning and Neural Networks. 3 Credits.
This is an upper-level course focusing on optimization aspects of common and practical problems and topics in statistical learning, machine learning, neural networks, and modern AI. It covers several topics such as optimization perspective of linear regression, nonlinear regression, matrix factorization, stochastic gradient descent, regularization techniques, neural networks, deep learning techniques, and minimax models.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, STOR 415 or STOR 612; or MATH 233 and MATH 347, or MATH 235, and COMP 110 or COMP 116; or permission of instructor.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 515. Dynamic Decision Analytics. 3 Credits.
An introduction to algorithms and modeling techniques that use knowledge gained from prior experience to make intelligent decisions in real time. Topics include Markov decision processes, dynamic programming, multiplicative weights update, exploration vs. exploitation, multi-armed bandits, and two player games.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, STOR 435 or 535, and MATH 347.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 520. Statistical Computing for Data Science. 4 Credits.
This course provides hands-on experience working with data sets provided in class and downloaded from certain public websites. Lectures cover basic topics such as R programming, visualization, data wrangling and cleaning, exploratory data analysis, web scraping, data merging, predictive modeling, and elements of machine learning. Programming analyses in more advanced areas of data science. Students may not receive credit for both STOR 320 and STOR 520.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, STOR 435 or 535, and STOR 455.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 535. Probability for Data Science. 3 Credits.
This course is an advanced undergraduate course in probability with the aim to give students the technical and computational tools for advanced courses in data analysis and machine learning. It covers random variables, moments, binomial, Poisson, normal and related distributions, generating functions, sums and sequences of random variables, statistical applications, Markov chains, multivariate normal and prediction analytics. Students may not receive credit for both STOR 435 and STOR 535.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, MATH/STOR 235 or MATH 233; and STOR 215 or STOR 315 or MATH 381 or COMP 283.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 538. Sports Analytics. 3 Credits.
This course will survey the history of sports analytics across multiple areas and challenge students in team-based projects to practice sports analytics. Students will learn how applied statistics and mathematics help decision makers gain competitive advantages for on-field performance and off-field business decisions.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 320 or STOR 455.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 555. Mathematical Statistics. 3 Credits.
Functions of random samples and their probability distributions, introductory theory of point and interval estimation and hypothesis testing, elementary decision theory.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 435, or 535.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
STOR 556. Time Series Data Analysis. 3 Credits.
This course covers the fundamental theory and methods for time series data, as well as related statistical software and real-world data applications. Topics include the autocorrelation function, estimation and elimination of trend and seasonality, estimation and forecasting procedures in ARMA models and nonstationary time series models.

Rules & Requirements
Prerequisites: STOR 435 or 535, and STOR 455.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 557. Advanced Methods of Data Analysis. 3 Credits.
The course covers advanced data analysis methods beyond those in STOR 455 and how to apply them in a modern computer package, specifically R or R-Studio which are the primary statistical packages for this kind of analysis. Specific topics include (a) Generalized Linear Models; (b) Random Effects; (c) Bayesian Statistics; (d) Nonparametric Methods (kernels, splines and related techniques).

Rules & Requirements
Prerequisites: STOR 435 or 535, and STOR 455.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 565. Machine Learning. 3 Credits.
Introduction to theory and methods of machine learning including classification; Bayes risk/rule, linear discriminant analysis, logistic regression, nearest neighbors, and support vector machines; clustering algorithms; overfitting, estimation error, cross validation.

Rules & Requirements
Prerequisites: STOR 215 or MATH 381, and STOR 435 or 535.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 566. Introduction to Deep Learning. 3 Credits.
Deep neural networks (DNNs) have been widely used for tackling numerous machine learning problems that were once believed to be challenging. With their remarkable ability of fitting training data, DNNs have achieved revolutionary successes in many fields such as computer vision, natural language processing, and robotics. This is an introduction course to deep learning.

Rules & Requirements
Prerequisites: STOR 435 or 535, and COMP 110 or 116.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 572. Simulation for Analytics. 3 Credits.
This upper-level-undergraduate and beginning-graduate-level course introduces the concepts of modeling, programming, and statistical analysis as they arise in stochastic computer simulations. Topics include modeling static and discrete-event simulations of stochastic systems, random number generation, random variate generation, simulation programming, and statistical analysis of simulation input and output.

Rules & Requirements
Prerequisites: STOR 120 or 155, and STOR 435 or 535.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 590. Special Topics in Statistics and Operations Research. 3 Credits.
Examines selected topics from statistics and operations research. Course description is available from the department office.

Rules & Requirements
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit; may be repeated in the same term for different topics; 12 total credits. 4 total completions.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 612. Foundations of Optimization. 3 Credits.
STOR 612 consists of three major parts: linear programming, quadratic programming, and unconstrained optimization. Topics: Modeling, theory and algorithms for linear programming; modeling, theory and algorithms for quadratic programming; convex sets and functions; first-order and second-order methods such as stochastic gradient methods, accelerated gradient methods and quasi-Newton methods for unconstrained optimization.

Rules & Requirements
Prerequisites: MATH 347 and 521 or permission of the instructor.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 614. Advanced Optimization. 3 Credits.
STOR 614 consists of three major parts: Integer programming, conic programming, and nonlinear optimization. Topics: modeling, theory and algorithms for integer programming; second-order cone and semidefinite programming; theory and algorithms for constrained optimization; dynamic programming; networks.

Rules & Requirements
Prerequisites: Prerequisite, STOR 612 or equivalent (or permission of instructor).
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 634. Probability I. 3 Credits.

Rules & Requirements
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 635. Probability II. 3 Credits.

Rules & Requirements
Prerequisites: Prerequisite, STOR 634; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 641. Stochastic Modeling I. 3 Credits.
The aim of this 3-credit graduate course is to introduce stochastic modeling that is commonly used in various fields such as operations research, data science, engineering, business, and life sciences. Although it is the first course in a sequence of three courses, it can also serve as a standalone introductory course in stochastic modeling and analysis. The course covers the following topics: discrete-time Markov chains, Poisson processes, and continuous-time Markov chains.

Rules & Requirements
Prerequisites: Prerequisite, Probability background at the level of STOR 435 or STOR 535.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
STOR 642. Stochastic Modeling II. 3 Credits.
This 3-credit course is the second graduate-level course on stochastic modeling that expands upon the material taught in STOR 641. The course covers the following topics: renewal and regenerative processes, queueing models, and Markov decision processes.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 641.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 654. Statistical Theory I. 3 Credits.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 654.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 655. Statistical Theory II. 3 Credits.
Point estimation. Hypothesis testing and confidence sets. Contingency tables, nonparametric goodness-of-fit. Linear model optimality theory. BLUE, MVU, MLE. Multivariate tests. Introduction to decision theory and Bayesian inference.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 654.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 664. Applied Statistics I. 3 Credits.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 664; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 665. Applied Statistics II. 3 Credits.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 664; permission of the instructor for students lacking the prerequisite.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 672. Simulation Modeling and Analysis. 3 Credits.
Introduces students to modeling, programming, and statistical analysis applicable to computer simulations. Emphasizes statistical analysis of simulation output for decision-making. Focuses on discrete-event simulations and discusses other simulation methodologies such as Monte Carlo and agent-based simulations. Students model, program, and run simulations using specialized software. Familiarity with computer programming recommended.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisites, STOR 555 and 641.
Grading Status: Letter grade.
Same as: COMP 672.

STOR 674. Statistical and Computational Tools for Reproducible Data Science. 3 Credits.
The purpose of this course is to provide a strong foundation in computational skills needed for reproducible research in data science and statistics. Topics will include computational tools and programming skills to facilitate reproducibility, as well as procedures and methods for reproducible conclusions.

Rules & Requirements
Requisites: Prerequisite, STOR 320 or 664.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 690. Special Topics. 3 Credits.
Examines selected topics from statistics and operations research. Course description is available from the department office.

Rules & Requirements
Repeat Rules: May be repeated for credit. 12 total credits. 4 total completions.

STOR 691H. Honors in Statistics and Analytics. 3 Credits.
Permission of the department. Majors only. Individual reading, study, or project supervised by a faculty member.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 692H. Honors in Statistics and Analytics. 3 Credits.
Permission of the department. Majors only. Individual reading, study, or project supervised by a faculty member.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: RESEARCH.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

STOR 697. Capstone. 3 Credits.
This course is designed to give Statistics & Analytics (STAN) majors an opportunity to integrate and apply the knowledge and skills acquired throughout the STAN degree. At the beginning of the semester, the instructor will present to the class a broad description of several problems originating from external industry partners, and covering a wide range of statistics, modeling, optimization, and data science topics. Students will work on these problems throughout the remainder of the semester.

Rules & Requirements
IDEAs in Action Gen Ed: COMMBEYOND.
Requisites: Prerequisite. Students are expected to have completed at least 75% of the core requirements for the STAN major.
Grading Status: Letter grade.

Statistics and Analytics Major, B.S.

The major in statistics and analytics is an excellent program for students interested in statistical data science, operations research, and actuarial science, as well as in fields such as business, economics, public policy and health, psychology, and biomedicine, where the decision and statistical sciences play an increasingly important role.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the statistics and analytics program, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate foundational knowledge of probability, statistics, optimization, and stochastic modeling
- Exhibit proficiency in one or more of the scientific programming languages commonly used in statistics and analytics
- Apply the analytical and computational skills needed to formulate and solve data science problems
- Interpret and translate numerical results into actionable ideas and communicate them orally and in writing
- Find employment in professions relying on data and analytics, or continue education in related graduate programs

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Sample Plan of Study

Sample plans can be used as a guide to identify the courses required to complete the major and other requirements needed for degree completion within the expected eight semesters. The actual degree plan may differ depending on the course of study selected (second major, minor, etc.). Students should meet with their academic advisor to create a degree plan that is specific and unique to their interests. The sample plans represented in this catalog are intended for first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in the fall term. Some courses may not be offered every term.

In the first two years, students are required to complete the standard calculus sequence as well as introductory courses in statistics, operations research, and computer science. At the beginning of their third year, students take advanced courses in statistics, probability, and operations research. They have a great deal of flexibility in tailoring their program to meet their individual interests.

1 Prospective statistics and analytics majors are encouraged to take STOR 155 or STOR 120, and STOR 315 or MATH 381 as early as possible in their college careers. Each has a prerequisite of MATH 110 or its equivalent and may be taken before, or concurrently with, MATH 231.

2 Students wishing to prepare for an actuarial career should include STOR 471, STOR 472, STOR 555 and STOR 556 from Group A in their program and take ECON 410 and ECON 420 and BUSI 408 and BUSI 588 as electives. Students who plan to attend graduate school in statistics, operations research, analytics, or a related field, should include in their program COMP 401, STOR 555, STOR 565, and MATH 521.
Dual Bachelor’s – Master’s Degree Program
The Department of Statistics and Operations Research offers a dual bachelor’s – master’s degree program. Interested students should consult the graduate program director.

Special Opportunities in Statistics and Analytics

Honors in Statistics and Analytics
Candidates for honors or highest honors must secure approval from the program director. They must take STOR 691H and STOR 692H, and maintain an overall grade point average of 3.3 and a grade point average in statistics and analytics courses of at least 3.3 at the end of the semester preceding the semester in which they graduate.

Departmental Involvement
The Department of Statistics and Operations Research sponsors Carolina’s Actuarial Student Organization (CASO), for students interested in careers in the actuarial sciences. CASO organizes study groups for the actuarial exams, sponsors talks by professional actuaries, keeps members aware of employment opportunities, and maintains contact with alumni and corporations in the field. The department is also a co-sponsor of Carolina Analytics and Data Science (CADS) student organization, which aims to foster communication among the students who are interested in careers in data science and analytics and contribute to their intellectual growth by hosting speakers from industry as well as academia.

Experiential Education
When arranged in advance with a supervising faculty member, STOR 493 can be used to earn credit for appropriate work experience in the summer or during the academic year. STOR 493 satisfies the experiential education and high-impact experience Gen Ed requirement. Students interested in STOR 493 should secure approval from the program director before starting their work. STOR 496 can also be used to satisfy the experiential education requirement.

Undergraduate Awards
Two undergraduate awards for graduating seniors are given each year by the statistics and analytics program. One is the Statistics and Analytics Award, given to the outstanding graduating senior, and the second is the W. Robert Mann Award, given for excellence in actuarial science. Plaques bearing the names of winners are located in the undergraduate study room in Hanes Hall.

Undergraduate Research
Undergraduate research under the direction of faculty members from the Department of Statistics and Operations Research is offered through the independent study and research course, STOR 496, and the senior honors thesis courses, STOR 691H and STOR 692H.

Data Science Minor

Overview

The data science minor at Carolina is a multidisciplinary program launched in fall 2021 and offered by the College of Arts & Sciences. The minor has been designed to introduce students from any discipline to data science methods and applications, while simultaneously providing opportunities to explore its complex interactions with modern society. To achieve these goals, the minor is structured to allow students to choose their coursework from many different departments, encouraging them to explore the use of data science within their main field of study.

To satisfy the core requirements, a student must choose one course from each of the three categories:

- Data and Computational Thinking
  - This core requirement will provide you with an introduction to the computing tools and coding methods needed to gather, manipulate, visualize, and analyze data. Taught in Python and/or R.

- Data and Statistical Thinking
  - This core requirement will provide you with an introduction to data-driven statistical analysis, focusing on a hands-on approach to making inferences and predictions to learn from data. Taught in Python and/or R.

- Data, Culture, and Society
  - This core requirement focuses on the social, political, cultural, and/or ethical dimensions of data.

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor "core" requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

Department of Women’s and Gender Studies

Introduction
The Department of Women’s and Gender Studies offers a feminist interdisciplinary course of study that expands the process of knowledge production to include considerations of gender, race, class, and sexuality in the United States and internationally. Students will be exposed to recent scholarship on feminist theory and the intellectual, economic, political, and artistic contributions of women and feminist movements in various historical and cultural contexts.

Numerous departments across campus offer courses that focus on the study of women and/or gender. Most of these courses are cross-listed as women’s and gender studies courses; others are taught as special sections of an established course and are identified separately each semester.

Advising
All majors and minors have a primary academic advisor assigned in ConnectCarolina. All other majors and minors are strongly encouraged to meet with a faculty member or director of undergraduate studies (DUS) who works with current and prospective majors and minors by appointment (see “Contacts” above). Departmental academic advising is particularly important for those majors who are considering going on to graduate school. All students are encouraged to review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester. Further information on courses, undergraduate research opportunities, the honors program, careers, and graduate schools may be obtained from the department’s website (http://womensstudies.unc.edu/).

Women’s and Gender Studies Major, B.A.

The Department of Women’s and Gender Studies offers a feminist interdisciplinary course of study that expands the process of knowledge production to include considerations of gender, race, class, and sexuality in the United States and globally. Students are exposed to scholarship on feminist theory and the intellectual, economic, political, and artistic contributions of women and feminist movements in various historical and cultural contexts.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the women’s and gender studies program, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate knowledge of the major concepts, theoretical perspectives, empirical findings, and historical trends in women’s and gender studies
- Conduct and present interdisciplinary research in the area of women’s and gender studies in an effective manner
- Apply the principals and insights of women’s and gender studies to personal, social, and community issues
- Think critically and analytically about current perspectives in women’s and gender studies

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements, students must

- earn a minimum final cumulative GPA of 2.000
- complete a minimum of 45 academic credit hours earned from UNC-Chapel Hill courses
- take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the major core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for major or specific courses.

Special Opportunities in Women’s and Gender Studies

Honors in Women’s and Gender Studies
The honors program is designed to encourage independent thought and research among outstanding undergraduate majors in women’s and gender studies. Students must take the capstone WGST 695H and WGST 691H during the fall semester and WGST 692H (spring semester). Students must plan their project with a faculty advisor and secure permission from both the chair of the department and the faculty advisor. Guidelines and forms for the initial contract are available in the department’s office and on our website (https://womensstudies.unc.edu/). Students interested in the honors thesis must have at least a 3.3 overall grade point average and a 3.5 or greater grade point average in courses taken for the major.

Internships (Fall Semester Only)
The Department of Women's and Gender Studies Internship Program (WGST 393) allows students the opportunity to receive course credit while gaining practical experience in a variety of fields concerned with feminist issues. The internship has two components:

1. work in a local agency
2. a weekly class taught by a faculty member in the Department of Women's and Gender Studies.

For further information visit the department website (https://womensstudies.unc.edu/courses/internships/).

Sexuality Studies Minor
The minor in sexuality studies coordinates scholars and students from a range of disciplines to study, teach, and create knowledge about human sexuality in its myriad functions and forms.

Requirements
In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

• take at least nine hours of their minor “core” requirements at UNC-Chapel Hill
• earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

The five courses required for the minor must include at least one core course and involve work in at least three different departments or curricula.

Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

Where appropriate, courses taken at Duke University or in a study abroad program also may count toward the minor.

As an example, a minor in sexuality studies could be constructed from WGST 111, AMST 269, HIST 236, HIST 535, and WGST 101, for a minimum of 15 hours from at least three departments or curricula.

Women’s and Gender Studies Minor

The Department of Women’s and Gender Studies offers a feminist interdisciplinary course of study that expands the process of knowledge production to include considerations of gender, race, class, and sexuality in the United States and globally. Students are exposed to recent scholarship on feminist theory and the intellectual, economic, political, and artistic contributions of women and feminist movements in various historical and cultural contexts.

Requirements

In addition to the program requirements listed below, students must:

- take at least nine hours of their minor “core” requirements at UNC-Chapel Hill
- earn a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in the minor core requirements. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

For more information, please consult the degree requirements section of the catalog (p. 1275).

The minor consists of 15 credits (five courses).

Global Guarantee

The Global Guarantee is Carolina's promise that a global education is available to every student. Through this commitment, Carolina helps ensure that Tar Heels develop the knowledge, skills, and mindset to take on the world's greatest challenges.

By offering a variety of learning opportunities, the Global Guarantee makes it easy for students to select courses and programs that serve their individual academic, professional, and personal goals. Many are inclusive by design, meaning they are available to all students without a fee or special application process.

Students can choose from the following options as part of the Global Guarantee:

- Globally focused courses, minors, majors, and tracks in a range of disciplines
- Languages (https://languageplacement.unc.edu/) and area studies (https://areastudies.unc.edu/)
- Study, research, and internships abroad (https://studyabroad.unc.edu/)
- Collaborative Online International Learning (COIL) courses (https://global.unc.edu/programs/coil/) and other virtual exchange programs
- Diplomacy Initiative (https://global.unc.edu/programs/diplomacy-initiative/) programs and events
- Global programming and cultural exchange on campus

The Global Guarantee is a university-wide commitment, involving numerous academic departments, administrative units, and initiatives, and is coordinated by the Office of the Vice Provost for Global Affairs.

Global Guarantee
UNC—Chapel Hill guarantees that a global education is available to every student. According to UNC—Chapel Hill's strategic plan, Carolina Next: Innovations for Public Good, "Our graduates must demonstrate global competencies and skills to thrive as engaged citizens and successful professionals." Study abroad can positively impact a student's academic success, career path, and personal growth.

UNC—Chapel Hill's study abroad programs are high-quality, credit-bearing academic experiences available at hundreds of locations worldwide to students in all academic programs, majors, and minors. Carolina strives to ensure that study abroad programs are accessible, affordable, and safe. A wide range of study abroad options meet the academic needs, financial realities, schedules, and language abilities of Carolina students. Programs include undergraduate student exchanges, faculty-led, direct enroll, and short-term immersion programs during the summer, semester, and academic year. Financial aid can be used toward study abroad program costs. We award more than $1 million in study abroad scholarships annually.

Campus Units Offering Study Abroad

The UNC Study Abroad Office (https://studyabroad.unc.edu/) in the College of Arts & Sciences is the primary unit responsible for managing domestic and study abroad semester, summer, and break programs for all undergraduate students at UNC, particularly those enrolled in the College (including Honors Carolina), and some professional schools.

The Kenan-Flagler Business School Undergraduate Global Programs (https://www.kenan-flagler.unc.edu/programs/undergraduate-business/global-programs/) office administers semester, summer, and short-term immersion programs for all major and minor students admitted to the Kenan-Flagler Business School.

The Hussman School of Journalism and Media (http://hussman.unc.edu/ug/studentservices/globalprograms/) administers semester, summer, and short-term immersion programs for students admitted to the Hussman School.

Undergraduate students in the Gillings School of Public Health, School of Education, School of Information and Library Science, and School of Nursing are eligible for education abroad opportunities specific to their degree programs.

Types of Opportunities Available

Program options are available for students from all undergraduate majors and minors for students to study, participate in an internship, conduct research, or engage in service-learning abroad, domestically, or virtually. Programs vary by cost, location, length, and program type. Some offer a traditional academic experience in foreign classrooms, while others may take place primarily in the field. Visit the UNC Study Abroad Office (https://studyabroad.unc.edu/find-program/) for more information.

UNC students have a unique opportunity to earn a second bachelor's degree during their four years of undergraduate study by enrolling for two or three semesters at the National University of Singapore (NUS), one of Carolina's strategic global partner institutions, and fulfilling degree requirements at both UNC and NUS. The joint degree program is available to students majoring in economics, English literature, geography, global studies, history, or political science. There is no additional tuition cost to joint degree students. For more information about the joint degree program, contact the UNC Study Abroad Office (abroad@unc.edu). Please note that due to general education curriculum changes at both UNC and NUS, the JDP is on pause until fall 2024 at the earliest (2024–2025 academic year). Students who are interested in studying at NUS in 2023–2024 can participate in the NUS Arts and Sciences (https://heelsabroad.unc.edu/?FuseAction=Programs.ViewProgramAngular&id=10245) or Sciences (https://heelsabroad.unc.edu/?FuseAction=Programs.ViewProgramAngular&id=10249) exchange programs.

Study Abroad Credits

Study abroad credit is awarded to students participating in approved programs administered by the Study Abroad Office and other UNC global programs offices. Students may earn academic credit for approved internship, research, and service-learning programs abroad (including virtual programs). Students seeking to participate in student initiated programs for academic credit may submit a petition for approval to the Study Abroad Office.

The credit approval process for study abroad courses is coordinated by the UNC Study Abroad Office or the UNC school sponsoring the program, and credit is awarded after the program ends and official transcripts have been received. UNC students may earn course credit that fulfills elective, General Education, language, and major/minor requirements abroad. All students who participate in approved study abroad programs earn experiential education (EE)/High-Impact Experience (HI) (p. 1265) General Education credit (including virtual programs). Major/minor credits for study abroad courses that have not been pre-approved must be granted by the director of undergraduate studies or designated authority in the relevant department.

After the program is completed abroad, an official grade report or transcript from the institution must be received by the Study Abroad Office before equivalent credit is applied to the student's UNC-Chapel Hill record. It is the responsibility of the student returning to campus to ensure the transcript from the institution abroad is received by the Study Abroad Office. If the transcript is not received by the end of the last day of classes of the next fall or spring semester following the study abroad term, the associated placeholder and credits will be assigned the grade of SI (see Study Abroad Grading (p. 1188) below). As a result, the student may experience negative consequences. Examples are the inability to calculate academic standing, inability to calculate satisfactory academic progress, or inability to apply for graduation. It is critical for the Study Abroad Office to receive the student’s record from the abroad institution immediately following the completion of the abroad program. Students with outstanding study abroad credits will not be able to graduate until final permanent grades are posted for their study abroad courses (even if those courses/credits are not needed for graduation).

Study Abroad Grading

The University awards course credit for a study abroad program when the student has earned a grade of C or its equivalent. For courses in which grades are reported on a scale other than A–F, students will earn credit only if the study abroad institution or program verifies that the passing grade represents achievement at the level of C or higher. If students receive final grades of C- or below (or the equivalent, if reported on a scale other than A–F), they will not earn credit or satisfy academic requirements and the course will impact the UNC GPA as a failed course. For courses completed in units other than semester hours, the university will convert credit earned to semester hours. Some programs, such as UC-Chapel Hill faculty-led and short-term immersion options, offer UNC-graded course credits.

For non-faculty led programs, the UNC-Chapel Hill official transcript will indicate the term abroad, the location (country) of the study abroad program, equivalent subject codes, equivalent course numbers, course titles for the abroad enrollment, equivalent credits earned, and specialized grading notations. The specialized grading notations are:

- SA – Study Abroad Pass
- SF – Study Abroad Fail
- SI – Study Abroad Incomplete
- SN – Study Abroad No Grade Reported/No Credit Awarded
- SW – Study Abroad Withdrawal

When an abroad course is determined equivalent to a specific course in the UNC-Chapel Hill catalog, then the comparable subject code and course number is reflected on the record. To the extent possible, equivalent subject codes are used for listing classes completed abroad. If a comparable subject code does not exist, a generic subject code is used. If a comparable course number does not exist, a placeholder is used for the number. The details of courses meeting degree, major, and/or minor requirements is recorded internally on the student record.

Additional information on study abroad credit and grading can be found on the Study Abroad Office website (https://studyabroad.unc.edu/earning-credit-from-spring-2021-forward/).

Next Steps

Students are encouraged to begin planning for study abroad as early as possible after enrolling at UNC to ensure that a global experience is part of their academic program. The first step is to watch the Study Abroad 101 (https://studyabroad.unc.edu/advising-events/) video series. Students can then schedule a one-on-one advising session in the Study Abroad Office or contact the global programs staff in their professional school. Study abroad staff assist students in selecting the best programs for their academic, financial, personal, and professional goals.

Deadlines vary depending on the type of program and UNC unit administering the program. Visit the above websites for the latest information.

Office for Undergraduate Research

The mission of the Office for Undergraduate Research (OUR) is to facilitate and enrich undergraduate research opportunities for all students and academic disciplines at Carolina. By engaging in research, students develop problem-solving skills and self-confidence, learn how discoveries are made, collaborate with faculty, and apply classroom knowledge to solve real-world problems. The OUR supports a variety of programs that help students identify research opportunities, fund their research, and showcase their research achievements.

The OUR maintains a searchable database of research opportunities and provides professional and peer counseling to aid students as they enter the research community. In addition, the OUR administers student funding for Summer Undergraduate Research Fellowships (SURFs) and offers travel awards for students to present their research at professional meetings. The OUR also offers various research-related workshops, helps students get recognized through the Carolina Research Scholar Program (CRSP), and hosts the Celebration of Undergraduate Research each spring, where more than 500 students present their results to the campus and community each year.

Honors Carolina

Honors Carolina is a four-year academic program geared toward the top 10 percent of undergraduates at UNC and promises those students a guided journey toward a successful career and purposeful life. It is the University’s way of investing in truly exceptional students by providing academic and non-academic challenges and opportunities, both inside and outside the classroom.

From the moment they step foot on campus, our students join a diverse community of scholars and friends. Approximately 2,100 students are currently members of Honors Carolina, and enjoy access to more than 200 small courses, award-winning faculty, and priority registration. Our unparalleled commitment to global learning offers students a doorway to the world through courses, internships, and research for academic credit.

The Honors Carolina “Go Anywhere” initiative is a comprehensive plan to elevate the program’s reputation among industry leaders, position it as a destination of choice for top recruiters, and prepare students to seize opportunities before them through intensive advising and coaching. In fact, our academic advisors, career coaches, and alumni mentors are with students every step of the way. Through a diverse roster of co-curricular programs, students explore their interests; prepare for life after graduation; and connect with students, faculty, alumni, and leaders around the globe. Some enrolling first-year students are invited to participate immediately in Honors Carolina. Other students may apply to the program at the beginning of their second semester or first year of study. Details of the application process are available on the Honors Carolina (http://honorscarolina.unc.edu/) website. Honors Carolina students must maintain a cumulative grade point average of 3.000 or higher and complete a minimum number of honors credit hours by graduation in order to receive the "Honors Carolina Laureate" distinction on their transcript.

To graduate from the University with honors or highest honors (p. 1277), students must complete a senior thesis in their academic major. Senior honors thesis programs are offered in nearly 50 departments, curricula, and professional schools throughout the University. Interested students should consult with the honors advisor in their major about department-specific requirements.

Honors Beyond Chapel Hill
Honors Global offers innovative learning opportunities in London, Oxford, Cape Town, Singapore, Florence, and Washington, DC. Students take courses with UNC–Chapel Hill faculty program directors and with instructors from some of the world’s leading institutions of higher education and organizations. The London program is based at Winston House, UNC–Chapel Hill’s European Study Center, located in Bloomsbury, close to the city’s leading universities and cultural institutions. All of the programs provide graded honors credit and fulfill General Education and major requirements. All Honors Carolina programs and fellowships are open and accessible to all UNC undergraduates with a 3.0 GPA.

Burch Field Research Seminars deliver unique, hands-on learning experiences that showcase the relationship between faculty research and undergraduate teaching. Seminars are held in changing locations around the globe. Recent topics have included the rise of renewable energy in China and Korea, nation-building and conflict resolution in Vienna and the Balkans, biomedical engineering and healthcare innovations in Scotland, and public health innovation in Thailand.

Burch Fellowships allow students to design an educational adventure anywhere in the world. Burch Fellows receive grants up to $7,000 to support self-designed, off-campus learning experiences like these: working with NASA astrobiologists in Antarctica to study the possibility of life on other planets; coordinating refugee integration through music in Sicily; and studying the impacts of medical training for rural women in India.

Carolina Blue Honors Fellowships enable students to embark on a summer internship focused on learning and working in sports abroad with a special preference for entrepreneurial businesses. Grants of up to $6,500 support self-designed, international opportunities such as helping an athlete performance data start-up build its products in New Zealand, leading a fan engagement campaign for a sports marketing business in Barcelona, or helping a professional soccer club get off the ground in Tanzania.

Robinson Honors Fellowships focus on the history and culture of Europe and the Mediterranean from the golden age of Greece to the upheaval of World War I. Robinson Fellows pursue a project of their own design exploring the realms of art, art history, classics, literature, history, medieval and early modern studies, music, philosophy, political thought, and religious studies. Grants of up to $7,000 fund experiences such as studying the construction of the great cathedrals of Europe, interning in Sotheby’s Old Master Paintings division in London, or working on a Roman archaeological dig site in Israel.

Weir Honors Fellowships in Asian Studies allow students to become fluent in Mandarin and gain practical, independent work experience in China, home to one of the world’s oldest civilizations and the 21st century’s fastest growing economy. Weir Fellows are awarded all funds above their normal UNC tuition to spend the spring semester in Beijing for intensive language study and then complete an eight-week summer internship in Shanghai exploring careers in fields such as banking, law, journalism, public health, and historic preservation.

Undergraduate Internships and Career Exploration
Overview
Many departments and curricula offer internship credit and career exploration courses. Students who are interested in earning academic credit for an internship experience should plan ahead by checking with the relevant department/school about available opportunities, deadlines, and the academic requirements for holding an internship.

Listed below are the departments and schools that offer internship credit and career exploration courses.

In addition, ODS administers the institutional nomination process called “endorsement” for 13 scholarship and fellowship programs:

- Beinecke (for third-year undergraduates)
- Churchill (for undergraduates in their final years and recent alums)
- Goldwater (for second- and third-year students)
- James C. Gaither (for undergraduates in their final years and recent alums)
- Marshall (for undergraduates in their final years and recent alums)

- Truman (for third-year undergraduates)
- Udall (for second- and third-year undergraduates)
- Yenching Academy (for undergraduates in their final years and alums)
- ODS also works with candidates for endorsement for the Boren Awards, for which endorsement is optional but strongly encouraged.

Major scholars and fellowships that ODS supports that do not require institutional endorsement include Knight-Hennessy, Schwarzman, Luce, Gates Cambridge, and Critical Language Scholarship (CLS).

The preparation required to compete for prestigious scholarships is a valuable educational opportunity. Candidates improve their ability to communicate ability both their past accomplishments and also their goals for the future. The skills gained and materials created from applying for these scholarships are often valuable when to applying to graduate schools and career opportunities.

Consult ODS’s STRIVE (http://strive.unc.edu/) database for information on more than 1,000 scholarships, fellowships, and other funding sources.

Undergraduate Curricula

If you have been offered an internship and your company is requiring you to earn credit to participate in the internship, you may be eligible for SPCL 493. Note that SPCL 493 is a one-credit, pass/fail course that does not count toward any graduation requirements. For instructions on submitting a SPCL 493 application, which must be done before beginning the internship, please see the SPCL 493 application form (https://curricula.unc.edu/students/internship-spcl-493/).

3. Explain course topics from the perspective(s) of individuals who use the target language;
4. Use the target language to conduct course research.

Administratively housed in the Center for Global Initiatives, the LAC program receives support from the College of Arts and Sciences and from six Title VI National Resources Centers for international and area studies: the African Studies Center, the Carolina Asia Center, the Carolina Center for the Study of the Middle East and Islamic Studies, the Center for European Studies, the Center for Global Initiatives, and the Institute for the Study of the Americas.

Since spring 1996, the LAC program has offered course options in a variety of languages, disciplines, and course formats. Currently, LAC courses are offered in Arabic, Chinese, French, German, Hindi-Urdu, Italian, Korean, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish, and Swahili. Students who enroll in LAC recitation or discussion sections can receive one graded hour of world language credit. Some three-hour seminars in the target language are also available.

There are several types of LAC courses. For course offerings (by semester) and additional information, visit the program’s website (http://areastudies.unc.edu/lac/).

Student Life and Leadership

The Office of Student Life and Leadership (SLL) brings together student leaders, student organizations, and student activities under one umbrella: making the campus a better community and home for students, staff, and faculty. Being involved in SLL programs gives students opportunities to enrich their academic and social experience at UNC. The office houses Student Organizations, Leadership Development, Student Activities, Carolina Union Activities Board (CUAB), Assessment and Development, and Student Government.

The mission of Student Life and Leadership is to create an inclusive Carolina community through engagement and intentional educational opportunities. SLL operates with five core values in mind: authentic connections, collaboration, integrity, life-long learning, and social justice.

The Leadership Development team is committed to serving the Carolina community by advocating for leadership as a process of social change. Various programs and activities are offered that help students develop competencies needed to be effective leaders. These programs include leadership development retreats, speaker events, and leadership symposiums. Additionally, three academic courses are offered: EDUC 309, EDUC 317, and EDUC 318 where students learn theory that will help them to develop their leadership style and skills and to incorporate those skills to lead and create positive social change.

The Student Organizations team works with all 900+ student organizations to facilitate their use of university resources and to empower students in their provision of services, programs and activities that enhance the academic experience, extend learning and build community at Carolina. Students can get involved in a student organization through Heel Life. Heel Life (https://heelife.unc.edu/) is the online hub of student activity and involvement at Carolina. Individual students, student organizations and university departments use the site to maximize the Carolina student experience. The site houses a complete list of active student organizations at Carolina, as well as a calendar of events. Student organizations may use Heel Life to promote upcoming activities, manage membership rosters, store important documents and photos, and more. The site also offers tools to identify and track individual involvement experiences through the Co-Curricular Transcript (CCT).

The Carolina Union Activities Board (CUAB) is a student-run board that enhances life at Carolina through high-quality programming and events for the entire University community. These include films, art, music, entertainment, and more. Throughout the year, CUAB’s eight committees program over 200 events with around 50,000 total in attendance. Students can become involved in CUAB and build the Carolina community by helping to plan and host engaging activities to reach all students.

Student Government is the representative liaison before administrators, faculty, the Board of Trustees and Governors, and even the state legislature. Student Government works to address policy issues that matter to UNC and its students, handle funding requests for student organizations, maintain the Student Government Code (the rules by which Student Government operates), and respond to requests for help from students in a broad range of issues regarding student life at UNC–Chapel Hill.

North Carolina Fellows Program

The North Carolina Fellows Program is a three-year cohort-based leadership program housed in the Office of Student Life and Leadership. The NC Fellows community has been positively contributing and impacting the program and has been present on the UNC–Chapel Hill...
The IDEAs in Action College Thriving requirement is to identify pressing questions, problems, and issues by engaging in meaningful dialogue, creating a supportive community, increasing self-awareness amongst its members, and encouraging positive change.

Program components include retreats, a three-credit-hour course for sophomore students, a junior seminar, a one-credit capstone course for senior students, and monthly seminars where all three cohorts come together to discuss a variety of topics. Interested students can apply during the spring semester of their first year.

For more information, contact NCFellows@email.unc.edu.

Summer Bridge

Summer Bridge is a six-week transition program that helps incoming first-year students adjust to Carolina by providing academic enrichment, community building, and co-curricular and experiential learning activities. The program is designed to ease participants’ personal and academic transition from high school to the University. Students enroll in academic courses designed to strengthen both written and quantitative skills. They also participate in activities designed to supplement their summer experience by engaging in high-impact learning experiences often facilitated by units such as the UNC Learning and Writing Centers, University Career Services, and Student Life and Leadership. Additionally, cultural and recreational activities are significant components of the program, as students are introduced to the University and the array of opportunities and resources available. Any student who has been admitted to UNC-Chapel Hill and is a North Carolina resident is eligible to apply.

IDEAs in Action General Education Curriculum

The IDEAs in Action general education curriculum empowers students to design their own educational journey, while providing them with a foundation that prepares them for the intellectual growth associated with a Carolina education and in their future roles as leaders, creative problem-solvers, lifelong learners, and engaged citizens. Additional information can be found on the IDEAs in Action website (https://ideasinaction.unc.edu/).

The IDEAs in Action General Education curriculum applies to all first-year students and transfer students who matriculate as degree-seeking undergraduate students in fall 2022 or later.

Students who matriculated to the University prior to fall 2022 should follow the Making Connections General Education curriculum. Information and approved courses can be found in archived editions (p. 1327) of the Catalog.

The IDEAs Approach:
- Identify pressing questions, problems, and issues
- Discover ideas, evidence, and methods that inform these questions
- Evaluate these ideas, evidence, and methods
- Act on the basis of these evaluations

First-Year Foundations

Start strong! This is a set of special courses and experiences in the first year designed to help students navigate their transition to the college environment, get them ready to take ownership of their education, and make the most of the opportunities at Carolina.

Students must complete the First-Year Foundation requirements during the first academic year on campus (two semesters), with the exception of Global Language. Students are strongly encouraged to begin Global Language during their first year.

Total Hours: 11

H Honors students may use HNRS 101 to fulfill the College Thriving requirement.
1 Must be completed at UNC-Chapel Hill. Transfer credit and by-examination credit are not awarded.
2 Some majors require additional levels. Students are strongly encouraged to begin Global Language during their first year.

Transfer students who completed at least 24 hours of post-high school transfer credit are required to complete ENGL 105 (or ENGL 105I) and Global Language, but not the other First-Year Foundation requirements. Test credit (e.g., AP, IB, SAT II) does not apply to this calculation. More information for transfer students, early college Students, and transfer credit from a North Carolina community college can be found in this catalog (p. 1201).

Additional First-Year Foundation Policies

- Courses used to satisfy First-Year Foundation requirements may not be declared Pass/Low Pass/Fail. This includes level 1, level 2, and level 3 language courses being used to fulfill the Global Language (through level 3) requirement. Note that IDST 101 is only offered as Pass/Low Pass/Fail.
- Students may take and receive credit for only one course in each of the following requirement categories: 1) College Thriving (IDST 101),
Focus Capacities
Design your course of study! Students take one course for each of the nine Focus Capacity courses (3 credits each) plus a one-credit Empirical Investigation Lab. Focus Capacity courses introduce and reinforce a broad set of capacities for identifying, discovering, evaluating, and taking action upon ideas, knowledge, evidence, and argument.

1 A single course may be used to fulfill only one Focus Capacity requirement (not including lab).

2 Students may fulfill up to five Focus Capacity courses (+Lab) using by-examination (BE) credit

3 Every Focus Capacity course includes the following recurring capacities:
   - Writing, totaling at least 10 pages in length or the intellectual equivalent
   - Presenting material to the class, small groups, or the public through oral presentations, webpages, or other means that enable corroboration of fact and argument
   - Collaborating in pairs or groups to learn, design, solve, create, build, research, or similar.

Disciplinary Distribution
All students must take at least one general education course (Focus Capacity, FY-Seminar/FY-Launch, High-Impact Experience, Research and Discovery, or Communication Beyond Carolina) in each of the three major divisions of the College of Arts and Sciences (p. 152):

1. Humanities and fine arts
2. Mathematics and natural sciences
3. Social and behavioral sciences

Additional Focus Capacity Policies
- Courses used to satisfy Focus Capacity requirements may not be declared Pass/Low Pass/Fail.
- A Focus Capacity course may overlap with one or more of the following Gen Ed requirements: 1 Focus Capacity (+Lab), Research and Discovery, High-Impact Experience, Communication Beyond Carolina.
- A Focus Capacity course may not double count with a Supplemental General Education course.
- The degree programs in Clinical Laboratory Science (p. 765), Dental Hygiene (p. 69), Nursing (p. 130), and Radiologic Science (p. 771) require at least six of the nine Focus Capacities (plus lab).

If a student pursues a different second major, then all nine Focus Capacities (plus Lab) are required.

Reflection and Integration
Put your learning into action! As students move through the curriculum, IDEAs in Action calls for them to put their capacities into practice through concrete experiences. These opportunities help students reflect upon, deepen, and connect knowledge and capacities.

1 The same course or experience may not be counted for both the Research and Discovery and the High-Impact Experience requirements.

2 Students in the 2024-2025 cohort class must earn credit for a Communication Beyond Carolina course to fulfill this requirement.
Students in the 2022–2023 cohort class and the 2023–2024 cohort class may fulfill this requirement by earning credit for a Communication Beyond Carolina course from the IDEAs in Action curriculum or by earning credit for a Communication-intensive course from the Making Connections curriculum.

3. Varsity student athletes who participate in a sport for at least one semester are exempt from this requirement. ROTC students who participate in the program for at least one semester are exempt from this requirement. These students still have the option to take an LFIT course.

Additional Policies
- Courses used to satisfy Reflection and Integration requirements may not be declared Pass/Low Pass/Fail. Note that all Lifetime Fitness courses, some Research and Discovery courses, and some High-Impact Experience courses are only offered as Pass/Low Pass/Fail.
- A Research and Discovery course may overlap with one or more of the following Gen Ed requirements: FY-Seminar/FY-Launch, 1 Focus Capacity, Communication Beyond Carolina, Supplemental General Education.
- A High-Impact Experience course may overlap with one or more of the following Gen Ed requirements: FY-Seminar/FY-Launch, 1 Focus Capacity, Communication Beyond Carolina, Supplemental General Education.
- A Communication Beyond Carolina course may overlap with one or more of the following Gen Ed requirements: FY-Seminar/FY-Launch, 1 Focus Capacity, Research and Discovery, High-Impact Experience, Supplemental General Education.
- Research and Discovery, High-Impact Experience, and Communication Beyond Carolina courses may count towards the Disciplinary Distribution requirement (see above).
- Transfer students from the Carolina Global Launch (https://admissions.unc.edu/apply/special-opportunities/carolina-global-launch/) program may use the experience to fulfill the High-Impact Experience requirement.

Supplemental General Education
Students who pursue a bachelor of arts degree must also satisfy a Supplemental General Education requirement. The intent of this requirement is to broaden a student's perspective on the major by examining its relationship to work in at least one other field. Students may fulfill the requirement in three ways:

1. By completing a second major
2. By completing a minor
3. By completing three courses (nine hours) above 199 that are offered outside the home department or curriculum of the first major. These three courses can neither be used to fulfill the requirements of the first major nor be cross-listed with courses that a student has used to satisfy major requirements

First-Year Foundations

College Thriving (IDST 101)

Learning Outcomes
1. Increase and appreciate the significance of self-awareness.
2. Value a liberal arts education.
4. Identify how best to use research and evidence in discipline-specific compositions.
5. Reflect on the science of thriving: positive emotion, engagement, meaning, healthy relationships, resilience, stress, and other aspects of well-being.
6. Demonstrate mastery of basic mental health, drug and alcohol, and sexual wellness practices.

Writing at the Research University (ENGL 105 or 105I)

Learning Outcomes
1. Employ conventions, genres, and rhetoric practiced in the natural sciences, social sciences, and humanities.
2. Conduct research using a variety of methods, databases, and sources.
3. Discuss and present research-based arguments and information.
4. Identify how best to use research and evidence in discipline-specific compositions.
5. Compose using written, oral, and multimedia modes.
6. Review and revise one's own work and assist others in revising their work.

First-Year Seminar/First-Year Launch

Learning Outcomes (First-Year Seminar)
1. Connect with a faculty member early in the educational process.
2. Learn intensively among a small cohort of students.
3. Apply methods for how scholars pose problems, discover solutions, resolve controversies, and evaluate knowledge.
4. Produce knowledge through self-directed inquiry and active learning.

Learning Outcomes (First-Year Launch)
1. Connect with a faculty member early in the educational process.
2. Learn intensively among a small cohort of students.
3. Learn the foundation of a discipline.
4. Analyze and communicate issues associated with a broad, introductory topic, covering a wide range of knowledge.

Approved FY-SEMINAR & FY-LAUNCH (p. 1202) courses.

Ideas, Information, and Inquiry (Triple-I)

Learning Outcomes
1. Gain exposure to the three disciplines and their methods of inquiry.
2. Compare and contrast different ways that scholars address a question, problem, or theme.
3. Understand the power of approaching a topic from multiple perspectives.
4. Learn how different disciplines understand and use data and evidence.

Approved FY-TRIPLE (p. 1210) courses.
Global Language
Learning Outcomes
1. Communicate orally (as appropriate) and in writing in a foreign language about a variety of situations with a variety of audiences.
2. Demonstrate comprehension of oral (as appropriate) and written texts in a foreign language on a wide range of topics to aspects of human experience, as well as life in a cross-cultural context.
3. Apply perspectives, practices, and ideas associated with the culture(s) of a foreign language.

Approved GLBL-LANG (p. 1211) courses.

Focus Capacities
Every Focus Capacity course includes the following recurring capacities:

1. Writing, totaling at least 10 pages in length or the intellectual equivalent
2. Presenting material to the class, small groups, or the public through oral presentations, webpages, or other means that enable corroboration of fact and argument
3. Collaborating in pairs or groups to learn, design, solve, create, build, research, or similar.

Aesthetic and Interpretive Analysis
Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.

1. Interpret and critique literary and artistic expression.
2. Analyze literary and artistic works in various contexts (social, political, historical, philosophical, etc.) and with regard to style, period, and the circumstances of composition.
3. Explain how aesthetic expression enhances human experience.

Questions for Students
These are the types of questions you should be able to answer after completing a course.

1. What is the particular value of aesthetic experience and how does it generate meanings, responses, and acts of reflection?
2. What makes an artistic work different from other forms of expression?
3. How does creative attention to an aesthetic object reveal new ideas, articulate values, and reflect or enact art’s functions in the world?

Approved FC-AESTH (p. 1211) courses.

Creative Expression, Practice, and Production
Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.

1. Compose, design, build, present, or perform a work that is the result of immersion in a creative process using appropriate media, tools, and techniques.
2. Explain the roles and influences of creativity, technologies, materials, and design processes in the creation of knowledge, expression, and effective solutions.
3. Evaluate their own and others’ creative work to demonstrate how critique creates value in creative domains.

Questions for Students
These are the types of questions you should be able to answer after completing a course.

1. What processes and practices can I use to produce meaningful expression or effective solutions with lasting impact?
2. How does collaboration and teamwork change or enhance the creative process?
3. How does a design strategy affect or enhance the creation and evaluation of a work of value?

Approved FC-CREATE (p. 1221) courses.

Engagement with the Human Past
Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.

1. Develop knowledge of different spatiotemporal scales, patterns, ideas, figures, and events from the past.
2. Evaluate primary source material and/or other historical evidence of past conditions (e.g., behaviors, events, and social, cultural, economic, and/or political structures); assess divergent or complementary methods, materials, and/or methodologies in interpreting the human past.
3. Assess conflicting historical narratives based on evidence and methodologies.
4. Generate and evaluate arguments based the analysis of primary and scholarly sources.
5. Apply historical methods and knowledge to make informed judgments about the past and the present.

Questions for Students
These are the types of questions you should be able to answer after completing a course.

1. What events, conflicts, and continuities shaped an era of the human past?
2. What distinctive kinds of evidence do we use to interpret and understand the human past?
3. How have people made decisions and acted in light of historical knowledge?
4. How does the material and historical past survive in the present and affect our perception of both the past and the present?
5. What conditions and processes shape our approach to the human past?

Approved FC-PAST (p. 1224) courses.

Ethical and Civic Values
Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.

1. Explain the contexts in which questions of justification arise.
2. Assess ethical values in terms of reasons offered
3. Recognize different ethical perspectives and the distinctive approaches these perspectives bring to questions of value, evaluating ethical justifications for different ways of organizing civic and political communities.
4. Analyze the differences between personal ethical decisions and those bearing on the public and civic spheres.

Questions for Students
These are the types of questions you should be able to answer after completing a course.

1. How can people think fruitfully (individually and together) about how they should live their lives?
2. What is required to judge a standard or value as worthy of support?
3. How should we distinguish between prejudices and reasonable grounds for value judgments?
4. What considerations – stories, reasons, testimony, documents, data, etc. – can justify our values and commitments, whether personal or social?

Approved FC-VALUES (p. 1232) courses.

Global Understanding and Engagement
Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.

1. Classify and analyze diverse historical, social, and political exchanges that shape nations, regions, and cultural traditions of the world.
2. Translate among contrasting civic cultures, social values, and moral commitments that characterize differences among peoples and societies, including those beyond the North Atlantic region.
3. Assess ways that political and economic institutions shape contemporary global relations.
4. Explain human and environmental challenges that transcend national borders.

Questions for Students
These are the types of questions you should be able to answer after completing a course.

1. What forces connect and distinguish the experiences of peoples, societies, and human organization around the world?
2. How can I understand and compare differing worldviews?
3. What connections and differences exist between particular worldviews, experiences, societies, or power structures?
4. What ideas, approaches, and international sources allow scholars to compare societies?

Approved FC-GLOBAL (p. 1235) courses.

Natural Scientific Investigation
Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.

1. Demonstrate the ability to use scientific knowledge, logic, and imagination to construct and justify scientific claims about naturally occurring phenomena, including validation through rigorous empirical testing.
2. Analyze and apply processes of scientific inquiry as dictated by the phenomena and questions at hand. These include generating and testing hypotheses or theories pertaining to the natural world; using logic and creativity to design investigations to test these hypotheses; collecting and interpreting data about the natural world; making inferences that respect measurement error; building and justifying arguments and explanations; communicating and defending conclusions; revising arguments and conclusions based on new evidence and/or feedback from peers; and synthesizing new knowledge into broader scientific understanding.
3. Evaluate science-related claims and information from popular and/or peer-reviewed sources by examining the relationship between the evidence, arguments, and conclusions presented and by assessing consistency with existing knowledge from valid and reliable scientific sources.
4. Identify, assess, and make informed decisions about ethical issues at the intersections of the natural sciences and society.

Questions for Students
These are the types of questions you should be able to answer after completing a course.

1. What rules govern the natural world and how are they discovered, tested, and validated?
2. What is distinctive about the approach to understanding employed in the natural sciences?
3. What challenges are encountered in making measurements of the natural world?
4. What are the limits of investigation in the natural sciences?

Approved FC-NATSCI (p. 1242) courses.

Power, Difference, and Inequality
Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.

1. Recognize the relationship between inequality and social, economic, and political power.
2. Analyze configurations of power and the forms of inequality and bias they produce.
3. Evaluate dynamics of social, economic, and political inequality in relation to specific historical contexts.
4. Interrogate the systemic processes by which forms of inequality are sustained and how these processes have been and are resisted and transformed.

Questions for Students
These are the types of questions you should be able to answer after completing a course.

1. What are the relevant structures, institutions, ways of thinking, and practices that create, maintain, and change social, economic, and political inequalities?
2. What practices have been implemented and institutionalized to address social, economic, and political inequalities?

Approved FC-POWER (p. 1243) courses.

Quantitative Reasoning
Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.
1. Summarize, interpret, and present quantitative data in mathematical forms, such as graphs, diagrams, tables, or mathematical text.
2. Develop or compute representations of data using mathematical forms or equations as models, and use statistical methods to assess their validity.
3. Make and evaluate important assumptions in the estimation, modeling, and analysis of data, and recognize the limitations of the results.
4. Apply mathematical concepts, data, procedures, and solutions to make judgments and draw conclusions.
5. Synthesize and present quantitative data to others to explain findings or to provide quantitative evidence in support of a position.

Questions for Students
These are the types of questions you should be able to answer after completing a course.
1. What is the role of mathematics in organizing and interpreting measurements of the world?
2. How can mathematical models and quantitative analysis be used to summarize or synthesize data into knowledge and predictions?
3. What methodology can we apply to validate or reject mathematical models or to express our degree of confidence in them?

Approved FC-QUANT (p. 1249) courses.

Ways of Knowing
Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.
1. Recognize and use one or more approach(es) to developing and validating knowledge of the unfamiliar world.
2. Evaluate ways that temporal, spatial, scientific, and philosophical categories structure knowledge.
3. Interrogate assumptions that underlie our own perceptions of the world.
4. Employ strategies to mitigate or adjust for preconceptions and biases.
5. Apply critical insights to understand patterns of experience and belief.

Questions for Students
These are the types of questions you should be able to answer after completing a course.
1. What norms and expectations do I take for granted?
2. What categories and concepts frame my assumptions, experiences, and beliefs?
3. What practices of investigation or inquiry best challenge those assumptions and expectations?
4. How can I consider whether my beliefs might be wrong?

Approved FC-KNOWING (p. 1251) courses.

Empirical Investigation Lab
Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.
1. Take empirical measurements using appropriate apparatus.
2. Generate and test hypotheses.
3. Gather, store, and organize data.
4. Analyze and report on data and hypothesis testing.

Approved FC-LAB (p. 1259) courses.

Reflection and Integration
Research and Discovery
Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.
1. Frame a topic, develop an original research question or creative goal, and establish a point of view, creative approach, or hypothesis.
2. Obtain a procedural understanding of how conclusions can be reached in a field and gather appropriate evidence.
3. Evaluate the quality of the arguments and/or evidence in support of the emerging product.
4. Communicate findings in a clear and compelling ways.
5. Critique and identify the limits of the conclusions of the project and generate ideas for future work.

Questions for Students
These are the types of questions you should be able to answer after completing a course.
1. How do I establish my point of view, take intellectual risks, and begin producing original scholarship or creative works?
2. How do I narrow my topic, critique current scholarship, and gather evidence in systematic and responsible ways?
3. How do I evaluate my findings and communicate my conclusions?

Approved RESEARCH (p. 1259) courses.

High-Impact Experience
Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.
1. Explain the connections between academic studies and outside-the-classroom experiences and observations.
2. Apply knowledge in complex or ambiguous situations.
3. Develop questions from experiences and observations to deepen and extend academic inquiry.

Questions for Students
These are the types of questions you should be able to answer after completing a course.
1. How do things I've learned in the classroom apply to outside settings?
2. How can experiences and observation raise or answer questions in academic settings?
3. How can I meaningfully reflect to help navigate complexities and ambiguities I encounter?

Approved High-Impact Experiences (p. 1265).
Communication Beyond Carolina

Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.

1. Ascertain the expectations, opportunities, and barriers to oral communication in distinct situations.
2. Tailor oral communications to different kinds of settings, including individual, small group, and public communication.
3. Tailor oral communications to different levels of expertise (inexpert, informed, expert), and to varying levels of alignment (resistant, ambivalent, supportive) and distinct contexts.
4. Make informed situation- and audience-sensitive strategic choices in content and delivery.
5. Improve ability to move audiences, as measure by best practices, audience feedback, and instructor feedback.

Questions for Students
These are the types of questions you should be able to answer after completing a course.

1. How can I engage with audiences through oral communication?
2. How do I best convey knowledge, ideas, and information effectively to different audiences in situations?
3. How can I best understand the views and ideas of others, both individually and collectively?
4. What are the best ways of strategizing and delivering oral communication for achieving my intended outcomes?
5. How can media or digital compositions extend my ability to communicate?

Approved COMMBEYOND (p. 1268) courses.

Lifetime Fitness

Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing a course.

1. Engage in healthy physical activity and nutritional behaviors.
2. Assess your own physical activity and fitness.
3. Design and initiate a personal physical activity plan for aerobic and muscular fitness.
4. Create solutions for overcoming barriers to maintaining lifetime fitness and proper nutrition throughout life.

Approved LIFE-FIT (p. 1269) courses.

Campus Life Experience

Learning Outcomes
These are the learning outcomes that are expected of students after completing this requirement.

1. Attend a diverse set of campus performances, lectures, and events.
2. Interpret performances, lectures, and events in light of academic study.
3. Participate in the life of a university campus and its activities outside the classroom.

Questions for Students
These are the types of questions you should be able to answer after completing a course.

1. How do public and campus events enrich and broaden college learning?
2. How do performances and intellectual talks inspire new ways of interpreting and understanding the world?
3. How do political lectures and debates bridge or illuminate important differences?

If you applied to UNC as a transfer student, there are a few elements of the IDEAs in Action curriculum that are different for you.

If you completed 24 or more credits at another institution (earned after graduating from high school), you are exempt from the following 3 First-Year Foundation requirements (and you may not enroll in these classes):
1. College Thriving
2. First-Year Seminar/First-Year Launch
3. Ideas, Information, and Inquiry (Triple-I)

All other Gen Ed requirements must be fulfilled, including ENGL 105 and Global Language (p. 1211) from the First-Year Foundations.

Transfer Students from a North Carolina Community College

If you were admitted as a first-year student and earned an associate’s degree from a North Carolina community college and qualify under the Comprehensive Articulation Agreement (CAA), all IDEAs in Action requirements are satisfied, with the following exceptions:

- Global Language
- Research and Discovery
- Communication Beyond Carolina
- Lifetime Fitness
- Campus Life Experience (for the semesters at UNC)
- Supplemental General Education (B.A. degree only)

If you receive equivalent course credit, you may use the transfer credit to fulfill any of the requirements listed above.

First-Year Students from a North Carolina Early College

If you were admitted as a first-year student and earned an associate’s degree from a North Carolina early college (Cooperative Innovative High School) and qualify for the Comprehensive Articulation Agreement (CAA), all IDEAs in Action requirements are satisfied, with the following exceptions:

- Global Language
- Research and Discovery
- Communication Beyond Carolina
- Lifetime Fitness
- Campus Life Experience (for the semesters at UNC)
- Supplemental General Education (B.A. degree only)

If you receive equivalent course credit, you may use the transfer credit to fulfill any of the requirements listed above.
Although not required, as a first-year student you may elect to enroll in IDST 101, Triple-I (p. 1210), and a FY-Seminar or FY-Launch (p. 1202) course.

H  Honors version available. An honors course fulfills the same requirements as the nonhonors version of that course. Enrollment and GPA restrictions may apply.

Quantitative Reasoning

Quantitative Reasoning (FC-QUANT) is a required Focus Capacity course in the IDEAs in Action curriculum (p. 1195).

A single course may be used to fulfill only one Focus Capacity requirement (not including lab).

High-Impact Experience

High-Impact Experience (HI) is a required Reflection and Integration course in the IDEAs in Action curriculum (p. 1195). There are several types of high-impact experience opportunities at Carolina.

In addition to the approved courses and experiences listed below, this requirement may also be fulfilled by taking a second Research and Discovery (p. 1259) course.

Study Abroad

All UNC–Chapel Hill approved study abroad programs fulfill the High-Impact Experience requirement. Program information can be found at the Study Abroad Office (https://studyabroad.unc.edu/).

Collaborative Online International Learning (HI-COIL)

COIL courses involve shared learning between students in a course at UNC–Chapel Hill and peer students at a global partner university. Faculty members at both institutions design collaborative activities for their students lasting at least three weeks, such as completing small group projects, engaging in dialogue drawing on their different societal or disciplinary perspectives, or exchanging scholarly or creative work.

Search for COIL courses at the section level in ConnectCarolina using the “Search by Class Attribute” feature.

More information is available at UNC Global (https://global.unc.edu/programs/connecting-carolina-classrooms-with-the-world/coil/).

Communication Beyond Carolina

Communication Beyond Carolina (COMMBEYOND) is a required Reflection and Integration course in the IDEAs in Action curriculum (p. 1195).

Campus Life Experience

All full-time students will attend at least two on-campus organized activities, such as performances, talks, panels, workshops, etc., for each semester they are enrolled on campus (fall and spring only). Students may attend more or fewer events in a given semester as long as they attend the total number required during their career at UNC-Chapel Hill. Events that are required for a course the student is taking are still eligible to count toward the Campus Life Experience requirement. To be eligible, events must be sponsored by a UNC-Chapel Hill department, unit, or registered student organization. Events may include students on the program but may not be entirely composed of students.

All approved events are posted to Heel Life (https://heellife.unc.edu/).

Additional information is available in Student Affairs (https://studentaffairs.unc.edu/student-programs/campus-life-experience/student-information/).

Additional Policies

- If a student enrolls in a ninth or 10th semester, no additional CLEs are required. The maximum number of required CLEs is 16 regardless of the number of terms the student attended.
- Participating in a semester-length study abroad program (fall or spring) will count for 2 CLEs. Participating in a year-long study abroad program (fall and spring) will count for 4 CLEs.
- Part-time students will attend one Campus Life Experience event for each semester they are enrolled as a part-time student (fall and spring only). The maximum number of required CLEs is 16 regardless of the number of terms the student attended.
- Seniors approved for an underload are not required to complete 2 CLE events that semester.

Thrive@Carolina Campus Hubs (Hubs), which includes UNC Advising (https://advising.unc.edu), is a collaborative and innovative approach to deliver holistic support to undergraduates from admission through graduation. Its mission is to champion students’ individual stories through purposeful interactions so that they achieve their academic, personal, and post-UNC goals. Anchored in the belief that we serve a diverse population in which every student does not need the same support or know the same information, Hubs partner with students as they unlock their potential, activate their plans, secure their opportunities, and cultivate their community. Nestled within the College of Arts & Sciences, Hubs are comprised of approximately 60 full- and part-time personnel and serve students in a variety of campus locations.

Center for Student Success
Dr. Marcus L. Collins, Ed.D., Associate Dean and Director
2203 SASB North; (919) 966-2143

The Center for Student Success (CFSS) (https://studentsuccess.unc.edu/) has a simple mission, which is connecting with all UNC-Chapel Hill students to promote your academic and personal growth. Its constituent offices and programs (The Learning Center, The Writing Center, Peer Mentoring, Summer Bridge, Carolina Firsts, and Transfer Student Support) support you in developing the skills and strategies needed to excel at UNC and beyond. Our commitment to student learning supports the University’s mission to “teach a diverse community of undergraduate, graduate, and professional students to become the next generation of leaders.” We also support the University’s commitment to diversity and in doing so sponsor programs and activities that promote academic excellence, increase retention, and improve the campus climate for diversity among all undergraduates.

The Learning Center
Dr. Kim Abels, Ph.D., Director
0118 and 2109 SASB North, (919) 962-3782

The Learning Center (http://learningcenter.unc.edu) helps students optimize their learning strategies to meet all their academic goals at Carolina. To make an appointment with an academic coach or check out this year’s event calendar, visit the Learning Center’s website (http://learningcenter.unc.edu/). The Learning Center regularly offers an array of programs and services popular with undergraduate students, including:

- One-on-one appointments with an academic coach. The Learning Center holds some coaching appointments in 221 Greenlaw Hall, which is located across from the Undergraduate Library. Coaching appointments provide opportunities for students to set personal academic goals and get support and accountability in the process.
- Peer tutoring for many introductory courses. The Learning Center provides peer tutoring by appointment in Dey Hall on Monday and Tuesday evenings (walk-ins also welcome) or make an appointment for select courses.

- STEM support, including academic coaching and learning groups for BIOL 101, BIOL 103, BIOL 104, CHEM 101, CHEM 102, CHEM 261, MATH 130, MATH 231, and STOR 155.

- Workshops on topics such as metacognitive learning strategies, reading speed and comprehension, time management, and more.

- Handouts and videos (http://learningcenter.unc.edu/tips-and-tools/) offering tips and tools to make students’ academic lives easier.

- Study groups and boot camps providing opportunities to gather with other students to maximize study time and strategies.

- Test prep resources for GRE, GMAT, MCAT, and LSAT in partnership with The Princeton Review, at discounts of 20 percent.

- ADHD/LD support. Individual appointments and coaching groups are available.

The Writing Center
Dr. Kim Abels, Ph.D., Director
0127 SASB North; 221 Greenlaw Hall; (919) 962-7710

The Writing Center (http://writingcenter.unc.edu/) helps students become stronger, more flexible writers. To make an appointment with a writing coach or to submit your draft online, visit the Writing Center’s website (https://writingcenter.unc.edu/). The Writing Center is a free service for students, offering:

- One-on-one appointments (https://writingcenter.unc.edu/about/writing-coaching/) with a writing coach. Coaching appointments are 45-minute conversations with undergraduate and graduate students who are specially trained to support students’ development as writers.

- Online coaching (https://wc-online.unc.edu/ota/app/) services. Students can submit drafts online, specify their concerns, and request targeted feedback.

- Feedback on any writing project at any stage of the writing process. Students can work with a coach on everything from application essays to zoology lab reports. They can come in with nothing but ideas, with an outline, or with a draft. Coaches meet students where they are and help them move forward in the process.

- Handouts and videos (https://writingcenter.unc.edu/tips-and-tools/) on the writing process, citation and sentence-level concerns, writing-specific assignments, and writing in specific disciplines.

- Write Night events designed to help students make substantial progress on their drafts at key points each semester.

- English language resources (https://writingcenter.unc.edu/esl/) and language specialists who support the academic and social communication of Carolina’s international students.

- Volunteer opportunities! With our Speaking Group (https://writingcenter.unc.edu/esl/speaking-groups/) and U.S. English Pronunciation (https://writingcenter.unc.edu/esl/esl-mini-courses/) class, Carolina students can build relationships and gain valuable exposure to global cultures.

- Job opportunities (https://writingcenter.unc.edu/about/english-402/) Undergraduate students can apply to work as writing coaches after taking ENGL 402 in the spring semester.

The Peer Mentoring Programs
Hannah Ford, M.A., Program Coordinator
Dr. Marcus L. Collins, Ed.D., Associate Dean and Director
0118 SASB North; CB#3106
Peer Mentoring assists in the academic, social, and personal development and adjustment of our newest Tar Heels in their first year at UNC. Incoming students can request peer mentors who are academically successful and socially involved members of the Carolina Community. Peer mentors provide academic counseling, bridge communication between CFSS and first-year students, and assist them with their transition from high school to university life.

Summer Bridge

Brittany Grant, M.S., Program Coordinator
Dr. Marcus L. Collins, Ed.D., Associate Dean and Director
0118 SASB North, CB# 3106
(919) 966-2143

Summer Bridge (https://studentsuccess.unc.edu/summer-bridge/) is a six-week transition program that helps incoming first-year students adjust to Carolina by providing academic enrichment, community building, and co-curricular and experiential learning activities. The program is designed to ease participants' personal and academic transition from high school to the University. Students enroll in academic courses, designed to strengthen both written and quantitative skills. They also participate in activities designed to supplement their summer experience by engaging in high-impact learning experiences often facilitated by units such as the UNC Learning and Writing Centers, University Career Services, and Student Life and Leadership. Additionally, cultural and recreational activities are significant components of the program, as students are introduced to the University and the array of opportunities and resources available. Any student who has been admitted to UNC-Chapel Hill and is a North Carolina resident is eligible to apply.

Carolina Firsts

Brittany Grant, M.S., Program Coordinator
Dr. Marcus L. Collins, Ed.D., Associate Dean and Director
0118 SASB North, CB# 3106
(919) 966-2143

Nearly 20 percent of all undergraduates at UNC-Chapel Hill are the first in their family to attend college. At Carolina, we proudly call our first-generation college students Carolina Firsts. There are several programs and opportunities designed specifically to help Carolina Firsts engage, experience, and excel along their Carolina journey.

Transfer Students

Luke Fayard, M.A., Program Coordinator, Transfer Student Support
Dr. Marcus L. Collins, Ed.D., Associate Dean and Director
2203 SASB North
(919) 966-5245

Transfer Student Support (https://studentsuccess.unc.edu/transfer-students/) programs and opportunities are designed specifically for transfer students to acclimate to the Carolina community. The Transfer Student Coordinator serves as one of several contacts for transfer students at UNC and provides support to encourage the success, persistence, and graduation of transfer students primarily once they enroll at the university. Program and support services include academic coaching and peer mentor support, along with several opportunities throughout the academic year for community building.

Library System

- Library hours (http://library.unc.edu/hours/)
- Ask a question (http://library.unc.edu/ask/)

The campus libraries are your home for world-class collections, study spaces for every preference, and research expertise across a wide range of subject areas.

Everyone is welcome in all campus libraries, including the House Undergraduate Library, Davis Library, the Wilson Special Collections Library, the Health Sciences Library, and subject-specific branch libraries. Your OneCard is your library card.

Reserve a study room (https://library.unc.edu/places/study/?feature=reservable) to collaborate on group projects. Take advantage of New York Times and Washington Post digital subscriptions, best-selling e-books and audiobooks, and popular streaming movies, all brought to you by the Librar (https://library.unc.edu/services/leisure/). Bring your visions to life in the Library's makerspace (https://library.unc.edu/science/makerspace/) with 3D scanning and printing. And visit the Media and Design Center (https://library.unc.edu/house/mdc/resources/) to take your multimedia projects from concept to creation, with production equipment, technology, digital assets, and staff expertise.

Whatever your academic focus, personal passions, and personality, the Library is here to support your success. Sign up for the Library's monthly student newsletter (https://library.unc.edu/social/student-newsletter/) to stay connected.

Math Help Center

Miranda Thomas, Ph.D., Director

The Math Help Center (https://math.unc.edu/undergraduate/resources/), located in 237 Phillips Hall, provides additional instructional support for students enrolled in MATH 110 through MATH 233. The center is staffed by both graduate and undergraduate tutors who work with students in small groups or individually. The center's main purposes are to provide assistance and to increase the success rate for students in specific math courses.

Pre-Graduate School Advising

The Pre-Graduate Education Advising Program (https://careers.unc.edu/students/pre-professional-pre-graduate-advising/pre-graduate/), under University Career Services in Hanes Hall (second floor), is a resource offered to students interested in pursuing graduate studies. The program advises undergraduate students considering a graduate degree in various disciplines (sciences, arts and humanities, social sciences, and professional arenas). These advisors can help clarify the differences between a doctorate and a master's degree and the opportunities these terminal degrees may offer. The program is primarily responsible for helping students considering graduate school understand what their next steps are in researching and applying to graduate programs, so that they can move forward independently and effectively. Students can schedule a pre-grad coaching appointment by visiting Handshake (https://careers.unc.edu/students/resources/schedule-appointment/).

Health Professions Advising

UNC-Chapel Hill has no formal pre-health curriculum or major. Instead, students should choose one of the four-year B.A. or B.S. degree programs and incorporate appropriate prerequisite courses in their planning. Health professional schools encourage students to major in what they are interested in studying; no specific majors are recommended. Students are strongly encouraged to join the health professions listserv (https://hpa.unc.edu/connect/join-the-listserv/) to identify programs that are relevant to their career pathway. First year students or those beginning their journey are encouraged to take BIOL 117 (Exploring Health Professions) and BIOL 118 (Pursuing Health Professions), which are pass/fail 1 credit options focused on exposing students to health professions careers as well as the application process.

The HPA office advises about the many pathways to a health professional career and the various career options in healthcare through facilitated professional programs, individualized meetings, and access to health professions information that encourages application of knowledge and experience. Students can make an appointment with health professions advisors virtually or in person (Health Sciences Library Suite #217B), or join our listserv by visiting the HPA website (https://hpa.unc.edu/).

Pre-law Advising

UNC–Chapel Hill has no formal pre-law curriculum or major. Instead, students should follow one of the four-year B.A. or B.S. degree programs. Most law schools do not require, or even recommend, that students major in any particular field; instead, most law schools prefer applicants who have pursued a course of study that gives a foundation for undertaking legal studies, with an emphasis on reading, writing, speaking, and analytical and critical thinking. However, a student wishing to practice patent law will need a degree in one of the sciences.

Pre-law students should emphasize academics. The campus Learning Center offers programs designed to help enhance reading skills. Students are encouraged to take advantage of this opportunity. Students also are encouraged to schedule a pre-law appointment using Handshake (https://careers.unc.edu/students/resources/schedule-appointment/). They also may wish to visit the Pre-Law Advising website (http://prelaw.unc.edu/), where they can gain helpful information.

Research Institutes and Centers

The intellectual life of the University and the research activities of undergraduates, graduate students and faculty alike receive valuable encouragement and support from a variety of institutes and centers. These institutes do not operate as instructional agencies within the University; rather, they serve to obtain financial and organizational assistance for the scholars who constitute their membership.

Most research centers and institutes can be found on the UNC Research website (http://research.unc.edu/units/a-z/).

Scholarly Journals

The University has published scholarly journals since 1884, when the Journal of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society first appeared.

The following list contains some of the publications currently produced by the University’s graduate and professional programs.

Endeavors (http://endeavors.unc.edu/). Features outstanding research and creative work undertaken by faculty and students at the University. Distributed free, the magazine reaches 8,600 on- and off-campus readers in an effort to engage others in Carolina research.

North Carolina Law Review (https://scholarship.law.unc.edu/nclr/). Published by the School of Law to stimulate research and publication by faculty and students.

Studies in the Romance Languages and Literatures (http://romlpub.unc.edu/ncsrll/). For more than 80 years, this publication has supported and disseminated scholarship in the romance literatures.

In addition, the University of North Carolina Press (https://uncpress.org/) publishes several journals. A full list is available on their website (https://uncpress.org/journals/).

The University of North Carolina Press

The University of North Carolina Press (https://uncpress.org/) is the primary publishing arm of the University in the scholarly field. In addition to its publication of the journals of research, it carries on a book publishing program of about 80 new titles a year. Electronic publications also are available. Although these books are the work of scholars from all parts of the world, the presence in the University of a professionally staffed book publishing organization, with facilities for the international distribution of works of scholarship, is a stimulus to research and writing by members of the University community. The Press’ program is an important contribution to the development of that aspect of the University’s service which has to do with the advancement of learning.
SCHOOLS/COLLEGE

Division of Academic Affairs

- College of Arts and Sciences (General College) (p. 32)
  - School of Civic Life and Leadership (p. 424)
- Kenan–Flagler Business School (p. 33)
- School of Data Science and Society (p. 54)
- School of Education (p. 73)
- School of Information and Library Science (p. 98)
- Hussman School of Journalism and Media (p. 108)

Division of Health Affairs

- Adams School of Dentistry (p. 60)
- School of Medicine: Department of Health Sciences (p. 757)
- School of Nursing (p. 130)
- Eshelman School of Pharmacy (p. 142)
- Gillings School of Global Public Health (p. 32)

Entering first-year students and transfers of less than junior standing from other institutions enter the College of Arts and Sciences (General College).

Students with junior standing, including transfers from other institutions, enter a School or College in the Division of Academic Affairs or the Division of Health Affairs (see lists above).

Undergraduate courses are also offered through Summer School (p. 147).
UNDERGRADUATE DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

Undergraduate Degree Programs

The University offers programs of study leading to the bachelor of arts (B.A.), bachelor of arts in education (B.A.Ed.), bachelor of arts in media and journalism (B.A.M.J.), bachelor of fine arts (B.F.A.), bachelor of music (B.Mus.), bachelor of science (B.S.), bachelor of science in business administration (B.S.B.A.), bachelor of science in information science (B.S.I.S.), bachelor of science in nursing (B.S.N.), bachelor of science in pharmaceutical sciences (B.S.Ph.S.), and bachelor of science in public health (B.S.P.H.) degrees. The University does not award any credential below a bachelor’s degree credential, and any approved undergraduate certificate must be awarded in conjunction with a bachelor’s degree.

The College of Arts and Sciences offers more than 50 major fields of study (p. 149). Professional school majors are also available to undergraduates by application and acceptance. Specific requirements for each major are included in this catalog. For information about the other undergraduate degree programs, please refer to the professional schools’ sections in this catalog.

Bachelor of Arts

Students seeking a bachelor of arts (B.A.) degree must complete the Supplemental General Education (p. 1195) requirement. Among other options, completing a minor or a second major fulfills the Supplemental General Education requirement.

Bachelor of Science

Four-year programs leading to the degree of bachelor of science (B.S.) provide for specialization in a particular field and necessary instruction in related fields. In some B.S. programs offered by professional schools, General Education requirements may be reduced. Most B.S. programs, however, require students to complete quantitative reasoning courses beyond the General Education minimum and/or require specific quantitative reasoning courses.

Bachelor of Fine Arts

A four-year program leading to the degree of bachelor of fine arts (p. 261) is offered by the Department of Art and Art History. It provides, for qualified students, preprofessional training in creative aspects of the field of art. Approximately one-half of the program is in the field of the major, and the other half is in the liberal arts and sciences.

Bachelor of Music

The four-year program leading to the degree of bachelor of music (p. 880), housed in the Department of Music, emphasizes training and achievement in the performance or composition of music. Approximately one-half of the program is in the field of the major, and the other half is in the liberal arts and sciences.

Dual Bachelor’s–Graduate Degree Programs

The University offers dual bachelor–graduate degree programs. The programs currently offered are listed below. The requirements for the bachelor’s degree must be completed within eight semesters of study (or 10 semesters of study for transfer students (p. 1275)). The requirements for the graduate degree can be completed in as few as two additional semesters, for a possible total of 10 (or fewer) semesters of study. For information about the requirements and application process, please consult the relevant academic unit in this catalog.

• Biostatistics (p. 391) (B.S.P.H.–M.S.), Gillings School of Global Public Health
• City and Regional Planning (p. 417) (multiple bachelor’s degree majors possible–MCRP), College of Arts and Sciences
• Computer science (p. 478) (B.S.–M.S.), College of Arts and Sciences

• Public Policy (p. 1015) (multiple bachelor’s degree majors possible–MPP), College of Arts and Sciences
• Statistics and analytics (p. 1160) and statistics and operations research (B.S.–M.S.), College of Arts and Sciences

Joint Degree Programs with the National University of Singapore (NUS)

UNC–Chapel Hill undergraduates can spend anywhere from two to four semesters at the National University of Singapore and receive a joint bachelor of arts degree from both institutions. Programs are offered in biology (p. 362), economics (p. 527), English (https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/programs-study/english-major-ba/), geography (p. 682), global studies (p. 741), history (p. 805), and political science (p. 978).

Requirements for Undergraduate Degree Programs

The requirements and limitations that apply to all undergraduate degree programs are as follows:

• Students must successfully complete at least 120 semester hours of coursework (requirements are higher than this minimum in some bachelor of science degree curricula)
• Students must have at least a 2.000 final cumulative grade point average on all work attempted at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

• Students must satisfy all General Education requirements. In some B.S. programs offered by professional schools, General Education requirements may be reduced. No course used as a General Education requirement may be declared Pass/Fail.

• A minimum of 45 academic credit hours must be earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses. These may include credits from study abroad programs sponsored by the University, only if they are faculty-led, graded UNC credit courses.

• At least 24 of the last 30 academic credit hours applied to the degree requirements must be earned in UNC–Chapel Hill courses.

• No more than 45 semester hours in any subject, as defined by subject code, may be used toward fulfilling the B.A. graduation requirement in the College of Arts and Sciences (excluding ENGL 100, ENGL 105, and ENGL 105I).

• Students completing the requirements for more than one major field of study will earn only one degree and receive only one diploma. For additional information, including which degree is awarded when completing more than one major field of study, refer to Policies and Procedures (p. 1322).

Additional Notes

1 Study abroad transfer credit does not count toward the minimum of 45 academic credit hours that must be earned from UNC–Chapel Hill courses. Students who have transferred in the maximum of 75 transfer hours from other institutions may study abroad on programs sponsored by the University where transfer credit is earned, but they still must earn 45 credit hours from UNC–Chapel Hill courses. For additional information, please refer to University Policy Memorandum #14 (https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/university-policy-memorandums/upm-14-administration-of-year-abroad-programs/); approved Fall 2020 for Spring 2021 implementation.

2 Study abroad transfer credit (earned on study abroad programs sponsored by the University) can count towards the final 24 hours that must be earned in UNC-Chapel Hill courses.

Terms in Residence and Transferred Semesters

First-Year Students

Students who enter the University as first-year students are expected to complete their undergraduate degree in eight semesters. Summer terms are not included in the semester count as noted below.

Students who wish to attend a ninth semester must submit a written petition to, and receive permission from, their dean’s office. Permission to enroll in a ninth semester or beyond must be secured in advance. Permission to enroll in a ninth semester or beyond will not be granted for the sole purpose of completing multiple areas of study (i.e., a secondary major and a minor or two minors). However, students who receive permission to enroll in a ninth semester or beyond for other reasons may retain a secondary major or minor. In the College of Arts and Sciences, dean’s office approval is granted by the Academic Advising Designee or their designee. Students should refer questions to the Academic Advising Program.

Transfer Students

Transfer students who enter with fewer than two transfer semesters (UNC-equivalent semesters) are expected to complete their degree in eight total semesters (which includes both transferred semesters and terms in residence).

Students who enter with two or more transferred semesters may enroll in up to 10 total semesters and complete up to three areas of study, such as a secondary major and a minor or two minors.

For additional information, see “Transfer of Credit” in Undergraduate Admissions (https://catalog.unc.edu/admissions/undergraduate/#text) and “Calculation of Transferred Semesters Based on the Number of Transferred Credit Hours” in the Credit and Evaluation (https://catalog.unc.edu/policies-procedures/credit-evaluation/) section of the Catalog.

Maximum Length of Study

Students who have completed their graduation requirements for their first degree may not receive financial aid for subsequent semesters. For additional eligibility information, refer to SAP policy (https://studentaid.unc.edu/current/sap/).

Summer Semesters

Courses completed during summer semesters after a student is enrolled at UNC–Chapel Hill are not included in the semester count.

Transfer credit hours for courses completed during summer terms prior to enrolling at UNC–Chapel Hill are included in the transferred semester count. Summer enrollment at UNC–Chapel Hill immediately before the first semester of full-time, degree-seeking enrollment as a transfer student will not count towards the calculation of semesters completed.

Maintained by the Educational Policy Committee. Last approved on January 27, 2017. See Resolution 2017-1.

Students must complete a major field of study as prescribed by the academic unit.

Requirements for Majors

The following requirements and limitations apply to all undergraduate academic majors at the University:

• Unless specifically prohibited by departments or curricula, major or minor courses may be used to satisfy General Education requirements.

• A course used to fulfill “Gateway”,”Prerequisite,” or “Additional Requirements” for a declared major (as outlined in the Undergraduate Catalog) may not be declared a Pass/Fail course (p. 1300). Understanding that exploration may also lead to interest in a particular area, students may elect to use one course completed with a grade of PS, not LP, toward major “Core Requirements” (as outlined in the Undergraduate Catalog).

• A minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in coursework taken at UNC–Chapel Hill in the major core is required. Some programs may require higher standards for admission to the program, for prerequisite courses in specific sequences, and/or for specific core courses, particularly for professional school programs with additional accreditation standards.

• All students, including students transferring from another institution, must take at least half of their major core requirements (courses and credit hours) at UNC–Chapel Hill.

• Some majors require a gateway course that must be taken first, before enrolling in any other courses that satisfy the core requirements in the major. Students must earn a grade of C or better (C- does not qualify) in the gateway course.
• No more than two courses (six to eight credit hours) of BE credit (p. 1292) may be used as part of the major core.

Requirements for Minors

Students enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences who wish to complete a minor in a professional school must receive permission from the professional school.

The following requirements and limitations apply to all undergraduate academic minors:

• A student may have no more than two minors, regardless of the student’s major degree program. Academic units may exclude certain minors from being elected and completed by students majoring in these units.

• More than half (not merely half) of the credit hours and courses (including cross-listed courses) taken to satisfy the minor requirements must be counted exclusively in the minor and not double-counted in other majors or minors.

• At least nine hours of core requirements in the minor must be completed at UNC–Chapel Hill and not at other academic institutions. Certain academic units may require that more than nine hours must be completed at the University.

• Some academic units may disallow the double-counting of courses in the minor and as General Education courses.

• A minimum cumulative GPA of 2.000 in coursework taken at UNC–Chapel Hill in the minor core is required. Some programs may require higher standards for minor or specific courses.

• No more than one BE credit (p. 1292) course (three to four credit hours) may be used as part of a minor.

• A course used to fulfill "Gateway," "Prerequisite," or "Additional Requirements" for a declared minor (as outlined in the Undergraduate Catalog) may not be declared a Pass/Fail course (p. 1300). Understanding that exploration may also lead to interest in a particular area, students may elect to use one course completed with a grade of PS, not LP, towards minor "Core Requirements" (as outlined in the Undergraduate Catalog).

• If students plan to pursue the completion of a minor, they are encouraged to declare their minor by early in the junior year.

Combining Majors and Minors

Students in the College of Arts and Sciences are permitted to study up to three subjects in depth. They may do this in one of the following ways:

• one major

• two majors

• one major and one minor

• two majors and one minor

• one major and two minors

Students enrolled in professional schools who wish to have a second major or minor in the College of Arts and Sciences must receive permission from their professional school and the College of Arts and Sciences; students who receive permission to have a second major in the College of Arts and Sciences are required to complete all General Education requirements. Students enrolled in professional schools who wish to have a second major or minor in a different professional school must receive permission from both professional schools.

A student may pursue in-depth study in multiple areas by fulfilling all major/minor requirements in at least three areas of study, provided that more than half (not merely half) of the courses and course credit hours taken in each major/minor must be exclusive to that major/minor. Some majors may further restrict double-counting courses. Students who are pursuing two majors and a minor (or two minors and a major) may, in principle, use a single course to satisfy requirements in all three areas of study, provided that more than half (not merely half) of the courses and course credit hours taken in each major/minor are exclusive to that major/minor.

Graduation

Beginning with the first day of registration for the term for which students expect to graduate, they should file an application for graduation online in ConnectCarolina or in person in the office of the dean. For students in the College of Arts and Sciences, this is the office of the Academic Advising Program. A student who has not filed an application for graduation on or before the announced deadlines for fall or spring graduation will not be included in the graduation program.

Students must pay tuition, fees, and other obligations owed the University before receiving a diploma.

Graduation Requirements and Tar Heel Tracker

Total graduation requirements are determined by ConnectCarolina’s Tar Heel Tracker degree-audit system. Students are also encouraged to meet with their academic advisor.

Additional Policy and Procedures

The Policies and Procedures (p. 1291) section of this catalog contains information on many important topics, including registration, academic course load, academic eligibility, repeating course enrollments, final examinations, and the grading system, among others.

Undergraduate Honors: Degrees with Distinction

To graduate with distinction or with highest distinction, students must have completed at least 45 academic hours at UNC–Chapel Hill and have an overall grade point average of at least 3.500 or 3.800 respectively. The grade point average is based on the grades received and recorded by the Office of the University Registrar as of the degree award date. No changes are permitted to the awards after that date.
Undergraduate Honors: Degrees with Honors

Students who wish to graduate from UNC–Chapel Hill with honors or highest honors must complete a senior honors thesis project in their major field(s) of study. Such students need not have been members of Honors Carolina. They must, however, meet academic eligibility standards set by Honors Carolina and the individual departments, curricula, and professional schools that sponsor senior honors thesis programs.

Students with double majors may graduate with honors or highest honors in both fields of study. To do so, they must complete a distinct project in each field. Students may not undertake a senior honors thesis project in a minor field (Creative Writing is the sole exception) or in a field outside of their declared major(s).

Students who successfully complete a senior honors thesis project will have the designation “Honors” or “Highest Honors” recorded on their diplomas and transcripts and will be denoted in the Commencement bulletin at graduation. Creative Writing minors earning honors or highest honors will also be recognized in the Commencement bulletin and have a special remark added to their transcripts, but no designation will appear on their diplomas.

Application for honors work: Students should apply to the honors advisor in the department or curriculum of the major. Ordinarily, application is made during the junior year, although it is done earlier in some departments. Detailed information concerning the application should be obtained from the honors advisor in the major.

Requirements for eligibility: Students who wish to undertake a senior honors thesis project must have a cumulative grade point average of 3.300 or higher. Academic units that wish to impose a higher grade point average eligibility standard may do so by requiring that students meet both the cumulative 3.300 grade point average standard set by Honors Carolina office and a higher grade point average standard for all coursework required for the major.

Nature and purpose of honors study: Programs are provided for students who have demonstrated a high level of scholastic ability and achievement and who desire to pursue an intensive, individualized program of study in their major discipline. Senior honors thesis students must complete an original and substantial research, performance, or creative project under direct supervision by a faculty advisor.

Senior honors thesis projects are scheduled as a two-semester sequence of honors courses led by unit-designated faculty, independent study overseen by the faculty thesis advisor, or a combination of the two. Detailed guidelines on approved senior honors thesis scheduling formats are available on the Honors Carolina website (http://honorscarolina.unc.edu). Regardless of the scheduling format used, students must complete a total of 6.0 credit hours of senior honors thesis coursework during consecutive semesters, not during summer sessions.

A special written or oral examination on the student’s program is required during the final semester of honors study. The department or curriculum may impose other requirements that it deems appropriate. In every instance, study for honors will require academic excellence. When the student has fulfilled all requirements, the department or curriculum will recommend to the associate dean for honors that the degree be awarded with honors or with highest honors. The degree with highest honors is conferred in recognition of extraordinary achievement in a program of honors study.

Procedures for granting degrees with honors: The grade for coursework in connection with an honors project is determined by the faculty advisor and is (like all grades) subject to appeal. Successful completion of honors study does not automatically confer departmental honors. Before awarding a degree with honors or highest honors, the College of Arts and Sciences requires the recommendation of a student’s examining committee and the endorsement of that committee’s recommendation by the chair of the department or curriculum. A negative recommendation by the department is final and cannot be appealed. The associate dean for honors makes the final decision to award a degree with honors on the basis of the department’s positive recommendation and the student’s cumulative grade point average.

Phi Beta Kappa

This national collegiate honor society is open to undergraduate students in the College of Arts and Sciences and in exceptional circumstances (as described below) to students enrolled in undergraduate professional degree programs. The following students in the College of Arts and Sciences are eligible for membership:

• Students who have completed at least 75 semester hours of graded academic coursework in the liberal arts and sciences at UNC–Chapel Hill with a quality point average of at least 3.850
• Students who have completed at least 105 semester academic course hours in the liberal arts and sciences, at least 45 of which must have been graded coursework taken at UNC–Chapel Hill with a quality point average of at least 3.750

No grades made at an institution from which a student has transferred shall be included in determining a student’s eligibility. The quality point average shall include all academic coursework in the liberal arts and sciences taken and counted toward the candidate’s degree (physical activity grades and hours are not included). Grades and hours received on courses taken after the candidate has received his or her degree shall not be counted.

Undergraduate students not enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences who meet the general semester hours and quality point average described in the second bullet above and who have completed at least 90 semester hours of coursework in the departments and curricula of the College of Arts and Sciences (or the equivalents accepted for transfer credit from other institutions) are eligible for election.

Dean’s List

To be eligible for the Dean’s List, full-time students who enter the University as first-time, first-year students beginning in fall 2010 must meet the following requirement:

• A 3.500 grade point average with no grade lower than a C and enrollment in at least 12 hours of letter-grade credit, exclusive of physical education activities (PHYA) courses.

The grade point average is based on the grades received and recorded by the Office of the University Registrar at the time the Dean’s List is published. No changes are permitted to the Dean’s List after that date.

Campus Safety
285 Manning Drive (via Hardin Drive)
Monday - Friday, 7:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.
(919) 962-8100 (non-emergency) or 911

UNC Police is committed to creating and maintaining an environment where students, employees, and visitors to campus can feel safe in this vital community. Through its philosophy of community-oriented policing (COP), the department strives to employ professionalism, problem solving, and innovative strategies to remain one of the premier public safety agencies in the nation.

Familiarize yourself with security resources such as the campus-wide network of emergency call boxes, Smart911, self-defense instruction, other crime prevention classes, and much more.

In addition, the University has the capacity to send emergency warnings by text message to students, faculty, and staff through its Alert Carolina initiative. The entire University community is encouraged to educate itself regarding UNC’s emergency communications resources and to register cell phones for this method of communication by visiting the Alert Carolina website (https://alertcarolina.unc.edu/).

The LiveSafe App provides students, faculty, and staff a direct connection to UNC Police so that everyone can easily communicate all their safety needs. Its easy-to-use features help you stay safe every day and enable us to better protect you. Benefits include the ability to share information, tips, and safety concerns with UNC Police via pictures, video, or audio messaging; easy access to call or message UNC Police to summon help; access to SafeWalk (https://safewalk.unc.edu/), a GPS-tagged monitoring feature that allows your friends and family to keep you virtually covered until you arrive safely at a destination; and easy-to-find information and location of safety resources on and off campus. To download and set up LiveSafe on your iPhone or Android phone, select “University of North Carolina Chapel Hill” as your affiliation and fill in your user profile.

UNC–Chapel Hill students and staff can learn how to respond in an active shooter scenario by attending a “Shots Fired” training presentation offered by UNC officers.

Carolina Housing
Student and Academic Services Building North
CB# 5500
450 Ridge Road
(919) 962-5401
housing@unc.edu

Carolina Housing (https://housing.unc.edu/) works to provide convenient housing that is secure, inclusive, and supportive. Students create a home in our on-campus communities, build lifelong friendships and develop skills for their current and future successes as they journey through their Carolina experience. Students are encouraged to work towards leaving their “HEELprint” on the larger University by connecting with resources, taking advantage of leadership opportunities, and making a difference while they are Carolina students. By getting involved, students develop an identity with the larger University community, create social networks, and find opportunities for intellectual, spiritual, physical, and occupational growth.

Carolina Housing is an integral part of the academic and social community at UNC–Chapel Hill. It is committed to providing an environment conducive to the educational, psychological, and social development of residents. It strives to build a community that balances respect for the individual as well as the rights and interests of the whole community. All members of the residence hall and apartment community — residents, staff, and visitors — are expected to act in a manner that demonstrates respect and consideration for those around them.

Carolina Housing offers a variety of academic success and engagement initiatives to help student staff and on-campus residents develop healthy academic habits and support systems that lead to student success. These initiatives include residential learning programs, academic advising in the residence halls, transitional programming for first-year students, faculty engagement programs such as Meals with Heels and the Scholar in Residence, individual community programming on academic success, and an experiential education course, EDUC 318. This holistic approach complements classroom experiences and lays the foundation for students to become better prepared to succeed in life beyond college.

Graduate Student Housing. Carolina Housing recognizes that the living needs of graduate and professional students are usually different from those of undergraduates. At Carolina, graduate and professional students can enjoy the benefits of being affordably close to classes, facilities, and events, and living in a community of fellow graduate students where the atmosphere is characterized by early quiet hours and respect for personal time and space.

Baity Hill Graduate and Family Housing (https://housing.unc.edu/live/explore-the-halls/graduate-and-family-housing/) is Carolina’s on-campus community for graduate students providing apartment-style housing. The property houses students with families and graduate students with roommates. This one- and two-bedroom apartment community is situated on rolling hills adjacent to the campus. The apartments are within walking distance of the campus and are served by campus and city bus routes. Rental costs compare favorably with similar area housing.

Packing is available for graduate students on a limited basis, and a fare-free campus bus service offers several routes that connect the north, middle and south regions of campus. Find specifications for apartments by visiting the Carolina Housing website (https://housing.unc.edu/live/explore-the-halls/graduate-and-family-housing/).

Generally, demand for on-campus housing for graduate students exceeds the supply. On-campus housing is not guaranteed for graduate students, although every effort is made to offer a space to all applicants. Returning residents have priority to re-contract for the following academic year before spaces are offered to new graduate students. Additional information is available on the Carolina Housing website (https://housing.unc.edu/live/explore-the-halls/graduate-and-family-housing/).

Off-Campus Graduate Student Housing. Off-campus housing refers to any housing not owned and operated by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. This category includes small group housing such as fraternities and sororities, as well as apartments, houses, and rooms. Two-thirds of the University’s students live in the off-campus market.
Students will find furnished and unfurnished units, as well as units within walking distance to campus or spread throughout Chapel Hill and Carrboro.

Carolina Union

The Carolina Union (https://carolinaunion.unc.edu/) creates safe, inclusive, and educational experiences that enable students to maximize their time at Carolina. "Carolina Union" is the term used for both the Frank Porter Graham Student Union Building and the University department that serves students in many areas of their cocurricular lives. Governed by a board of directors consisting of students and faculty, the Carolina Union's role is to unify the campus community by providing programs, services and facilities.

Cultural, educational, and social programs are planned and implemented by the Carolina Union Activities Board (https://carolinaunion.unc.edu/departments/student-life-leadership/student-activities/carolina-union-activities-board-cuab/) (CUAB).

The Union contributes to the educational mission of the University by providing cultural, social, educational and entertainment programs. The Union also provides many services for the University community, supporting and enhancing student organizations and the programs they create.

The Office of the Dean of Students

Student Academic Services Building North, Suite 1106
450 Ridge Road
(919) 966-4042

The Office of the Dean of Students (https://odos.unc.edu/) provides support and assistance to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill community, empowering students to succeed in navigating the University environment. Its four pillars — Care, Collaborate, Celebrate, and Empower — inform its programs, services, and initiatives. The office often serves as a beginning point of contact for students, faculty members, staff, families, and community constituencies regarding various student concerns. It supports student academic, personal, and professional development through a combination of individual initiatives, innovative outreach programs, and cocurricular opportunities, as well as policy development and oversight.

offcampus@unc.edu (e-mail)
offcampus.unc.edu (http://offcampus.unc.edu) (Web)

offcampushousing.unc.edu (http://offcampushousing.unc.edu) (Web)

In alignment with the mission of Student Affairs at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Off-Campus Student Life (http://offcampus.unc.edu/) is committed to educating all students (undergraduate, graduate and professional) in life skills related to living off campus and in the community. These skills include:

- Becoming responsible tenants and community members knowledgeable of city ordinances and community quality of life issues
- Making informed choices about housing and roommates
- Gaining proficiency in problem solving when landlord and roommate difficulties arise
- Understanding personal safety and responsibility

For many students, transitioning into off-campus housing is as much a part of their college experience as first moving into the residence halls. For graduate and professional students, living in graduate housing like Baity Hill or in the community (Chapel Hill, Carrboro, or beyond) during their entire time at Carolina fits with their place in life and needs as a post-college adult. But, there can be significant challenges when leaving the intentional structure of an on-campus living environment. We are here to help students navigate their way as successful neighbors in our greater Chapel Hill–Carrboro community. We advocate for and educate toward the development of students as knowledgeable, active, and responsible community citizens. Students living off campus and in the community have rights and responsibilities associated with their pursuit of an enjoyable and safe living experience. We provide services and educational opportunities to promote the understanding of these rights and responsibilities throughout the off-campus student population.

Fraternity and Sorority Life (https://ofslci.unc.edu/) provides services, programs, and assistance to the 51 organizations that make up the Chapel Hill Greek community. The office’s mission is to enhance the academic experience, holistic development, and civic contribution of students by providing effective services and developmental opportunities that enrich the Carolina experience. Fraternity and Sorority Life advocates for the fraternal movement by educating, advising, and empowering fraternities and sororities and their members to live according to their organizational values and contribute to the University and greater community.

Information Technology Services

Web: its.unc.edu (http://its.unc.edu)
Telephone: (919) 962-HELP (4357)
T: 711 NC RELAY

Information Technology Services (ITS) leads UNC–Chapel Hill in planning, implementing and maintaining the University's technology services. The ITS staff is dedicated to delivering reliable, secure and satisfying information technology solutions and experiences to the University community.
For more information on free software, computer setups, and other tech services, visit its.unc.edu/get-started. To keep up with ITS throughout the year, follow @UNCTarHeelTech on Instagram, Threads, and X (formerly Twitter).

Tech Tools

ITS provides UNC students with tech for both work and play. Here are the top free tech tools from ITS:

- Adobe Creative Cloud. Visit adobe.unc.edu to request a free license to get started with digital imaging, video and audio editing, and more.
- Microsoft Copilot with Data Protection. Copilot is an enterprise level generative AI tool. Visit copilot.microsoft.com and sign in with a UNC email address to get started.
- LinkedIn Learning. From public speaking to prompt engineering to Photoshop, LinkedIn Learning has it all. Sign up at go.unc.edu/linkedIn for free access.
- Web hosting. Make a WordPress website for class, a club or just for fun at tarheels.live.
- And more! Visit software.unc.edu to see what else ITS offers.

Adobe Creative Cloud
adobe.unc.edu

UNC–Chapel Hill provides all students and instructional faculty and staff with access to Adobe Creative Cloud at no additional cost to students. Adobe Creative Cloud is a package of creative desktop applications for digital imaging, design, web, and video, plus free stock photos and cloud storage. Popular Adobe Creative Cloud apps include Photoshop, Illustrator, Premiere, Acrobat Pro, and InDesign. New students can activate their license by visiting adobe.unc.edu.

Carolina Computing Initiative
cci.unc.edu

Undergraduate students are required to bring laptops that meet the University’s minimum standards for their graduating class. The Carolina Computing Initiative (CCI) ensures that students have access to high-quality computers and exceptional support services. All CCI laptops come with a standard software package, warranty, and protection plans.

CCI laptops are offered at deeper discounts than standard educational pricing, and many students are eligible for laptop grants that cover the entire cost of a CCI laptop package. New students can apply for this need-based financial aid by submitting the College Board CSS/Financial Aid Profile to UNC–Chapel Hill. Purchase your laptop or use your laptop grant at the Tech Shop, the technology division of the UNC Student Stores.

Students who opt not to purchase a CCI machine are still required to bring a laptop that meets the technology requirements specified by the University.

Students with CCI laptops receive on-site tech support, hardware repair, and loaner laptops through the ITS Service Desk. While software and operating system support is available through the ITS Service Desk for non-CCI laptops, the level of support for students who own a CCI laptop is higher. Hardware support and loaner laptops are available on campus for students who own CCI laptops, while for non-CCI laptops, hardware support is the responsibility of the student.

For more information about the advantages of owning a CCI model, visit cci.unc.edu.

Printing

UNC–Chapel Hill fee-paying students are given an allotment of pre-paid pages on their One Card for printing each semester. Once the allotted pages have been used, students may purchase additional pages. Visit print.unc.edu for a map of 70 campus printing locations and details about mobile and touchless printing.

ITS Service Desk

The ITS Service Desk is the central point of contact for students who need tech help. The Service Desk assists students with hardware and software problems and answers questions about UNC–Chapel Hill technology services. Assistance is free to all students.

Students can contact the Service Desk by calling (919) 962-HELP, visiting help.unc.edu to chat or submit a request, or visiting us in person in the Frank Porter Graham Student Union. Hardware repairs for CCI computers are made at the Service Desk. While students’ CCI machines are being repaired, the Service Desk may be able to provide students with a loaner laptop.

ResNET: Residential Networking, Education, and Technology

ResNET provides on-campus residents with on-site tech support and education. Residents are served by more than 40 live-in student techs who provide any tech support that residents may need. Throughout the year, ResNET hosts educational events focused on showing new technology on campus. ResNET maintains the Carolina Gaming Arena for campus computer and console gameplay. Find more at resnet.unc.edu and carolinagaming.unc.edu.

Download CarolinaGO

CarolinaGO, the University’s official mobile app, is a collaboration between ITS and student leaders. With CarolinaGO, students can access a mobile version of ConnectCarolina, check dining hours, find bus schedules, check printing availability, and more. Maps also make it easy for new students and families to navigate campus. Search "CarolinaGO" in the App Store or Google Play and download.

The James M. Johnston Center for Undergraduate Excellence

225 Graham Memorial
218 E. Franklin Street
(919) 966-5110

The James M. Johnston Center for Undergraduate Excellence is a "democracy of learning" open to students, faculty, alumni, and visitors from all corners of the Carolina campus and beyond. The mission is to encourage undergraduates’ active engagement with research, scholarship, and artistic endeavor; to promote innovative teaching; and to provide a social setting in which students can engage in thoughtful discussions with professors and classmates.

The Johnston Center's student-faculty advisory committee advises its director on all aspects of programming and planning.

LGBTQ Center

Student Academic Services Building South, Third Floor, Suite 3308
385 Manning Drive
(919) 843-5376
lgbtq@unc.edu

The Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, and Queer (LGBTQ) Center (https://lgbtq.unc.edu/) works to foster a welcoming and inclusive environment for UNC–Chapel Hill community members of all sexual orientations, gender identities, and gender expressions. The LGBTQ Center offers educational training programs such as Safe Zone, student social groups such as Club Soda, student leadership programs such as the Ambassador's and direct support and advocacy to students, staff, and faculty.

New Student and Family Programs

Student Academic Services Building South, Suite 3318
(919) 962-8304
newstudents@unc.edu

New Student & Family Programs (NSFP) (https://nsfp.unc.edu/) provides new undergraduate students the information and activities needed to transition smoothly to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and promotes an ongoing relationship between the families of undergraduate students and the University in support of their students’ success.

To fulfill this mission, NSFP provides transition programs and services, communications for new students and families, and student leadership opportunities.

First-year and transfer students (and their families) attend New Student and Family Orientation prior to their first semester. The transition process continues when students arrive and participate in Weeks of Welcome.

NSFP’s family programming includes Carolina Family Weekend, the Family Football Experience, Spring Family Day, communications through the UNC Family Experience portal, and family engagement opportunities, including the Carolina Parents Council.

NSFP provides paid student leadership opportunities across four student teams, including Orientation Leaders, the WOW Board, Project Coordinators, and Undergraduate Fellows.

Student Affairs

Henry Owl Building
230 East Cameron Avenue
(919) 966-4045
studentaffairs@unc.edu

Student Affairs (https://studentaffairs.unc.edu) fosters the learning and development, health and well-being, campus and community engagement, and sense of belonging of our more than 31,000 undergraduate, graduate, and professional students at Carolina. Our resources and programs are designed to support students’ retention, persistence, and success, helping them become responsible citizens and leaders on our campus, as well as in our local and global communities. Student Affairs comprises 18 departments and employs more than 300 full- and part-time staff and more than 1,300 students in myriad roles.

Student Affairs provides resources, programs, and services that facilitate students’ learning beyond the classroom. We believe in a holistic approach to student development and aim to interconnect students’ academic experiences with leadership, civic engagement, career readiness, innovation, and service learning, and other opportunities that are hallmarks of a UNC–Chapel Hill education. We promote welcoming, respectful, and intentionally inviting environments that elevate the well-being of individuals and our community and seek to extend our Carolina culture of compassion and care, on campus and beyond.

Student Dining Services

Carolina Dining Services
(800) UNC-MEAL
36 Lenoir Drive, Chapel Hill, N.C. 27599

Carolina Dining Services (https://dining.unc.edu/) offers several meal plans that offer the convenience and value of purchasing meals on campus ahead of time. Meal purchases can be made with the UNC One Card using a meal plan, Dining Flex, à la carte, expense, or cash. To find out more about acquiring a UNC One Card, visit the One Card Office website (https://onecard.unc.edu/) or the UNC One Card office on the third floor of UNC Student Stores.

Students can use their meal plans at several of the campus all-you-care-to-eat dining facilities, as well as at retail locations, food trucks, for on-campus delivery, and more. On North Campus, Top of Lenoir is an award-winning facility with an array of menu choices. On South Campus, the Rams Head Dining Hall is a 30,000 square foot state-of-the-art facility that includes several restaurants and all-you-care-to-eat venues.

Student Government

The by-laws of the Board of Trustees of the University invest in the chancellor of the University “the duty . . . to exercise full authority in the regulation of student conduct and in matters of student discipline.” At the same time the chancellor has delegated authority to exercise disciplinary and administrative functions in student life to agencies of student government. Within the context of this delegated authority and responsibility, the student body at the University has been self-governing for decades.

Student government at Carolina is more than 100 years old, and hundreds of students are involved in the various branches every year. From serving on the Board of Trustees to the appropriation, oversight, and authority of student fees, from instituting governmental service to enforcing the Honor Code, student government affects the life of every student every day.

The entire framework of student government’s activities rests on its ability to maintain the foundation of administrator-student relations. The University should serve as an advisor, not as a supervisor, to the student body. To enjoy this freedom, students at Carolina must be willing to take a certain amount of responsibility to develop their own community and community values. Student government serves to maintain this freedom and the advisory, not supervisory, relationship.

In 1876 the Honor System officially ended all vestiges of the monitorial system; in 1904 a judicial body, the University Council, was established; in 1938 the Student Legislature was established; and in 1946 a written constitution was approved. In 1968 the coeducational Honor Court was formed out of the Men’s Court and Women’s Court to hear all Honor Code cases. The Instrument of Student Judicial Governance was ratified and put into operation in 1974, was significantly revised in 2003, and then amended in 2015 and 2017.

Student government at UNC–Chapel Hill approximates the federal system of government with its three branches: an executive branch, a legislative branch, and a judicial branch.

The Executive Branch of Student Government
This group (http://execbranch.unc.edu/) serves as the official voice of the student body to the University and broader community, including the town of Chapel Hill and the state of North Carolina. Heading the executive branch is the student body president, assisted by the vice president, the president of the Graduate and Professional Student Government, student body treasurer, student body secretary, the chief of staff, and the senior advisor. As determined by and reflective of the needs of the student body, the president structures his/her cabinet and committees and makes appointments to a wide range of University committees that address those needs and other concerns as they arise during the year. These committees usually include hardship parking, elections board, University services, information technology, student life, minority affairs, first-year focus council, and public service.

Legislative Branch
Student Congress is unicameral, consisting of 41 representatives elected by the student body, with the student body president and the student body treasurer serving as nonvoting ex officio members. The speaker of the Student Congress is elected from among the 41 representatives. Graduate and professional students and on- and off-campus undergraduates are proportionally represented in the Congress.

Student Congress handles considerable legislation and, as one of its primary responsibilities, oversees the student activity fees budget and other student fee areas. Established by student and University committees before approval by the Board of Trustees, a predetermined amount of the fees paid by each student provides the source of funds for Student Congress’s annual allocation and subsequent appropriations budgets. These funds are allocated to petitioning student organizations that have received official University recognition. The student body can petition for changes in the student activities fee at any time.

Student Congress representatives are elected in the spring for one-year terms, and each member serves on one of three standing committees: finance, rules and judiciary, and student affairs. A fourth committee, ethics, is composed of senior members of the Congress.

Judicial Branch
There are two major areas that comprise the judicial branch; the first is responsible for the Instrument of Student Judicial Governance, and the second is responsible for resolving issues related to the Student Code (https://senate.unc.edu/law/).

The Honor Court hears all cases involving potential violations of the Honor Code. There are separate courts for undergraduate students, graduate students, and students in the Schools of Law, Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, and Business. The Honor Court is organized as follows:

- Office of the Student Attorneys General: The appropriate (undergraduate or graduate) student attorney general investigates all potential violations of the Honor Code. Staff members also present cases to the Honor Court and assist students accused of violating the Honor Code.
- University Hearings Board: These boards are made up of faculty, staff, and students. The University Hearings Board generally hears appeals of Honor Court cases.
- Students interested in serving on the Honor Court or the student attorney general’s staff should contact the Honor System Office at (919) 966-4084 for information about how to apply.
- Student Supreme Court: This court adjudicates all issues of student constitutional law to be decided under the Student Code. This body most closely fills the traditional judicial branch of government and consists largely of students with previous experience in student government, mediation, and/or law.

For Graduate Students
The Graduate and Professional Student Government (GPSG) (http://gpsf.unc.edu), the official representative of graduate and professional students at the University, is organized based on school, departmental, and curricular organizations. The GPSG provides communication between graduate and professional students, represents graduate and professional students both within and outside the University community, and provides structures capable of dealing with ongoing issues and concerns. It also allocates and administers the funds appropriated to it from student fees. Every duly enrolled graduate and professional student is automatically a member of the GPSG.

Transportation and Parking
Public Safety Building at 285 Manning Drive (via Paul Hardin Drive)
(919) 962-3951
Weekdays 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Transportation and Parking (https://move.unc.edu/) is an essential part of the University and is responsible for coordinating all traffic, parking, and transportation around campus.

Parking
Students at UNC–Chapel Hill who park an automobile on weekdays in University parking areas are required to obtain a parking permit. Students, excluding first years, may apply for parking permits during online registration (https://move.unc.edu/parking/student-parking/). Transportation and Parking uses virtual permits for parking on campus.

Weeknight parking is in effect Monday evenings through Friday mornings from 5 p.m. to 7:30 a.m. Student fees cover the annual permit cost (excluding first-year students). Daytime permits are honored during weeknight parking and no further action is required. Students without a daytime permit must register their license plate online (https://move.unc.edu/parking/weeknight-parking/) to receive weeknight parking access for the academic year.

Parking permit holders must park only in specific zones as indicated on their permit assignment. Please note the signs at the entrances to each lot which detail the hours of enforcement for that parking area.
Accessibility Accommodations
Students who have mobility limitations that require transportation accommodations must apply through the Transportation and Parking Accommodations Committee (https://move.unc.edu/parking/accessibility/tpace/). In accordance with the Ordinance Regulating Traffic and Parking at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (https://move.unc.edu/about/publications/parking-ordinance/), students are required to apply for and purchase the appropriate permit to park in the spaces reserved for mobility-impaired employees and students.

Vehicles found parked illegally may be cited by Transportation and Parking and subsequent violations may result in further citations, immobilization ("booting"), or towing of the vehicle. Citations may be appealed through the Transportation and Parking Appeals Office within 10 calendar days upon receipt of the citation. Citations can be appealed in person during office hours Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., online (https://move.unc.edu/account/) or by mail.

Commuter Alternative Program
The Commuter Alternative Program (https://move.unc.edu/cap/) (CAP) is designed to reward University employees and students for the use of alternative transportation (bicycling, walking, transit, or ridesharing) as their primary commute to campus. CAP is only available to off-campus students who do not have an on-campus daytime parking permit. CAP offers prizes, discounts from local merchants, and other benefits to members.

Local and Regional Transit
The University and the towns of Chapel Hill and Carrboro work together to provide the fare-free Chapel Hill Transit (http://www.townofchapelhill.org/town-hall/departments-services/transit/) system. No bus pass is needed when boarding a Chapel Hill Transit bus, and anyone can ride. Campus U and RU (Reverse U) routes run in continuous loops from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m., serving nearly every area on campus.

Commuting students can use any of the Park and Ride lots served by Chapel Hill Transit. All Park and Ride lots require a permit, which may be purchased through Transportation and Parking (https://move.unc.edu/transit/park-ride/) or through the Town of Chapel Hill (http://www.townofchapelhill.org/prlots/). In the case of an emergency, the University’s P2P Emergency Ride Back (https://move.unc.edu/p2p/on-demand/) service is available to provide transportation to the Park and Ride lots or any location within Carrboro or Chapel Hill municipal boundaries.

Regional transit to the Raleigh-Durham International Airport (RDU), Raleigh, Durham, Hillsborough and other nearby cities is available through GoTriangle. Bus service to Alamannc, and Guilford counties is also available, and all regional transit agencies provide free Park and Ride (http://move.unc.edu/transit/) lots. Get transit directions using Google Maps (https://transit.google.com) and see buses in real-time online (http://triangle.transloc.com/) or by downloading the TransLoc app. For more route information, call GoTriangle at (919) 485-RIDE or visit the GoTriangle website (https://gotriangle.org/).

Point-to-Point
Point-to-Point (http://move.unc.edu/p2p/) (P2P) offers fare-free, fixed-route service aboard the P2P Express buses, operating on a continuous loop around campus during evening hours, 7 p.m. until 4 a.m., seven nights a week when residence halls are open during fall, spring and summer semesters. Students must show their UNC One Card to board the P2P Express. After dark, on-demand services can be requested by students in areas that are not served by the P2P Express route. P2P also offers fare-free, on-demand transportation service to students with accessibility needs and students going to or from Campus Health 24 hours a day. It also offers additional services including the fixed-route P2P Shuttle serving Baity Hill, an airport shuttle to RDU for select school breaks, and more. On-demand services can be requested with the TransLoc app.

Safe Ride
Safe Ride (https://www.townofchapelhill.org/government/departments-services/transit/safe-ride-program/), operated by Chapel Hill Transit (http://chtransit.org), aims to provide increased mobility between 11 p.m. and 2:30 a.m. There are three Safe Ride bus routes operating on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights when the University is in session. They provide service between campus and many private student housing developments, as well as other off-campus destinations.

Bicycle Registration
Bicycle registration is required for bicycles on campus. The program serves as a deterrent to crime, aids in the identification of lost or stolen bicycles, and enables the University to plan for improved bicycle parking facilities around campus in the future. All students who register their bikes will receive a 50% off coupon for a U-lock from UNC Student Stores. Bicycle registration can be done online (http://move.unc.edu/bike/) or in person at the Public Safety Building. Cyclists who live off campus may join the Commuter Alternative Program.

Tar Heel Bikes
The University partners with Spin to provide the Tar Heel Bikes bikeshare program (https://move.unc.edu/bike/bikeshare/) for the Carolina community. A fleet of 100 electric assist bikes is located at bikeshare hubs across campus. These e-bikes are available for use by students, employees, and visitors, and provide a convenient and cost-effective way to get around campus and designated areas throughout Chapel Hill and Carrboro.

Share The Ride NC Rideshare Matching
Share The Ride NC (http://unc.sharetheridenc.org/) is an easy way to quickly and securely find a carpool partner. The private UNC—Chapel Hill Share The Ride NC community allows you to find friends, classmates, and coworkers going the same way you are. Share The Ride NC helps you offer or request rides for commutes, road trips and popular events. Riders choose the meeting location, days, and times they want to carpool.

Zipcar
Zipcar (http://www.zipcar.com/unc/) is a convenient car sharing service that allows students and employees to access a vehicle on demand by the hour or day. Cars are located throughout campus and can be reserved online or by phone 24 hours a day; seven days a week.

For More Information
Concerns may be addressed at the following campus telephone numbers:
- General Information (919) 962-3951
- Parking Control (919) 962-8006
- Accounts Receivable (919) 962-3097
- Parking Appeals (919) 962-3953

University Career Services
219 Hanes Hall
150 E. Cameron Avenue
(919) 962-6507
ucs@unc.edu

The mission of University Career Services (http://careers.unc.edu) (UCS) is to support the mission of the University and Student Affairs by providing personalized and innovative career education to empower student success and transformation.

Our vision is for all UNC–Chapel Hill students to create lives of purpose and prosperity in alignment with their personal goals. To that end, we partner with various campus stakeholders to provide outreach and equitable access to our services and resources. All of our strategic priorities are aligned with the Division of Student Affairs (https://studentaffairs.unc.edu/about-us/mission-and-vision/strategic-priorities/) and Carolina Next (https://carolinanext.unc.edu/initiatives/) which spell out expectations for building community, strengthening student success, enabling career development, and fostering discovery.

USC services for both undergraduate and graduate students include workshops, one-one-one career coaching meetings, full- and part-time job and internship opportunities online (Handshake (https://careers.unc.edu/students/resources/handshake/)); major and career assessments; and many print and electronic resources. Our programs include career panels and fairs, industry nights, and pre-graduate and law school exploration programs.

Services are limited to enrolled students in a UNC–Chapel Hill degree program and alumni for six months after graduation. Students in law, dentistry, and medicine and students enrolled in the M.B.A. and M.A.C. programs are served by career services in their departments, rather than by UCS.
RESOURCES: HEALTH AND WELLNESS

Accessibility Resources and Service
Accessibility Resources and Service (https://accessibility.unc.edu) (ARS) supports the University's commitment to accessibility, and seeks to meet the individual needs of applicants and current students with disabilities and medical conditions as they relate to academics, residences, dining, and co- and extra-curricular campus activities. ARS coordinates and implements appropriate reasonable accommodations including academic adjustments and provides appropriate resources and services in accordance with the American with Disabilities Act Amendments Act (ADAAA) and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act (504). Individual needs are addressed on a case-by-case basis through the provision of reasonable accommodations, allowing the University to maintain the integrity of its programs and services.

ARS works with all students including undergraduate and graduate students, full-time and part-time students, students following continuing education courses or who may be auditing, and program applicants. Prospective and existing students are invited to connect with ARS through the submission of a self-identification form (https://ars.unc.edu/students/request-forms/connect-ars/) and supporting documentation (https://ars.unc.edu/students/request-forms/documentation-guidelines-and-information-applicable-esa-accommodation/).

ARS is located in the Student Academic Services Building North (Suite 2126) between the Rams Head Center and Morrison Residence Hall. Office hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. ARS staff can be contacted by email at ars@unc.edu or telephone at (919) 962-8300 (V) (TTY-711 [NC RELAY]). More information is available on the ARS website (https://ars.unc.edu/).

Campus Health Services
Campus Health Services (http://campushealth.unc.edu) (CHS), located next to Kenan Stadium in the James A. Taylor Building, provides a broad range of health care services including primary care, orthopedics, obstetrics and gynecology, nutrition services, dermatology, travel information and immunization, and allergy management. For convenience, in-house laboratory, radiology, pharmacy, and physical therapy services also are available. CHS also provides counseling and psychological services; please see the Counseling and Psychological Services section for greater detail about services offered.

Eligibility
Any student or postdoctoral fellow who has paid the campus health fee (https://campushealth.unc.edu/charges-insurance/campus-health-fee-charges-and-payments/) for the current semester or summer session is eligible for health care at CHS. Spouses of full-time students and postdoctoral fellows can receive care at CHS.

Health Fee
Currently, the fee covers the cost of most professional services (there is no charge for office visits) provided by CHS physicians, nurse practitioners, physician's assistants, nurses, physical therapists, and registered dieticians. The health fee also provides reduced charges for prescription drugs, miscellaneous supplies, laboratory tests, X-rays, medical procedures, and specialty services. Spouses of students are eligible to receive the same services as students by paying the campus health fee at CHS and demonstrating appropriate insurance coverage.

Hours
Hours of operation vary according to the academic calendar. Hours of operation during the academic year are 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. Students are typically seen on an appointment basis from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Acute care services are provided between 8:00 p.m. and 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday during the fall and spring semesters. Weekend acute care services are considered premium services and there is an associated visit charge. Hours of operation in the summer are 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. If CHS is closed, students have access to a nurse advice line through UNC Healthlink, and there is always a CHS physician on call. Call (919) 966-2281 to verify hours of operation, schedule an appointment, or to speak with the Healthlink nurse when CHS is closed.

Immunizations
North Carolina law mandates that all new students at the University document the completion of immunization requirements (https://campushealth.unc.edu/services/immunizations/). Failure to comply may result in cancellation of registration 30 days after classes begin. Vaccines are offered at Campus Health Services at reasonable rates for students who need to complete their immunization requirement.

Mandatory Health Insurance
The University requires proof of health insurance (https://campushealth.unc.edu/charges-insurance/mandatory-student-health-insurance-hard-waiver-process/) as a condition of enrollment. The University offers a group health insurance plan, including major medical benefits to single and married students, their spouses/partners, and children.

Campus Recreation
Campus Recreation (https://campusrec.unc.edu/) offers amenities for all fitness and recreation wants, needs, and desires of the UNC population. It provides a diverse and intentional recreational program in a safe, inclusive, and accessible environment which enhances the social, mental, and physical well-being of the entire University community. Campus Recreation enjoys a unique dual reporting relationship with the Department of Exercise and Sport Science (EXSS) and its rich history and commitment to a healthy and active lifestyle, and with the Division of Student Affairs (https://studentaffairs.unc.edu/), which represents the Carolina spirit of student development and living outside the classroom.

Facilities
Campus Recreation offers a variety of facilities (https://campusrec.unc.edu/facilities/) to satisfy the wants and needs of all UNC students, faculty members, and staff. The two fitness centers, the Student Recreation Center and Rams Head Recreation Center, offer cardiovascular and weight training equipment, as well as an indoor track, locker rooms, and group fitness studios. Basketball, squash, and racquetball courts, along with equipment for check-out, can be found throughout Fetzer Hall and Woolen Gym. These facilities also feature a cycle studio, climbing walls, and multipurpose rooms that can function for practice and instruction of a variety of fitness types. Both an indoor and an outdoor pool are located near the heart of campus. North and South Campus feature recreation complexes and fields for playing basketball, volleyball, tennis, and any other sport. The Outdoor Education Center, located off Country Club Road, is also a great facility for experiencing how recreation and the outdoors can go hand-in-hand.

Intramural Sports

Intramural Sports (https://campusrec.unc.edu/programs/intramuralsports/) offers opportunities for students to compete against their peers in a friendly and structured environment.

Sport Clubs

A sport club (https://campusrec.unc.edu/programs/sport-clubs/sport-clubs-directory/) is a University-recognized student organization formed by individuals with a common interest in a sport. Its primary goal is to promote and develop interest in a particular sport and recruit new members. Clubs may be instructional, recreational, and/or competitive.

Fitness and Wellness

Fitness and Wellness (https://campusrec.unc.edu/programs/fitness/) is housed in the Student Recreation Center (SRC) and Rams Head Recreation Center (RHRC). Both facilities offer a wide variety of cardiovascular equipment, including many stationary bikes, stair climbers, treadmills, and cross-trainers/elliptical machines.

Over the years, Fitness and Counseling and Wellness Services (of Campus Health Services) have teamed together to enhance student wellness through greater collaborative programming, such as Powerfully Pink (a breast cancer awareness program), Women’s Health and Fitness Day, the Farmer’s Market, Fit Wellness into Your Day, and the Get Fit from Head to Heel Challenge.

Counseling and Psychological Services

Counseling and Psychological Services (https://caps.unc.edu/) (CAPS), a department of Campus Health Services, is located on the third floor of the James A. Taylor Building.

The CAPS staff is strongly committed to addressing the mental health needs of a diverse student body through timely access to consultation and connection to clinically appropriate services. CAPS affirms that people of every background are to be treated with respect and dignity. The professional ethics and standards of the multidisciplinary staff at CAPS set a framework for understanding how facets of identity (e.g., gender, ethnicity, race, sexual orientation, gender identity/expression, age, physical and mental abilities, religious beliefs, and socioeconomic background) impact life experience. The CAPS approach to mental health integrates physical, emotional, academic, spiritual, social, and cultural well-being. Counseling and Psychological Services include individual, couples, and group therapy, urgent consultation and crisis intervention, and medication evaluation/management. The CAPS staff consists of licensed psychologists, psychiatrists, clinical social workers, psychology practicum students, interns, and administrative support personnel.

Counseling and Psychological Services can be reached Monday through Friday from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at (919) 966-3658. CAPS invites initial evaluations without an appointment Monday through Friday from 9:00 a.m. to noon and 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. Students who have a psychological crisis should call (919) 966-3658 immediately. If the crisis occurs after hours, call Campus Health Services at (919) 966-2281.

Student Wellness Services

Student Wellness Services (http://studentwellness.unc.edu) seeks to enhance the individual and collective health of the community through a wide range of programs, services, and resources. Through partnerships with other campus departments, community agencies, student organizations, and peer mentors, we work to develop and advocate for a campus and community environment that creates, emphasizes, and supports healthy choices and positive decision making regarding health, safety, and wellness.

Student Wellness promotes wellness as a journey rather than an outcome and believes that students’ health choices, as well as the culture of the community around them, involve a dynamic and multifaceted integration of eight dimensions of wellness: physical, emotional, spiritual, social, cultural, environmental, intellectual, and financial. Using these dimensions, Student Wellness provides integrative programs and services related to a variety of health topic areas, including healthy relationships and sexual health; stress management; sleep hygiene; alcohol and other substance education, interventions, and recovery supports; and violence prevention.

Student Wellness provides these programs and services on an individual, group, and larger campus community level.

The office, located in Suite 1310 of the Student Academic Services Building (SASB) North, can be reached Monday through Friday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at (919) 962-9355.
RESOURCES: SERVICE AND LEADERSHIP

Campus Y
The Campus Y (https://campusy.unc.edu/) is an extraordinarily vibrant, student-driven organization, promoting social justice and social innovation locally, nationally, and internationally. Over more than a century and a half of service, it has incubated such essential campus institutions as Student Stores, Career Services, Intramural Athletics, and New Student Orientation. It has also provided the incubation space and resources for launching fully independent nonprofit organizations such as Nourish International, the Student Environmental Action Coalition, and the Student Coalition for Action in Literacy Education. Over the course of a typical year, approximately 2,000 UNC–Chapel Hill students channel their idealism, passion, and sweat equity into a diverse array of service and advocacy initiatives, including but not limited to public health, youth development, education, human rights, micro-finance, food security, and environmental advocacy. The Campus Y is led by the student executive board and the chairs of more than 30 committees and is supported by a professional staff of six employees. Students are encouraged to visit the Campus Y offices in the YMCA Building, adjacent to South Building, to learn about these opportunities and campus, community, youth, and global social justice issues.

Carolina Center for Public Service
Overview
The Carolina Center for Public Service (https://ccps.unc.edu/) (CCPS) engages and supports the faculty, students and staff of UNC–Chapel Hill in meeting the needs of North Carolina and beyond. The center strengthens the University's public service commitment by promoting scholarship and service that are responsive to the concerns of the state and contribute to the common good.

How to Get Involved
APPLES Service-Learning is a student-led program that transforms educational experiences by connecting academic learning and public service. As part of APPLES students can:

• sign up for the Service-Learning Initiative (SLI) to learn more about local organizations and how to get involved in service. SLI: Launch is available for incoming first-year students in the fall and SLI: Engage is an opportunity for any other Carolina student to get involved in the spring.
• register for an APPLES Service-Learning course on Connect Carolina to complete 30 hours of service as part of an academic course. This might also fulfill the Experiential Education/High-Impact Experience requirement.
• apply for a spring or summer internship to gain valuable professional experience while receiving a stipend and academic course credit
• explore communities beyond Chapel Hill on an alternative spring break trip or expedition and serve alongside a team of peers
• implement a project with a social innovation fellowship. Fellows receive funding, mentorship, and academic credit to help ideas come to life.

For any inquiries about APPLES, email apples@unc.edu.
(apples@unc.edu)

The Buckley Public Service Scholars (BPSS) program provides a framework for Carolina undergraduate students committed to making a positive impact through service. Students can register for the BPSS program at the beginning of the fall and spring semesters by visiting the website (https://ccps.unc.edu/bpss/). BPSS strengthens the culture of service and engagement at Carolina by:

• challenging students to increase the breadth and depth of their involvement in North Carolina communities and beyond
• fostering connections between the University, its students and the community
• promoting student participation in varying dimensions of public service: direct, organizational, and policy
• developing students’ capacity for engaging in their communities in meaningful ways

For any inquiries about BPSS, email bpss@unc.edu. (bpss@unc.edu)

The center offers various competitive opportunities for undergraduate and graduate students to further their involvement in public service and community engagement, including:

• Community Engaged Fellowships for returning graduate and professional students
• Community Service Scholarships for undergraduate students
• Projects for Peace for undergraduate students
• MacDonald Community Fellowships for undergraduate students with a strong connection to a community partner

For any inquiries, contact ccps@unc.edu.

To stay informed about the many different public service opportunities at Carolina, subscribe to the center's biweekly Public Service News listserv (https://ccps.unc.edu/subscribe-to-the-public-service-news/).
POLICIES AND PROCEDURES

The University provides a list of campuswide official policies (http://policies.unc.edu). The policies and procedures in this section of the catalog include information about course credit; registration and enrollment; attendance, grading, and examination; academic standing, transcripts; and other important information.

Regulations and Requirements for Undergraduate Students

Students are responsible for observing the procedures, regulations, and requirements of the University as they are set forth here and in other official University publications. This section describes many of the requirements and regulations that apply to undergraduates, but it is not a complete list of all such regulations and requirements. Unless otherwise stated, the regulations described in this section will govern the academic progress of students from their first year in the General College through their final semester in the College of Arts and Sciences or one of the undergraduate professional schools. The staff of the University will gladly provide students with detailed information concerning their academic program or academic problems, but this does not relieve any student of individual responsibility for meeting the University’s requirements and observing University regulations.

Regulations and Requirements for Graduate Students

The Graduate School Handbook contains most of the policies and procedures of The Graduate School at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Students should become familiar with the material pertaining to their degree programs, and, together with their faculty advisors, make certain that the chosen program of study complies with all policies.

If University policies change during the academic year, those changes will appear here.
CREDIT AND EVALUATION

Calculation of Transferred Semesters Based on the Number of Transferred Credit Hours

Several academic procedures, including the determination of academic eligibility, depend on the tally of semesters that students have completed. When credit hours are transferred, a calculation must be made as to the number of semesters the student is regarded as having used up. This calculation is based on the number of credit hours accepted by UNC–Chapel Hill for transfer, not on the number of semesters in which the student was enrolled at other colleges. Excluded from this calculation are transfer hours awarded for courses taken concurrent with high school.

Students are regarded as having used up one semester for every full multiple of 15.0 semester credit hours accepted for transfer. When credits are transferred from a college that operates on the quarter-term system, one quarter-term credit hour equals two-thirds of a semester credit hour.

See “Transfer Candidates” in the “Undergraduate Admissions (p. 21)” section of the Catalog for additional information.

The same formula is applied to credit hours that a student earns while enrolled in a part-time program of study at UNC–Chapel Hill, with 90 hours regarded as six semesters and 105 hours regarded as seven semesters. Note: Hours earned in any UNC–Chapel Hill summer term are not included in this formula.

The formula also applies to transfer credit hours awarded for any courses taken at other institutions during a fall or spring semester (but not during summer terms) after a student matriculates at UNC–Chapel Hill.

Credit by College Board Advanced Placement, International Baccalaureate, or SAT Subject Examinations

Students who meet UNC–Chapel Hill standards on certain approved College Board Advanced Placement examinations, examinations of the International Baccalaureate Program, certain SAT Subject Tests (e.g., foreign language), and other tests as listed below, may receive academic credit for comparable University coursework. Each year the Office of Undergraduate Admissions publishes (https://admissions.unc.edu/credit/credit/test-and-placement-credit/) the minimum scores necessary for the awarding of course credit (also listed below for AP and IB exams); however, final authority for awarding this placement credit lies with the chair of the department or curriculum in which credit is to be received. Minimum scores for placement may change from year to year. Regulations for credit in the year in which the student began study at UNC–Chapel Hill as a full-time student determine the standards that apply, not the year in which the student took the examination. Such credit will not be contingent upon the completion of further work in the subject unless specified by an academic department.

By-Examination (BE) credit awarded based on a student’s scores on the Advanced Placement, International Baccalaureate, SAT Subject Tests, other tests as listed below, or departmental examinations may be used to fulfill General Education requirements. For students admitted as new first-year or transfer students beginning in fall 2009 or later, the following limitations apply to the use of By-Examination (BE) credit in a major or minor:

- No more than two courses (six to eight credit hours) of BE credit may be used as part of the major core.
- No more than one BE credit course (three to four credit hours) may be used as part of a minor.

Students who wish to enroll in a course for which they have By-Examination credit should discuss their decision with an academic advisor. In the event that a student takes a course for which Advanced Placement, International Baccalaureate, SAT Subject Test, or other tests as listed below, credit is awarded, the By-Examination credit will be forfeited when the course is completed.

| Credit by Departmental Examination | Enrolled students who, through individual study or experience, have gained knowledge of the content of undergraduate courses offered by the | University may, with the approval of the relevant department and school or college, receive credit (without grade) for such courses by special examination. The student must receive the approval of the department and college/school at least 30 days before the examination is taken, and the examination must be taken before the beginning of the last semester or full summer session before the student’s graduation.

Policy on Credit for Internships—The College of Arts & Sciences

No internship automatically earns academic credit. Students who want academic credit for an internship should contact the director of undergraduate studies in a relevant academic department or curriculum (p. 1190) before beginning the internship and must complete an internship course in that academic unit. Not all departments and curricula offer internship courses.

Internships may not be used to meet the high impact (HI) or experiential education (EE) Gen Ed requirements unless the student earns academic credit for the internship through a department or curriculum. A student must enroll in a course that has been approved as meeting the High Impact or EE requirement in order for an internship to fulfill that requirement.

Students who must earn academic credit as a condition of doing the internship—and who cannot get credit through an academic department or curriculum—should contact a counselor at University Career Services for possible credit in SPCL 493 before beginning the internship. The student must write a statement describing his or her learning objectives and a paper reflecting on the experience. SPCL 493 is a one-credit, Pass/Fail course that does not count toward any graduation requirements.

Modes of Instruction (College of Arts & Sciences)

The University provides five (5) modes of instruction for undergraduate courses. These include four (4) modes that incorporate remote elements. Since the student learning outcomes are consistent across instruction modes, a course fulfills the same degree requirements regardless of the instruction mode.

Course Delivery Options

Individual classes may have unique characteristics that do not align exactly with the course’s mode; however, the following descriptions of each mode provide an overview of the instructional format.

In Person (IP)

- Students are expected to attend all scheduled course meetings and exam times (including the final exam) in person throughout the semester.
- In some courses, selected content may be delivered remotely, and selected course meetings may be remote.

In Person and Remote (IR)

- Students are expected to attend all scheduled course meetings and exam times throughout the semester. The course will have regular synchronous sessions where some students are in person and some students are remote.
- Many students will attend class in person and may be asked to take exams (including the final exam) in person.

Remote Synchronous (RS)

- All instruction will be remote.
- No in-person attendance will be required.

Remote Mostly Asynchronous (RM)

- All instruction will be remote.
- Students are expected to attend all scheduled course meetings and exam times (including the final exam) via Zoom, Teams, or a similar platform.
- Most class sessions, activities, and/or exams will be asynchronous and self-paced within defined timeframes; students will be expected to meet deadlines throughout the semester.
- No in-person attendance will be required.

Remote Asynchronous (RA)

- All instruction will be remote.
- All class sessions, activities, and/or exams (including the final exam) will be asynchronous and self-paced within defined timeframes; students will be expected to meet deadlines throughout the semester.
- No in-person or synchronous session attendance will be required.

The College of Arts & Sciences is committed to providing in-person, residential instruction as the primary experience for undergraduate students. However, there are some specific situations when remote student learning may be beneficial or necessary. The college dean, in consultation with the provost, will establish guidelines on both the types of courses that can be offered and the specific situations when courses can be offered in a remote format (modes 2–5). In addition, senior associate deans, in consultation with the dean of the college, will establish guidelines on both the types of courses that can be offered and the specific situations when courses can be offered in a remote format (modes 2–5). They will also set limits on how many and in which cases remote classes can be offered every semester. Instructors will need approval from their department chair to offer remote classes (modes 2–5).

For more information, see UPM #31 (https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/university-policy-memorandums/upm-31-instructional-modes/).

Global Language Placement Credit For General Education Purposes:

Students may complete their General Education global language requirement through one of the below means:
• Completion of a level 3 or higher language course at UNC approved for the global language requirement.
• Verified completion of two or more years of secondary education primarily taught in a language other than English.
• Verified completion of two or more semesters of higher education (defined as the equivalent of 24 eligible for transfer credit hours) primarily taught in a language other than English.
• Completion of a UNC language placement test in the language with a placement beyond level 3.
• Non-UNC language exam scores (including AP, IB, and others) submitted to UNC which are approved as credit for level 3 or above.
• Transfer credit for a language course approved as level 3 or above.
• Credit for languages not currently taught at UNC will articulate as GENR 203 (level 3) which meets the global language General Education requirement.
• Placement (PL) credit without hours for level 3 (GENR 203) of a language not currently taught at UNC obtained through the language proficiency verification process detailed on the UNC Language Placement website. Every effort is made to verify proficiency in any language, but UNC cannot guarantee that an appropriate placement test or language expert will be available for proficiency verification in all languages.

For the purposes of the above policy, "language other than English" includes languages regardless of country of origin, including sign languages and other languages that do not include a written form. Institutions primarily taught in a language other than English do not need to be located outside the United States to qualify under this policy.

For Continuing a Language Taught at UNC:

Experiential Speakers of a Global Language
Enrolled students who have learned a language currently offered at UNC–Chapel Hill by experience (i.e., having grown up speaking another language in the home or having lived several years in another country) and who are conversant and literate in that language and in English, may take a placement test in that language for placement (PL) only and not for credit hours. This placement will determine the student's next UNC course in the language.

Native Speakers of a Global Language
For academic purposes, a native speaker is a student raised in a country outside the United States and formally educated through all or most of high school in a language other than English. Native speakers cannot use By-Examination (BE) credit in their native language to reduce the requirements for a major in that language and will not receive credit for levels 1 through 4 of their native language(s). However, upon recommendation of the appropriate language department, they may receive credit for courses taken at UNC–Chapel Hill beyond level 4 if those courses are heavily based on literature, film, culture, or other content. Native speakers of languages other than English may use the above listed options to satisfy their General Education global language requirement. Native speakers who wish to pursue placement (PL) in their language should follow the appropriate department or General Education process on the Language Placement website.

Hours of Credit
Work is valued and credited toward degrees by semester hours, one such hour usually being awarded for one hour of classroom or direct faculty instruction and a minimum of two hours out of class student work each week. One hour of credit is usually awarded for each three hours of laboratory or field work or work in studio art.

For more information on the University’s course numbering system, see UPM #4 (http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/university-policy-memorandums/upm-4-standard-course-numbering-system/).

For the definition of a credit hour, see UPM #29 (http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/university-policy-memorandums/upm-29-definition-of-a-credit-hour/).

Independent Studies for Credit
The University offers independent study experiences for undergraduate students. Such courses, including directed readings, internships/ practica, mentored undergraduate research, and senior honors thesis courses for an individual student, are offered for academic credit through departments and curricula. Twelve hours of graded independent study credit may be counted toward graduation (excluding six hours of senior honors thesis credit). No more than 12 hours may be taken in any one semester, with the exception of students completing a full-time teaching internship program in the School of Education and other approved practicum/internship programs in the professional schools. Students may participate in formalized programs, or they may make individual learning contracts for work under the supervision of a member of the permanent faculty at the department/curriculum level. For information about independent study courses in their majors, students should consult the director of undergraduate studies or independent study coordinator in their major department or curriculum. Students, in consultation with the faculty member, must complete a learning contract and have it approved by the director of undergraduate studies (or designee). Registration for an independent study course must be completed after the learning contract has been approved and no later than the last day of "late registration" (the end of the second week of classes in fall or spring semester or the equivalent date in each summer session). A template (http://registrar.unc.edu/files/2014/02/Template-Adapted-for-Use-in-the-College-of-Arts-and-Sciences.pdf) for such a learning contract is available online. Students are strongly encouraged to begin this process early, well before the beginning of the semester.

For more information, see UPM #30 (https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/university-policy-memorandums/independent-study-policy/).

This policy is maintained by the College of Arts and Sciences and Educational Policy Committee. Last revised November 28, 2017. See also Resolution 2012-12 (http://faccoun.unc.edu/files/2011/03/Res2012-12OnIndependentStudyFinal.pdf) and Resolution 2013-6 (http://faccoun.unc.edu/files/2011/03/Res2013-06OnIndependentStudyTFReportFinal.pdf).

Semester Schedule
UNC–Chapel Hill academic operations are on a semester calendar, primarily divided into the fall and spring semesters with standard course meetings within a 17-week session. Summer School offers two sessions of five weeks each, a three-week Maymester, and other short courses with various beginning and ending dates. For specific dates, see the University’s Academic Calendar (https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-calendar/).
REGISTRATION, ENROLLMENT, AND WITHDRAWAL

Registration

General Policies
UNC-Chapel Hill students use the ConnectCarolina Student Center to register for courses. Students should refer to the Registration Guide (http://registrar.unc.edu/guide/) on the Office of the University Registrar’s website for instructions regarding registration.

Students who register during the billing period must pay tuition and fees, or give notice of anticipated aid, to the Office of Student Accounts and University Receivables by the published tuition and fees due date or their schedule will be cancelled and all their classes dropped before the beginning of classes. Students who register after the billing period must pay estimated tuition and fees or give notice of anticipated aid before they can register for that semester. Students who register after the date designated for official registration must pay an additional fee of $20.00 for late registration. If the delay results from circumstances clearly beyond the student’s control, an appeal may be made in writing to the registrar. The appeal must show sufficient justification for the delay and has to be approved by the dean of the school in which the student is enrolled. In the College of Arts and Sciences, dean’s office approval is granted by the Associate Dean for Academic Advising or their designee. Students should refer questions to the Academic Advising Program.

North Carolina law requires that no person shall attend a college or university in North Carolina without presenting a certificate of immunization to the college or university on or before the first day of matriculation. This certificate indicates that the student has received immunizations required by law. New students at UNC-Chapel Hill must provide the director of Campus Health Services with an immunization record certified by a physician. Students who fail to present the required certificate of immunization within 30 days of enrollment will be withdrawn from the University. Their enrollment will not be reinstated until they have provided a certificate of immunization to Campus Health Services.

Registration for credit for any course at the start of the semester is limited to the first five days of classes unless a late registration is approved by the course instructor and the student’s dean or academic advisor. Any student who has not registered for courses after the primary billing date will be restricted from accessing the registration system for that term and will be required to submit a prepayment. For more information, please see “Course Schedule Changes” below.

Registration Advising for First-Year Students and Sophomores
All first-year students and sophomores are assigned a primary academic advisor in the Academic Advising Program in the College of Arts and Sciences but may see any advisor as appropriate. Advisors’ names and office locations (http://advising.unc.edu/see-an-advisor/) are posted on the web. First-year students must meet with an advisor for registration advising at least once during their first year before registering for their third semester on campus; an online module to assist students with registration, policies, and procedures is also available. All students are strongly encouraged to review their Tar Heel Tracker each semester and regularly meet with an advisor to ensure that they remain on track to graduate.

Advisors will answer students’ questions and review their tentative course selections to help students achieve appropriate academic progress. In subsequent semesters, students are encouraged to discuss academic progress with their academic advisor. Students should follow instructions received from the Office of the University Registrar, which may be accessed by logging on to ConnectCarolina.

Registration Advising for Juniors and Seniors
Juniors and seniors receive academic advising during registration periods according to the directives set out by their college/professional school and major. Juniors who have not yet declared a major must meet with an advisor in the Academic Advising Program before registration.

The department or curriculum in which the student’s primary major is housed determines the procedures juniors and seniors must follow for registration. In some cases, the student must meet with a faculty advisor in the department or curriculum of the primary major before being able to register each semester. These advisors answer questions specific to the major and about graduate and career opportunities in the field.

Students admitted to a professional school will receive advising and assistance on all academic matters from an advisor in their school.

Academic Level (Class Standing)
All students who begin their undergraduate careers at UNC-Chapel Hill are considered first-year students for the first and second semesters. In their third semester and thereafter, a student’s classification (sophomore, junior, senior) is determined by the cumulative number of credit hours earned:

- • 1–29 credit hours earned: first-year student
- • 30–59 credit hours earned: sophomore
- • 60–89 credit hours earned: junior
- • 90 + credit hours earned: senior

Registration Priority
A student’s first available date for registration (registration priority) is based on the number of earned credit hours (excluding in progress credits and test credits) and the number of semesters completed.

By policy of the Faculty Council (Resolution 2007–3), the University limits students to eight semesters of full-time study. Transfer students who transfer in the UNC-Chapel Hill equivalent of two or more semesters (see “Calculation of Transferred Semesters Based on the Number of Transfer Hours”) may enroll in up to 10 total semesters (Resolution 2017-1 (https://facultygov.unc.edu/files/2017/01/Res201701OnMultipleAreasofStudy.pdf)). To help ensure graduation within the eight-semester limit, students’ registration priority will include the number of semesters completed in the calculation.

Terms in residence are tallied in three ways:

1. UNC-Chapel Hill full-time enrollment
   Regardless of the number of credit hours, any fall or spring semester of enrollment in UNC-Chapel Hill courses (including UNC-Chapel Hill study abroad courses, but excluding Carolina Courses Online) counts as one semester of full-time study, unless the student is enrolled as a part-time student through Part-Time Classroom Studies. (Summer sessions at UNC-Chapel Hill do not count as semesters.)

2. UNC-Chapel Hill part-time enrollment
Each full multiple of 15 cumulative credit hours earned at UNC–Chapel Hill in fall or spring terms (not summer terms) counts as one semester of full-time study for any student enrolled as a part-time student through Part-Time Classroom Studies.

3. Transfer credits awarded for courses taken at other colleges
   Each full multiple of 15 cumulative transfer-credit hours counts as one semester of full-time study. Excluded from this calculation are transfer hours awarded for courses taken either concurrent with high school or during any summer term after the student has matriculated at UNC–Chapel Hill.

Students may refer further questions to the Academic Advising Program (if the student is in the College of Arts and Sciences) or to their respective dean's office.

Repeating Course Enrollments
A student who proceeds with enrollment in a course not designated as repeatable can only earn credit once toward the fulfillment of the University’s minimum undergraduate degree requirement. The credit is earned from the course with the highest passing grade or, if grades are the same, the latter attempt. The grades of all attempts of the course, however, are computed in the student’s cumulative grade point average.

Certain University courses (e.g., applied music, special studies, undergraduate research, etc.) may be taken more than once for credit and are so designated in the course catalog as repeatable. A particular physical education activity (PHYA) course may be taken more than once, so long as a different level of the same course (beginning, intermediate, and advanced) is taken during each separate enrollment. PHYA courses do not award academic credit hours toward an undergraduate degree, but the grade is factored into the cumulative grade point average.

Students may enroll in no more than one lifetime fitness (LFIT) course, and only one LFIT course will count toward academic credit hours for an undergraduate degree.

For the purposes of receiving financial aid, hours for repeated courses will only be considered a part of the total upon which awards are based if:

1. the student is repeating a course previously failed, or
2. the course is the first repeat of a prior course in which a passing grade (D or higher) was received.

Cancellation of Enrollment
A cancellation of enrollment is, in effect, the same as a student not registering. Classes are not reflected on the student’s transcript, and no tuition and fees are charged. If a student registered for classes a cancellation is only applicable if there no documentation of student attendance or for the following administrative reasons. A registration cancellation will be processed for any student who has a “hold” on the tuition and fees due date for each term, and students will be notified. A cancellation will be processed if a student is not cleared financially; is not academically eligible to continue in school; or shows a cashier’s hold, Office of Undergraduate Admissions hold, dean’s office hold, or Campus Health Services cancellation hold. In some cases, a student may request to cancel his or her registration for personal reasons and may do so by following instructions (http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/withdrawals-cancellations/) listed on the Office of the University Registrar’s website. To request a cancellation after classes begin, however, students must process the cancellation through their academic advising dean’s office. Students may refer further questions to the Academic Advising Program (if the student is in the College of Arts and Sciences) or to their respective dean's office. For more information also see the sections on withdrawing from the University.

Administrative Changes to Course Registration
Students have the responsibility to maintain the accuracy of their course schedule. A department or curriculum in the College of Arts and Sciences has the option to drop a course from a student’s registration if the student fails to attend both of the first two class meetings (or the first class meeting if the course meets only once each week). The appropriate dean’s office will be responsible for informing departments of students who cannot attend the first two class meetings because of illness or other reasons approved by a dean. Students should never presume that an instructor or department/curriculum will systematically drop classes from the student’s schedule. However, if such an action is taken by a department/curriculum, the registration openings resulting from these drops will be offered to other students seeking enrollment in the courses during the official add period (first five days of classes) or thereaf ter, as determined by the instructor of the class or by the department, curriculum, or school.

Departments/curricula can drop students’ courses using the computerized registration system prior to the last day to reduce a course load for financial credit. To effect such a drop after that date but before the end of the eighth week, a student can drop the course through ConnectCarolina. (See “Course Schedule Changes” below.) Students who have applied for graduation and who have requested an academic underload must have that request approved to receive financial credit for reducing their course load.

Auditing Courses
To audit a class, registered students and persons not registered must obtain a registration/drop/add form from the teaching department offering the class. Permission from the class instructor and the department chair is required and should be indicated on the form with a written signature. This procedure applies to fall, spring, and both summer terms.

Requests to audit a class may be submitted only after the end of the official registration period (last day for students to add a class or late register) when it has been determined that there is still space available in the class. This date can be found on the University Registrar’s Calendar (http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-calendar/) for the specific term.

Auditing classes is permitted only in lecture-based courses and never in courses that include laboratories or performances. Auditing is not permitted in courses that focus on the development of written or oral communication skills or that rely heavily on class participation. Auditing is not permitted in independent studies courses, internships, special topics, directed readings, or similar courses. Auditing is also not permitted in classes that are offered primarily online. Students may not audit courses offered through Digital and Lifelong Learning (Part-Time Classroom Studies, Carolina Courses Online, Self-Paced Courses, or tutorial programs) or courses preparing students for credit by examination.

Students auditing a course do not write papers, take quizzes or examinations, or request review of their work, and do not participate in class discussions unless otherwise directed by the course instructor. Students who audit a course may not subsequently receive course credit for that course. Additional information on the University’s policy on auditing (http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/university-policy-memorandums/upm-9-auditing-courses/) is available online.

Students officially registered for other classes in the same term may audit a class without paying a fee. Persons not registered for classes must pay a $20.00 fee per class to the Office of Student Accounts and University Receivables, then bring the permission and receipt to the Office of the University Registrar to complete the process. Payments will only be accepted after the end of the official registration period. Effective fall 2017, individuals age 65 or older may audit a class without paying a fee.

If requested, a copy of the registration transaction will be given to the student to provide to the class instructor at the beginning of the term.

Changes in Fall and Spring Semester Schedules

Continuous Course Enrollment: Foundations English Composition and Foreign Language Requirements

Effective in fall 2012, students admitted as first-year or as transfer students are required to complete ENGL 105/ENGL 105I (ENGL 100 and ENGL 105/ENGL 105I, if applicable) during their first year, and they must maintain continuous enrollment in Foundations global language courses until they have completed this requirement. Students are not permitted to drop ENGL 100, ENGL 105/ENGL 105I, or global language levels 1 through 3 being used to fulfill the Foundations requirement after the second week of the semester, unless approved by a dean in the Academic Advising Program. Such approval will be for exceptional circumstances only. Students should not stop attending English composition and rhetoric and Foundation global language courses without speaking with a dean in the Academic Advising Program.

Course Schedule Changes

Insofar as possible, changes in course registration schedules should be made during the first five days of classes. During this time, students may add courses using the online registration system. During days six through ten of classes, students must obtain permission to register or make additions to their schedule from the course instructor; if approved, the academic department, curriculum, or school will add the student through the computerized registration system. After the tenth day of classes, if students wish to register or make additions to their schedule, they must obtain a registration/drop/add form from their academic advisor, the concerned department, or their professional school and must obtain the signatures of both their instructor and their school dean (or dean’s designee). For students in the General College and the College of Arts and Sciences, only the associate dean for advising (or dean’s designee) has this authority. After the tenth day of classes, deans (or deans’ designees) will approve only those registrations or course additions that have first been approved by the instructor. Approval of additions to a student’s schedule during this period is at the deans’ (or the deans’ designees’) discretion.

Course Schedule Changes during Weeks One and Two

During the first two weeks of classes, students may drop a course using the online registration system, but they are responsible for ensuring that their schedules do not fall below the minimum 12 academic hours required for full-time registration.

Course Schedule Changes during Weeks Three through Eight

When a course is dropped between the second and eighth week of classes, a notation of WC (withdrawal by choice) shall be recorded and used internally for tracking and reporting purposes. For external purposes, the WC notation is equivalent to the W grade. Once declared, a WC notation cannot be rescinded except when a student withdraws from an entire semester due to extenuating circumstances. All first-year, first-time students entering the University in fall 2014 or thereafter are allowed to accumulate no more than 16 hours of WC notations during their undergraduate career.

Different drop-add procedures apply to first-year students who entered the University as degree-seeking students prior to fall 2014, along with sophomore and junior transfer students who entered in fall 2014, and junior transfer students who enter in fall 2015. Details on the previous policy (http://registrar.unc.edu/guide/registration-policies/drop-add-procedures/rules-course-drops/) can be found on the University Registrar’s website.

Course Schedule Changes after the Eighth Week of Classes: The Appeal Process

After the eighth week of classes, students must petition to drop courses through the dean’s office of the school in which they are enrolled. For students in the General College and the College of Arts and Sciences, the associate dean for advising (or designee) has this authority.

To drop a course after the eighth week of classes, students must complete and submit an appeal to the appeals committee of their college or school. In the General College and the College of Arts and Sciences, an appeals committee meets weekly (except the week of July 4 and Christmas). Possible legitimate reasons for requesting a course drop after the eighth week of classes include serious illness, personal or family problems, financial problems requiring employment after the start of the semester, or other compelling and extenuating circumstances that prevent students from meeting their academic responsibilities.

Students must first discuss their reasons for requesting a late course drop with an academic advisor or their academic dean. The advisor or dean will explain the process for an appeal and refer the student to the online information and link to the online appeal form. The appeal must include a statement from the student and pertinent documentation that provides compelling support for the appeal. The student must submit all documents online to the office of the associate dean for advising in the Academic Advising Program of the College of Arts and Sciences and General College. Submission of an appeal does not ensure that the request will be granted, and students must continue to attend classes and complete all assignments until informed of the committee’s decision. If a course drop is approved, the registration/drop/add form is processed through the Office of the University Registrar.

Students enrolled in professional schools should acquaint themselves with the appropriate appeals procedures in their schools.

The notation of W (withdrawn) is entered in the grade column of academic transcripts if students are permitted by their school to drop a course after the eighth week of classes or proportional equivalent for summer terms and other nonstandard enrollment periods. This notation is automatically entered unless the student’s academic dean specifies otherwise.

Interinstitutional Registration

A student regularly enrolled in a degree program at the University may enroll by interinstitutional registration for a course at Duke University, North Carolina Central University, North Carolina State University, the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, or the University of North Carolina at Greensboro under the following conditions:

- Space must be available in the course.
- The student’s advisor as well as their academic advising dean’s office must certify
  a. that the course is appropriate for the student’s degree program, and
  b. that an equivalent course is not available at this university during the same term.
- Enrollment in interinstitutional registration is limited to one interinstitutional course per regular term, provided that the student is registered for the balance of her or his full-time load at UNC—Chapel Hill. All enrollment transactions must be processed by the Office of the University Registrar.
- A student will be billed by his or her home institution for all the courses taken (including interinstitutional courses) at the prevailing tuition rate. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will receive no fees from an interinstitutional student taking courses at this campus unless there is a special fee associated with a particular course. In such a case, the student must pay the fee.
- The last day for a student to submit an interinstitutional request to the Office of the University Registrar will be the last day to add a course without departmental approval, according to the registrar’s calendar. If a student is interested in a course that begins after this deadline, due to differing university schedules, or separate modules that the course is being offered in, the deadline will be the fifth day after the start of that class. Start dates will be verified with the school offering the course.
- Students must comply with the academic calendar of their home institution for all dates, such as deadlines for adding and dropping courses.
- A student taking a course by interinstitutional registration will be graded in the course in accordance with the grading system of the institution where the course is taken, and grades will be converted in accordance with the grading system of the home institution. The transcript will identify the institution where the course was taken in the space where the descriptive course title is normally shown.

Additional information (http://registrar.unc.edu/guide/special-enrollments/inter-institutional-programs/), procedural instructions, and forms are available at the Office of the University Registrar’s website.

Academic Course Load

Fall and Spring Semesters

To meet the minimum graduation requirement of 120 academic hours within the eight-semester limit, students should average 15 hours each semester. However, four-hour foreign language courses and four-hour laboratory science courses often account for course loads of 16 to 18 hours. Students may not enroll in more than 18 academic hours unless they have earned a 3.000 grade point average in the preceding regular semester and have a cumulative 2.500 grade point average. Exceptions require the approval of the student’s dean. With approval of their dean, seniors meeting graduation requirements during their final semester in residence may enroll in up to 21 academic hours if they have a cumulative and preceding semester grade point average of 2.000. In the College of Arts and Sciences, dean’s office approval is granted by the Associate Dean for Academic Advising or their designee. Students should refer questions to the Academic Advising Program.

The minimum course load for a single semester is 12 academic hours. Students may not go below the 12-academic-hour minimum without permission of their dean. All students should discuss semester enrollment of fewer than 15 academic hours with their advisor because such enrollments may affect academic eligibility and the ability to complete all degree requirements in the required eight semesters.

The approved maximum course load for students in a part-time program is eight credit hours in a fall, spring, or summer term.

Summer School

The summer term begins with the first day of Maymester and continues through the last day of the Summer Session II. Administered by Summer School, summer courses are offered in two sessions (Summer Session I and Summer Session II), with a Maymester period overlapping the first three weeks of Summer Session I. For UNC–Chapel Hill students, credit hours and grades count the same as in fall or spring terms. For visiting students, transfer of grades or credit is determined by their home institution.

The typical full course load is two courses, usually six credit hours. However, effective Summer 2021, students may enroll in up to nine credit hours each in Summer Session I and in Summer Session II. It is recommended that, if students enroll in a Maymester course, they not enroll in a second Maymester or Summer Session I class.

Pass/Low Pass/Fail Option

The Pass/Low Pass/Fail (PS/LP/F) option provides undergraduate students an opportunity to explore areas of interest without penalty to their overall GPA. Courses declared on a PS/LP/F basis do not count towards a student’s GPA, unless the course is failed, but do count towards credit hours for graduation and Satisfactory Academic Progress and Eligibility completion rates. Students who declare a course PS/F will receive:

- the notation of PS (pass) when a letter grade of A through C is earned,
- the notation of LP (low pass) when a letter grade of C-, D+, or D is earned,
- and a grade of F when the course is failed.

Low Pass (LP)

- Low passing grade for a course using PS/LP/F grading, when an undergraduate student would have earned a letter grade of C, D+, or D. Effective special grading accommodation for fall 2020, spring 2021, and later approved as a permanent grade.
- For undergraduate students who elect to take a class under the PS/LP/F option, the instructor must assign the regular appropriate letter grade.
- Instructors are not informed of which students have elected the PS/LP/F option.
- Grades of C, D+, or D are converted to a LP grade on the official record maintained by the Office of the University Registrar.

Pass (PS)

- Passing grade for a course using PS/LP/F grading, when an undergraduate student would have earned a letter grade of A through C. Prior to fall 2020 the PS grade was used when a student would have earned a letter grade of A through D and the LP grade was not used.
For undergraduate students who elect to take a class under the PS/LP/F option, the instructor must assign the regular appropriate letter grade.

Instructors are not informed of which students have elected the PS/LP/F option.

Grades of A through C are converted to a PS grade on the official record maintained by the Office of the University Registrar.

PS and LP notations do not impact a student’s grade point average (GPA); however, an F grade is treated in the same manner as F grades earned in any other course and therefore does impact a student’s GPA. Courses used to fulfill “Gateway,” “Prerequisite,” or “Additional Requirements” for a declared major or minor (as outlined in the Undergraduate Catalog) may not be declared as PS/LP/F. Also, students may not elect to change their major or minor for the purpose of declaring a course on a PS/LP/F basis. Understanding that exploration may also lead to interest in a particular area, students may elect to use one course completed with a grade of PS, not LP, towards major and/or minor “Core Requirements” (as outlined in the Undergraduate Catalog). Instructors are not informed when a student changes the grading basis to PS/LP/F and report earned grades to the Registrar’s Office where the grade is converted to a PS or LP. All PS/LP/F declarations are final. Once a course has been declared as PS/LP/F, students cannot reverse their decision and change the grading basis back to a letter grade.

Pass/Low Pass/Fail Declaration Procedure
To declare a course Pass/Low Pass/Fail (PS/LP/F), a student must complete the PS/LP/F Course Request Form within ConnectCarolina. Students are advised to discuss the advisability of declaring a course PS/LP/F with their assigned advisor or faculty advisor (if appropriate) before committing themselves to a formal declaration. Students considering this option are cautioned that many admissions representatives from professional schools and graduate school programs consider applicants who declare a course Pass/Low Pass/Fail as having low academic potential.

Regulations Governing the Pass/Low Pass/Fail Option
The following regulations govern the use of the Pass/Low Pass/Fail (PS/LP/F) option:

1. Students may only take one student-elected PS/LP/F course each semester.
2. No more than 23 total credit hours of PS/LP/F credit hours will be allowed in a student’s undergraduate career, with no more than 16 hours (of the 23) from student-elected PS/F classes and no more than 13 hours (of the 23) from established PS/LP/F courses.
3. The following courses may not be declared PS/LP/F:
   • Courses only offered on a PS/LP/F grading basis per the Undergraduate Course Catalog
   • Courses used to satisfy First-Year Foundations requirements
   • Courses used to satisfy General Education requirements
   • Global language courses levels 1 through 3 if the language is being used to fulfill the General Education requirement
   • Courses successfully completed for a letter grade (A–D)
   • Courses used as “Gateway,” “Prerequisite,” and/or “Additional Requirements” for declared majors and minors per the Undergraduate Course Catalog (i.e., courses not listed as “Core Requirements”)
   • Summer School courses
   • An honors seminar or honors course
   • Courses taken via interinstitutional enrollment

Tuition Guarantee Program
Effective fall 2016, undergraduate students seeking a baccalaureate degree at UNC–Chapel Hill are eligible for fixed tuition as required by the North Carolina General Statute §116-143.9 and UNC Policy 1000.17, Policy for the Tuition Guarantee Program. Further information about the Tuition Guarantee Program can be found on the website for the Office of the University Registrar.

Withdrawal
After the term start, students withdrawing from the University should submit an official withdrawal request through their ConnectCarolina Student Center to start the process (see sections on medical and academic withdrawal below) before the end of classes during a semester or summer session. Students in attendance considering withdrawal should contact their academic advising dean’s office, Campus Health Services, Counseling and Psychological Services, or both for additional information. Official term withdrawal from the University is required if a student wishes to drop all classes after a semester begins. An official withdrawal may facilitate readmission in a future term. Leaving the University without completing the official withdrawal process can result in the assignment of final class grades computed as failing in establishing grade point averages and possibly rendering a student academically ineligible. Enrolled students who do not withdraw officially will be responsible for the full tuition and fee payments associated with enrollment for the entirety of the semester.

Medical Withdrawal
If a student decides to withdraw for reasons of illness, either physical or psychological, the student should contact Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services, whether the treatment was received there or elsewhere. If a medical withdrawal is authorized, the official withdrawal will be handled through the Office of the Dean of Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services.

Administrative Withdrawal
A student who is withdrawn for disciplinary purposes must comply with the specific requirements or conditions outlined by the adjudicating body (e.g., Honor Court, Emergency Evaluation and Action Committee, etc.) prior to readmission. Unless specified by the adjudicating body, the term(s) in which disciplinary suspension is active shall not be calculated in the four academic year degree credit hour equivalency. Preclearance from the adjudicating body may be required in certain cases.

Academic Withdrawal from All Courses
If a student decides to withdraw for reasons other than health related, or if a withdrawal cannot be authorized through Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services, the student should submit an official withdrawal request through the ConnectCarolina Student Center. Grades are required from instructors once the drop deadline has passed. In determining an undergraduate student’s eligibility for readmission the following conditions apply:

- For students who officially withdraw from the University after the second week of a fall or spring semester, a grade of W is assigned to each course the students were enrolled in at the time of withdrawal.
- Students who officially withdraw from the University are assigned a semester in residence if their withdrawal is initiated before the end of classes during a fall or spring semester and if it is accompanied by the recording of six or more academic hours of F grades for that semester’s work (grades recorded after the drop deadline). This means that the F grades and no others will be computed in the semester and cumulative grade point average.
- Withdrawal from a summer session is not counted as a semester in residence. If the withdrawal is initiated after the drop deadline during a summer session, a grade of W is assigned to each course that the student is enrolled in at the time of withdrawal. The credit hours associated with the withdrawal will count as attempted but not passed hours in the determination of the student’s academic eligibility. If the student is enrolled in five or more more academic hours, the student must obtain grades from their instructors before the withdrawal can be processed; if the withdrawal is accompanied by the recording of five or more academic hours of F grades for that semester’s work the F grades will be recorded and computed in the semester and cumulative grade point average.
- Students enrolled as summer session visitors from schools outside UNC–Chapel Hill must withdraw through the Office of the Dean of Summer School.
- If a student completes an official withdrawal or is withdrawn administratively for any reason from a fall or spring semester, tuition and fees will be prorated over a period of nine weeks at a rate of one-tenth of the semester’s bill, after deducting an administrative charge. The last date for credit on a student’s financial account for withdrawal is nine weeks after registration. If a student completes an official drop from a summer class within the first three days of classes for the session, tuition and fees will be prorated.
- If a student withdraws from the University during a semester and receives financial aid funds prior to the date of withdrawal, a portion of that money will be returned to the aid program(s). The repayment will be calculated by the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid when the official withdrawal is noted within the ConnectCarolina system.

Retroactive Withdrawal

- Students may request a retroactive term withdrawal from a semester or summer session under extraordinary circumstances. Such requests must be made in writing to the appeals committee of the college or school in which the student is currently enrolled. The decision of that appeals committee is final. If the retroactive term withdrawal is approved, the effective date of this action is always the last day of classes in the term or session. No refunds are ever provided when a retroactive withdrawal from a semester or summer session is approved.

Loan Deferments and Certification/Verification of Enrollment Status

The Office of the University Registrar provides confirmation of student enrollment data to financial institutions, organizations, or agencies requiring proof of registration. Students can order an enrollment certification online through their ConnectCarolina Student Center. Additional information about ordering a certification (http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/transcripts-certifications/enrollment-certification/) is available online or by calling (919) 962-3954.
ATTENDANCE, GRADING, AND EXAMINATION

Class Attendance Policy
(Maintained by the Education Policy Committee. Resolution 2018-1

This policy applies only to University approved class absences (listed below). For final examination absences see the Policy on Final Examinations.

Regular class attendance is a student obligation. Students are responsible for all of their work, including assessments, tests, and written work, and for all class meetings. If a course instructor chooses to take attendance and sees that a student misses three or more consecutive class meetings or misses more classes than the course instructor thinks advisable, the instructor may report the facts to the student’s advisor and/or academic dean.

No right or privilege exists that permits a student to be absent from any class meetings, except for these University approved absences:

1. Authorized University activities: The University Approved Absence Office (UAASO) website (https://uaao.unc.edu/sample-page/) provides information and FAQs for students (https://uaao.unc.edu/faq-for-students/) and FAQs for faculty (https://uaao.unc.edu/sample-page/) related to University approved absences

2. Disability/religious observance/pregnancy, as required by law and approved by Accessibility Resources and Service (https://ars.unc.edu/) and/or the Equal Opportunity and Compliance Office (https://eoc.unc.edu/what-we-do/accommodations/) (EOC)

Instructors may work with students to meet attendance needs that do not fall within University approved absences. For situations when an absence is not University approved (e.g., a job interview, illness/flu, or club activity), instructors are encouraged to work directly with students to determine the best approach to missed classes and make-up assessments and assignments.

The University’s policy regarding University approved absences as well as the instructor’s course-level policies are communicated to students via the instructor’s course syllabus on the first day of class.

Students are encouraged to communicate with their instructors early about potential absences and are reminded that they are bound by the Honor Code (p. 1314) when making a request for a University approved absence.

Notification of University Approved Absences
1. Authorized University Activities: Students acting as official representatives of the University who are participating in University-sanctioned activities (e.g., student government congresses, official athletic competitions, music competitions, academic conferences, etc.) will be granted a University approved absence.

Request for approval of an absence due to participation in a University-sanctioned activity must be sent by the program sponsor or other responsible University official to the University Approved Absence Office (https://attendance.unc.edu/) which will verify the validity of the request. The program sponsor, or other responsible University official, is responsible for contacting the University Approved Absence Office (https://attendance.unc.edu/) to request a University approved absence for University-sanctioned activity, when possible at least two weeks in advance of the date(s), or as soon as possible if the date(s) occurs within the first two weeks of the semester, or within the first two days of a summer session. This policy applies to fall, spring, and summer terms. The University Approved Absence Office communicates the University approved absence to the course instructor prior to the date(s) of the scheduled absence(s). The request may be for a single activity or a series of activities, but it must include the student name and date of the event, the date and time when the student is expected to be absent, and the date and time that the student is expected to return to class.

2. Accommodations for disability/religious observance/pregnancy, as required by law:
   a. Accessibility Resources and Services verifies University approved absences for students by their office. ARS contacts those students’ instructors directly.

   b. Religious Observance: Pursuant to North Carolina General Statute 116-11(3a), students are authorized at least two University approved absence(s) per academic year for religious observance/practices required by their faith. Students who wish to request University approved absences for religious observance required by their faith should review the University’s Policy on Religious Accommodation and follow the procedure set out in that policy for requesting such absences. After an absence is approved under that policy, the University Approved Absence Office communicates the University approved absence to the course instructor(s) prior to the date(s) of the schedule absence(s).

   Students are responsible for contacting the Religious Accommodations Advisory Committee to request a University approved absence for religious observance at least two weeks in advance of the date(s), or as soon as possible if the date(s) occurs within the first two weeks of the semester. This policy applies to fall, spring, and summer terms.

   Primary holy days for religious observance are noted on a web-based interfaith calendar (http://www.interfaithcalendar.org). The Web-based calendar should not be interpreted as an exhaustive list of holy days that the University will recognize for purposes of religious accommodations.

   c. Pregnancy and Related Medical Conditions: Students who wish to request University approved absences for pregnancy and related medical conditions should review the University’s Policy on Pregnant and Parenting Students and should contact the Equal Opportunity and Compliance Office (https://eoc.unc.edu/what-we-do/accommodations/) for approval. After an absence is approved under that policy, the University Approved Absence Office will communicate the University Approved Absence to the course instructor(s) prior to the date(s) of the schedule absence(s).

3. Significant health condition and/or personal/family emergencies as approved by the Office of the Dean of Students (https://
Instructors will not receive further explanation or clarification of University approved absences beyond notification from the University Approved Absence Office.

Make-up Coursework and Assessment
All students with University approved absences will be treated fairly and equitably, regardless of the reason for the absence.

Instructors will provide reasonable alternatives that permit course objectives and learning outcomes to be met. Alternatives may include a make-up exam, alternative assessment, an additional paper or project of equivalent intellectual effort, an electronically-mediated participation opportunity, a due date extension, or other option that allows students to demonstrate what they have learned without being penalized for the University approved absence. It is a University expectation that instructor be prudent, fair, and equitable when a student misses an assessment due to a University approved absence. Course policies should avoid inequities, including discrepancies in preparation time for in-class versus make-up exams, missed opportunities to take and learn from an assessment, and policies that penalize students who must use their dropped grade option for a University approved absence.

The Undergraduate Testing Center (http://testingcenter.web.unc.edu/) provides a secure, proctored environment for administration of makeup assessments, tests, and exams for undergraduate and graduate courses throughout each term. There are regularly scheduled session times each week in addition to the Center's traditional use during final exams time. Please see the center's web site for more information and instructions as well as teaching and learning resources provided by the Center for Faculty Excellence (https://cfe.unc.edu/).

Appeals
Given the swift and cumulative nature of a semester, an instructor should contact a student with a preliminary alternative plan within three business days of receiving notification of a University approved absence, or sooner if the absence takes place during a summer term. The student must respond to the instructor within two business days of receiving the alternative plan and discuss details with the instructor. After receiving the final alternative plan from the instructor, if a student feels that a reasonable alternative was not provided, they may submit an appeal within three business days to the instructor’s chair or the chair’s designee.

At any time, a student may file a report alleging that the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Undergraduate Catalog odos.unc.edu), Gender Violence Service Coordinators (https://vpas.unc.edu/confidential-support/), and/or the Equal Opportunity and Compliance Office (https://eoc.unc.edu/ what-we-do/ accommodations/). Once the Office of the Dean of Students, Gender Violence Service Coordinators, and/or the EOC has approved the information, they will then request that the University Approved Absence Office issue a University approved absence notification to the student’s instructor(s). The University Approved Absence Office will inform the course instructor in advance if the reason for the University approved absence is planned, or as soon as possible if the reason for the absence was not foreseen.

University Approved Absence Office appeals process altogether and proceed directly to filing a report under the PPDHRM. If a student first files a report under the PPDHRM, the University Approved Absence Office’s appeals process will be stayed until a determination has been made under the PPDHRM.

Final Examinations
(Maintained by the Education Policy Committee. Resolution 2017-5, passed on April 21, 2017; Resolution 2017-5.1, passed on May 15, 2017)

This policy applies to all undergraduate courses across the University.

Undergraduate courses taught on campus must include a final assessment of students’ mastery of course material (i.e., final examination) unless the provost grants an exception. A traditional final examination is administered at a predetermined time as specified in the official final examination schedule (http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-calendar/), and takes place at a designated location in Chapel Hill. Any other type of final examination is considered nontraditional.

The final examination schedule, announced prior to the beginning of the semester, sets the day and time for each examination. No examination may start later than 7:00 p.m. Once having been established, the schedule cannot be changed. Traditional final examinations must be held at the day and time shown on the schedule unless an exception is granted as described below.

Only the provost can grant exceptions to the scheduled day or time of a traditional examination, after review and approval by the appropriate department head and the dean. No examination (except for laboratory sections) may be held at a time other than that specified in the general schedule except with the advance approval of the provost.

A course instructor may, due to highly unusual circumstances, petition for a change in the examination schedule. The instructor must submit the request in writing to his or her chair no later than the last day of late registration for that term, and it must be cleared by the chair and the appropriate dean (e.g., Associate Dean, Academic Advising) before consideration by the provost. If the petition is approved, the course instructor assumes responsibility for making special arrangements to give the examination to any student who has a schedule conflict as a result of the change. This process only applies to requests to change a day or time for an individual section.

Requests to combine all sections of a specific course into one final exam day and time (regardless of the number of sections involved), is considered a request for a Common Hour exam and has an earlier deadline for submission. Requests for all common hour exams must be cleared by the chair or appropriate dean and approved by the provost. Requests for common hour exams must be made to the registrar at least three weeks before the first week of February for fall semester final examinations and the first week of September for spring semester final examinations. There is no exception to this deadline.

No graded quizzes or exams (excluding in-class presentations) may be given during the last five days of the semester (last two days of the session for summer school) before the beginning of the final examination period.

For a standard three-credit-hour course, the University has a required three-hour final examination period, which includes 180 minutes of instruction in each semester (see UPM #29 – Definition of a Credit Hour (http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/).
outpatient treatment can also result in a student's name being entered on the Final Exam excuse list. In some cases, Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services about having (including complications related to pregnancy) should consult Campus Students who are seriously ill during the time of their final examination(s) that exams be held during the scheduled final examination period. In cases of illness, personal or family emergency, or religious observance, the scheduled examination period must be utilized for instructional hours. The chair should submit to their academic dean's office an annual summary of the exceptions that were granted.

Students who are absent from an examination receive a course grade of AB (absent), which is equivalent to F (zero quality points), or FA (absent and failing regardless of performance on the final examination). When students are unable, for reasons clearly beyond their control, to take a traditional final examination at the scheduled time, they can be excused only by the director of Campus Health Services or their academic dean (who can issue an "examination excuse"). An absence may be excused for severe health problems leading to the student's placement on the Infirmary List by either Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services, for significant personal or family circumstances, or for religious observances required by the student's faith, for a scheduling conflict involving multiple examinations at the same time, or when a student has three or more final examinations scheduled in 24 hours. In cases of illness, personal or family emergency, or religious observance, additional documentation may be required by the dean. Primary holy days for religious observances are noted on a Web-based interfaith calendar site (http://www.interfaith-calendar.org/). Students are responsible for providing the course instructor and the dean a written request for an excused absence from a final exam for a religious observance or for a scheduling conflict involving multiple examinations no later than the last day of classes. Students must be given the opportunity to make up final exams missed due to an excused absence.

For any University undergraduate courses offered entirely online or via other distance modalities, exams will be offered and must be completed during the scheduled final examination period, but requirements concerning the time of day and place of the exam will be appropriate to the course's mode of delivery. Self-paced courses are exempt from both the time and place requirements of the exam policy and the requirement that exams be held during the scheduled final examination period.

Campus Health Services

Students who are seriously ill during the time of their final examination(s) (including complications related to pregnancy) should consult Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services about having their names entered on the Final Exam excuse list. In some cases, outpatient treatment can also result in a student's name being entered on the list. Students on the Final Exam excuse list may obtain an official permit from the Office of the University Registrar to take the final examination to remove a grade of AB. They must make arrangements with their course instructor to take the final examination and provide the instructor with their official permit. If students are treated at Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services but do not appear on the list, they should see the dean of their college as soon as possible. Students may refer further questions to the Academic Advising Program (if the student is in the College of Arts and Sciences) or to their respective dean's office.

Academic Dean

If students know in advance that they must miss one or more final examinations because of illness, religious observance, or other serious problems, they should notify in writing both the course instructor and the dean of the school in which they are enrolled no later than the last day of classes. If this is not possible, they should see their dean as soon after the fact as possible. For students in the College of Arts and Sciences, only the associate dean for advising (or designee) is authorized to issue examination excuses for reasons other than three exams in 24 hours or two exams at the same time. For other students, only the dean of the school in which the student is enrolled has that authority. The dean may require documentation of a student's religious observance, illness, or problems.

Assuming that a student did not take a final examination for one of the reasons previously cited, the dean will issue an official examination excuse, which the student must present to the course instructor when arrangements are made for a suitable time to take the final examination.

A student who has three final examinations scheduled by the Office of the University Registrar within a 24-hour period or two scheduled at the same time may request to his or her dean's office for permission to have one of the scheduled examinations rescheduled. In the College of Arts and Sciences, requests for exam excuses are reviewed by professional staff in Academic Advising via an online request form (https://eef.oasis.unc.edu/). In the event that one of the scheduled examinations is a common final examination for a multiple-section course, that examination is the one to be rescheduled.

Students who have secured an examination excuse or an official permit and who transmit the document to the instructor or the instructor's chair or dean must be granted permission to take the exam at an alternate time, although students will need to arrange a mutually convenient time with the instructor. Except when the provost has provided an exception in writing, the exam will be taken at a time subsequent to the regularly scheduled exam, though no later than the end of the following semester.

The final examination in any course may be taken only by regularly enrolled members of the class whose registration has been certified and by students certified to be eligible to take a special examination in that course. The certifying authority is the Office of the University Registrar.

Each student is required to sign a full and explicit Honor Code pledge certifying that he or she has neither given nor received aid during the examination.

Grading System

Permanent Letter Grades

A letter-grade and plus/minus system for evaluating academic performance is employed for all undergraduates. Each letter grade corresponds to a number of grade points. Each letter-graded course receives a numerical value of quality points (quality points equal grade points times semester credit hours per course) to use in determining a student's average (per credit hour) in a particular term and to find a student's cumulative grade point average (per credit hour).

\begin{align*}
\text{A} &= 4.0 \\
\text{B+} &= 3.7 \\
\text{B} &= 3.0 \\
\text{C+} &= 2.3 \\
\text{C} &= 2.0 \\
\text{D} &= 1.0 \\
\text{F} &= 0.0
\end{align*}

To determine the grade point average for a term, first determine the total quality points earned in the term by multiplying the number of grade points awarded for each course by the course's assigned number of semester credit hours and adding the resulting quality points earned for each course in the term. Then divide the total quality points earned in the term by the number of semester credit hours attempted (for letter grades) in the term.

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Total quality points earned: 47.80

Total graded hours: 18.0

Term grade point average: \(\frac{47.80}{18.0} = 2.656\)

Permanent grades are defined as follows:

A

Mastery of course content at the highest level of attainment that can reasonably be expected of students at a given stage of development. The A grade states clearly that the student has shown such outstanding promise in the aspect of the discipline under study that he/she may be strongly encouraged to continue.

B

Strong performance demonstrating a high level of attainment for a student at a given stage of development. The B grade states that the student has shown solid promise in the aspect of the discipline under study.

C

A totally acceptable performance demonstrating an adequate level of attainment for a student at a given stage of development. The C grade states that while not yet showing any unusual promise, the student may continue to study in the discipline with reasonable hope of intellectual development.

D

A marginal performance in the required exercises demonstrating a minimal passing level of attainment for a student at a given stage of development. The D grade states that the student has given no evidence of prospective growth in the discipline; an accumulation of D grades should be taken to mean that the student would be well advised not to continue in the academic field.

F

For whatever reasons, an unacceptable performance. The F grade indicates that the student’s performance in the required exercises has revealed almost no understanding of the course content. A grade of F should warrant questioning whether the student may suitably register for further study in the discipline before remedial work is undertaken.

Grades earned and semester hours attempted at other institutions are not included in the calculation of the University grade point average.

Records of progress are kept by this institution on all students. Students can access official semester grades in ConnectCarolina at the end of the term. Questions about access to student official grades or grade reporting should be directed to the Office of the University Registrar.

Temporary Grades (IN and AB) and FA Grades

Any student who ceases to attend a class without officially being dropped or withdrawn may receive a temporary grade of AB or IN or a permanent grade of FA.

Students who do not complete all requirements in a course by the end of the semester, but who could pass the course if they did, receive a temporary grade of IN (incomplete) or AB (absent from the final exam) in place of a permanent letter grade. Grades of IN and AB do not affect grade point average. Students who do not complete the course requirements within a specified period of time are assigned permanent F* grades on their academic transcripts by the Office of the University Registrar.

The instructor must report the grade of AB for any student who did not take the final examination and who, by taking the final examination, could pass the course. This AB grade later converts to an F* unless the student arranges to take the final examination before the last day of finals of the next regularly scheduled semester (fall or spring). If the student cannot pass the course regardless of a final examination performance, the instructor must report the grade FA. The grade of FA (cannot pass the class) is a permanent failing grade. A grade of F may be assigned instead of a temporary grade or a grade of FA when a final examination is not required in the course.

The grade IN may only be assigned by an instructor to a student who took the final examination in a course but did not complete some other course requirement (including signing the honor pledge) and who, by virtue of completing that missing work, might pass the course. Unless removed before the last day of finals of the regularly scheduled semester (fall or spring) following its assignment, an IN converts to an F*.

Absence from a final examination may be officially excused only by the student’s dean or the director of Campus Health Services or Counseling and Psychological Services. Please see “Final Examinations” above for information about final examination excuses.

Important Rules and Procedures Pertaining to AB and IN Grades

The decision to report an IN grade is solely the responsibility of the course instructor; however, a student may present proper justification for the instructor’s consideration.

Temporary grades should be cleared by completing the work outstanding, preferably no later than the start of the following semester. The deadline for clearing a temporary grade of AB or IN is the last day of finals for the next regularly scheduled semester or the instructor-provided deadline, whichever is earlier.

If students intend to remove IN or excused AB grades, they should not officially enroll in the course(s) during the next semester or summer session. If recommended by the course instructor, a student may attend by officially auditing a part of that instructor’s section of the course or another instructor’s section of the same course in which the temporary grade was awarded.

If a student enrolls in a course in which a temporary grade has been previously received, the second enrollment is taken as evidence that the student could not or is not permitted to remove the temporary grade. This results in replacing the temporary grade by F* after the deadline for removing the temporary grade. The grade earned during the second enrollment is also reported on the student’s academic transcript and is used along with the F* grade in the computation of a cumulative grade point average.

Other Grades and Notations

A notation of BE (By-Examination) is entered in the grade column of academic transcripts if students are awarded credit for a course as a result of evaluation by departmental, Advanced Placement, International Baccalaureate, or SAT II Subject Test examinations. BE credit confers credit hours and can be used to fulfill General Education requirements. For first-time, first-year students entering UNC–Chapel Hill in fall 2009 or thereafter, no more than two courses (six to eight credit hours) of BE credit can be applied to a major and no more than one course (three to four credit hours) of BE credit can be applied to a minor in the College of Arts and Sciences. BE credit may not be used to satisfy cumulative grade point average requirements for majors or minors.

A notation of NG (no grade) is not used by individual instructors but rather is assigned by the Office of the University Registrar when a permanent grade is pending a judicial review by the Honor Court.

A notation of PL (placement) is entered in the grade column of academic transcripts if students are awarded exemption for a course as a result of an evaluation that would ordinarily place them in a succeeding course. PL does not confer credit hours.

There are some courses for which only a grade of PS (pass) or F (fail) can be awarded. For most other courses, students may opt to take a class on a Pass/Fail basis (http://catalog.unc.edu/policies-procedures/registration-enrollment-withdrawal/).

A grade of SP (satisfactory progress) may be used in the first course of a departmental undergraduate honors program. The honors program runs through two semesters, and a final grade is not reported until completion of the second course. When the final grade is reported, the previously assigned SP grade must be changed to the appropriate permanent letter grade by an official grade change form. Credit hours are awarded for the first honors course only after a letter grade replaces the SP grade. An SP grade is not computed in the grade point average.

A notation of W (withdrawn) is entered in the grade column of academic transcripts if students are permitted by their school to drop a course after the eighth week of classes or proportional equivalent for summer terms and other nonstandard enrollment periods. This notation is automatically entered unless the student's academic dean specifies otherwise.

When a course is dropped between the second and eighth week of classes, a grade of WC (withdrawal by choice) shall be recorded and used internally for tracking and reporting purposes. For external purposes, a withdrawal by choice is equivalent to the W notation. Once recorded, a WC cannot be rescinded unless it is determined the student withdrawal was due to extenuating circumstances.

A notation of XF is entered to indicate that a student has not passed a course as the result of an Honor Court violation. The grade of XF can be replaced by a final grade of F if the student follows prescribed steps to remediate the violation.

A blank space or a grade of NR (not reported) is shown in the grade column when the instructor has not submitted the official grade for the student.

Repeating Course Enrollments

See Registration, Enrollment, and Withdrawal (p. 1300).

Grades Earned at Other Institutions

With the exception of courses taken via interinstitutional registration (p. 1300), grades earned and semester hours attempted at other institutions are not included in the computation of a grade point average at the University. A grade point average earned at another university may not be used to restore academic eligibility; however, academic hours earned at another university may be used to restore academic eligibility if the student is lacking only credit hours and has a satisfactory grade point average. Special rules regarding transfer courses apply; see Transfer of Credit (p. 21) and Academic Eligibility (p. 1312).

Grade Appeals

The grades of H, HP, P, LP, L, A, A-, B+, B, B-, C+, C, C-, D+, D, PS, F, FA, F*, and numerical grades in the Law School are considered permanent grades. Once reported, the instructor’s grade report may not be changed except under certain conditions. For a grade change to be considered, it must be based upon one or more of the following grounds and upon allegation that the ground or grounds cited influenced the grade assignment to the student’s detriment:
• Arithmetic or clerical error
• Arbitrariness, possibly including discrimination or harassment based on the race, color, gender, national origin, age, religion, creed, disability, veteran's status, sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression of the student
• Personal malice
• Student conduct cognizant under the Instrument of Student Judicial Governance

A grade appeal must be made no later than the last day of classes for the succeeding fall or spring semester.

Grade Appeals Correcting a Clerical or Arithmetical Error

An instructor who has reported an incorrect grade for a student because of an error in calculating the grade, or in entering it on the official grade roster, may change the grade to one of the other letter grades, provided this change is made no later than the last day of classes of the succeeding fall or spring semester. Grade changes are submitted online using the Grade Change Request process, with electronic approvals required by the instructor, the department chair, and student's dean's office. In the College of Arts and Sciences, dean's office approval is granted by the Associate Dean for Academic Advising (https://advising.unc.edu/advisor/staff/) or their designee.

Other Grade Appeals

Any student who protests a course grade shall first attempt to resolve this disagreement with the instructor concerned. (As explained in the preceding paragraph, an instructor may change a permanent grade only when a clerical or arithmetical error is involved.) Failing to reach a satisfactory resolution, the student may appeal the grade in accordance with the procedures outlined below. Such appeal must be made no later than the last day of classes of the succeeding fall or spring semester.

Students should present the appeal in writing to the dean of their school (students in the College of Arts and Sciences must submit it in writing to the associate dean for advising). The dean will refer the appeal to the administrative board of his/her school, which will meet to consider whether the student has offered sufficient grounds for referring the appeal to the chair of the department concerned. If the administrative board determines that further review by the academic department is appropriate, the department chair will then appoint a committee to consider the appeal and will make a recommendation to the administrative board based on the committee's findings. The administrative board will make the final decision, and no change of grade will be made except as a result of the decision by the board. The chair will report such decision to change the grade to the Office of the University Registrar.
ACADEMIC STANDING

Academic Eligibility Policy
For students in the undergraduate career, the University's academic eligibility policy specifies the minimum standards of academic performance required for continued enrollment. These standards apply to undergraduate students enrolled in courses during or after the fall 2016 semester.

Degree-Seeking Programs
To guide students toward timely degree completion, the University maintains academic eligibility standards. These standards are reviewed at the end of fall, spring, summer I, and summer II terms. These standards determine academic status for each undergraduate in a degree-seeking program. Academic status indicates eligibility to enroll in any course in any term including summer. Students must check their academic status in ConnectCarolina at the end of each enrolled fall, spring, or summer term.

Academic status is determined through four standards of satisfactory academic progress:

1. Grade Point Average. A cumulative UNC–Chapel Hill grade point average of at least a 2.000 is required.
2. Completion Rate. Students must successfully complete at least 2/3 of cumulative attempted credit hours. By-Exam (BE) and credits transferred in to UNC–Chapel Hill count as both attempted and completed hours. Withdrawals, temporary grades including AB, IN, or SP, and failed courses count as attempted hours but not completed hours. Completed Hours/Attempted Hours=Completion Rate.
3. Cumulative Hours Passed. To enroll in courses, students must have earned the following:
   - After one full-time semester: 9 academic hours
   - After two full-time semesters: 24 academic hours
   - After three full-time semesters: 36 academic hours
   - After four full-time semesters: 51 academic hours
   - After five full-time semesters: 63 academic hours
   - After six full-time semesters: 78 academic hours
   - After seven full-time semesters: 93 academic hours

Students are expected to complete their degree within a maximum of eight full-time semesters. Transfer students (who transfer in the UNC–Chapel Hill equivalent of two or more semesters, see “Calculation of Transferred Semesters Based on the Number of Transfer Hours (p. 1292)”) may enroll in up to 10 total semesters. Students who enter as first years are required to apply for a ninth or tenth semester. For information about the application process, students in professional schools must contact their professional school dean, and students in the College of Arts and Sciences must contact the Academic Advising Program (http://advising.unc.edu).

*Part-time students are excluded from this standard.

4. Maximum Time Frame. Students must complete their degree within 180 attempted credit hours.

There are four academic statuses: good standing, warning, suspension, and probation.

Students who meet each of the four standards at the end of an enrolled term will have an academic status of good standing.

Students who begin an enrolled term in good standing but do not meet each of the four standards at the end of that enrolled term will receive an academic status of warning. Students with a status of warning may enroll in courses and must complete an academic intervention plan (http://studentsuccess.unc.edu/warning/).

A student who begins an enrolled term with a status of warning and falls short of the standards at the end of that enrolled term will earn an academic status of suspension. Students with an academic status of suspension cannot enroll in any courses in any terms. Students with an academic status of suspension have two options:

a. Appeal for probation. Students granted academic probation by appeal must complete an academic intervention plan (http://studentsuccess.unc.edu/academic-probation-3/). Students denied probation by appeal can pursue option b.

b. Spend a term engaging in study, work, or wellness activities away from UNC–Chapel Hill. These opportunities could include coursework at another institution, employment, volunteer work, or healthcare or wellness activities. During this time students should reflect on their academic path, development, choices, and actions. Students should also implement strategies that will enhance their effectiveness upon return to the University. After a term away from the University, students who have engaged in study, work, or wellness activities may appeal to return to the University on probation. Students appealing after a term or longer away from the University must include documentation of their experiences while away such as a transcript from another institution, a letter from an employer, or a letter from a healthcare provider. These documents must convey evidence of the student’s readiness to return to the University.

A student who begins an enrolled term with a status of probation and falls short of the standards at the end of that enrolled term will earn an academic status of suspension. Students with an academic status of suspension have two options (see above).

Repeats, Withdrawals, and Incompletes

 Attempted hours include all those in which a student is enrolled as of the end of the second week of each fall or spring term (the 10th day of the term, generally known as the “census date”). Students may drop a course until the 10th day of the term. Dropped courses do not count in attempted hours.

The summer schedule is similar to fall/spring but is determined according to the summer calendar. Credit hours that are dropped or withdrawn prior to the census date are not considered attempted; credit hours that are dropped or withdrawn after the census date are considered attempted.

Repeated courses affect grade point average and Completion Rate.

Transfer hours do not affect grade point average. Transfer hours are added to both completed hours and attempted hours in the Completion Rate calculation.

Courses with temporary grades of IN or AB do not affect grade point average. If a grade of IN or AB is converted to a passing grade, grade point average will be recalculated accordingly.
Withdrawn courses do not affect grade point average. Withdrawn courses are NOT considered a successful completion, though, and will adversely affect Completion Rate.

Failed courses influence grade point average. A failed course will also adversely affect Completion Rate, counting as attempted hours but not completed hours.

Academic Eligibility Policy for Non-Degree-Seeking Programs

For non-degree-seeking students there are three academic statuses: good standing, alert, and ineligible. A non-degree-seeking student with a 2.000 or higher cumulative grade point average will be in good standing and eligible to enroll in courses. If a non-degree-seeking student falls below a 2.000 cumulative grade point average, the student will be assigned a status of alert. A non-degree-seeking student who begins a term with a status of alert and does not raise his or her cumulative grade point average to 2.000 or higher at the end of the term will have an academic status of ineligible and will not be permitted to enroll in courses. Non-degree-seeking students with a status of ineligible may appeal to Digital and Lifelong Learning.

Appeals

Students may, under extraordinary circumstances, present an appeal in writing (or online for students in the College of Arts and Sciences) to the dean of their school (for students in the College of Arts and Sciences, this is the associate dean for advising). The dean will refer the appeal to the administrative board for his/her school.

Calculation of Transferred Semesters Based on the Number of Transferred Credit Hours

See the Credit and Evaluation (p. 1292) section of the catalog.

Additional Information for Students with an Academic Status of Suspension

- If students earn 15 or more transfer semester credit hours for courses taken at other institutions cumulatively over the fall or spring semesters before applying for readmission to the University, a calculation will be made as to how many semesters the student is regarded as having completed, based on the number of hours accepted for transfer credit. The resulting tally of total semesters completed will determine requirements for restoring academic eligibility.
  - Students should consult their academic advisor if they are considering taking classes at another institution. Grades do not transfer, and credit hours accumulated through enrollment in fall and spring semesters at other schools can affect the number of remaining semesters that students have left to complete their degree requirements at UNC–Chapel Hill.
  - Students who attend another institution (summer, fall, or spring), and who apply for readmission must have at least a 2.000 (C) average in work at the other institution.
  - Students who have a housing assignment or contract for the following semester should either cancel their application/contract or notify the University's Department of Housing and Residential Education of their intention to restore academic eligibility before the following semester begins.

Students who are inactive during a semester because of ineligibility (or other reasons) must apply for readmission before registering for a full-time term.

Removing AB or IN Grades

For information about completing courses with grades of AB (absent from the final examination) or IN (incomplete), see the grading system information (p. 1306).
HONOR CODE

The Honor Code

The Honor System forms a bond of trust among students, faculty, and administrators. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill operates under a system of self-governance, as students are responsible for governing themselves. As such, our University has been transformed into a powerful community of inquiry and learning. The Honor Code embodies the ideals of academic honesty, integrity, and responsible citizenship and governs the performance of all academic work a student conducts at the University. Acceptance of an offer of admission to Carolina presupposes a commitment to the principles embodied in our century-old tradition of honor and integrity.

Faculty and Students’ Mutual Responsibilities

Academic work is a joint enterprise involving faculty and students. Both faculty and students have a fundamental investment in the enterprise and must share responsibility for ensuring its integrity. The Faculty Council has formally adopted specific responsibilities that parallel those of the students concerning the Honor Code.

Faculty Responsibilities

1. Awareness: To communicate University-wide expectations about academic integrity, to make sure students understand those expectations, and to hold students accountable for behaving in a way that is consistent with those expectations.

2. Communicating Expectations and Administering Examinations: Faculty members, teaching assistants, and other instructional personnel should do the following to help students comply with their responsibilities relating to academic integrity:

   - Use good judgment in setting and communicating clear ground rules for academic work conducted under their supervision.
   - Require students to sign the honor pledge as a condition of submitting academic assignments.
   - Take steps to prevent unauthorized access to examinations during development, duplication, and administration.
   - Avoid reusing prior examinations in whole or in part to the extent possible.
   - Take all reasonable steps consistent with physical classroom conditions to reduce the risk of cheating during the administration of examinations.
   - Maintain proper security during the administration of examinations, including, as appropriate, overseeing the distribution and collection of examinations and proctoring the examination session.

3. Oversight: Faculty members, teaching assistants, and other instructional personnel should do the following in cases of student misconduct that appear to violate the Honor Code:

   - Tell the appropriate student attorney general if the instructor reasonably believes that a student under their supervision has committed academic dishonesty or significantly helped another student to do so in an academic context.
   - At the instructor’s discretion, tell the student about the intention to report the suspected academic dishonesty and allow the student to present additional relevant information.
   - The instructor should not punish a student on their own if they suspect the student has broken the Honor Code. The instructor should report the behavior instead.
   - Work with Honor System representatives by helping with investigations, giving testimony or evidence, suggesting suitable sanctions, and helping resolve the matter quickly.

4. Involvement: Faculty, teaching assistants, and teaching staff should do the following to emphasize the importance of academic integrity and promote a University-wide culture of commitment to the intellectual and personal values related to academic integrity:

   - Explore issues of integrity in connection with instructional activities where relevant and appropriate.
   - Encourage their academic units to take matters of academic integrity seriously, become informed regarding related problems and advisable means of preventing problems from arising, and provide requisite training and support to instructional personnel.
   - Participate upon request as part of educational initiatives, faculty advisory panels, and University Hearing Boards designed to create, nurture, and enforce high standards of academic integrity within the University community.

Student Responsibilities

To ensure the effective functioning of an honor system worthy of respect in this institution, students are expected to:

- Conduct all academic work within the letter and spirit of the Honor Code, which prohibits giving or receiving unauthorized aid in all academic processes.
- Consult with faculty and other sources to clarify the meaning of plagiarism, to learn the recognized techniques of proper attribution of sources used in the preparation of written work, and to identify allowable resource materials or aids to be used during examination or in completion of any graded work.
- Sign a pledge on all graded academic work certifying that no unauthorized assistance has been received or given in completing the work.
- Comply with faculty regulations designed to reduce the possibility of cheating. This may include removing unauthorized materials or aids from the room and protecting one’s examination paper from the view of others.
- Maintain the confidentiality of examinations by divulging no information concerning an examination, directly or indirectly, to another student yet to write that same examination.
- Treat all members of the University community with respect and fairness.
- Report any instance in which reasonable grounds exist to believe that a student has given or received unauthorized aid in graded work or violated the Honor Code in other respects. Students should make such reports to the Office of the Student Attorney General, the Office of the Dean of Students, or other appropriate officer or official of their college or school.
- Cooperate with the Office of the Student Attorney General and the defense counsel in the investigation and hearing of any incident of alleged violation, including giving testimony when called upon.

Procedure for Reporting

University community members wishing to report possible violations of the Honor Code should contact the Office of Student Conduct at (919) 962-0805 or complete the online form. The Office of Student Conduct will review the report and refer it to the appropriate Student Attorney General for action.
UNIVERSITY POLICIES

Regulations and Policies

The personal conduct of students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill ("University" or "UNC–Chapel Hill") is subject to the moral and legal restraints found in any law-abiding community. Additionally, the Honor Code is a positive force for good citizenship. University regulations are not specifications for acceptable conduct or detailed lists of offenses subject to penal action. They are intended to provide information about systematic procedures and equitable decisions in many situations involving individual students and officers of the University.

Code of the University of North Carolina

Section 502D(3)—Subject to any policies or regulations of the Board of Governors or of the Board of Trustees, it shall be the duty of the chancellor to exercise full authority in the regulation of student affairs and student conduct and discipline. In the discharge of this duty, delegation of such authority may be made by the chancellor to faculty committees and to administrative or other officers of the institution, or to agencies of student government, in such manner and to such extent as may by the chancellor be deemed necessary and expedient. In the discharge of the chancellor's duty with respect to matters of student discipline, it shall be the duty of the chancellor to secure to every student the right to due process. Appeals from these disciplinary decisions are allowable only on the following grounds:

1. a violation of due process, or
2. a material deviation from the Minimum Substantive and Procedural Standards for Student Disciplinary Procedures, Section 700.4.1 of the UNC Policy Manual.

Where the sanction is suspension or expulsion, an appeal may be made to the Board of Trustees. No appeal to the president or Board of Governors is permitted.

Whistleblower Policy

The purpose of this policy is to encourage individuals to report possible wrongful conduct to an appropriate authority so that prompt, corrective action can be taken by the University and to protect reporting individuals from any retaliation for reporting wrongful conduct. Please see the full text of the Whistleblower Policy (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/KB/ArticleDet/?ID=131868) on the University’s policy website (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/Home/).

Religious Accommodation Policy

The University is committed to providing a welcoming and inclusive environment that is respectful of the religious beliefs and practices of all members of the University community. As part of this commitment, the University will make good faith efforts to provide reasonable religious accommodations to individuals covered by this policy whose sincerely held religious beliefs and practices conflict with a University policy, procedure, or other academic or employment requirement unless such an accommodation would create an undue hardship.

The University is committed to diversity and nondiscrimination and supports the employment of all qualified individuals, regardless of religious affiliation or beliefs. This commitment is in accordance with state and federal laws and regulations, including Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and its accompanying regulations, as well as the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission’s Guidelines on Discrimination Because of Religion, and North Carolina General Statute § 116-11(3a). Please see the full text of the Religious Accommodation Policy (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/KB/ArticleDet/?ID=131709) on the University’s policy website (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/Home/).

Alcoholic Beverages

Possession and use of alcoholic beverages is substantially regulated by federal, state, and local laws and ordinances. Within this legal framework, the University’s Alcohol Policy (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/KB/ArticleDet/?ID=132458) sets out the conditions under which alcoholic beverages may be used on University property.

According to North Carolina law

- Generally, persons 21 or older may purchase or consume alcoholic beverages and may possess alcoholic beverages at their homes or temporary residences.
- It is against the law for any person under 21 to purchase or possess any alcoholic beverage. (General Statute 18B-302)
- It is against the law for anyone to sell or give any alcoholic beverage to a person under 21 or to aid or abet such a person in selling, purchasing, or possessing any alcoholic beverage. (General Statute 18B-302)
- No alcoholic beverages may be sold by any person, organization, or corporation on a college campus except as permitted by North Carolina General Statutes, Sect. 18B-1006 (a).

According to Chapel Hill ordinance 3-3 (https://library.municode.com/nc/chapel_hill/codes/code_of_ordinances/?nodeId=CO_CH3ALBE), it is against the law for anyone to possess any open container of alcohol on streets, sidewalks, alleys, or any other property owned or controlled by the Town of Chapel Hill.

In addition to following the law, the University’s Alcohol Policy sets out special rules about alcohol for University employees and for students and student organizations. For University employees, the Procedure for Requesting Permission to Serve Alcoholic Beverages at University-Sponsored Events (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/KB/ArticleDet/?ID=138011) describes how University Departments and Units may request permission to serve alcohol at University-sponsored events. For University students and student organizations, the Procedures for Adjudication and Response to Student and Student Organization Violations of the UNC–Chapel Hill Alcohol Policy (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/KB/ArticleDet/?ID=138012) describes the procedural rights, administrative process, sanctions, and appeal process for students and student organizations accused of violating the University’s Alcohol Policy. The Office of the Dean of Students will provide copies of the policy and procedures and assistance in understanding their full implications. The text of the policy and procedures can also be accessed on the University’s policy website (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/Home/).

Illegal Drugs Policy

The University's Illegal Drugs Policy (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/KB/ArticleDet/?ID=132140) addresses education, counseling, and rehabilitation to help all members of the University Community avoid involvement with illegal drugs. The policy also describes enforcement and penalties, consistent with state and federal law, to eliminate illegal drugs from the University community. Please see... the full text of the Illegal Drugs Policy on the University’s policy website (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/Home/).

Commercial Activities
Commercial exchanges, including selling or soliciting for the sale of goods or services by any person on the campus of the University is prohibited except as provided for in the Facilities Use Policy (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/KB/ArticleDet/?ID=131343).

Emergency Evaluation and Action Committee Policy and Procedures
In keeping with the long tradition of student self-governance at the University, the chancellors of the University have delegated a portion of their authority in matters of student discipline to a student judicial system that functions in accordance with The Instrument of Student Judicial Governance. From time to time, however, the University is faced with situations involving behavior of applicants for admission, who are not yet within the jurisdiction of the student judicial system, and situations involving students that require a University response because they pose some danger to the University and/or its processes but that are not cognizable under the Instrument. Occasionally emergency situations arise in connection with student behaviors, which require a faster response than the student judicial system's procedures can provide. To address all of these situations and to fulfill the University's obligation to provide a safe campus, the Emergency Evaluation and Action Committee has been established. The full text of the committee's policies and procedures (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/KB/ArticleDet/?ID=132459) is on the University's policy website. (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/Home/)

Equity in Athletics Disclosure Act
Information compiled under the federal Equity in Athletics Disclosure Act is available on request from the Department of Athletics Business Office.

Expulsion
Per UNC System Policy 700.4.3[6], a student who has been expelled from one constituent institution may not be admitted to another constituent institution of the University, unless and until the sanction of expulsion has been rescinded by the institution that imposed the sanction.

Faculty-Led Off-Campus Domestic Academic Travel
Faculty members who want to have academic travel as part of their class must inform prospective students about the mandatory academic travel before course enrollment. For mandatory or optional travel, faculty must also give students an instructional agenda and itinerary two weeks (14 calendar days) before the academic travel including:

1. Time and location of the academic travel,
2. A detailed description of the activity, and
3. Any cost that is the student’s responsibility.

Faculty are encouraged to provide enough detail in the description to help participants understand potential risks. Please refer to the Policy on Faculty-Led Off-Campus Domestic Academic Travel (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/KB/ArticleDet/?ID=150069) for additional information.

Fireworks, Firearms, and Other Weapons
Per N.C. General Statute 14.269.2(b) and (b1), it is a felony, punishable by fine and/or imprisonment, to possess or carry, openly or concealed, any gun, rifle, pistol, or other firearm of any kind, or any dynamite cartridge, bomb, grenade, mine, or powerful explosive on any University campus, in any University-owned or operated facility, or at a curricular or extracurricular activity sponsored by the University. Such conduct also may constitute a violation of the Honor Code.

Per N.C. General Statute 14.269.2(k1) and (k2), a person who has a concealed handgun permit that is valid under North Carolina law, or who is exempt from obtaining a permit pursuant to North Carolina law, may have a handgun in a closed compartment or container within the person’s locked vehicle or in a locked container securely affixed to the person's vehicle. A person may unlock the vehicle to enter or exit the vehicle provided the firearm remains in the closed compartment at all times and the vehicle is locked immediately following the entrance or exit.

Per N.C. General Statute 14.269.2(e), it is a Class 1 misdemeanor, punishable by fine and/or imprisonment, to possess or carry, whether openly or concealed, any BB gun, stun gun, air rifle, air pistol, bowie knife, dirk, dagger, slingshot, leaded cane, switchblade knife, blackjack, metallic knuckles, razors and razor blades (except for personal shaving), fireworks, or any sharp-pointed or edged instrument (except instructional supplies, unaltered nail files, and clips and tools used solely for preparation of food, instruction, and maintenance) upon any University campus or in any University-owned or operated facility. Such conduct may also constitute a violation of the Honor Code.

Housing and Residential Education
For policies and procedures related to living on campus, visit the Housing and Residential Education (https://housing.unc.edu/policies/housing-contract/) website.

Immunization Requirement
All new and transfer students are required to submit documentation (https://campushealth.unc.edu/services/immunizations/) of immunizations required under N.C. General Statute 130A-155.1. Students who were previously enrolled at UNC–Chapel Hill are not required to resubmit immunization documentation. Per North Carolina state law 130A-155.1(a), students will be withdrawn from the University 30 days after classes begin if immunization requirements have not been met.

Improper Relationships between Students and Employees
On March 15, 1996 (updated July 1, 2007), The University of North Carolina Board of Governors adopted a system-wide policy (300.4.1) that prohibits amorous or sexual relationships between faculty or staff employees and

1. students they evaluate or supervise by virtue of their teaching, research, administrative, or other employment responsibility and
2. students who are minors below the age of 18.

The policy also states that faculty or staff employees may not supervise or evaluate students to whom they are related by blood, law, or marriage. The full Improper Relationships Between Students and Employees Policy (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/KB/ArticleDet/?ID=131764) based on the UNC Board of Governor’s policy is available on the University's policy website (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/Home/).
Veterans’ Educational Benefits

Students who expect to use their veterans’ educational benefits must contact the Veterans’ Services Assistant in the Office of the University Registrar, located in the Student and Academic Services Building North. Students must maintain satisfactory academic progress to be eligible for VA educational benefits. Students who are not eligible at the end of the term will not be eligible for veterans’ educational benefits in subsequent terms until they regain their eligibility. For further information, please visit the Office of the University Registrar’s web page on Veteran Affairs (https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/veteran-affairs/).

Military Tuition Benefit

As a member of the armed services, the North Carolina National Guard or a military dependent, if you do not qualify as a North Carolina resident for tuition purposes, you may still be eligible to pay a reduced tuition rate if you meet the eligibility requirements for the Military Tuition Benefit (N.C. General Statute 116-143.3).

Note: The benefit only determines the amount of tuition you pay. You must still qualify academically for admission.

For additional information about the UNC–Chapel Hill military tuition benefits, please see the Office of the University Registrar’s web page on Active-Duty Military Benefits (https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/residency/special-residency-provisions/military-benefits/).

Policies on Prohibited Harassment and Nondiscrimination

The University is committed to providing an inclusive and welcoming environment for all members of our community. The University values safety, diversity, education, and equity and is firmly committed to maintaining a campus environment free from discrimination, harassment, and related misconduct.

In accordance with its Policy Statement on Nondiscrimination, the University does not unlawfully discriminate in offering equal access to its educational programs and activities or with respect to employment terms and conditions on the basis of an individual’s age, color, disability, gender, gender expression, gender identity, genetic information, race, national origin, religion, sex, sexual orientation, or veteran status (collectively referred to as “protected status”). The University’s protection of these statuses is grounded in federal law.

Federal law also governs the University’s response to sexual assault, sexual violence, interpersonal violence (including domestic and dating violence), and stalking. Such acts violate the essential dignity of our community member(s) and are contrary to our institutional values. Please visit these links to see the full text of the Policy on Prohibited Discrimination, Harassment and Related Misconduct (https://policies.unc.edu/tdclient/2833/portal/kb/articleDet/?ID=132487) and the Policy Statement on Nondiscrimination (https://policies.unc.edu/tdclient/2833/portal/kb/articleDet/?ID=131717).

Gender-Inclusive Language Policy

The University is committed to providing an inclusive and welcoming environment for all members of our University Community. Consistent with that commitment, gender-inclusive terms (chair; first-year student; upper-level student, etc.) should be used on University documents, websites, and policies.

may be found on the UNC Writing Center website. Please see the full text of the Gender-Inclusive Language Policy (https://policies.unc.edu/tdclient/2833/portal/kb/articleDet/?ID=132161) on the University’s policy website.

Posthumous and Memorial Degree

In the unfortunate event of a recently enrolled student death, the University may award a degree posthumously or a memorial degree of achievement to the next of kin of the decedent. The following criteria are used to determine awarding a degree posthumously and it is included in the official degree count. Detailed information on the criteria for awarding of a posthumous degree or memorial degree of achievement are in UPM#13 Authorized Degrees (https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/university-policy-memorandums/upm-13-authorized-degrees-major-fields-in-each-degree-and-assigned-code-numbers/). Major Fields in Each Degree, and Assigned Code Numbers.

Undergraduate Students

Upon the recommendation of the Dean of Students Office in conjunction with the Dean’s Office of the student’s academic college/school, a posthumous degree may be awarded to a deceased undergraduate student if the student was in good academic standing and at least 90 percent of academic requirements for earning the degree are already completed. This is typically in the last two semesters or year of study for undergraduate degrees.

Graduate and Professional Students

Upon the recommendation of the Dean of Students Office in conjunction with the Dean’s Office(s) of the student’s academic college/school(s), a posthumous degree may be awarded to a deceased graduate or professional student if the student was in good academic standing and significant progress had been made toward academic requirements for earning the degree. For graduate and professional degrees this can vary but generally the following considerations apply:

• For degrees requiring a research or other creative/practicicum activity, the student must have completed all course and other requirements pursuant to the degree and must have been near completion of the dissertation/thesis/substitute product; and the student’s committee must have determined the scholarship to be substantial work and worthy of the degree.

• For degrees requiring primarily coursework, at least 90 percent of academic requirements for earning the degree are already completed. This is typically in the last two semesters or year of study.

In cases where requirements for awarding a doctorate have not been met, a master’s degree could be awarded if those requirements have been satisfied and if supported by the student’s committee.

Memorial Degree of Achievement

If requirements for awarding the degree posthumously are not met, the University may issue a memorial degree of achievement. This is neither recorded as an official degree nor included in the official degree count. The Dean of Students Office, in conjunction with the academic college/school of the student, issues this memorial degree of achievement to honor the memory of the deceased student’s contributions to the UNC–Chapel Hill academic community.
Certificate of Achievement

In circumstances when awarding a degree is not appropriate, the University can issue a certificate of achievement recognizing a former student. The Dean of Students office determines if a situation warrants issuing this recognition. This is neither recorded as an official certificate nor included in the official certificate count.

Residence Status for Tuition Purposes

Under state law, North Carolina residents are eligible for a lower tuition rate to state universities, including UNC-Chapel Hill.

In order to qualify as residents for tuition purposes, students must have established legal residence (or domicile) in North Carolina and maintained that legal residence for at least twelve (12) months prior to their classification as residents for tuition purposes. Each student is classified as an in-state or out-of-state resident upon admission.

If you believe that you qualify as a North Carolina resident for tuition purposes, you may apply for in-state resident status by following the instructions provided by your admissions office. Continuing students who believe they may now qualify as a resident for tuition purposes may apply through the North Carolina Residency Determination Service (RDS) (https://ncresidency.cfnc.org/). For additional information about the UNC-Chapel Hill residency requirements and procedures, please see the Office of the University Registrar’s web page on Residency (https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/residency/).

Tuition Waiver for Family Members of Deceased or Disabled Emergency Workers

Certain family members of emergency workers killed or permanently disabled in the line of duty may become eligible for tuition-free enrollment.

For additional information about the UNC-Chapel Hill emergency worker tuition benefits, please see the Office of the University Registrar’s web page on Emergency Worker Tuition Benefits (https://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/residency/emergency-worker-tuition-benefits/).

Policies and Guidelines for a Cooperative Learning Environment

Teaching and learning occur simultaneously through a partnership between instructor and student. Instructors share knowledge, experience, and ideas with their students. Students process these thoughts, generate new ones, and share them with their teachers and classmates. In most cases, students and instructors communicate clearly and effectively. However, misunderstandings do occur. In an attempt to foster a positive academic environment, the Faculty Council, upon recommendation of the Educational Policy Committee, establishes the following policies and guidelines.

The Faculty Council resolves:

Part I. Policies

Section 1.

The Faculty Council recognizes and affirms the following policies. This recognition is not to be interpreted as precluding modification of any policy by the appropriate authority.

- The Honor Code. The faculty should inform students of the provisions of the honor code and be aware of their own responsibilities specified in the honor code. Faculty responsibilities are stated in the Instrument of Student Judicial Governance.

- Student Grievance Policy and Procedures. According to UNC-Chapel Hill Student Grievance Committee procedures, students may file a grievance against a UNC-Chapel Hill employee, including faculty, EHRA non-faculty, staff, and student employee (when acting in the role of employee) when there is a violation of one of the following:
  a. The UNC-Chapel Hill Policy on Prohibited Discrimination, Harassment and Related Misconduct, Including Sexual and Gender-Based Harassment, Sexual Violence, Interpersonal Violence and Stalking (https://policies.unc.edu/TDClient/2833/Portal/KB/ArticleDet/?ID=132487);
  b. The Americans with Disabilities Act (https://www.ada.gov/);
  c. Title IX (http://eoc.unc.edu/our-policies/state-and-federal-laws/title-ix-and-vawa/), which prohibits exclusion from participation on the basis of sex;
  d. Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (https://accessibility.unc.edu/policies/), which outlaws discrimination on the basis of a handicap; or
  e. The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, which allows students to challenge the content of their educational records.

Copies of these policies can be obtained from the Office of the Dean of Students (https://odos.unc.edu/). They contain information about how to file a grievance. A grievance based on incidents that occurred more than six months before the complaint was filed will not be considered.

- Student Access to Academic Records—Protection against Improper Disclosure. As stated in The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, students may have access to their full academic records. Individuals who are, or have been, in attendance at UNC-Chapel Hill may inspect and review their education records. Otherwise, education records are subject to confidentiality requirements as specified by law and may not be disclosed improperly. Requests for recommendations imply that the student has given consent to the disclosure of information related to ability and performance. Judgments of ability and character may be provided under appropriate circumstances, normally with the knowledge or consent of the student. “Education records” are those records directly related to a student that are maintained by an educational institution. Particular University policy provisions are found in the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill's Policies and Procedures under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974.

- Appealing a Grade. The University has systems for appealing a grade. The exact procedures vary among the academic units. Students should consult with their dean or department chairperson to obtain information about grade appeal procedures. See the section on “Grade Appeals” (p. 1310) in this catalog.

Part II. Guidelines

Section 2.

The Faculty Council endorses the following guidelines for the faculty-student relationship. This endorsement shall not be construed as faculty legislation, is not intended to establish a contractual undertaking by the University or any individual, and shall not constitute the basis for civil action in a court or a claim in any administrative or judicial body of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

- Clear Definition of Potential Honor Code Violations. In an attempt to avoid unintended misunderstanding, instructors should clearly state what is acceptable in their classes. When study aids such as computers are allowed, the instructor is responsible for explaining what constitutes proper use of these items. These rules should be established at the beginning of the course and should not be changed without giving students proper notice.

- Assignment of Graded Work during the Last Week of the Semester. Instructors may not assign graded work during the last week of classes unless the course syllabus clearly states that such an assignment will be given.

- Suggested Classroom Procedures. In general, instructors are strongly encouraged to follow the guidelines for course design and classroom procedures recommended by the Center for Faculty Excellence. When students enter into a learning relationship, they have certain needs and expectations. They are entitled to information about course procedures, attendance policy, content, and goals. Instructors should provide a syllabus that describes the course and methods of evaluation. Particular attention should be paid to several areas of special concern to students, including provision of reserve readings and grading policy.

  Evaluated assignments should be returned to the students within a reasonable amount of time. Since part of the purpose of such assignments is to provide feedback, students should be given time to assess and to learn from their mistakes. Ideally, such assessment would take place while the relevant topics are still fresh in their minds. Extra credit, if offered, should be announced publicly and made available to the entire class.

- Students Should Have Freedom of Expression. Students should be free to take reasoned exception to the data or views offered in any course of study. They are responsible, however, for learning the content of any course of study in which they are enrolled. Incorrect facts and poorly supported arguments or opinions inevitably have an impact on grades. Nothing herein shall be construed to limit the freedom of the faculty to assign grades according to appropriate academic standards.

- Responsibilities of Students and Teachers. Just as students ought to expect instructors who are knowledgeable and well-prepared, so should teachers expect their students to be motivated, eager to learn, and actively engaged in class. It is the responsibility of teachers to make their courses serious intellectual experiences for themselves and for their students. It is the responsibility of students to take seriously the courses in which they enroll. Good teachers need good learners.

Students should understand that they are members of a community of scholars, and membership in such a community is not a passive activity. To be full participants in the educational community and to maximize the educational value of a class, preparation before class is necessary. Proper class preparation involves obtaining course materials as they are needed and completing assignments as they are due. Full participation in a class requires regular attendance, arriving on time and remaining until class conclusion, and active involvement in the work of the class. Students should also consider the extent of their own involvement in a class in assessing the educational value of the class.

Recording Classes Best Practices

The following information was posted to the Catalog on 8/18/2020 and distributed to faculty, instructors, and teaching assistants. The recommendations were developed by the Office of the Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost.

1. Indicate on syllabi and on the departmental learning management system or website that classes may be recorded, noting that recordings will only be made available to students enrolled in the classes recorded.

2. When practicable, notify students and any guest speaker when a class is actually recorded. This notification may be provided verbally by the instructor or electronically through the online learning management system or telecommunication service used. It is advisable to make a more substantial notice during one of the initial classes, and then simply have a way to note that the class is being recorded during other classes in a more routinized way.

3. Ensure recordings are only made available to the students enrolled in the classes recorded. A recorded classroom lecture should not be used for any purpose except to meet the educational objectives of that particular class. Should the department or instructor wish to use recordings for any other purpose, the department should contact the Office of University Counsel.

4. Prohibit students from making individual recordings of the class in any format without prior consent from the instructor and the school or department.

5. Prohibit students from sharing or distributing recordings obtained from the University or elsewhere.

6. Develop processes for how your department will record, store, and distribute such recordings.

   - Consider whether to encourage or require all faculty to record all classes routinely.

   - Consider whether certain classes include student discussion of sensitive or personal topics that may require further controls on recording.

   - Consider recording options that best protect students’ privacy (e.g., if practicable depending on the mode of instruction, audio-only recording or video that only displays the instructor and class materials without showing students’ faces).

   - Consider IT security practices and ways of providing recordings to students that minimize the risk of further disclosure (e.g., providing a non-downloadable version on the learning management system rather than sending it as an attachment in an email).

   - Consider the process and specific circumstances by which enrolled students may make requests to record the class privately. Consider limiting student recordings to audio-only recordings.

Example Language for Syllabus or Other Communication to Students

The University may record meetings of this class for educational purposes. These recordings will be shared only with students enrolled in the course for purposes of academic instruction only. Your instructor will communicate to you how you may access any available recordings.

Unauthorized student recording of classes on personal devices or on any other format is prohibited.

Students requesting the use of assistive technology as an accommodation should contact Accessibility Resources & Service (https://ars.unc.edu/). Other students must obtain express permission from the department to record the class, and the University will only grant such permission in extraordinary circumstances in which the student otherwise lacks access to a recording made by the University or instructor. Students shall not copy, reproduce, or distribute any recordings of their classes, and students shall delete any recordings at the conclusion of the course.

Any violation of these prohibitions or restriction on the making, use, copying, or distribution of recording of classes shall constitute an honor code violation.

Example Language for Instructor
This class is being recorded for educational purposes only, and the recordings may only be made available to students enrolled in this class. Any use of a recording of this class by a student shall be for educational purposes only. Students may not record this class on their own, in any format, without prior express authorization from the University and may not copy, reproduce, or distribute any recording that they access.

Out-of-State Disclosures for Distance Education Programs

Disclosure for Indiana Residents Enrolled in UNC–Chapel Hill Distance Education Programs
The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is authorized by The Indiana Board for Proprietary Education, 101 W. Ohio St., Suite 670, Indianapolis, IN 46204.

Disclosure for Louisiana Residents Enrolled in UNC–Chapel Hill Distance Education Programs
The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is currently licensed by the Board of Regents of the State of Louisiana. Licenses are renewed by the State Board of Regents every two years. Licensed institutions have met minimal operational standards set forth by the state, but licensure does not constitute accreditation, guarantee the transferability of credit, nor signify that programs are certifiable by any professional agency or organization.

Disclosure for Minnesota Residents Enrolled in UNC–Chapel Hill Distance Education Programs
The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is registered as a private institution with the Minnesota Office of Higher Education pursuant to sections 136A.61 and 136A.71. Registration is not an endorsement of the institution. Credits earned at the institution may not transfer to all other institutions.

Disclosure for Washington Residents Enrolled in UNC–Chapel Hill Distance Education Programs
The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is authorized by the Washington Student Achievement Council and meets the requirements and minimum educational standards established for degree-granting institutions under the Degree-Granting Institutions Act. This authorization is subject to periodic review and authorizes The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill to advertise, recruit, and offer field placements for specific degree programs. The council may be contacted for a list of currently authorized programs. Authorization by the Council does not carry with it an endorsement by the Council of the institution or its programs. Any person desiring information about the requirements of the act or the applicability of those requirements to the institution may contact the Council at P.O. Box 43430, Olympia, WA 98504-3430.

Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act
As a general rule, under the federal Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA), personally identifiable information may not be released from a student’s education records without his or her prior written consent.

To learn more about FERPA, please visit these links:
- UNC–Chapel Hill FERPA Policy (https://policies.unc.edu/TC/Portal/KB/ArticleDet/?ID=132164)

TRANSCRIPTS

Conferral of Degrees
The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill confers degrees three times a year, each May, August, and December, to students who have completed all degree requirements. Students must apply to graduate on a degree award date through ConnectCarolina no later than the last day of classes of that term.

A degree cannot be awarded to a student who does not meet requirements by the conferral deadline, such as:

- Has any temporary grade on their academic record; this includes but is not limited to non-permanent grades: AB, IN, NG, NR, SP.
- Has pending credits to be approved and posted to their academic record (even if not required for graduation); this includes but is not limited to:
  - Credit earned while studying abroad
  - Transfer credit
  - Interinstitutional credit
  - Robertson Scholars credit
  - UNC Online credit

Students with temporary grades or pending credits not resolved within 60 days of the degree award date must request a subsequent graduation. The degree is conferred following completion of requirements at a later date. A degree will not be awarded retroactively.

Adjustments may be made to a transcript only for one year following the date of graduation. For instance, grade appeals can be initiated after graduation. However, graduation with distinction or highest distinction is based on the grade point average at the time that the degree is conferred. In such indications of a second major or minor can be added to the transcript within one year after the degree conferral date for students who neglected to declare a second major or a minor prior to graduation, provided that all requirements were completed at the time of graduation.

Transcripts of Record
A statement of official academic record includes all significant recorded information concerning the student’s admission, classification, and scholarship. No partial or incomplete scholastic record will be given.

The student’s transcript notes his or her academic eligibility status. A statement of honorable dismissal will not be granted to students whose conduct and character would not entitle them to remain enrolled at the University or whose transcripts contain a notation of any probation, suspension, or other temporary restriction imposed for unsatisfactory conduct and still in force when the statement is made.

The University does not release an official transcript unless tuition, fees, and other obligations due the University have been paid. Students may order a transcript electronically through the link in their ConnectCarolina Student Center. This process provides an electronic authorization that allows the Office of the University Registrar to release the transcript at the student’s request. Students may inspect their academic records at the Office of the University Registrar, Student and Academic Services Building North. For more information on how to request a transcript, please visit the Office of the University Registrar’s website (http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/transcripts-certifications/order-a-transcript/).

Policy on Awarding of Undergraduate Degrees and Transcript Notations
The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will award only one bachelor’s degree to a student, regardless of a possible second-major declaration, and will not award a degree to a student who has already earned a bachelor’s degree through another school of the University or at another college. Undergraduates in professional schools may earn a second major (not a second degree) in the College of Arts and Sciences or another professional school, but the first major must be in the professional school. Exception: After receiving a bachelor’s degree a student may be admitted to and earn a second bachelor’s degree in from one of the health profession schools at the University. Under no circumstances can a second undergraduate degree be awarded after one has been earned in one of the health professions.

Students pursuing two major fields of study for the bachelor of arts or bachelor of science degree earn only one degree and receive only one diploma. Both the diploma and the official transcript will indicate the degree and the two majors.

Students completing the requirements for both a bachelor of science degree and a bachelor of arts degree earn only the bachelor of science degree and receive only that diploma. Students completing the requirements for both a bachelor of arts degree and a bachelor of fine arts or bachelor of music degree earn only the bachelor of fine arts or bachelor of music degree and receive only that diploma. Note that these students must complete General Education requirements pertinent to the bachelor of arts as well as all requirements for the bachelor of fine arts or bachelor of music degree. Both the diploma and the official transcript will indicate the degree (with its major) and the second major.

Related Policies
Under no circumstances can a second undergraduate degree be awarded in Academic Affairs after one has been earned in Health Affairs. In the rare instance that an undergraduate student completes the requirements for an undergraduate degree and a graduate degree at the same time, the two degrees cannot be awarded at the same graduation. The undergraduate degree must be awarded first, and the graduate degree awarded at a subsequent degree award date.

Students who apply to graduate on a given degree award date, but who must complete requirements (such as courses with grades of IN or AB) after that degree award date, must reapply to graduate on a degree award date that follows the actual completion of requirements. Coursework taken after the degree award date cannot be used to change a degree already awarded, or to complete retroactively a degree, or to add retroactively an additional major or minor.

Adjustments may be made to a transcript only for one year following the date of graduation. Grade appeals, for instance, can be initiated after graduation. Courses with temporary grades not affecting graduation (AB or IN) can be completed after the date of graduation and the grade point average changed accordingly; however, the student’s status at the time of graduation is not affected. Graduation with distinction or highest distinction is based only on the grade point average at the time that the degree is officially conferred and posted on the academic transcript, and may not be awarded retroactively. Students who neglect to declare a second major or a minor at the time of graduation may request that the dean’s office verify that the requirements had been satisfied at the time of graduation. In such cases, indication of the second major or minor can be added to the transcript within one year after the graduation date.
TUITION AND FINANCIAL AID

Student Finances

Billing Policies
Charges for tuition and fees, on-campus housing, and meals are assessed on a semester basis. Billing statements will only be available online through the ConnectCarolina Student Center. Students are responsible for accessing their statements online and insuring they are paid on time.

Any past due charges will result in a hold on registration and transcripts. Students must pay past due balances from prior terms before they will be allowed to register for future semesters. Students registering after the first tuition bill of the semester must either prepay tuition and fees or provide documented eligibility of financial aid to the Office of the University Cashier.

Students who are receiving financial aid are eligible to request a student aid deferment to extend their payment due date until after the initial financial aid disbursement of the semester. Deferments (https://cashier.unc.edu/payment-options/financial-aid/) can only be requested in ConnectCarolina by the student before the due date on the first bill of each semester.

It is extremely important for students to refer to the Office of the University Cashier website (http://cashier.unc.edu/) prior to each term for announcements and up-to-date information, and to follow instructions concerning payment/deferment due dates to avoid registration cancellation.

Tuition and Fees
Tuition and fees (http://cashier.unc.edu/tuition-fees/) for each academic year, including detailed information about the mandatory student fees, (http://cashier.unc.edu/tuition-fees/student-fees/) are published on the Office of the University Cashier website. Additional fees such as incoming student, special laboratory, and other designated program and course fees also may be charged.

A late registration fee of $20 is charged for registration on or after the first day of class for a term.

Proxy and Authorized User Access
Federal law (FERPA (http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/uncferpa/#details-0-0)) restricts access to student information. Proxy and/or Authorized User Access (https://ccinfo.unc.edu/give-proxyauthorized-users-access-information-2-2/) is for anyone the student authorizes to access and/or discuss the student account. Only authorized users have access to view the billing statements and make payments online.

Payment Options
Payments can be made in person at the Office of the University Cashier, through the mail, or by check or credit card online. For up-to-date information on payment options, please visit the payments section (http://cashier.unc.edu/payment-options/) of our website. Our returned check fee is $25.

Each student is responsible for payment of his or her University charges. If a third party sponsor will be paying the charges, the Office of the University Cashier must receive a written authorization from the third party well in advance so that a separate invoice can be sent to the proper agency or organization in order to ensure timely payment.

Financial Aid Refunds
The Office of the University Cashier encourages students who are receiving financial aid in excess of tuition, fees, housing, and meal plan costs to sign up for eRefunds (https://cashier.unc.edu/wp-content/uploads/sites/259/2016/05/setting-up-an-electronic-refund-account-for-student-account-refunds.pdf) as soon as possible. Excess funds from the account will be deposited to either a checking or savings account at the student's bank. Students should also promptly update their eRefund information if there are any changes to their banking information.

Drop/Withdrawal Policies for Tuition and Fees
The last day to reduce a course load for credit on a student's financial account is the tenth day of the semester, commonly referred to as the “census date.” Dropping the only course a student is registered for requires an official withdrawal.

In case of withdrawal from the University, tuition and fees will be prorated according to the withdrawal refund calendar posted on the Important Dates (http://cashier.unc.edu/tuition-fees/important-dates/) section of our website for that semester. The last date for credit on a student’s financial account for withdrawal is nine weeks after the first day of classes for the fall and spring semesters. If a student drops the only course he or she is taking, this constitutes a withdrawal from the University.

Tuition Guarantee Program
Under a North Carolina state law effective fall 2016, students classified as North Carolina residents for tuition purposes in undergraduate degree programs at UNC system schools are eligible for fixed (or guaranteed) tuition for up to eight consecutive semesters (or ten semesters, if enrolled in an approved five-year program). Further information about the Tuition Guarantee Program can be found on the website for the Office of the University Registrar (http://registrar.unc.edu/academic-services/policies-procedures/student-rights/guaranteed-tuition/).

Scholarships and Financial Aid
For Undergraduates
The University works to keep Carolina affordable for all students. Scholarships, grants, loans, and work-study funds are offered to help eligible students who cannot afford the full cost of attendance.

Detailed information on scholarships and student aid can be found on the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid website (https://studentaid.unc.edu/). You are also welcome to email aidinfo@unc.edu. We are here to help!

Applying for Financial Aid
To apply for financial aid:

• Complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) (http://fafsa.ed.gov)
  UNC school code 002974
• Complete the CSS Profile (http://student.collegeboard.org/profile/)
  (new students only, for University grants and scholarships)
  UNC school code 5816
• Monitor UNC email and regularly check ConnectCarolina (http://connectcarolina.unc.edu) for updates.
If we need more information, we will notify you by email.

Aid is an annual process, so returning students should complete the FAFSA each year. The application is typically available by October 1 each year. For the 2024–2025 academic year the FAFSA will be delayed, but will be available by the end of December 2024.

You should apply as early as possible, even before admission to Carolina in the case of new students. You only need to complete the CSS Profile as an incoming new student one time. Although you should apply prior to admission, aid offers will not be released until you are formally admitted.

Aid Offers

Financial aid offers generally begin in early February for returning students. Admitted students will get aid offers shortly after they are admitted most years. For 2024–2025 due to the delayed FAFSA, aid offers are also delayed. Aid offers will likely begin for incoming students in mid-to-late April 2024.

Types of Need-Based Financial Aid

Scholarships, grants, and work-study do not have to be repaid; loans require repayment. Aid offers will include self-help first (need-based loans, and work-study if eligible) with remaining need met through grants and/or scholarships. Graduate and professional students will receive loan offers to meet any eligibility remaining after awards from schools or departments.

You always can reduce or choose not to borrow offered loans, so budget carefully before borrowing. To get an idea of your borrowing needs, use our budgeting calculator (https://studentaid.unc.edu/2023/01/26/budgeting-calculator-instructions/).

Eligibility for Need-Based Financial Aid

To be eligible for financial aid, a student must be enrolled and making satisfactory academic progress in a degree or eligible certificate program. Information about the Satisfactory Academic Progress Policy (https://studentaid.unc.edu/current/sap/) can be found on the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid website.

You can find additional eligibility information (https://studentaid.unc.edu/current/how-to-apply/) on the website on the How to Apply page.

The Carolina Covenant

Covenant scholars can graduate debt-free through a combination of scholarships, grants, and work-study. Covenant scholars also have access to faculty and staff mentors, enrichment activities, and other support services.

The Carolina Covenant is offered to eligible undergraduates who have a family income at or below 200 percent of the federal poverty level and limited assets. No special application is necessary; eligible students will be notified after applying for financial aid and being admitted. Details are on the Carolina Covenant website (https://studentaid.unc.edu/incoming/what-aid-is-available/carolina-covenant/).

Federal Aid Programs

Rules for federal student aid are set by Congress. Eligibility is set by a federal formula. Scholarships and awards from private sources are also factored into the eligibility formula.

The Federal Pell Grant Program provides assistance to first time degree-seeking undergraduate students who meet the eligibility criteria. More detailed information is available at the Federal Student Aid website (https://studentaid.gov/understand-aid/types/grants/pell/).

University Scholarships and Grants

Undergraduate students are considered for university funded scholarships and grants, which do not have to be repaid, based on a detailed analysis of family financial circumstances. This may include home equity, other income, and family assets that may not have been considered in the calculation of federal aid. Institutional scholarship and grant funds are combined with federal aid to provide a total offer of financial aid based on financial need.

Academic Scholarships

Each year, the University offers a limited number of academic scholarships to entering first-year students. These highly competitive programs recognize academic achievement, leadership, commitment to service, and potential for success at the University. Some of these awards consider a combination of financial need and academic merit.

Because Carolina is a highly selective university, competition for academic scholarships is strong. Very few academic scholarships are awarded each year.

There is no separate application for UNC academic scholarships. Selection is based on the information provided in a student’s admission application. Academic scholarship finalists will be notified shortly after they are admitted.

The Morehead-Cain (http://moreheadcain.org) and the Robertson Scholars (http://robertsonscholars.org) programs are administered by private foundations and do require separate applications. Visit their websites for details.

More information about the University's academic scholarships — including the Johnston, Pogue, Carolina, Wood Family, Blue Sky, and Colonel Robinson programs — can be found at the Scholars Program website (https://studentaid.unc.edu/incoming/what-aid-is-available/scholarships/).

Work-Study Employment

Work-study programs offer the chance to earn college funds by working a part-time job on campus or at a community service agency. Undergraduate work-study jobs require an average of 10 to 12 hours per week, with wages that depend on the job. You can apply for work-study jobs that match your interests, skills, and career plans.

Graduate students are not automatically considered for work-study funding. To learn more about work-study opportunities for graduate students, visit our website (https://studentaid.unc.edu/graduate/what-aid-is-available/work-study/).

Loans

The University administers a number of student loan programs, both federal and institutional, which provide low-interest, long-term loans to undergraduate, graduate, and professional students who are eligible for aid.

After a student applies for aid, and has been admitted, the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid offers loans based on eligibility, loan limits, and program cost of attendance. More information on loan programs for undergraduate students can be found in the undergraduate loan guide (https://studentaid.unc.edu/current/what-aid-is-available/loans/). More information on loan programs for graduate and professional school students can be found in the graduate loan guide (https://studentaid.unc.edu/graduate/what-is-available/loans/).

Students have the opportunity to accept, reduce or choose not to borrow offered loans, so budget carefully (http://studentaid.unc.edu/budgeting/) before deciding. Contact the OSSA Loans Team (ssa_loans@unc.edu) with any questions.

Laptop Grants
All Carolina students are required to have a laptop computer. The University offers grants — in the form of a credit at Student Stores, which sells a variety of laptops — to cover the cost for qualifying first-year students who receive need-based financial aid.

You are welcome to combine the grant with your own money to purchase a more expensive laptop. But if you leave Carolina without completing a degree, the University keeps the computer.

Questions and Assistance
Financial aid staff are ready to help. Visit the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid or email aidinfo@unc.edu to get in touch.

For Graduate Students
The Graduate School offers a variety of funding opportunities to assist graduate students. The Graduate School provides information and support to students applying for external fellowships, as well as providing fellowships and other direct financial support to graduate students, which supplements what the individual school or department provides. For updated information, please see The Graduate School's funding resources website (http://gradschool.unc.edu/funding/).

Graduate Tuition Incentive Scholarship (http://gradschool.unc.edu/funding/gradschool/gtis.html): Helps cover the remaining cost of in-state tuition for graduate students who are receiving external funding awards in support of their thesis or dissertation research.

Graduate Student Opportunity Fund (http://gradschool.unc.edu/funding/gradschool/opportunityfund.html): Assists students with small, nonrecurring, unusual and unexpected academic expenses.

Graduate Student Transportation Grant (http://gradschool.unc.edu/funding/gradschool/transportationgrant.html): Assists students with some of the transportation costs necessary for travel to a regional, national, or international academic conference or professional society meeting to present their dissertation research.

The Graduate Funding Information Center (http://gradfunding.web.unc.edu/) is a resource for graduate students seeking information on funding sources for independent research, collaborative projects, fellowships, program development, and other scholarly activities.

You are welcome to contact the Fellowships Office at gradfunding@unc.edu.

To receive alerts when funding opportunities are posted, subscribe to The Graduate School funding listserv (http://gradfunding.web.unc.edu/).

Departmental Awards
Teaching and Research Assistantships
The majority of assistantships available to graduate students are awarded by academic schools and departments. Approximately 2,500 graduate, research, and teaching assistantships are available through specific departments. Graduate assistantships are also available through the University's various research institutes and centers. Stipends, responsibilities, selection criteria, and application and notification procedures vary from department to department. Applicants should discuss with the program to which they are applying the specific funding opportunities available to graduate students.

Federal/State Fellowships and Traineeships
A number of state and federally funded fellowships and traineeships are also available in some departments. Students must be pursuing graduate training in specified fields of study to be eligible for these awards. Interested students should request additional information from their academic departments.

Application Deadline
Prospective graduate students may indicate when applying for admission their interest in an assistantship and should discuss application deadlines with their prospective departments.

If you have questions about departmental awards, please contact the department to which you are applying (https://gradschool.unc.edu/academics/degreeprograms/).

Financial Aid Regulations
To be eligible for financial aid programs administered by the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid (http://studentaid.unc.edu/), you must be enrolled in a degree program on at least a half-time basis, a United States citizen or permanent resident, and making satisfactory progress toward completion of the academic program. You may not be in default on a loan previously received for college expenses nor owe the Department of Education for a refund on a scholarship, grant, or loan from a previous enrollment period.

Graduate or professional school students who wish to apply for financial aid to meet the costs of attending the University must complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) (https://studentaid.gov/h/apply-for-aid/fafsa/) using the UNC-Chapel Hill school code (002974).

You should not wait for admission to a graduate or professional school program before applying for aid. If additional documentation is needed to complete your application for financial aid, the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid will notify you.
